SAYS DAIRYING PAYS

J. R. Walker, living just south of Friona, is building up a satisfactory herd of dairy cows and is well pleased with the financial returns from them. He has recently installed a milking machine and expresses himself as pleased with the work it does and results obtained from its use and feels assured it will more than pay for itself in saving of time and labor.

He is milking 17 cows and plans to build his herd to 20 producers. He says he may later increase to 40 cows as he can care for that many with the milking machine. He sells butterfat in the form of cream and from the 17 cows receives a weekly income of $10. He keeps a few hogs to feed the skim milk and to estimate profits from this source will pay all expenses for mill feeds and balanced rations for the cows, leaving him the income from butterfat practically clear. He raises his rough feed on the farm. Mr. Walker has been using sudan as a pasture crop and is pleased with it, only that it does not come on early enough in the spring. Sweet clover has been recommended in its stead, as it comes on early in the spring and lasts later perhaps than any other pasture crop in the fall. He thinks he may give the clover a trial.

T. H. MURRY VERY ILL.

T. H. Murry, whose farm home is a few miles east of Bovina, was taken to a hospital in Amarillo Monday morning for a surgical operation. It is reported that when the incision was made the physician found his condition much worse than expected and gave out no hope of his recovery. The last word received here at this writing Thursday afternoon was that he was just lingering on the brink of death which was expected at any moment.

EARL DAY BADLY BURNED; NOW IN HOSPITAL

A very disastrous fire occurred at the home of B. C. Day, three miles southwest of Friona Tuesday afternoon when the large barn and its contents were destroyed and his son, Earl Day, was badly burned.

Earl Day was in the barn soldering a leak in a gas tank of the tractor with a blow torch, when the tank exploded and set fire to the barn and the young man was badly burned before he could be carried to safety.

It is said his father, B. C. Day, risked his life and was also badly burned in his efforts to get his son away from the fire. The young man was brought to a physician here and first aid attention was given him, after which he was taken to the hospital at Hereford.

The barn was the largest and most up to date building of its kind in this section of the county and was a heavy loss to Mr. Day, but in addition to the barn itself, it was reported that a large amount of grain and machinery which the barn contained was also destroyed.

FORMER TEACHER WRITES

The following has been received from Prof. H. J. Buckner, former teacher here:

Canadian, Texas, April 4, 1930.

Friona Star:

I am enclosing the price of the Star. I have done without it as long as I can. It seems that I have not heard from home and friends since some time B. C.

There is another matter I am interested in—the work of the Kiwanis Club. I don't know whether you people have considered a service club or not. If so, or if not, I should like for you to let me or some good man go over the proposition with you. I know of nothing which to my mind would be of more help and give more real pleasure to you people than a Kiwanis Club. If interested, I shall come down and talk with you about it. You will be under no obligations whatsoever.

Let us hear from you, as ever. H. J. BUCKNER.

WILL THOMAS SAYS WE NEED RAIN

Will Thomas, who lives a few miles south of Homeland, was a caller at the Star office Tuesday afternoon, and says his wheat is looking all right but should have rain before long. He says his land he is preparing for row crops is already too dry to list and he is awaiting rain. While Mr. Thomas does not live in town he is delighted with the progress Friona is making and takes pride in telling others of the little city's growth and business development and of its wonderful possibilities.

Passion Play to Draw Hundreds Coming Week

Amarillo, April 16.—Hundreds of seats for the return engagement of the Frigberg Passion Players in Amarillo April 29 and 30 already have been sold. Every mall brings in additional reservations, and dozens of Amarillo people call at the News-Globe office daily to apply for seats.

The famous German cast, headed by Adolf Passnacht, the Christus portrayer, is identically the same cast that appeared in Amarillo in February. Three performances were given then, and more than 3000 people were turned away after all standing room had been sold.

The production will go given Tuesday and Wednesday nights, and Wednesday matinee, but present indications are that the house will be sold out each time. The story of the Passion week appeals to so many people and the engagement in Amarillo will cover such a wide territory that Wilbur C. Hawk, Tri-State Fair president, advises making early reservations.

Those who failed to make reservations for the last engagement were disappointed when they called for seats. Those making reservations by mail should specify whether for Tuesday night, Wednesday afternoon or night. Seats for night performances range from $1 to $2.50. School children may see the afternoon show for 50c. and teachers for 75c. Other adult admissions will be from $1 to $2, and all seats will be reserved.

CLYDE GOODWINE FOR COUNTY JUDGE

In another column of this issue of the Star will be seen the announcement of C. V. (Clyde) Goodwine as a candidate for the office of County Judge of Parmer County.

The writer has known Mr. Goodwine intimately for the past fifteen years and can say without fear of successful contradiction that he is a young man of unimpeachable integrity, and that he is fittingly qualified for the satisfactory administration of the duties of the office he is now seeking, or rather that which his many friends are seeking to confer upon him.

Mr. Goodwine enters this race at the earnest solicitation of his many friends in all parts of the county and not at his own volition or as an office seeker. He will wage his campaign honorably and openly and if elected will give his best endeavors to the discharge of his official duties, serving the people of all parts of the county with a service free from all selfish or local bias.

Mr. Goodwine has spent practically all his life in Parmer county on the farm adjoining the south side of Friona where he now resides and which he has successfully operated since his father's death several years ago. No vote cast for Clyde Goodwine can be classed as mispent, as he is absolutely worthy of the suffrage of all, and cordially solicits the support and friendly influence of all the voters of the county who may see their way clear to grant him the same.

LAZBUDDIE SCHOOL

We feel proud of the showing our students made in the Inter-school League meet held in Friona April 4-5. Although we had never before been represented in a meet, we won six first places, three second, six thirds and three fourths, and placed no lower than fourth in any event entered.

Since we failed to join the University Interscholastic League before January 15, we were not eligible to compete for prizes on the same basis as member schools and we appreciate the courtesy of the other schools in allowing us to compete at all. Needless to say we shall be among the first to send membership dues for 1930-31.

Following is a list of students who won places: Vesta Eaves and Bivens Chromister, first in senior spelling, the former making 100; Harvey Hudnall, 1 Junior declamation; girls' glee club, 1; Gladys Treider and Pauline Seaton, 1 in vocal duet; Connie Francis, 1 in senior harmonica; Junior boys, 1 in relay.

Second place winners: Elger Raper 100 yard dash; Gladys Dyck, algebra 1; boy's junior play ground ball. The boys have won numerous games this year.

Third place winners: Edyth Julian, algebra II; Vesta Eaves, essay, senior; Edgar Raper, 50 yard dash, high jump and broad jump; Geraldine Hawkins and Louise Colbath, junior spelling.

Fourth place: Gladys Treider, senior piano; Nerine Jennings, in junior piano; Toney Ivey, 100 yard dash.

Everyone enjoyed the visit of Mr. Brown from the high school division of the state department. He was with us Wednesday, April 2, and assured Supt. Hawkins and Mr. Treider, president of the board, that we were in a fair way to get affiliation with the state for all high school work. We have since been awarded a place as a second class high school. We appreciate this and think it an honor to place so high.

April 22 to 25 high school students will take the college entrance examination on unaffiliated subjects which they have taken at any time in the past. This will establish their credits in all subject in which they make passing grades.

Amarillo to Stage Friendship Trip Next Month

Mason King, manager of the Extension Department of the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce, accompanied by Mrs. King and Ham Luna, of the Panhandle Plains of Texas, Inc., stopped at the Chamber of Commerce offices for a few minutes Wednesday morning and announced that a delegation of 150 Amarillo business men, together with their high school band, would arrive in Hereford May 13, at 10:25 a. m. and remain until 1:10 p. m., when they will proceed southwest on their good-will tour, stopping at all stations along the line from Amarillo to Carlsbad, New Mexico, where they will visit the famous Carlsbad Cavern.

The purpose of the visit, as explained by Mr. King, is to give the Amarillo business men an opportunity of getting better acquainted and cementing the friendship of the people in the towns included in their trade territory.

