ROBBINS AND KELLY IN AIR 70 HOURS

Elizabethton Is Veritable Volcano of Guns and Bombs

Former Ciscoan, Falsely Accused, Is Free

Two years after he began serving a prison sentence for a crime which he did not commit, H. A. Clements, a brother of Joe Clements, Cisco building contractor, is a free man with a pardon from Governor Moody expected momentarily. Clements was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary on a charge of robbery with firearms in connection with a holdup at Wortham, Texas, about 1925. Knowing that he did not commit the crime of which he was accused, Clements and his brother and friends fought the case bitterly never ceasing until his innocence was definitely established with the confession of Leonard A. Wassum, who Tuesday pleaded guilty at Corsicana to the robbery of which Clements was convicted. Wassum drew a five-year sentence. Clements steadfastly resisted all efforts to obtain executive clemency for him until he could bring before the courts and the governor irrefutable evidence that he had been unjustly accused, convicted and confined. About 30 days ago he was given a parole in order to attend his wife who was ill.

During his parole he located Wassum in Midland. Wassum returned voluntarily with him to Corsicana to plead guilty to the crime of which Clements was accused, thus clearing Clements of all evidence of guilt in connection with the incident. A parole was granted Clements shortly over a year ago about the time that Blackie Davis, now in the penitentiary, signed a confession that he and Wassum staged the robbery and that Clements had nothing to do with it. This parole was for 60 days and was granted due to the illness of a sister-in-law of Clements, Mrs. Joe Clements, of Cisco. At the end of the period, however, he returned to prison where he remained until the second parole was granted him the other day. District Judge Hawkins Scarborough, who sentenced Clements and also Wassum, said that there had always been a doubt in his mind as to Clements' guilt. He added that he would see that Clements was pardoned if he had to walk to Austin to get the pardon.

H. A. Clements was not a resident of Cisco at the time of his conviction on the robbery charge. He moved from here several years before after having lived in Cisco since he was four years of age. He and his brother, Joe Clements and other members of the family came to this section in 1889 with their father, E. J. Clements, now deceased. Joe Clements is a successful contractor and has many fine buildings and residences to his credit here.

STRIKERS AND SOLDIERS ARE HEAVILY ARMED

Great Efforts Are Necessary to Keep Lid Down.

By EDWARD W. LEWIS
United Press Staff Correspondent
ELIZABETHTON, Tenn., May 22.—A volcano that could spout shot-guns, dynamite and bombs underlies Happy Valley in Tennessee, and earnest efforts were necessary today to keep the top from blowing out in this strike disturbed region.

The house of every prominent strike leader has a shotgun and rifle hands in the second floor rooms of union organizers above a downtown restaurant are the squirrel guns and rifles of the mountaineer guards. At the Bernberg Glazotoff plants the machine guns of national guard companies are implanted on the roofs and the bayoneted rifles of 400 men glisten beneath.

Thomas Penix, the "hill man" who led the first strike from the mills, said today he had received the 10th telephoned threat for him to get out of town in the night.

"I don't aim to go," Penix said, "and if any of them that mill favorites aim to come to my house and get me they better watch out. We got six rifles in one room and three shotguns by my bed."

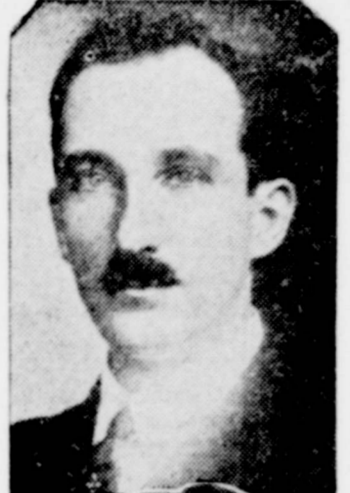

The curious aspect of this strike here that union officials admit hold in its success or failure the question of unionizing the 300,000 textile workers, is the folks who are participating in it. There are old farmers who look like Abraham Lincoln. There are young girls and middle aged weaved women and six foot youths with the big feet of tall folk.

