A Wonder Of Democracy

When Harry S. Truman delivered his valedictory to the nation the other evening, he harked back to the grim hours marking his ascent to the presidency on April 12, 1945, amid the shock of Franklin D. Roosevelt's sudden death.

There was high drama in the spectacle of the frightened vice president quaking visibly before the mountainous burdens of the office he had inherited that day with such incredible swiftness. In one of the most glaring oversights in U.S. history, no one had thought to prepare him for the great tasks that were now his. He hardly had seen Roosevelt privately since their inauguration.

It was at least a small miracle that Truman overrode these handicaps sufficiently to make the big decisions needed to advance the conduct of World War II to a successful conclusion.

The almost eight years since that time have been only slightly less crowded with history than the war days themselves. It is no exaggeration to say that Truman presided over the United States in the most troubled peacetime era of our national life.

In this span of years, the country became locked in a strange new kind of conflict called the Cold War, with Russian communism the adversary. Pursuing its goals in this combat, the U.S. did many momentous things, some of them unique in its history.

It passed its first peacetime draft, joined the first by the new leader of the Democrats amused peacetime military alliance (the North Atlantic Treaty) it has ever entered, dispensed record sums to bring, first, crime and corruption which has gineers. has ever entered, dispensed record sums to bring, first, caused the nation to gasp was in the hands of Senator Lyndon John-the hands

Earlier it had joined the United Nations and unified to own armed forces. Now it raised these forces to a scale many times that of prewar levels, and stationed them in far-off places as sentinels against the Communist peril.

In 1950, the Reds probed into a soft outer fringe from midnight meeting of Jersey City's Terminal. The contract started out at $300,000, but in four weeks alone named Robert Turney and Joseph which the sentinels had pulled back. The place was Kowhich the sentinels had pulled back. Through all these events, Truman made the big decisions without flinching. His critics argue that many would have been unnecessary if he, as President, had moved earlier to prevent the advance of the Red tide.

In Truman's regime, the nation grew remarkably, and its economy expanded in cadence with that growth. The CARNIVAL U. S. consistently was prosperous. How much of this happy condition was due to his policies and how much to fundamental factors of national development, or to war, war's aftermath, and the preparations for new war?

No observers of present affairs can make the final judgment, although most probably would venture that Truman's domestic performance will detract from his overall stature.

The historians must throw this part of his story into the balance, along with the fits of temper, the letter writing, the exaggerated loyalty to men who hurt the dignity of his office, the slowness to sense the threat of internal communism, the offsetting defense of individual liberties.

But this we need not wait to know: It is the wonder of democracy that a man of such ordinary attainments as Truman-farmer, artilleryman, haberdashed, county officer and senator-can carry with any success at all the burdens of the presidency of the greatest ration in its hour of greatest peacetime peril.

No matter how much time you find to look for it, lost time never is found again.

The annual telephone payroll is now $940,000, seven times greater than at the end of World War II. Local tax payments on telephone property ($26,700) contribute almost five times as much support for local government and schools as in

The company has spent $4,500,000 to improve and expand service in Midland during the past four years. A modern dial system has been installed in the new two-story telephone building, and new wire has been added to the outside network of lines and cables.

It is doubtful that any one business has contributed more to Midland's growth than the telephone company. It must continue to be an active partner in progress in the years ahead.

Jumpy Giants Sit On Pins By Phone

NEW YORK-(P)-Members of the official family of the New York Giants are sitting close by the phones in their office off Times Square these days, staring nervously into space and jumping every time a ring jars the silence.

Who knows but what the voice on the other end will "Fort Eustice, Va., calling collect," and that this will be followed after the customary clicks by the shrill, familiar notes of Willie Mays announcing, "Say, hey, I'm out of this man's army!"

It might not happen, but the Giants can dream. They feel that if the call does come through before they open their training camp at Phoenix, why they've won the National League flag. If it doesn't, then only maybe. Their concern is understandable

It's been more than two weeks since the brilliant negro youngster dropped into President Horace Stoneham's office and told him he had applied for a discharge as a hardship case. The boy from Alabama, who won't be 22 until next May, is the sole support of his mother, two aunts, two brothers and nine sisters, according to the est available advice.

We haven't heard a word since he was here," said Garry Schumacher, Stoneham's personal assistant. "We can't help feeling, though, that Willie has a good chance of getting out. We're not even sure that he told the draft officials here the full extent of his family obligations when he was called in last Spring.

"If we do get him back, what an outfield we'll have—him in center, Bobby Thomson in left and Monty Irvin in right. Just the best in the business, that's all."

No one will ever convince the Giants they wouldn't have reneated last year if their great sophomore hadn't been called up, even if Irvin was out almost all season with a broken ankle. They were out in front by two and one-half games when Willie left them May 29. They dropped eight of their next 10 games, fell four games behind Brooklyn and never made it really close again.

Willie's value to the team didn't show in his batting average. He was hitting only .236 when he departed the Polo Grounds. He had, however, gotten extra bases on 10 of his 30 hits, and he had knocked in 23 runs, second only to Bobby Thomson on the club. In Manager Leo Durocher's opinion, Willie was just beginning to get

It was not, however, Willie's hitting which the Giants missed most hey floundered about and struggled vainly last saeson. The kid's is infectious. We've never seen a baseball player who appeared to get as much sheer pleasure out of the game as the grinning, yelling boy from Alabama does.

It rubs off on his teammates, and if Willie reports at Phoenix, every man on the Giants roster will start spending his World Series check

Rustic Wood Fence Factory-Fabricated By Habitant

Your home will look lovelier by far, framed in the natural beauty of Habitant Wood Fence. With the privacy and protection of Habitant, your lawn and garden can become truly "an Outdoor Living Room". and pets are protected and controlled, and your property boundaries become unquestioned. Habitant Wood Fence is factory fabricated to exactly fit your individual ground plan, and the material (Northern Michigan White Cedar) mellows with age to a soft silver grey that never needs to be painted. Factory fabricated fence costs less than most "built-on-the-job" fences and you secure a uniform dependable quality of tested sound construction. Over thirty years of experience as the world's largest fabricator of factory made wood fence, stands behind your Habitant purchase. Single swing or double gates, complete with all hardware attached ready to install are available in all styles. Habitant Fences are fabricated in what is known as "tenoned construction" wherein the posts are drilled