They extend an invitation to as many Hereford men as care to go to join them on the trip, assuring them a good time. The party will be aboard a Santa Fe special deluxe train, provisioned for a three-day trip. Plans are being made by the local Chamber of Commerce to give the good-will trip a hospitable reception upon their arrival in Hereford.

Mrs. Woodson Young, accompanied by Mrs. A. C. Young and daughter, Corrine, spent a part of last week visiting with relatives and friends in Pampa.

FRIONA IS BUSY PLACE NOW; GAS AND WATER MAIN WORK ADD TO OTHER ACTIVITIES

A GOLDEN WEDDING NEAR SUMMERFIELD

In 1880 golden wedding anniversaries were a rarity. If the Indians didn't get your scale perhaps it would be smallpox or typhoid fever. The hazards were mostly physical ones.

In 1930 golden weddings are even more rare, though the Indians drive automobiles and sign off royalty checks, and fevers are robbed of most of their terrors by the progress of sanitation. The matrimonial hazards of today are psychological, more than physical.

On April 11, 1880, Emma Hoffman and Aug. J. Euler were married at Troy, Kansas, where they spent the first 25 years of their married life. Here their seven children were born. From Troy they moved to a dairy ranch at Brighton, Colorado, where they lived six years. The next 18 years were spent on a farm at Hydro, Oklahoma. In January, 1929, they moved to Summerfield, Texas, where three of their children had built new homes.

The complexities of modern life put such a strain on human minds that one now places undue importance on differences that under the physical difficulties of fifty years ago would have been passed over as of no consequence.

So your reporter has taken great interest in the golden wedding celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Aug Euler held at their home a few miles out of Summerfield, it is rare to find a couple so young in spirit and body celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary. Their modern bungalow, with electric lights, radio and all that goes with it, is only an indication of how they have kept pace with their times.

The writer has marveled often at the fact that people of their years were always one of the most progressive forces in the community where they were living always aggressive, fighters for what they believed to be for the best interest of their community.

And in their family life the same spirit has been evident, which is shown by the fact that each of their seven children is imbued with the same progressive spirit. All but one of the children are farmers—not just another farmer, but exemplifications of the modern spirit on the farm and in the farm community.

On April 11, 1930, all the seven of their children, fourteen grandchildren, three sons-in-law and two daughters-in-law, gathered at their home to help celebrate their 50th year of happy and healthful married life and to wish them many more happy years together.

Those who attended were Mrs. Mary Lichlitz, her daughter, Marguerite, her son Arthur and his bride of one week, all of Cortez, Colorado. Mrs. Thille Smith of Norman, Oklahoma; Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Mot and children, Ruth, Jimmie and Faye, Hydro, Oklahoma; Mrs. and Mrs. Elmer Euler and children of Friona; Mr. and Mrs. B. Knight Grason and children, Summerfield, and Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Broadner of Chicago, Illinois.

EASTER PROGRAM

Members of the Congregational Sunday school have prepared a most appropriate Easter program including a musical cantata, with many other interesting features by the younger members. This program will be rendered at the church building at the usual hour of worship Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, to which the public is cordially invited to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Blackwell and son, Bobbie, and Mr. and Mrs. B. T. Galloway of this place attended the Hardware Dealers Convention in Amarillo a part of this week.

MOVED TO COUNTRY

T. W. Turner has given up the management of the Friona laundry and has moved his family to a farm six miles east of town, known as the Elbert Overton ranch. Mr. Turner, however, is still looking after his electrical work here and may be seen in town any day by those who need his services.

The work of cutting trenches and laying mains for the gas system was begun here on Tuesday morning and has been going steadily ever since. At this writing the trenches have been cut along several alleys in the west part of town.

In addition to the work being done by the gas company the ditching machine that will dig trenches for the water mains arrived and begun operations Wednesday afternoon, and its track is being followed by the men who are laying the mains.

Along with the usual activities of building and remodeling in the city, these two additional features give Friona the appearance of a very busy town, which is really and truly a fact.

HEREFORD CHORAL CLUB IS COMING

Two gentlemen, Rev. E. P. Gieser, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Hereford, and J. H. Olson, also of Hereford, were business visitors here Tuesday morning. These gentlemen are members of the Hereford Choral Club a non-denominational organization of the city of Hereford and were here in the interest of their organization.

The club has prepared some unusually good music appropriate for the Easter season and the members are anxious to share the pleasures of this splendid music with their friends in the neighboring towns, having rendered their program at a union church meeting in Canyon last Sunday evening. It is their plan to favor Friona with one evening during the Easter season and it was for this purpose of making necessary arrangements that these gentlemen were here.

The program will most likely be given in the high school auditorium some time next week, the exact date to be announced later.

MENINGITIS TAKES TOLL

Kenneth McCutchan, eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. McCutchan, died at his home five miles west of Bovina last Saturday of cerebro-spinal meningitis. He had been ill only a few days and grew suddenly worse Friday, passing away at about 2 o'clock in the afternoon Saturday. Burial took place Sunday at the Bovina cemetery.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT

The Star is authorized to announce the name of Clyde V. Goodwine, as a candidate for the office of County Judge of Parmer County, subject to the decision of the Democratic Primary election in July.

Dr. R. R. Willis has moved his office from the Maurer building at the corner of Fifth and Main Streets, to his new location in the new addition of the W. H. Warren building on Sixth Street. The change was made Tuesday afternoon and Dr. Willis now has a neat, well equipped and up-to-date office in a most convenient location.

MRS. LAWRENCE TO

Easter Lilies

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

WE read the sixth chapter of the Gospel according to St. Matthew, we find these two verses:
"And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin:
"And yet I say unto you, that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these."

And it is these flowers which, more than anything else, have become the symbols of Easter which we celebrate this year on April 20. As such a symbol the lily has a double significance. It is one of the earliest spring flowers. It typifies the rebirth of nature after the long winter sleep. In its dry, brown bulb life lies dormant during the winter and then when spring comes, this life begins to stir. First it pushes out the tender green leaves, and then the buds appear. Finally the white blossom comes forth in all its glory as the perfect emblem of resurrected life.

Its other significance is a religious one, its snow-white purity being emblematic of the flawless life of Christ whose resurrection from the tomb we commemorate on Easter day. In fact, no other flower has a place in the religious life and literature of the Christian world to compare to the lily. Yet its glory is not so new as Christianity, ancient though the beginnings of that religion may seem to us.

The Greeks and the Romans prized it above all flowers and in their earlier civilizations it had already come to symbolize purity and virtue. It was because of the place lilies had won in the popular esteem that they found place in the early paintings of the Virgin. The angel Gabriel was depicted carrying them in annunciation pictures and it is because of this that the most beautiful of these flowers, Lillium candidum, most used at Easter, is called the madonna lily.

Although this trumpet-like blossom is the best known of all the members of the lily family, there are others which are very interesting even though they do not have such significance for us as the madonna lily. In the high Himalayas in Asia grows a great lily ten feet tall. Agents of the United States government found a magnificent specimen of lily in China a generation ago—a lily of the madonna type, but hardier—and brought it to America and they have been offering it to citizens to plant from coast to coast.

Most of the lilies that are native to America are radiant with color. There is the turk's cap, for instance, that flaunts the deep yellow of its many blossoms through the waste stretches of parts of New England. Great, staminate stalks, sometimes nine feet tall, has the turk's cap. It may have half a dozen orange blossoms at its top, but those who have tamed this plant and given it care have induced it to provide as many as 40 blossoms.

A quite different American flower is the little trout lily which likes to grow along the streams or in the deep woods. With the nourishment it has saved up in its bulb it starts growing in the early spring and is likely to have bloomed before the leaves of the trees have grown to the stage of making shade to interfere with it. A radiant yellow, the trout lily stands out vividly against its background of green.

The blue flag running to purple is another American lily that has found itself a home in many gardens. The mottled tiger lily has been a favorite for many generations. In California the leopard lily lights the heather sun, and the late shorn meadow is often red with their bloom.

The red lilies of New England, however, outshine them all and have inspired many a poet of that region. Lucy Larcom spoke of them as "red lilies blazing out of the thicket." Paul Hamilton Hayne thought that the red lily "stands from all her sister flowers apart."