Queer Sense of Humor.
With their own queer sense of humor that results in such nicknames for girls as "Radio Ann" and "Texas Bill," the striking mountaineers are quick to anger and quick to laugh. When these jammed into the courtroom today for the trial of 50 of their fellows on picketing charges, they munched food, chewed tobacco and haw-hawed at every opportunity.

None are hungry, for all live in cabins with gardens out in back. Low wages at the plants, such as $3.96 for a 56-hour week for "Radio Ann" angered them. But more than the pay they hated the concrete floors of the modern efficient factories.

Radio Ann explained: "We 'uns' ain't used to standing on anything but dirt."
Many of them know little about the real issues of the strike. Some are taking the strike as a lark. They won their first strike for higher wages and went back a month or more ago only to have several of their number discriminated against, they claim, because of union activities. So the present strike is not for higher wages but to force the German management to accept union leaders and agree not to discriminate. Nothing else is asked.

May Marry

"Official spokesmen" denied it. But authentic rumors persisted in Sofia that Europe's bachelor king, Boris of Bulgaria, above, is to be a bachelor no longer. Engagement of the "lonely monarch" to lovely Princess Giovanna, below, of Italy, was reported in various Europe capitals. The king and princess recently were seen together in Geneva.

SHIP REFUELED SEVENTH TIME THIS MORNING

Bonus Will Be Raised for Two Fliers at Ft. Worth.

FORT WORTH, May 22.—After flying through a light rain during the night, the record-making Ryan monoplane in which Reg Robbins and James Kelly hope to set a new world endurance record passed the 70 hour mark set at 9:33 a. m. today.

When the plane "Fort Worth," which had flown more than 50,000 miles before taking off on the endurance attempt, was refueled for the seventh time at 6:25 a. m. the fliers reported that the single motor was still "bitting perfectly."

With Robbins and Kelly near the half way mark toward the record of 150 hours, 40 minutes, 15 seconds, the aviation committee of the association of commerce, backers of the flight, made plans to raise a bonus for the two pilots and the two fliers in charge of the refueling plane, K. K. Hoffman and H. S. Jones.

Robbins and Kelly already have beaten the unofficial record for sustained flight by midair refueling made in a single-motored plane by Louis Grocy and St. Victor Greenet, Belgian pilots, reported to have stayed up 65 hours.

The "Fort Worth" was refueled this morning with 110 gallons of gasoline, 4 1/2 quarts of oil and food was transferred to the endurance ship at an altitude of 3,000 feet. The operation took eight minutes.

The plane hung over the flights of Mescham, held a good part of Tuesday night. First adverse weather was encountered at 3:20 a. m. when a light rain began to fall. It stopped at 3:50 a. m.

In notes dropped late Tuesday, Robbins told of Kelly falling out of the plane's hammock while taking a nap and of burning his hand on the plane's exhaust pipe while on the "cat walk" while greasing the engine.

STATE ELKS TO BE HERE NEXT SUNDAY

HAUGLAND TO TRY FOR RECORD.

RANGER, May 22.—People of this section are "pulling for" Owen Haugland to succeed in breaking the world's endurance flying record. Haugland is scheduled to take off at Wichita, Kansas, in a few days in an effort to remain aloft more than a week and he plans to spend a day and a half in the vicinity of Ranger. He is pilot of the Ranger airport until recently and he has named his plane "Miss Ranger." He will use a special aviation fuel manufactured here.

WOMAN DIES IN EFFORT TO SAVE FAMILY

HOUSTON, May 22.—Mrs. Sam Doggett, 45, of Weimar, was burned to death at 1:30 a. m. today when she dashed back into her blazing home to save other members of her family whom she thought still were in the house.

Her husband, who followed her and after a struggle managed to drag her from the fire, was brought on a train to Houston and taken to a hospital, where it was said his burns may prove fatal.

A third member of the family, Marie Louise, 14, was painfully but not seriously burned about the face and body.

The two-story home was in flames when the family was aroused. City Marshal Roberts of Weimar told the United Press.

He said that Mrs. Doggett's aged mother, Mrs. P. J. Shaver, and Mr. and Mrs. Doggett's son, Thomas, 16, were not burned.

