VICTORY

We Are Pleased to Announce Completion of Plans for

New, Enlarged Quarters

Equipped to Take Care of the Growing Needs of Our Loyal Customers
As They Deserve . . . and for Years to Come!

We have completed arrangements for the purchase of the Petty Building, on the corner just east of our present location, where modernization and installation of the latest type, modern hatchery equipment of greatly enlarged capacity and range will start immediately.

When our plans are realized, we hope to have an institution of which the citizens of the community may well be proud, and which will serve the growing industry of this section in the way the good people which compose it deserve. Watch for announcement of our opening.

The American FARMER LEADS THE PARADE TO VICTORY!

This expansion is made possible by their patronage and response to our efforts to serve their growing needs.

Due credit for this opportunity to realize the dreams of a lifetime is given to the good farmers, poultry raisers and ranchers of this community, so many of whom have favored us with their patronage throughout the years . . . in good times and bad.

With our mutual opportunities for increasing production in supplying "Food for Freedom" we hope to continue to be of service to our customers, consumers, and to our country during its time of need. Please call on us any time we can help you.

During the change our customers will be slightly inconvenienced at times, but we ask them to bear with us, while we work together for a greater future. We hope the public will agree with us that the new plant will be something in which we may take mutual pride. All our plans, formed during long years of experience with the needs of this section, have been built around the central thought on the part of management and personnel—

ADEQUATE TO SERVE YOU . . . ANXIOUS TO PLEASE YOU!

WHEN WILL THE NAZIS SAY "UNCLE"?

The reports we get on those all-out bombings of German cities usually are confined to what the bombardiers saw—smoke, explosions, flames shooting high into the air and fires that could be seen for miles.

The story of what these night-after-night bombings are doing to German war production and what they are doing to the nerves of the German people is one that we never will hear accurately until after the war.

But the easiest way to picture what it must be doing is to compare what it would be like if hundreds of bombers flew over our country day and night dropping block-busters on the factories in Detroit, Chicago, New York, Dallas, and our other production centers. We could take it, just as the English did, but there is no question that such bombings as have been inflicted on Germany recently would be a terrific blow to our production and a severe strain on the workers.

We have no experience in history with which the raids on Germany can be compared. We have no way of knowing how much of this it will take to make them say "Uncle." But it seems quite conceivable that it wouldn't take many more months of such attacks to break the morale and destroy production throughout Germany.

A 7,500,000-ACRE GARDEN

When some of us started planting a little 20 x 20 Victory Garden in the backyard it was hard to see how this midget farm, which may or may not produce a few beans, radishes, tomatoes and heads of lettuce, can do much to help solve the nation's food shortage problem.

But when all the Victory Gardens are added together, they can produce more than the biggest farm in the nation. It is estimated that the total space devoted to Victory Gardens will be close to seven and a half million acres.

Of course there will be some gardens which don't work out, but that is true of some crops on even the most well cared for farms. Bugs, wind, dry spells or rain always do considerable damage.

But it is important that every one of us look upon our Victory Garden as a real contribution to the war—as part of the acreage which is being counted upon to supply our soldiers and civilians with food. For each pound of vegetables we grow, the civilian demand is so reduced.

THIS AND THAT

By JOE SMITH DYER

TRAIL OF LIFE

The wealthiest merchant in all of Canada (age 93) died recently and his boast before passing was that he had not, in all his long years of business, lost one single day from work. But he had lost the beautiful scenes along the trail.

Winding roads, the sea beating against the coast, valleys bathed in sunlight, and he had missed the thrill that a tired man gets when vitalizing breezes blow across his face.

True, he became wealthy and he had all that money can buy but when he died he did not take with him his filing cabinet, his cash register, or his bank account.

The man to be envied is the one who is interested in his business and enthusiastic regarding its operation, but who knows when and how to forget his business worries and enjoy the things that are on the outside.

A GREAT AMERICAN

The year 1943 ushered in the unfortunate death of one of the great negroes since Booker T. Washington. He was George Washington Carver, who was born into slavery but who became widely known for his experience in botany and soil conservation.

Among this colored man's good friends were Henry Ford, Thomas A. Edison, Henry Wallace, and other famous people.

Rackam Holt has written a fine book about this useful citizen. It is called "George Washington Carver" and is published by Doubleday-Doran in New York.

Holt was intimately acquainted with Carver and has therefore been able to tell many things about him that the outside world has never known before.