An Easter Flower

"To make one petal, myriads of atoms (each in itself a planetary system of electrons) must climb and wheel to their exact stations in the design."—Statement of a scientist.

Up-whispered by what Power,
Deeper than moon or sun
Must each of the myriad atoms of this flower
To its own point of the colored pattern run;

Each atom, from earth's gloom,
A clean sun-cluster driven
To make, at its bright goal, one grain of bloom,
Or flock with rose one petal's edge in Heaven?

What blind roots lifted up
This sacramental sign,
Transmuting their dark food, in this wild cup
Of glory, to what Heavenly bread and wine?

What Music was concealed,
What Logos in this loam,
That the Celestial Beauty here revealed
Should thus be struggling to its lost home?

Whence was the radiant storm,
The still up-rushing song,
That built of formless earth this heavenly form,
—Redeeming with art, the world's blind wrong.

Unloaking everywhere
The spirit's Wistful prison,
And whispering from the grave, "Not here! Not here!
He is not dead. The Light you seek is close!"
—Alfred Noyes in the Washington Star.

Probably the most remarkable lily in the world is the yucca, or spanish bayonet, of the arid plains of the Southwest. There the lily becomes a plant that is quite treelike and lives for years. The lily leaves become harsh, dagger-tipped implements to serve the purpose of repelling attack. These may sit close to the ground or, again, they may stand as high as a man on horseback.

From the cluster of leaf armor there springs now and again a tall stalk that may reach like a flagpole into the desert sunshine. At the top of this staff there forms and finally breaks into bloom such an assemblage of pure white, bell-like, richly perfumed, and in every way perfect lilies as nature produces nowhere else in a single cluster. It is given to the desert to grow the greatest of all the lily-bearing plants despite the fact that the chief habitat of the breed seems to be the marsh.

Lilies all grow from bulbs. This bulb-making capacity of the lily family is one of its dominant traits. It and the six petals to all lily blooms are marks of the tribe. Tulips, daffodils, hyacinths, crocuses, all are actually, because they spring from bulbs, members of the lily family.

But beautiful as are these members of the lily family, there are others which are utilitarian rather than purely ornamental and which, although like the "lilies of the field which toil not," do furnish mankind with edible crops. Surprising though it may be, botanists will tell you that some of our common vegetables are in reality "lilies."

There is asparagus, for instance, that is bought in the market tied up in bundles of many stalks, each exactly like the other. There is nothing about this asparagus in this form that would indicate that it is a lily. Asparagus tips are but young plants just coming through the ground. If they were allowed to grow they would throw out tall, lily-like stalks and crown them with six-tipped flowers that any observer would be able to identify as lilies.

The presence of this commonplace asparagus in an idling family is rather a let down to its pretensions. This, however, is not the worst. If the truth must be told, the onion is a lily. The onion is a lily that has been bred through centuries for the development of its bulb and the suppression of its top. So it has come about that the bulb may be three inches across and the top so insignificant that, when it has dried up, it hardly appears at all. Yet when this top is growing and flowering it is like those delicate plants of the window sills which sometimes are called tube roses, but which actually are a delicate, refined and fragrant lily that comes out of the Orient.

Onions came from the Near East and in ancient days furnished a staple food for the rural inhabitants of Greece and Italy. Not only was garlic a food, but it was reputed to have medicinal value and to be helpful to the stomach in its functions.

These two bulb vegetables, the Cicerellia of the plant food world, ride about the earth in trainloads and shiploads. The material service they render is greater than that of all the other lilies put together. One would have to look far in all the relationships of nature to find a contrast more striking than that of the Easter lily and the garlic of the Mediterranean.

Even though the lily is the one perfect symbol of Easter, there are two others which through the centuries have become so closely associated with this red-letter day in our calendars that we think of them almost as quickly, in thinking of Easter, as we do of the lily. They are the rabbit and the egg.

The association of the rabbit or hare with Easter has its foundations in the ancient belief in European and Asiatic countries that the hare is the symbol for the moon. In fact, the Chinese represent the moon as a rabbit pounding rice in a mortar, while Hindu and Japanese artists paint the hare across the face of the moon. As the time of the Easter festival is governed by the phases of the moon this may be an explanation of their connection.

Since the Resurrection of Christ occurred in the spring, it is easy to see how the symbols of the egg and all revived life in the springtime came to be associated with this event in the history of Christianity. The egg as a symbol was taken over by the Hebrews as an emblem of their delivery from bondage and next the early Christians took it over as their symbol of the resurrection.

SHE HAD A CLAIM ON THOSE BONDS

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

IT WAS the third time that Will had been called by long distance. Twice he had answered himself. This morning Fanny answered. She heard a pleasant masculine voice asking for her husband. Was he at home? Could he be got to the phone? Fanny replied no, he wasn't. To the first question, and no, he couldn't, to the second.

"What do you want of my husband?" she inquired. Silence. "I said, what do you want of Will Cooper?" She raised her voice. Silence again. After a moment's further wait, Fanny realized that the man had rung off.

Fanny was puzzled. They had had the phone two years and to her knowledge this was the first time they had ever received a long-distance call.

When Will came home to the mid-day meal, Fanny told him. Will started slightly.

"Was it the same party that called you twice before?" Fanny asked.

Will cleared his throat. "I couldn't say, Fanny. But he seemed pleased and flattered."

"Why don't you eat your pie? Don't it suit you?" Fanny asked wistfully. Her apple pie was her pride. Will always praised it. Now he merely tasted it, pushed back his chair and rose from the table.

"Here! Come back here!" called Fanny. "The whistle won't blow for twenty minutes yet."

Will looked embarrassed. He sat down, picked up a newspaper and appeared to read. His thin face bore a high flush. His mild blue eyes were dilated with excitement. That mysterious long-distance call! Fanny was more curious than ever. But it was no use to quiz Will.

That had always been the way with Will. She herself was the frankest little woman. She had not a secret from the man she loved. Sometimes she wondered if Will didn't feel she wasn't smart enough to understand him. All the Cooper men felt themselves superior to their women folks. They never let their wives interfere with their private affairs.

"Maybe they'd have got ahead faster if they had," Fanny reflected with a shade of bitterness. "I know one time when if Will had listened to me he'd have been in a good bit of money. When he bought that lot. He's got the lot yet, and it's cost him more than it is worth twice over, in taxes and improvements. I told him the town wasn't going to build up in that direction, and it hasn't. I hope all this long-distancing don't mean anything more of that kind."

Will came home that night in a gay mood. He asked Fanny to go to the "movies." You might have thought he'd had word he was going to receive a legacy or something like that.

Next morning as Fanny stood at the sink peeling potatoes for dinner, the doorbell rang. She opened the door and saw standing before her a large, bland, finely-dressed man. His background was a long and lustrous automobile.

"Does Mr. W. J. Cooper live here?" Fanny nodded. "Is he at home?" Fanny shook her head. "Where can I find him, Miss—"

"I am Mrs. Cooper," Fanny spoke crisply. "Are you the man that called yesterday?"

"Mr. Cooper was called up from our office, I believe. Where did you say I could find him, Mrs. Cooper?"

"Are you trying to sell him something?" "My business, madam, is with Mr. Cooper. My time is valuable. If you don't feel like telling me where he is I must inquire elsewhere."

Something landed at Fanny's feet—the morning newspaper, printed in the nearest city and delivered daily to almost every resident in Westmore. Absently Fanny stopped and picked up the news sheet. Compactly folded, the headlines presented but one word of her roving glance. But that word arrested her attention to a surprising degree. She scarcely noticed the fact that the big man had turned from her and was going down the steps toward the car.

Fanny glanced rapidly down the front page. That man! He would find Will. But before he found Will there was something she must do.