Mr. and Mrs. Doggett and their daughter were sleeping on the second story and were slightly burned. The mother becoming almost hysterical shortly after escaping. Losing sight of her children for a moment, she thought they still were in the building which already was beginning to fall. All occupants, however, had fled to safety.

HELEN GOES TO MEET THE QUEEN

POLICEMAN MURDERED IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, May 22.—The body of the second policeman to be murdered within a week because he dared to work openly against a band of Chicago extortionists was found slumped over the steering wheel of his automobile on the near-west side today.

Patrolman Joseph Sullivan had been shot through the forehead, presumably because he had taken up investigation of the attempt to obtain $50,000 from Moses Blumenthal where Policeman Roy Martin had left off last week when he was murdered while attempting to trap the extortionists.

A hint of gang vengeance also appeared in the Sullivan murder as he was the man who swore out the warrant against "Machine Gun" Jack McGurn more than a month ago, accusing McGurn of taking part in the massacre of seven "Bugs" Moran beer runners on St. Valentine's day.

Lieut. William Casack said he was with Policeman Sullivan until 11:30 o'clock last night when Sullivan left him and drove away in his sedan.

F. W. & D. WILL SEEK PERMIT FOR NEW LINE

FORT WORTH, May 22.—Application for permission to build a line from Childress to Pampa will be forwarded to the interstate commerce commission within the next sixty days, director of the proposed Fort Worth and Denver Northern Railroad company decided at a meeting here Tuesday.

Already the charter for the new road has been approved by the attorney general at Austin and work on the 110-mile line will go forward immediately the interstate commerce commission has acted on the application, it was said.

Cost of the undertaking will be between $3,500,000 and $4,000,000. Construction probably will take a year after permission has been given by the I. C. C.

Willard was killed during a raid on a whiskey still. At a previous trial Fagan was convicted and sentenced to 99 years.

WICHITA, Kan., May 22.—"I just shot and killed a man at my home. I tried to call the police and forgot the number and I'm on my way to the station now," Magdelano Rico, 32, told a patrolman who sat beside him on a street car here last night.

The officer and confessed murderer returned to the Rico home and found Rosalio Lopez dead.

WHO KILLED COCK ROBIN? Who killed the Mauritz tax bill? Oil and gas men from the entire day sending their congratulations mid-continent oil section were to the Petroleum Club delegation which last Thursday went to Austin and led in the appeal which successfully killed the Mauritz bills in the committee stage, thunders the Breckenridge American.

POT SHOTS POLITICS -AT- Col. Hugh Nugent Fitzgerald. AUSTIN Big Bounties for Lumber Men A Democratic congressman from Illinois has openly charged that the Republican ways and means committee in drafting the new tariff bill placed higher bounties on lumber, including shingles, that will take $300,000,000 a year out of the pockets of the people. This isn't the funny side of it. Two great lumber states of the far northwest are represented on the committee and drafted the lumber bounty schedules. If the manufacture of shingles is to be given a big bounty, why not the grower of wheat or the grower of corn or the grower of any one of the staple products of the farm. A tariff is a bounty. A tax is a tax. If it is fair for the makers of things why not for the grower of things?

ANOTHER RICHMOND IN THE FIELD There is another Richmond in the field. Rep. T. N. Mauritz of Jackson county will seek the democratic gubernatorial nomination next year. He has issued an announcement. He declares that the 41st will not pass any tax relief measures; that the "common people" will continue to carry the load, that property taxes for 1929 will be increased by from $1,000,000 to $5,000,000 over 1928, "a further burden on those already over-taxed." The gentleman from Ganado will make a state wide campaign. He promises to hand a message to the people. He lets it be known in advance that he does not wish "to do an injustice to the corporations or be unfair to them, but he insists that they shall pay their proportionate part of the taxes." According to a Stephens county daily newspaper oil and gas men of the west put the finishing touches on the Mauritz bills. Now their author is going to hand them a Doland for their Oliver.

