

THIS AND THAT

By JOE SMITH DYER

SECRET ADVANTAGE:

For his very superior knowledge Socrates paid with his life.

Aristotle saved his skin by taking to his heels.

When we know more than our neighbors we are in a dangerous place.

When we think we know more than others the thin partition between sanity and insanity is down. Every madman thinks all other people are insane and every fool feels that he alone is the wise one.

The best way to figure is that our friends have just as much, or perhaps more, sense than we have.

In that way we make no mistake, for if we do happen to know more than they, we have a secret advantage.

WILLKIE & MISSIONARIES:

Wendell L. Willkie added a chapter to his book, "One World" on the impressions American missionaries made on him during his recent world tour.

Episcopalian Willkie found them serving the cause of good will for America and characterized them as vital to the future hopes of all nations in the world. Said he:

"I asked people in every land I visited whether they were not resentful that these foreigners should invade their country. The answer was universal enthusiasm for what American missionaries have done and for the lives they lead."

WHAT YOU READ:

With so little time for reading these days we are more or less dependent on literary critics to select what we should read.

It saves much time for us.

Many people all over the United States depend upon the selections made by Arthur O'Torrio, one of the best selectors of the best in books. Following is a list of what he suggests for fall reading:

"In Time of Harvest" by John L. Sinclair.

"Highway to Tokyo" by Joseph Rosenfarb.

"Back Door to Berlin" by Wesley Gallagher.

"So Little Time" by John P. Marquand.

And last, but not least, a story of our own Texas by Norma Patterson called "When the Lights Go Up Again" which is a story of our Magic Valley with its citrus groves, oleanders, and bougainvillea. Miss Patterson writes of the people we know and of the land we love with an understanding gained only by being "one of us."

STAGE DOOR CANTEN:

For an hour and forty minutes of real entertainment go to see "Stage Door Canteen" which is full of stars from stage and screen. It's a true-to-life picture taken from the real "Stage Door Canteen" in New York and shows in a small way what the people of the theatre and screen are doing to make the soldiers' and sailors' life a little brighter in these days of war.

A real friend is one who remembers when all the rest forget.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Abiding Values From Israel's History.

Lesson for September 26: Deuteronomy 11:1-25.

Golden Text: Proverbs 14:34.

Having followed Israel's history in the Exodus, we may now consider its abiding values. For the purpose we study a portion of Deuteronomy, which contains the farewell addresses of Moses and repeats much found in preceding books.

Men should be good not primarily for reward, but the Bible is filled with assurances that God will care for those who do his will—that they have all to gain and nothing to lose. Moses promised his people material blessings, but solemnly warned them of disaster if they should turn from God to idols.

They were told to lay up the words of God in their hearts, to talk of them with their children—in their homes and when they walked abroad. In simpler days of our country parents and their children were together more and Christian parents did talk with their children of the things of God. It would be well for us to return, in this respect, to the customs of other days. In the time of Christ the Pharisees were carrying out the command of Moses literally—wearing frontlets and else. The important thing is that the words of God be written in the heart.

Further, Moses promised national blessing—nations would be driven out before the Israelites, not a man would be able to stand against them. But this greater promise depended upon their cleaving unto God. Ofttimes the Israelites departed from God and in all their history they never attained unto the full scope of the promise. For our nation the great lesson of abiding value is well expressed in the words of the Golden Text.

Sister Elizabeth Kenny

"It is not my technique so much as the Great Physician upstairs." Thus Sister Elizabeth Kenny, the famous Australian nurse, whose treatment has restored the withered muscles of many infantile paralysis victims, dismisses the praise and gratitude showered upon her.

"Thirty years ago Sister Kenny (all nurses are titled "Sister" in Australia) encountered six cases of infantile paralysis in the "bush country." When asked how she prevented the usual crippling after-effects of the disease, she replied "I used my hands, and heat, and blankets and water."

"That's the Kenny treatment; hot packs and passive massage. Patients must relearn the use and control of their muscles, she says.

Sister Kenny is described as tall and chic, and "tireless," although 56 years old.

Wartime Lighting Suggestions

HOW TO GET MORE LIGHT FROM YOUR PRESENT EQUIPMENT

Use Shades with Light Linings to Reflect More Light

If your lamp shades are not white or very light-colored on the inside you're losing a lot of valuable light. Dark colors soak up light like a sponge—in some cases as much as 30% to 50% is lost. Clean your lamp shades regularly, or if they're too dark or discolored with age, replace them with clean, light-lined shades that reflect light instead of absorbing it. You'll find you'll get a lot more light from the same bulbs.

HOW TO CLEAN LAMP SHADES

Parchment paper shades should be dusted with a clean cloth. Silk shades with fancy trimming such as appliqued ornaments, and shades of shrinkable material should be dry cleaned. Plain silk or rayon shades can often (but not always) be washed successfully provided they are stitched and not glued. To wash, first remove all surface dirt with soft brush, then hold by wire frame at top and dip up and down repeatedly in lukewarm suds made from mild soap flakes. Rinse through three or four lukewarm rinses using same up and down dipping motion. Dry very fast hanging in shade outdoors in warm, breezy weather, or suspending over radiator or stove, using fan to accelerate drying, in inclement weather.