Fanny grabbed her coat and put it on right over her work apron. From a bureau drawer she got a small key on a red ribbon. Out of the house she went by the back door. She ran till she reached the main street. Here she crossed, regardless of the green light which set traffic in motion. The fender of a car flipped her skirt. Heedless, she dashed on, up the steps of the bank, into the building. A door to the clerk at the window and a door opened for her as by magic. She was at the entrance of the vault. She presented her key and was handed the long, narrow safety deposit box which held a sheaf of precious bonds, the savings of years. With trembling hands Fanny removed the papers and thrust them into the bosom of her dress. As she came out of the bank a huge lustrous car turned the corner. She darted into an alley. She watched her husband and the big man enter the bank together. Her heart beat like a drum in her ears as she crept out of her hiding place and tore homewards, clutching the treasure that lay against her bosom.

Breathless, her forehead wet with the dew of emotion and haste, Fanny went upstairs into the spare bedroom and hid the bonds between the springs and mattress of her best bed.

"There!" she panted. "I don't know what'll come of it. But—there!"

She was once more standing at the sink peeling potatoes when a lustrous car tore into the street and stopped at her door. Will burst into the kitchen. Dangling from his finger was a small key on a red ribbon, his own key to the safety deposit box.

"Fanny!" Will's voice was harsh. "Where'd you put my bonds?"

"Your bonds?" Fanny gave him a straight look. "Our bonds, you mean. I worked just as hard for them as you did, taking boarders and all. I'm just as particular what becomes of them; maybe more so."

"I want the bonds."

"Not to hand out to that scoundrel, Will. Have you seen the morning paper? It says—"

Will took her by the shoulder. Fanny faced him.

"Never! I've put 'em where you can't find 'em. Take your hand away. You're hurting me. Shame on you! To believe a stranger before you would your own wife!"

Will drew back. The angry red in his face gave way to pallor. A moment he stood, head down, irresolute. Then he turned and went out to the car.

"It's all off, McKettle," he said. "My wife won't stand for it."

What Mr. McKettle said then was sufficiently revealing even to credulous Will. He fairly tore the fleece from his own wolfish structure. Astonished, aghast, Will shook his fist at the lustrous automobile as it drove away bearing the wreck of his dream with it.

Will went back to Fanny and found her crying, her head on the blue enamel sink. He knelt down beside her and put his arms around her. He made painful confession—how Mr. McKettle was going to change the bonds into gilt-edge securities that would bring in six times as much as the bonds were now earning.

"It looked like easy money to me," Will said. "But you did right, Fanny. That's as plain to me as the nose on your face."

Appeal to Elephant's Stomach Broke "Strike"

How one man, with the aid of a bucket of ale and some tomatoes, broke a strike is recounted by the London Evening Standard. For three whole days Rosie, the circus elephant, had been on strike. She refused—every hundredweight of her—to leave Skegness for Mexborough, where the rest of the circus was waiting for her.

After vain attempts to induce her to board a train, Mahomet was telegraphed for. Mahomet, the trainer, is Rosie's best friend. When he got the wire at Mexborough, where he had been impatiently awaiting his little friend, he caught the first train back to Skegness.

Learning that Rosie had been treated to three gallons of ale daily by a local hotel proprietor, he ordered the entrance to her railway coach to be decorated with a bucket of ale, tomatoes and the choicest seven-course dinner an elephant could wish.

At midnight, when Skegness slept, Rosie was led down to the station in secret. Chains were thrown over her, and she had a retinue of attendants worthy of Delhi durbar.

When she smelt the feast awaiting her in the coach she walked in without a murmur, dined, slept and was whisked away by the first train next morning. So ended the biggest laugh of the Skegness season.

Early Postmasters-General

Samuel Osgood was the first postmaster-general, appointed by Washington in 1789, after the Constitution was adopted. The first postmaster-general in America, however, was Andrew Hamilton, appointed in Colonial days, in 1691. He was succeeded by his son, John Hamilton. Following him, there were four postmasters-general, then in 1753 the American colonies were divided into two postal districts, with a postmaster-general for each. Benjamin Franklin served as one of these from 1753 to 1774. In July, 1775, the Continental congress made Franklin again postmaster-general, and he served until the following year.

Engraving Ancient Art

Engraving dates back to the ancients, but the first authentic engraving of which there is any record was that of St. Christopher, 1423. Baron de Reiffenberg claims to have found an earlier one, dated 1418, and a manuscript discovered in the middle of the Eighteenth century gives reason for believing that the art was known as early as 1306 in England, but there has been too much controversy concerning those prior to St. Christopher to accredit the earlier ones.

The Horse in History

Anttas, the first Hittite who took the title of "Great King" after he had conquered a number of other little kings, first brought the tamed and domesticated horse up to the doors of Europe, where the Greeks were already gathering. So Cortes astonished the Mexican Indians with his soldiers on horseback, and they thought man and horse one new monstrous animal. The Greeks, too, kept the legend of the Centaurs—men-horses.

A Sour Stomach

In the same time it takes a dose of soda to bring a little temporary relief of gas and sour stomach, Phillips Milk of Magnesia has acidly completely checked, and the digestive organs all tranquilized. Once you have tried this form of relief you will cease to worry about your diet and experience a new freedom in eating.

This pleasant preparation is just as good for children, too. Use it whenever coated tongue or fetid breath signals need of a sweetener. Physicians will tell you that every spoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid. Get the genuine, the name Phillips is important. Imitations do not act the same!

Diphtheria May Be Eliminated

Modern publicity methods, allied with the application on a vast scale of the latest principles of public health administration, were so effectively used against diphtheria in New York last year that the disease is expected to be extinct there within five years. Such was the purport of the first annual report of the diphtheria commission concerning its work in 1929 under Dr. Shirley W. Wayne, commissioner of health, which pointed out that a half century ago one out of every two contracting the disease died of it.

Los Angeles Boy Needed Help

Leroy Young, 1116 Georgia St., Los Angeles, is a "regular fellow," active in sports, and at the top in his classes at school. To look at him now, you'd think he never had a day's sickness but his mother says: "When Leroy was just a little fellow, we found his stomach and bowels were weak. He kept suffering from constipation. Nothing he ate agreed with him. He was fretful, feverish and puny."

"When we started giving him California Fig Syrup his condition improved quickly. His constipation and biliousness stopped and he has had no more trouble of that kind. I have since used California Fig Syrup with him for colds and upset spells. He likes it because it tastes so good and I like it because it helps him so wonderfully!"

California Fig Syrup has been the trusted standby of mothers for over 50 years. Leading physicians recommend it. It is purely vegetable and works with Nature to regulate, tone and strengthen the stomach and bowels of children so they get full nourishment from their food and waste is eliminated in a normal way.

Four million bottles used a year shows how mothers depend on it. Always look for the word "California" on the carton to be sure of getting the genuine.

Egyptian Marriage Contracts

Marriage contracts were in vogue among early Egyptians, according to tablets found in the Nile region by explorers. The earliest known nuptial contract there dates from 500 B. C., the terms of which were drawn by the husband. It has been translated as follows: "Since God willeth that we should unite one with the other in righteous wedlock, after the manner of every free man and every wise woman, therefore I have given thee four dollars in gold as a bridal gift. And for my part I will not neglect thee. Neither shall I put thee forth without a cause, having legal ground. But should I wish to put thee forth, I will pay seventeen dollars for the matter."

Seeing Big League Baseball

By BILLY EVANS
Sportswriter, Big League Umpire and General Manager of the Cleveland Indians

Baseball has been very kind to me. I have enjoyed my work. It has dovetailed with what I kidded myself into terming my "literary" efforts. I not only umpired, but also tried to be a spectator in every game that I have officiated. I wanted to get both slants. It was my very good fortune to have been the umpire in some of the greatest games that have been played in the last 25 years in the Majors. I have picked out the high spots in these contests, the unusual happenings, the superlatives of baseball and intend to dwell on them at length in various articles.

I umpired the first game Walter Johnson ever pitched. I marveled as he turned back the slugging Detroit Tigers in his league debut, using noting but a fast ball. That was all he knew. He boasted no curve, slow one or change of pace. Simply burning speed.

Johnson in that game, as well as many others in the early part of his career, attempted to keep the opposition from hitting the ball by throwing it so fast the batters couldn't see it. He succeeded quite well.