Washington Letter

BY RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Writer WASHINGTON, May 22.—Senator J. Boies McWhorter has had what is by all odds his brightest idea since first he proposed to save the farmers by turning the boll weevils and the corn borers loose on each other and letting them eat each other up. The senator wants to divide Congress into rival cheering sections, with cheer leaders and megaphones and regulations. When members cheer now, as they did the other day when they heard how the police had killed a young man in a rum-running car, the noise is only spontaneous and disorganized, with none of the neat effect on the galleries which Senator McWhorter is sure could be reproduced with a little planning. It must be admitted that McWhorter's interest is not altogether unselfish. Everyone knows that he can make more noise than an ambulance driver going home to lunch. The mere clearing of his throat is louder than the combined bellowing of six ordinary senators. The Senator Is Silent Thus the senator is really a born cheer leader. His magnificent voice has been going to waste lately because the young man who formerly wrote his speeches raised his rates, leaving McWhorter to his name. The senator has delivered the one about the flag and the one about the Bolshevik and the one about his political opponents so many times now that whenever he rises to speak two or three of his colleagues promptly pretend to faint and the Senate is adjourned in their honor. "But don't you go supposing that I am thinking only of myself," admonishes Senator McWhorter. "My program for organized cheering would benefit everybody in both houses of Congress. You know how important it is to keep on the right side of Bishop Cannon and how when Bishop Cannon says he wants anything he is sure to get it. Well, when they cheered in the House the other day about how that wicked rum-runner was killed, Bishop Cannon said it was one of the healthiest indications he had heard of in a long time. With Bishop Cannon on record to that effect you can just imagine the cheering and clapping and stamping that will be heard the next time any bootlegger gets shot. And if Bishop Cannon himself comes to the gallery on such an occasion everybody will be trying to shout out each other until we all get out of breath. If it is important enough to organize a few thousand college boys at a football game for cheering purposes it is certainly important enough to organize the U. S. Congress. I am quite convinced that the louder our applause the more zealous will become the efforts of our prohibition enforcers because goodness knows they need encouragement. Of course, I would not always make cheering compulsory. When a bootlegger is sent to the morgue or the hospital it will be quite all right for his customers to remain silent. We will all understand the grief of such colleagues."

Legislature's Action in Passing Small Bill Over Governor's Veto Meaningless Gesture; Already Law

BY RAYMOND BROOKS Dallas News Austin Correspondent. AUSTIN, May 22.—Action by the legislature in passing the Small stream bed land title bill over Gov. Dan Moody's veto was a futile, meaningless gesture, according to the official records of the state department. The bill had become a law before the tempestuous fight started that pre-empted it over Governor Moody's veto, according to the new statutes just published by the Governor. Moody failed to return the vetoed bill within the time limit, it is shown. Had the senate and house failed to pass the bill over the veto, the measure would have been effective just the same, as shown by the publication of the laws of 1929. The state department records that the 10-day limit expired March 4, and that Governor Moody did not send the vetoed bill back until March 5. His veto message was dated March 1, according to the state department record. This law is now under attack by the state itself in the land title suit against C. W. Bradford and 600 others, including all major oil producing companies in Texas. The state is suing for title to a 75-mile strip of the cream bed of the north fork of the Red river in Gray and Wheeler counties, 96 miles of which is considered oil-bearing land. Attorney General Claude Pollard contends the Small law does not apply, because the suit was filed before its passage; but that if it is held to apply, the law is unconstitutional and void. The first stages of trial of this case is set by District Judge George Calhoun of Travis county for May 27. of all state institutions and that none should be preferred. George Purl of Dallas replied that all could be hung about the hall. A. E. M. Purl said, had more service stars than any other educational institution in the whole United States. "We should be proud to display their service flag," said Purl. Display of the review of A. & M. college cadets by Governor Dan Moody on his recent visit to A. & M. was hinted when shown in a local picture house last week. Flag Not Accepted by House AUSTIN, May 22.—Objection of Representative Grady Woodruff, alumnus of the University of Texas, today prevented an A. & M. college service flag being accepted by the house of representatives for display in the house. Excitement reached almost the state of the Gann-Longworth controversy. Woodruff claimed there is no room to display the service flags