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER

Privates Harry Pausch and Steve Obera, inducted at Camp Sheridan, Ill., came to Camp Wolters, Texas, on the same troop train. For two months they were in the same company and slept in bunks side by side. One day they exchanged addresses. Pausch lived at 2553 S. Troy St. in Chicago, and Obera lived at 2541, same street, same city. They were close neighbors, but still they were strangers for thirteen years.

MOTHER'S DAY FOUNDER

The graying little spinster who founded Mother's Day suggests this year's observance be reversed because of the war.

"It will be up to the Mothers themselves to do the remembering," said 65-year-old Anna M. Jarvis.

"Perhaps one of our boys will fall on the battlefield on Mother's Day. Then his Mother would like to know that there was a letter from her in his pocket when he died."

Miss Jarvis' love for her own Mother led her to persuade Congress in 1914 to designate the second Sunday in May as Mother's Day. Since then she has written thousands and thousands of letters to promote the observance in every state in the Union and in over fifty foreign countries.

"I have another Mother's Day message this year," Miss Jarvis recently said. "Back in 1919 when I first started my campaign to have the whole world honor its Mothers, I didn't dream of this modern commercialism."

She suggests: "Get Mother that easy chair she has been wanting for so long, or have a carpenter repair those steps she has been tripping over or visit her. It may make the day a personal one between you and your Mother."

Nowadays the Grafton, West Virginia native seldom leaves the lovely brick home that has been her abode for over thirty years. Her health has been impaired by the long series of court battles against unscrupulous interests making millions out of her idea.

Miss Jarvis prays daily that a lasting peace soon may come to all the world so that Mothers may again be happy.

You can not throw mud without getting your own hands soiled.

HOUSE AND HOME

By MARY E. DAGUE

Author of Sister Mary's Kitchen. We seem to be going "early American" with a vengeance, not only as to architecture and furnishings but as to plain living as well. Plain clothes, simpler living and security in many familiar foods are giving us an understanding of our pioneer background that will stand us in good stead in our present emergency.

A study of our grandmother's "receipt" books will give us many a hint on how she managed without fully stocked grocery shelves and suggest ways for us to do likewise.

When grandmother wanted greens in the spring she went out and dug dandelions and served them to her family.

The first shoots of milkweed are good and can be cooked much like asparagus.

Even the tender young shoots of pokeweed also known as scoke are edible and they, too, are cooked like asparagus. There's one note of caution be sure NOT to leave any root on the shoot because the root is POISONOUS.

Cowslip or marshmarigold is another good green that comes early and should be used before it blossoms. It's slightly bitter, like dandelions and you may want to parboil it before you cook it.

My own grandmother used the young tender leaves of yellow dock which she served with a sour egg sauce.

Sorrel, both the sheep sorrel and the kind we know as sour grass, is a good green with a tart taste that's decidedly piquant. Cook this with a bit of bacon and serve it with hard cooked eggs.

Mustard greens are strong flavored and combine well with milder greens. Serve them with lemon juice and hard cooked egg or a tart egg sauce.

Ordinary plantain can be served cooked like other greens or served raw shredded in a salad.

There are many other weeds that can be used as food but it's a good idea not to venture too far in your search without the advice of someone who knows his weeds. The department of agriculture at Washington will furnish you with a booklet on Edible Weeds or you can write to your state agricultural college for information about the weeds in your own locality.

Much of the palatability of your dish of greens will depend on the cooking and seasoning. Cook them in as little water as possible until tender, season with salt just before they are done, then drain and chop them just as carefully as you do spinach. Lemon juice, hard cooked eggs, hot mayonnaise and a sour egg sauce all are good accompaniments to greens.

It's common sense to be thrifty. If you save you are thrifty. War Bonds help you to save and help to save America. Buy your ten per cent every pay day.

...not if you take good care of your VACUUM CLEANER

Beating rugs by hand is hard on you and hard on your rugs, but it's your only alternative if you allow your cleaner to become damaged beyond repair. Here are a few hints on how to keep it in A-1 operating condition:

TIPS ON CLEANER CARE

- Empty dust bag every time cleaner is used. Dust in bag reduces suction.
- Avoid running cleaner over pins, nails, coins and other hard objects. Pick them up by hand.
- Keep brushes free from lint, hair and threads. Clean after each use.
- If cleaner is not picking up threads, check belt to see if it is turning brush. Increase tension or replace belt if necessary.