That may sound like wild exaggeration, but it isn't. I can truthfully say that Walter Johnson is the only pitcher who ever caused me to blink behind my heavy iron mask. His speed in the early days was so great that every now and then, much to my disgust, I would find myself closing my eyes and calling them. That's a first time confession.

However, it never caused any trouble, as the batsman was doubly handicapped when pitted against Johnson. He not only had to follow the flight of the ball, but also hit it. Every now and then after calling a strike on a batter with Johnson pitching, he would turn and say to me:

"What was that last one, Bill, a fast one or a curve?" Such a query usually brought a look of indignation from me. Then the batter would invariably reply:

"I'm not kidding or kidding. I really didn't see the last one and I was wondering whether it was a fast one or curve."

Having wrong such an admission of ignorance from the batsman, I would proceed to tell him what I thought it was without any fear of contradiction. If I happened to blink on the same ball and had no better idea of the pitch than the batter, I still had the edge.

Charley Street first caught Johnson in the Majors and is regarded by Walter as the greatest catcher of all time. For practically three years he called for nothing but fast balls from Johnson. When opposing batters asked him where Johnson's curve was, he invariably answered:

"Why use the hook when you boys can't see the fast one?"

The batters, fearful of Johnson's great speed, would have much preferred looking over Johnson's curve after he acquired one. The curve ball, you know, is not thrown with nearly so much speed.

What are the superlatives of baseball as I have seen them in the Majors over a score of years? What are the greatest pitching feats of various sorts that have come under my observation? What would I class as the greatest batting feat? What plays in the field impressed me most?

I will try to enumerate them as they appear to me.

The umpire, watching the different teams perform day in and day out, year after year, sees many unusual things. I have officiated in more than 3,000 major league games and more than 50 world series contests. If I touched briefly on the many events worthy of mention, I could fill a large-sized volume.

Blinding Lights Given Cause of Accidents

Who is at fault in an approaching automobile with dazzling headlights temporarily blinds a driver and causes an accident?

This is a much discussed question and one on which there is considerable conflict in legal opinions, according to Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club.

"Nevertheless," he continued, "it serves to emphasize the importance of properly adjusted headlamps and brings home the fact that blinding or badly focused lights are in most instances the result of carelessness."

"The large number of testing stations, the ease with which adjustment can be made, and the importance of proper headlights in the field of safety serve to make unsafe lights symbolic of neglect."

Pointing to some of the legal opinions on the question, Mr. Hayes said:

"In the case of an accident where the driver was blinded by street car lights, the Supreme court of Maine held: 'It is the duty of a driver of an automobile to stop his car when for any reason he cannot see where he is going.' This language was likewise quoted by an Ohio court.

"In a case in the state of Washing-

Lefty Grove Fastest Hurler

LUZERNE ATWELL BLUE, the able first baseman of the St. Louis Browns, who is built like Red Grange and as dynamic on the diamond as the redhead was on the gridiron, sat in on a discussion of fast balls in the lobby of the Montgomery hotel, West Palm Beach.

"Lefty Grove unquestionably has the fastest ball of any pitcher in the American league," said Lu, who can speak with authority after ten years of facing the best boxmen in the circuit.

"Walberg is fast and so is Earnshaw, among the right-handers, but neither has quite the zip that Grove can put on the ball. The ace of the A's, in addition, has great control for a southpaw. Walberg has a better curve than Grove."

The subject turned to Walter Johnson, who probably had the fastest ball of them all.

"I batted against Johnson eight or nine years ago when I believe he still was faster than anyone in the league and faster even than Grove is now," said Blue. "But Cobb, Speaker and the fellows who had known him in his prime told me I should have seen Johnson when he was good. If they were right, I'm glad I didn't have that to worry about. He was too good for me when they said he was about through."

The other thought quickly.

"If it comes to that," he replied, "I am willing to swear that I know more than all of 'em put together!"

COGITATIONS and APHORISMS of JODOK

I often wonder why so many people ask me about the political development of the county, but such is the case.

It is probably because they think that anyone who spends nearly all his time standing on street corners has a good chance to learn of these developments, but they are mistaken in that, for I do not learn much about the county's political affairs.

Here is one thing that has impressed me, and that is the fact that I hear very little mud-slinging about any of our candidates.

Most people have their favorite candidates and usually have some definite reason why they will support this or that candidate, but have no word of harm to say about the other candidates.

It occurs to me that is a good way to do. If one cannot conscientiously support a candidate the least he can do is to say no harm of him.

All of us will make a choice from among the candidates when it comes to voting, though we may feel friendly toward all of them, yet we can vote for but one for each office, therefore must make a choice of that one.

As I see it, there must be some outstanding thing, condition or circumstance that will cause each voter to make up his mind as to which of these candidates he will vote for.

Even then he may change his mind before election day but there is no harm in changing one's mind that I can see.

Changing one's mind is simply discarding ideas formerly held and adopting others ideas in their stead, and the individual who never changes his ideas is certainly one who makes little if any mental progress, for as I see it that is what constitutes progress.

I do not believe the professional outstanding of any individual will be correctly judged without first examining the working habits of that individual's mind, for no one will ever get farther than his mind carries him.

I have heard people remark that they never pay attention to trivial matters, but just let them slide and keep their mind on some great achievement.

In pondering such remarks I have reached the conclusion that doing small things does not hinder one doing great things, neither will doing nothing but small things ever make one very great, especially as the world at large measures greatness.

It occurs to me as wonderful—the vast amount of human nature to be found among people generally and in all walks of life.

I have known people who were out of employment and apparently in want, who would apply for a job almost anywhere they could get it—just seemed willing to do anything in order to earn some money, and when given a job would come back in half a day and want a raise in wages or else work about a day and draw their pay and quit.

I told one fellow where he could get a job and work as he pleased, the harder he worked the more money he would receive, or he could take it easy and draw less wages.

Well, he went away pleased, and came back in about five hours and told me how much he had made, but said he would have to have more pay or could not stay on the job.

By quizzing him a little I found out he had received for that half day's work as much as he usually received for a whole day, but that human nature within him made him dissatisfied with what he was to receive and made him ask for more. Now was not that an example of human nature?

There are people who will walk a mile to borrow something from a neighbor which they could buy for a dollar from a store perhaps within a quarter mile of their home. If such a man intends to return the article and counts his time worth much, he will be out a dollar or more and not own the article either.

There are people who seem to think that if they are working for the public it does not matter whether they give value received for their wages or not. They will put in all the time they can, doing very little work, but expect pay for full time simply because they are working for the public and seem to believe it is right.

I have read in magazines and newspapers that George Eastman is to give away free 500,000 kodaks

"No Medicine Ever Helped Me As Did Konjola"

Tulsa Lady Is Enthusiastic About New Medicine—"Best In the World," She Says.

"No medicine ever helped me as did Konjola," said Mrs. G. I. Crabbaugh, 739 Quaker Street, Tulsa. "For more than nine years I had trouble with my stomach. Gas accumulated after meals and I bloated terribly. The pains and pressure often made me short of breath and dizzy. Constipation was another of my worries and I became an almost daily user of cathartics. I had terrible headaches and found it difficult to sleep. My nerves became badly affected and my general condition badly run down."

"I am delighted with the results I obtained from Konjola. Before I had finished the second bottle my constipation had been relieved and my stomach greatly improved. As I kept on with this great medicine my general health improved until I am feeling better today than I have in a long time. I have an excellent appetite and eat heartily without distress. Even neuritis which attacked me occasionally has been totally driven from my system. I cannot say too much in praise of this great medicine."

Though Konjola works quickly, six to eight bottles are recommended as a fair trial. Although many people are benefited within a few weeks, the longer period is best.

Konjola is sold in Friona by the City Drug Store, and by all the best drugstores in all towns throughout this entire section.

PREFERS BABIES TO POLITICIANS

Ishbel MacDonald, Daughter of Premier, Talks of Her Philosophy.

London.—A serious young woman of twenty-six, who would rather entertain babies than politicians, is for the second time in her life one of the world's most important hostesses.