"ON TRIAL" IS A THRILLING MYSTERY FILM Can you imagine a character in a motion picture being killed before the story even starts, but still appearing on the screen throughout the film? That is just what happens in the case of Holmes Herbert, who plays an important part in Warner Bros. latest special mystery production, "On Trial." Herbert is murdered before the picture opens, but the method of telling the story brings him into almost constant view until the thrilling denouement. The film adaptation of Elmer Rice's remarkable play, "On Trial," brings to the screen one of the most sensational melodramas of theatrical history, and the fact that every bit of the play is from actual life vastly heightens its effect on the audience. The all-star cast appearing in the production includes Pauline Frederick, Bert Lytell, Lois Wilson, Holmes Herbert, Jason Robards, Richard Tucker, Johnny Arthur, Vendell Darr, Edmund Breese, Edward Martindel, Fred Kelsey and Franklin Pangborn. "On Trial" was directed by Archie L. Mayo from the scenario by Robert Lord. "On Trial" comes to the Palace theater today for a run of two days.

Pay of legislators shall be raised to $10 per day for 120 days and $5 afterwards. Salary of legislators now is $5 per day for 90 days, and $2 thereafter for the regular session.

CHAPTER XIV

Mildred had gone to put in her call to Pamela with but one nickel in her purse. Without another word she had been unable to put in a second call and was compelled to rush back to her desk and use the private telephone, which meant a loss of several minutes.

The other girl regarded her with amazement as she rushed across the room like a whirlwind and snatched up the instrument in shaking hands.

"She fairly begged the operator for her number and it seemed to her ages before she got it."

"Send someone up to Miss Judson's room, quick!" she screamed when the hotel answered, "Huck, Connor's there!"

The operator waited for no more. Mildred had scarcely ceased speaking before she was plugging in for a connection with the manager's office.

"Trouble in Miss Judson's rooms," she reported. "An outside call just came in that Huck Connor is there."

The operator had no idea what Huck's presence in Pamela's suite meant, but she knew what was expected of her and she did it.

Mr. Dazel gave swift, brief orders. In two minutes he, with the men Inspector Markeson had picked in the hotel, were being borne with record speed up to the 18th floor.

Others were guarding the exits, but it was too late. Huck had slipped out with Pamela. His hold coup was a success.

Mr. Dazel was just leaving Pamela's rooms, wondering if someone had perpetrated a hoax on them when he and the detectives were joined by Mr. Judson.

"Pamela was there," her father declared. "I saw her come in from shopping."

"Wait," Mr. Dazel replied and hurried toward the floor clerk's desk. Mr. Judson followed and his face blanched to a parchment hue when he heard that Pamela had left her rooms just a minute before with a stranger.

As one man they made for the elevator that waited with open door. One of the doormen came running up to them when they stepped out into the lobby.

"He'd seen Pamela get into a private car with Connor but he hadn't thought anything of it until a detective had questioned him. Which way had they gone? East. Had he taken the number of the car? No."

"Maybe Halley's following," Mr. Judson groaned.

One of the detectives remarked, "He don't know Connor but he might have got wise... something was wrong. He ain't around."

Mr. Dazel took Mr. Judson by the arm. "We must inform Inspector Markeson," he said and turned to re-enter the hotel.

They soon had what comfort they could get from the inspector's assurance that every avenue of escape from the city would be covered.

Mr. Judson sent word to Stephen, who was waiting in the dining room for Pamela, to come to his office. There he told him what had happened.

"Can't we do something?" Stephen cried against the helplessness that held them.

But there was nothing they could do except wait. Their response was not long, however, not more than a matter of minutes.

A call came in from the Grand Central Station. It was from Halley. Unknown to Pamela, he had been put to guard her when ever she left the hotel. Even Mr. Judson did not know this. It was Inspector Markeson's experience that young ladies rebelled against surveillance and he knew Mr. Judson to be indulgent where Pamela was concerned.

Halley reported that Miss Judson was at the station, waiting for a train. He said there was something peculiar about it and wanted to know if it was all right.

"It's a kidnapping," he was told. "Arrest her companion, but for God's sake, be careful. It's Connor."