- Be sure that brush is properly adjusted. Bristles should extend about one-eighth inch below nozzle.
- Coil cord loosely on hooks. Pulling too tightly may break wires inside insulation where cord bends over hooks.
- Disconnect cord by grasping plug at outlet. Do not yank cord or you may damage connections.
- Follow manufacturer's instructions on cleaning and oiling. Consult your dealer if you have lost directions.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Peter and John Leaders in the Early Church.
Lesson for May 9: Acts 2:37-41; 3:1-7; 4:1-22.
Golden Text: Acts 4:13.

The lesson shows Peter and John assuming leadership in the early church. In many respects different, they supported each other in their work as leaders.

Peter was in his element preaching to thousands on the day of Pentecost. It would be hard to match the occasion in another since 3,000 persons were brought into the church. Later, as Peter and John went into the temple to pray, they saw at the gate called Beautiful a man lame from birth who was daily laid at the gate to beg. He asked alms; Peter gave him better—the power to walk and do for himself. Hearing of the miracle, a great multitude gathered, and Peter had another opportunity to preach.

The religious authorities, stirred to action by those whom they recognized as followers of Jesus, tried to intimidate Peter and John by threats. The answer of the disciples was bold and unequivocal. They asked their inquisitors if it were right to hearken to God or to men, and declared that they would speak the things they had seen and heard.

The authorities further threatened Peter and John but released them because they feared the people, "for all men glorified God for that which was done." In all ages, nothing has been able to crush the truth. Let us, in a trying time for the church, take courage in our own witness to the truth as it is in Christ Jesus.

They've Got Money to Burn

While Edwin H. Dressel (left), superintendent of the Philadelphia mint, and Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, mint director, look on, Nathan Cohen pours silver dollars into a crucible to melt them down. This was the start of the remelting of $17,000,000 in silver dollars to recover the copper content, which is now of more value in war munitions than in coinage.

WITH THE COLORS

at Kelly Field and Mrs. Segrest is employed in San Antonio.

Mr. and Mrs. James O. West received a letter Thursday from their nephew, M-Sgt. Jack West Cox, who is in the medical corps and now stationed in the Hawaiian Islands. This is the first message they have had from him in ten months and he stated that the Islands are exactly as advertised.

Cpl. John Wesley Horton has written his mother, Mrs. Elra Horton, to order his paper changed to his new address. He has finished an intensive course of training at the Spartan Aero School at Tulsa, Okla., and has been promoted to corporal. He has now been assigned to one of Henry Ford's bomber plants, Willow Run, near Ypsilanti, Michigan, where he is to receive 28 more days of training. Cpl. Horton enlisted in the Air Corps five months ago at San Antonio, Texas.

Cpl. Lawrence Shipman, with a Coast Artillery unit at Seattle, Washington, will now receive his mother, Mrs. Jewel Shipman, of Hico Route 7 came in this week to place the order. Cpl. Shipman went into the service April 17, 1942, and received his training at Galveston.

Mrs. Shipman has another son, Pfc. DeWard Shipman, also in the Coast Artillery and now supposedly somewhere in North Africa. She hasn't heard from him in about 15 days. He went in Jan. 27, 1942.

Announcement was made recently of the promotion of Arthur Randolph Brown, of Fort Worth and Hico, Texas, to the grade of 1st Lieutenant at the Kingman, Arizona, Flexible Gunnery School where he is now stationed.

Lt. Brown, who is assistant base ordnance officer at the field, was commissioned a 2nd Lieutenant last year upon completion of Officers' Technical School at the Aberdeen Proving Ground in Maryland. Employed for a number of years by the Stanolind Oil and Gas Company as a petroleum engineer, Lt. Brown attended John Tarleton College in Stephenville, and received his B. S. degree from the University of Texas.

Dear Editor:

This is a few lines to let you and my other friends in Hico know I have been transferred to Miami. I took my overseas physical today, passed it A-1, and am ready to go when they want me. I am assigned to a crew to install and maintain communications.

Tell Grady Barrow he ought to be here to go fishing with me. We catch bigger ones here than we do in the Bosque at home.

There are six of us here from Texas. We hold our own with boys from the other States.

If any of the boys there have a good hunting knife they can spare, tell them to send it on, as we are not issued a gun. We are not a combat unit.

Tell all the Hico people hello for me. Hoping to see you soon.
Your friend,
PFC. GRADY T. COSTON.

North Africa,
April 1, 1943.

Dearest Mother:
Everyone is happy here today except the ones who are never happy.