Ishbel MacDonald, dark-eyed daughter of Britain's premier, J. Ramsay MacDonald, is again the mistress of No. 10 Downing street, where she has ruled the social life of the last Labor regime in 1924.

Just as no one knew whether Ishbel was glad to leave the English "White House" after the Labor party's downfall, no one knows how she feels about her return. Her friends say she no longer hopes to obtain a university degree, but they believe she would like to devote all her time to social welfare work.

When, not yet twenty-one, she left her domestic science course at King's college in 1924 to take charge of the prime minister's household, society matrons held their thumbs, but Ishbel made a great social success of the Labor administration.

She is independent. Her reply to a woman who volunteered to help choose her gowns and give advice on court behavior showed characteristic independence. "I have chosen my own gowns," she said, "and I think I shall know how to behave in court."

She soon became a favorite of the queen and so great was her popularity with the people that hundreds of baby girls in all parts of Britain were christened Ishbel. A picture which alone adorned the living room of "No. 10" in 1924 is back in the same place today. It is a photograph of the garden seat in Lincoln Inn fields which bears the following inscription: "This seat has been placed here in memory of Margaret MacDonald, who spent her life in helping others in need. She took no rest from doing good."

Friends of the MacDonald family have said that Ishbel is much like her mother, a noted welfare worker. Ishbel has spent much time studying the problems of poverty, motherhood, and infant mortality. She chose a seat on the London county council in preference to one in parliament so that she could carry on her work among the poorer classes.

Her Social Philosophy. While campaigning for the Labor party, she concisely expressed her social philosophy in five points:

"I believe every mother should have the chance of bringing children into the world without impairing her own health in that natural function.

"Every family should have a decent house and healthy surroundings in which to live.

"Every child should have a good primary and secondary education.

"When large sums have been invested in developing good citizens they should be permitted to make use of their education for the benefit of themselves and their country instead of being asked to die for their country.

"I do not believe war is inevitable."

Brown, Wavy Hair. Ishbel has brown, wavy hair and a vivid, clear complexion. She plays hockey and golf, likes music but does not care for dancing. Her favorite author is George Eliot and she expresses a preference for "old-fashioned" novels. She is an enthusiastic student of chemistry.

Ishbel accompanied her father to America in 1927 and made a favorable impression. When MacDonald became ill, she took his place as the principal speaker at a socialist banquet in New York.

She has been a diligent campaigner for the Labor party, speaking for her father, her brother, and their colleagues. On the platform she drops her quiet manner and has been known to indulge in some of her father's caustic sarcasm.

Bible Lost in France Is Returned to Owner

Washington.—A Bible stolen from him in the University of Beaume at Dijon, France, during the World war ten years ago, was returned to Farmount R. White, formerly athletic coach of the Newport News high school at Newport, Va., recently.

The Bible, a gift of Mr. White's mother, was sent, accompanied by a letter from Martha V. Grigsby, of 310 West One Hundred Eighteenth street, New York. The letter explained how it fell into her hands as follows:

"I take great pleasure in sending your Bible you lost in the One Hundred Sixteenth street subway station, found by a friend of mine. I am colored, but colored or white, I am sure that you will be glad to get your Bible."

She did not know that the Bible had been stolen from Mr. White on the Western front ten years ago.

Plenty of Alarm Anacosta, Mont.—Just because the fire alarm box was numbered 21, the man thought it was necessary to pull the lever 31 times. Firemen found a man industriously yanking the little handle when they arrived to extinguish a small fire on the porch roof of a dwelling.

This Dog Attends School Athens, Ga.—King, eight-year-old bulldog, is following in the footsteps of Mary's little lamb. Since 1922 King has attended Athens high school with a member of the Griggs family. The dog wears the red and white colors of the school.

to boys and girls whose twelfth birthday falls within 1930.

It occurs to me to be a very nice thing for Mr. Eastman to do, but concerns me very little since neither myself nor children or grandchildren or great grandchildren have their twelfth birthday during this year.

I get a great deal of what is now commonly called "kick" from listening to the many clever things little folk say. They are honest, sincere, open minded, so ready to learn, to grasp every opportunity that comes their way.

The greatest teacher the world has ever known has told us that if we do not become as little children we will not enjoy the really good things of the universe and the only thing that I can see he means, is to be open minded, honest, truthful, and ready to learn all we can, just like the child.

My neighbor's little girl is just learning to talk. When asked what her father does she says he sells insurance. The little lady has been to Sunday school and her teacher has told her about Jesus, of which information she was very proud and when her mother asked her what Jesus does she replies, "He sells insurance."

It seems everybody is going to have to look out for the ditching machines so as not to be run down by one of them. It seems to me as if there will be two of them operating at the same time, one for gas and the other for water.

If my information is correct, one of the things Friona needs worst is a good modern hotel, located as some convenient place, and I guess one of the best ways to get it is for people to get back of some good man who has the desire and means and give him the right kind of encouragement to build such an hotel as the city

Friona has a good hotel, but according to informaton, it is not nearly large enough to accommodate the traveling public that would stop here if plenty of accommodations were available.

Evidence that spring is here are to be seen on every hand. Fruit and shade trees are budding and blooming, wheat fields taking on a deep green cast, grass coming out. Gardens are showing rows of tender vegetables and there seems to be some indications of an epidemic of spring fever.

FAMILY DOCTOR LEARNED THIS ABOUT CONSTIPATION

Dr. Caldwell loved people. His years of practice convinced him many were ruining their health by careless selection of laxatives. He determined to write a harmless prescription which would get at the cause of constipation, and correct it.

Today, the prescription he wrote in 1885 is the world's most popular laxative! He prescribed a mixture of herbs and other pure ingredients now known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, in thousands of cases where bad breath, coated tongue, gas, headaches, biliousness and lack of appetite or energy showed the bowels of men, women and children were sluggish. It proved successful in even the most obstinate cases; old folks liked it for it never gripes; children liked its pleasant taste. All drugstores today have Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in bottles.

The authorities in Budapest, Hungary, have decided that all noise is disagreeable and reprehensible and must be stopped. The orders also affect musicians, newsboys, dogs, parrots, peacocks, guinea-fowl, and other experts in noise.

GINGER ELLA

STORY FROM THE START

In the usually quiet home of Rev. Mr. Tolliver of Red Thrush, Iowa, his motherless daughters, Helen, Miriam and Ellen—"Ginger ELLA"—are busy "grooming" their sister Marjory for participation in the "beauty pageant" that evening. With Eddy Jackson, prosperous young farmer, her escort, Marjory leaves for the anticipated triumph. Over-work has affected Mr. Tolliver's eyes to the point of threatened blindness. Ginger has tried in many ways to add to the family's slender income, but she is not discouraged.

CHAPTER II—Continued

In her arms were roses, heaps of roses, soft-petaled and fragrant. Marjory's face was flushed, her eyes were twin stars, her red lips tremulous with sheer delight. Eddy Jackson bore trophies of her conquest, a great loving cup, pieces of silk and lace, shimmering silver, golden chains. But in her own hand Marjory held a small purple box that bore the prize, fifty dollars in gold.

"It was—unanimous," she stammered, with shy pride.

The two evidences above, rapt, speechless and spellbound, had forgotten their mischief as they crept to the stairs, noiseless, without breathing, hearing every word—sharing every heartbeat, softly, down the top step, the next and the next, nearer and nearer, irresistibly drawn by the currents of joy that surged through the shabby parsonage.

Helen kissed her sister rapturously, and Horace Langley, flinging pedagogical dignity to the winds, clasped her in a boisterous embrace.

"This is my sister Helen—and Professor Langley, Helen, this is—everybody," Marjory introduced, almost incoherently. "Where are the girls? Where's father?"

"Angels," cried Eddy Jackson, gazing suddenly up to the curve of the circular staircase. "Or are the goddesses coming down from Olympus to gaze upon, and envy, Beauty?" He pointed dramatically to the stairs where Ginger ELLA, with Miriam fast on her heels, crouched in quivering excitement, the wedding gown forgotten, forgotten, too, the veiling curtain, the canvas gloves, the floppy mules.