"Send some men," Halley wisely requested.

Mr. Judson and Stephen insisted upon going. A policeman rode on the running board of their car and cleared the traffic for them.

"He's got a gun on her," Halley told them when they reached the station.

"One of you men get on that train and take her as soon as he gets aboard. He'll be off his guard for a minute or two," the detective in command ordered. "Stay back, Mr. Judson and you, too, Armistead."

Mr. Judson understood Pamela's danger and did as he was told, holding Stephen by the arm.

Huck was congratulating himself upon his success. He figured he'd got the breaks. The doorman, though he recognized him, hadn't been suspicious. It was a hundred to one shot that nothing had been heard over the telephone except his name, perhaps. He believed that wouldn't mean anything to the majority of Pamela's acquaintances.

But he was glad, nevertheless, as he led Pamela through the gate, that he'd arranged to have Inspector Markeson at Harmon. They'd be there in a few minutes. And then—let Judson find them! He could not drag Pamela back from the Poberlin's without a scandal.

Pamela stepped up to the train platform ahead of him. In the vestibule a man lurched forward and got between them, catching Huck unprepared. Before he could thrust his hand back into his pocket the other man stuck a gun in his stomach and ordered him to "throw 'em up."

Without a sound Pamela slipped to the floor.

When she revived Huck was gone. She clung to her father in a paroxysm of weeping. He was thankful that she turned to him and not to Stephen. Stephen had confided to him that he hadn't yet had the talk with her that both knew he must have. It made it easier for him, and for Stephen, too, to see that her father seemed clearer to her.

Stephen was distressingly conscious of the interview he'd had with Mr. Judson following the latter's visit to Mildred that morning. Distress—and strangely happy.

They took Pamela home, a nervous wreck, and Mrs. Judson put her to bed.

Mr. Judson went to the switchboard operator and learned that it was Mildred who had sent in the warning. "She's been telephoning every five minutes since," the girl stated.

"Call Garland and Grace, Mr. Garland's office, and ask Miss Lawrence to come here," Mr. Judson directed. "Tell her to come to my office."

Mildred came as quietly as a taxicab could bring her. She was deathly pale and trembling. What had happened? Stephen—she had a vague idea that he might have had an encounter with Huck. And Huck was a killer!

Her breath was coming in short, painful gasps when she opened the door to Mr. Judson's office.

Stephen!

She barely suppressed the glad cry that sprang to her lips when she saw him there.

"Mildred!" He was coming toward her. And he had never looked at her like that before. She thought he was going to take her in his arms, and grew confused.

He was Pamela's—the man Pamela was going to marry.

Stephen saw her shrink from him and halted. He reminded himself, with great fear, that he had yet to hear from her own lips what Mr. Judson had told him.

"Where is Mr. Judson?" Mildred cried, her eyes wildly searching the room.

"He's left us alone," Stephen said quietly. "So that I may tell you I love you, Mildred."

His voice was humble, beseeching, but there was an eager intensity behind it that told Mildred he was holding himself in leash.

She stared at him, unable to say a word.

"I've been an awful fool," he said suddenly, "and Mr. Judson found it out. He asked me just one simple question, Mildred, and that settled everything." He paused, and Mildred waited, her heart pounding like mad.

"Please, sit down here and let me tell you all about it," Stephen urged, but not daring to go nearer her.

Mildred moved over and sank weakly into a chair.

"What did he ask you?" She simply couldn't keep the question back, though her feminine instinct prompted her not to make it too easy for him.

Stephen looked at her and she suddenly wanted to laugh joyously at his small boy air of guilt.

"He said to me," Stephen said, coming closer; "he said to me: 'young man, do you love Mildred Lawrence?' And before I knew it I had said yes. So you see, that's the way it was all the time, only I was a fool."

"Oh! It was a very little word, but Stephen found encouragement in it."

"I know that's only half of it," he went on. "There's you. I might not be a fool any longer, but what good will that do unless I have you? Mildred, you aren't going to spoil it now! Don't you love me?"

Mildred smiled—the smile that comes but once.