I have heard about the American Navy's new skill on shooting Hun and Jap subs. They carry paint on board ship, and when a sub is reported they pour it on the water. The paint covers the periscope lenses and the sub crew don't know when they reach the surface, so they keep on going up, when they get about 200 feet in the air, the Navy shoots them down with anti-aircraft guns. Ha, Ha!

Oh, yes, the next time you write Pinkey, tell him there are no squint-eyes over here, and that I am as happy as a bird—what bird?

I could really enjoy a good movie or a rodeo about now. But I see quite a few things very interesting—some I didn't know existed. We have quite a few comedians around.

You said something in your letter about loaded dice. All that was understood in the beginning. But there are quite a few people who can play fairly well. But in the "short" run the loaded ones always win. I have rolled (pass the dice—I'll roll again). And speaking of love affairs, I am a good loser, but no one can prove a loss to me. The gone is forgotten, the present remembered, and the future looked forward to.

Tell Dad "Hi" and that I don't need a rabbit's foot. Good luck is in my heart. What heart? I must have one some place. I am getting sillier in actions each day—and more foolishly funny.

So long, Mom. All my love,
CHARLES.

[The above letter is from Cpl. Charles D. Jones to his mother, Mrs. J. J. Jones of Hico, and shows the Hico lad to be developing into quite a philosopher. Cpl. Jones also sent along several clippings from the North African edition of "Stars and Stripes" which were very interesting.—ED.]

The News Review's special representative, brought up from the ranks from "devil" to advertising manager and superintendent of the mechanical department, but loaned to Uncle Sam for the duration, is an erratic kind of a correspondent. Not having anything to do himself, like other service men [Ouch! Who threw that brick?] ex-Devil seems to expect an answer to every letter he writes the boss. This week, however, he took time off to divulge a few civilian secrets as to his present address and how he is occupying his time. We leave him anonymous, just in case he has been fooling with something he shouldn't, hoping we can lie out of any jam we might get him in by saying we were talking about another fellow. He has aroused our undying admiration by re-maintaining a buck private, a rank in which he says he seems to be frozen, but he gets around, as seen by the following excerpts from his message:

"They've had me pretty busy lately with a slight increase of papers to handle. We're also making them more exact than they have been with the result that my spare time has decreased.

"I got a break yesterday and today I got in some time in a Link Trainer. You don't go anywhere except your course is charted on a piece of paper. However, as much time as I got to put in I just began to learn to hold it level and keep my theoretical altitude. The first time I was in one yesterday I was in it for twenty minutes and ended up 200 feet below sea level which would be about 600 feet under the ground here.

"I didn't get to spend but about ten minutes in it today, but I quit at 2000 feet. (Guess I baled out).

"A friend of mine was with me who had been flying Cubs without having to use instruments and he couldn't use his flying 'senses' with a hood over his head. He got his climbing rate too high and stalled and went into a spin (you can spin even in a Link Trainer). He had the hood over his head and didn't even know he was spinning. Every time he tried to use the controls nothing happened and he finally raised the hood up and saw what was happening. Was his face red!

"I couldn't get my time logged because I wasn't really supposed to be in it. I'm hoping maybe I can slip in a few more half and quarter hours every once in a while.

"When you get to looking over that Link Trainer work, it presents quite a challenge to a flyer. They have courses figured out where you make a flight with a lot of turns at certain speeds and altitudes and you are supposed to end up right where you started. It's all figured out with wind speeds and everything. You don't know where you are until you get out of the Trainer and then you can see the course you flew charted out on a map. You've really got to go some to end up in just the right place.

"We really had quite a day with our open house yesterday. There were so many people here and the wind was blowing so hard that we had a continual dust storm.

"I saw flying and other Army training yesterday that I hadn't seen at any other time on the field. We have been given nearly a month's chemical warfare training, but I saw my first thermite incendiary yesterday.

"The officers flying the Cubs yesterday put on a hedge-hopping show and a few of our choice trees now look as if they had been pruned on top.

"Maybe I'll have another change of address soon and can write you another letter.

Take Care of What You Have!

Bring Spring-time cheer to your home also. It is almost remarkable what a coat or two of paint will do toward improving the appearance around a home; and right now, when we are faced with the grim necessity of conserving everything we own, the contents of a paint bucket can mean more than ever before.

If you plan to paint, first look after the necessary repairs and replacements. Something that needs mending today should be neglected until tomorrow.

Come here for your repair and replacement needs, paints, roofing and other items not restricted by priorities.