"Ginger—run!" cried Miriam, in stekening realization. But Ginger, trapped, was not one to fly before confusion. She proceeded calmly down the stairs, even strutting a little.

"I didn't hurt it a bit, Helen," she reassured her sister. "It's—oh, just—a rehearsal."

"Why, it's little Cinderella—just got a fall from her pumpkin," chortled Eddy Jackson, and a ukulele caught its cue and whined into the wedding march.

But Ginger turned away from them, scornfully, a bit scornfully, for one of the flapping mules, too large for her, slid from her slender foot. Ginger, as she felt it slipping, in sudden consternation, hesitated for the barest fraction of a second. It was too long. Eddy Jackson saw and seized it, and ran to kneel mockingly at her unslipped foot.

"Cinderella, the prince returns your glass slipper."

In the midst of their merry laughter, the ukulele's sudden hush silenced them.

"See here, somebody ought to introduce me," protested the player, plainly. "You forget I'm a stranger—I wasn't even invited." His eyes were dazed to the bottom step of the circular staircase where Miriam sat just as she had dropped in that first shocking moment, still, rapt and breathless.

"Oh, I forgot," apologized Eddy Jackson. "Everybody's supposed to know everybody in Red Thrush. This is our old friend Tub Andrews. He went to school with us when he was a kid, but they moved to Detroit, and now he's come back to help run the First National bank. Janitor, aren't you, Tub?"

"Assistant janitor," said Tub Andrews pleasantly. "But next week they are going to promote me to stamp-licker. Pleased to meet you."

He dropped down on the step beside Miriam. "Why didn't you go into the beauty pageant and give your sister a run for her complexion?"

"I? Miriam was shocked with amazement. "She!"

"Sure, I was one of the judges. Your sister had it easy, the way it was. But if you had been against her—well—me—I'm one gentleman who don't."

"Don't what?" Miriam followed the jovial young banker with some diffidence, but with interest.

"Prefer 'em." He indicated the golden Marjory with a light wave of his ukulele. "They freckle on the nose, and peel on the neck, and go dark in streaks—their hair does. I'm a blonde myself. I know all about 'em."

"I'm going to turn you all out now," called Marjory, with a smile that took the sting from her light dismissal. "I want to go upstairs and see my father, and all my sisters have to come along. You've been perfectly marvelous to me—Eddy, you're an angel!"

"I know it," he agreed, briskly. With much laughter, many light salutes, a hundred gay words, the happy group dispersed slowly.

"I'll come and take you for a ride tomorrow," said Tub Andrews to Miriam. "If you have not objection to Mlvers."

"I haven't. I like them."

"I don't. I only drive them. About eight, then."

And then, breathlessly, with Ginger still in the forbidden gown and the ridiculous curtain, the four girls ran upstairs into their father's room and flung themselves upon his bed, where he sat erect, waiting, knowing they would come to him. Marjory dropped on her knees beside the bed, and buried her bright face in his shoulders, laughing, with tears in the laughter.

"Father—I got it. It was unanimous."

"I had a sort of a vague idea maybe you got it," he said, teasingly, but with tender warmth, transferring her from his shoulder to the curve of his arm, where he held her closely. "It just seemed to me there couldn't possibly be such a racket without some prize to show for it."

"Father, give me your hand."

Into the outstretched palm she pressed five small round pieces, gold, fifty dollars in all, and curled his fingers tightly upon the treasure.

"Oh, my dear—" he began protestingly.

"Father, don't say a word. Why, Providence put on that beauty pageant—to give us the money for you to go to Chicago again. Oh, father, we knew you were just putting it off because you couldn't afford it! And now you can. For your eyes, darling."

The silence that followed was so slight as to be barely noticeable, and his voice was only slightly husky as he said:

"You're a nice girl, Marjory. And you are quite right—the eyes need care, and I hadn't the money. It is a joy to take it from you—one of my girls. You're more than good looking, Marjory, you're just plain nice. You're all nice. I wish they'd offer four prizes the next time—the proceeds would run the parsonage for a year."

CHAPTER III

"Ginger, do run up and change your dress. Mr. Andrews is coming to take me for a ride, and the very sight of you would disgrace the parsonage. He is in the bank, you know."

"Mister who?" demanded Ginger.

"Mr. Andrews. You know—the young man who came with the crowd last night—"

"To take who out driving?"

"Me. At least, he didn't mention anybody else."

Ginger squared about in her chair, drew the ruffled smock carefully about her, crossed one knee over the other, planting a deliberate elbow on the tompost one and dropped an amazed face in her palm, staring at her sister.

Yet, despite her efforts and her skill in culinary arts, the new bride never succeeded in quite satisfying her husband.

"It's fine, Sadie," he told her often, "but there is just something amiss. My poor Mary could give the food a flavor I never find anywhere else. I don't know just how she did it."

Then came a day when houseclean-

"You don't mean—Miriam, you certainly do not mean—I must absolutely have misunderstood you—you could not possibly intend to intimate that—that Andrews creature, called Tub, as I remember, who twanged that godless ukulele for three hours without stopping—is coming to take you out—alone—in a car—for—for sentimental purposes? Tub Andrews! Father, you will enjoy him. He converses to the squeak of a ukulele. Disgusting, father, simply disgusting."

"They used to live here, father, and then moved to Detroit. He went through college, and now he has a position in the First National bank. The president, Mr. Mills, is his uncle."

"Simply disgusting," reiterated Ginger.

In his heart, Mr. Tolliver was inclined to agree with her. He had found life very pleasant in the old days, with the interest of every daughter centered exclusively in the parsonage confines, the five of them as one mind and spirit. But now, what with Helen and Horace, Marjory and a townful of admirers, and now Miriam and this new young man with the ukulele, his sigh revolved Ginger's own.

There was still the strained, high tension in his bandaged eyes, still the vague sensation of a firm band circling his brow. It seemed a shameful thing to him, in his gentle orthodoxy, that he should chafe at the temporary restriction upon him. He had so much, was denied so little. Even Paul had suffered his thorn in the flesh. His great yearning for restoration was almost unchristian, certainly unscriptural. He had said that to Ginger a few weeks before.

"Yes," she had agreed pleasantly, "but awfully human."

Particularly, he desired recovery before the formal dedication of the new church. It was a great accomplishment for Red Thrush. He wanted to look into the glad faces of his members on that day, he wanted them to see the grateful joy in his. It is hard for a blinded face to mirror the heart's emotions. He sometimes felt that he would be willing to accept blindness for months—for a year even—at another time, if only on that day he could meet his people face to face, his eyes reading their eyes, and all reflecting their gratitude for the realization of their hopes.

In many ways, his misfortune had come at a critical time for the minister. The building of a new church, despoiling of a new parsonage, disposal of the old property, all entailed a great deal of careful figuring. It was hard to figure finances through the eyes of committees, and boards, and daughters. Approximately two thousand dollars was still unpledged on the church debt. It had been his dream that on the Sabbath of the dedication, his people, of their own free will, should make up that amount, calling the church a free church, consecrated to the service of Red Thrush without encumbrance. He sighed a little.

The day of rest, in a parsonage, affords scant leisure for sisterly recriminations, and Ginger was forced to forego her plan to subject Miriam to a bitter grilling on the subject of sentiment in general. By alternately, the girls were on hand for Sunday school, leaving their father the entire hour for a half-hour of silent meditation and prayer. In the interval while the classes were reassembling for dismissal Miriam ran across to walk with him the short distance to the church, where he usually conducted a brief review of the lesson. Sunday school was followed by the formal morning worship, where, as there was no pew system in Red Thrush, the girls sat where they liked with their special friends. From a corner far back on the right side, Ginger's heart went out tenderly, as it did every Sunday morning, to her father. She used to say the pulpit was becoming to him. Against the dark wood, he seemed very tall, very pale, almost radiant. His voice seemed gentler, yet somehow more incisively penetrating, since his blindness.