"Love you?" she murmured softly and thought whimsically that it must amuse the angels to hear him ask.

But Mildred was no angel. "I don't know," she said hesitantly.

Stephen swallowed hard. "Maybe you could find out if I kissed you," he told her.

Mildred's eyes grew very soft. "Well?" she whispered.

Stephen shook his head. "You'll have to ask me," he said. "Remember? I kissed you once and promised never to do it again until you asked me."

Mildred put a hand quickly to her lips—and then reached it up to Stephen. The other one, too.

"He drew her out of the chair, close to him. 'Say it,' he said.

Mildred lifted her face. "Stephen, I love you."

Stephen didn't need any more. He kissed her.

He kissed her so many times that Mr. Judson had to come in and put a stop to it.

"Pamela!" Mildred asked volumes in the one word.

"She knows... and she's going to give you that traveling bag herself," Mr. Judson answered. Then, to Stephen: "I suppose you've told Mildred about Mr. Meyle's offer to send you to South America?"

"I saw him this morning," Stephen explained to Mildred.

"But mother and Connie!" Mildred exclaimed.

"I'll take care of them," Mr.

By United Press.

Yesterday's hero — John Stone, Detroit outfielder whose single in the 13th inning at Detroit enabled the Tigers to win a bitter battle from the Cleveland Indians, 2 to 1. The Indians, behind the pitching of Hudlin, acquired a one run lead in the third inning and, as the hurler continued to mow the Tigers down, this advantage looked good. In the last of the ninth, however, the Tigers pushed over a run and, in the 13th, Stone connected for the single that ended the game.

The St. Louis Browns gained another half game on the idle New York Yankees by stopping the Chicago White Sox, 7 to 1, at St. Louis. The White Sox outbit their conquerors, 10 to 7, but were unable to bunch their blows effectively. Crowder pitched for the Browns.

St. Louis battered four Cincinnati pitchers mercilessly in gaining a 12 to 1 verdict at Cincinnati. Alexander pitched for the Cardinals, allowing but seven hits in nine innings.

When you say Chrysler you say Performance

So marked is the difference between Chrysler performance and all other performance that in appraising other cars the motor-minded almost invariably use Chrysler as the standard of comparison.

All phases of Chrysler designing and engineering are carried out with absolute precision and balance—with the inclusion of new ideas, new refinements and new simplicities, growing out of endless research and a fixed habit of advanced thinking.

Furthermore, Chrysler durability and long life have been demonstrated in the hands of hundreds of thousands of owners through millions of miles of economical operation.

And all of these things—performance, long life and economy of upkeep, together with Chrysler's individual beauty and style—are available in Chrysler "75" and "65" at prices far lower than those of cars which seek to compete with Chrysler quality.

SAN ANTONIO, May 22.—The youngest entry in the Gardner commercial trophy airplane race, starting on its first leg today, is Ellsworth Rogers, 16, San Antonio high school boy.

Young Rogers, who has been flying more than a year, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Rogers of this city. Entered from San Antonio, he will compete with planes from Jacksonville, Buffalo, Denver and Fargo, N. D. The planes will start from their respective towns in a race toward St. Louis. The first two who make the best average time will compete May 30 in the final flight from St. Louis to Indianapolis and return.

The St. Louis-Indianapolis race will take place May 30, the day of the Indianapolis Automobile races. The planes will circle the race track while the races are in progress.

Gardner Motor company of St. Louis has offered $5,000 prize to the final winner as well as $750 and $250 to each of the five preliminary first and second place winners. The local chapter of the National Aer-nautic association is seeking to raise the San Antonio-St. Louis flight awards to $1,250 and $500 respectively.

Earl Rowland, transcontinental air race winner in Class C last year, is among the San Antonio-St. Louis leg entries.

Rogers is a daring aviator, whose boldness has been tested by a number of parachute jumps. He will fly a Hisso E type Travelair biplane of 180-horsepower and capable of attaining 140 miles an hour. Although he is only a freshman in high school, he began the study of aviation two years ago. Due to his age he flies under a special department of commerce permit, but is entitled now to a limited commercial license.