"Poor dear," she thought compassionately, for she followed the sermon but intermittently, and usually concentrated the hour to her own thoughts, "I dare say if the hearer are right, and we really do reincarnate in this world, I was father's mother the last time. I feel like a mother to him now, he's such a lamb."

Sunday afternoon in the parsonage was given up to quiet recreation. Helen went out with Horace. Marjory, too, went out, with anyone who asked her, strolling, driving, or calling, sometimes with Miriam in the party, sometimes not. Ginger usually retired to her attic studio.

Flavor of First Wife's Cooking Found at Last

A middle-aged spinster married a widower, who had lost his first wife after a marriage of 15 years.

The spinster, who lived for years with her aged mother, was brought up in the spirit of immaculate housekeeping. An old-fashioned housekeeper, the mother excelled in cooking and her daughter kept fairly well in her footsteps.

Yet, despite her efforts and her skill in culinary arts, the new bride never succeeded in quite satisfying her husband.

"It's fine, Sadie," he told her often, "but there is just something amiss. My poor Mary could give the food a flavor I never find anywhere else. I don't know just how she did it."

FRENCH DISHES

The French cook is gifted in being able to make very delightful dishes from the most simple materials.

Choux a la Creme.—Put a tablespoonful of butter in saucepan with a cupful of water, a teaspoonful of sugar, a piece of lemon peel and a little salt. Boil well together, stir in two tablespoonfuls of flour, and cook until thick. Allow this paste to cool, then work into it two eggs and sufficient milk to make a drop batter. Heat a kettle of lard or use a deep frying pan, drop the paste from a spoon into the hot fat, making lumps about the size of an egg. When slightly brown and well puffed remove and drain them. When cool scoop out a little from the top of each and fill with sweetened and flavored whipped cream. Jelly or preserves may be used in place of the cream if preferred.

Bœuf a la Mode.—Take the under part of a round steak, place in a deep earthen dish and pour over it spiced vinegar. Let the meat remain in this several hours, then lard it with strips of salt pork. Make incisions a few inches apart and stuff with seasoned bread crumbs. Use pepper, onion, thyme and marjoram. Bind the beef into shape and dredge with flour.

Cut two onions and one-half of a turnip and a small carrot and fry in a little fat. Brown the meat all over, place on a trivet in a pan and add boiling water, a bag of herbs, vegetables, and simmer until the meat is tender. Take out, remove the strings and herbs, place on a large hot platter, surround with the vegetables and potato balls and onions.

Salad Romaine.—Put crisp leaves of lettuce in a salad bowl that has been rubbed with a cut onion. Make the following dressing: Take one hard-cooked egg, mash it with a fork, adding salt, paprika, half a teaspoonful of mustard, a teaspoonful of hashed chives, the same of fresh tarragon, two tablespoonfuls of olive oil and one of vinegar. Toss well so that the romaine is well covered.

Roast Duck With Orange Sauce.—Baste wild duck while roasting with butter and lemon juice and serve with a sauce prepared thus: Shred very fine the rind of two oranges and parboil in a little water. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter and add a tablespoonful of flour; when well blended add a little water, cook, adding the juice of the two oranges, season with pepper and salt and add the orange peel. Serve hot.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE TABLE

The use of lemon juice instead of vinegar except in making pickles, is to be recommended.

Pineapple Meringue Pie.—Take one can of shredded pineapple, one-half cupful of sugar, the yolks of three eggs, four tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, one-third of a cupful of lemon juice, one teaspoonful of the grated rind, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth cupful of pineapple juice, one tablespoonful of butter. Drain the pineapple and stir the juice with the cornstarch and lemon juice, cook until thick. Add the grated rind, the beaten yolks of the eggs, then the pineapple and cook two minutes. Add the butter and pour into a baking shell. Cover with a meringue made with the whites of the eggs.

Molded Vegetable Salad.—Take two bunches of young carrots, scrape, cut and cook until tender in two cupfuls of water. Drain and press the carrots through a ricer. To the water in which the carrots were cooked add salt, paprika, a tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce, one teaspoonful of chili powder, two level teaspoonfuls of gelatin; reheat and dissolve the gelatin, then pour into a ring mold and set away to chill with the vegetable mixture placed in layers with the gelatin. Chill and serve on lettuce with the center filled with cubed pickled beets.

Sauce Tartar.—This is a sauce that makes fish or any shell fish foods more appetizing. Mix one-half teaspoonful of mustard with the same of salt, a few grains of cayenne and a teaspoonful of powdered sugar. Add the yolks of two eggs, stir until thoroughly blended, setting the dish in ice water. Add a drop at a time of olive oil until nearly a half cupful has been used, then it may be added faster. Beat with a whisk or wooden spoon. Add one and one-half tablespoonfuls of lemon juice while beating in the oil; use one-half cupful of the oil. When using add chopped capers, pickles, olives and parsley with a dash of tarragon vinegar.

Sauces and souffles may be quickly prepared with cream of pea or asparagus soup.

ACHES

There's scarcely an ache or pain that Bayer Aspirin won't relieve promptly. It can't remove the cause, but it will relieve the pain! Headaches. Backaches. Neuritis and neuralgia. Yes, and rheumatism. Read proven directions for many important uses. Genuine Aspirin can't depress the heart. Look for the Bayer cross:

Salisbury Cathedral England's most beautiful cathedral, at Salisbury, has been called England's finest poem in stone. It is indeed the most harmonious and best proportioned of the English cathedrals, for it was built within the short space of forty years (1220-1290), where many others have taken centuries to complete them. It is a pure example of early English architecture, unalloyed by foreign influence. Its spire, rising from the very middle of the church, is the loftiest in England.

ELVES AND GUESTS

The Elves gave a ball one evening in the moonlight and the fairies, gnomes, brownies, and old Mr. Giant were among the invited guests.

Mr. Giant wore his shiny top boots that he only wears to balls, and he came walking very slowly to the party for fear of walking on some of the guests.

His long legs would step over whole groups of fairies or elves.

And on his head he wore a fine hat made of moss, out of which were growing ferns which looked like tail feathers.

The fairies were dressed in soft silvery costumes which looked like clouds, and Mr. Moon was round and jolly and very bright.

The fairies carried wands of silver and they were covered with little silver stars which sparkled and gleamed every few minutes.

The stars up in the sky had planned to take a nap, but when they saw old Mr. Moon out in all his glory they decided to peep out to see what was up.

Then when they saw the stars on the costumes of the fairies they came out so as not to be outdone by the fairies' ball dresses.

The brownies wore suits of brown velvet and their hats were made out of brown toadstools. They turned a

But as they felt the Fairy Queen waved her wand and new toadstools popped up out of the earth and the brownies got new hats.

They also carried sticks made out of birch bark.

The elves wore their favorite dresses of green, and the gnomes wore colors of all sorts and looked like clowns.

They made a great deal of fun and merriment, and the elves were delighted.

"The dance will begin now," sang out Elfe Elf.

"The dance will begin," said Mr. Giant, and his voice echoed all through the wooded glade where the dance was being given.

The people who lived near the woods said to themselves:

"Did we hear thunder?"

It was really Mr. Giant talking.

The dance kept up for hours and hours, and Mr. Moon and the stars gave them all the light they wanted, but just before it was time to go home, what should be seen coming down from the sky but some shooting stars.

They wanted to see what was going on, too, and they were having their own dance, too—the dance of the shooting stars!

Oh, it was such a lovely party.

The elves and all their guests had a beautiful, beautiful, time.

They said it was one of the nicest balls they had ever had and the dancing was so graceful and pretty.

Babies will cry, often for no apparent reason. You may not know what's wrong, but you can always give Castoria. This soon has your little one comforted; if not, you should call a doctor. Don't experiment with medicines intended for the stronger systems of adults! Most of those little upsets are soon soothed away by a little of this pleasant-tasting, gentle-acting children's remedy that children like.

It may be the stomach, or may be the little bowels. Or in the case of older children, a sluggish, constipated condition. Castoria is still the thing to give. It is almost certain to clear up any minor ailment, and could by no possibility do the youngest child the slightest harm.
