MARSHALL TAKES PLACE OF GOV.

WILL REPRESENT CAMPBELL ON STATE NORMAL BOARD.

MASS MEETING FRIDAY

Everybody Urged to Be Present and Help Swell Fund Being Raised for the Bonus.

John Marshall, speaker in the lower house of the Texas legislature, has been appointed by Gov. Campbell as a member of the normal board which meets in Fort Worth August 9 to hear from the various towns in West Texas with reference to the location of the institution. In fact, Mr. Marshall is to represent Gov. Campbell.

Mr. Marshall is well known in San Angelo, and the local committee knows that he will give everyone a square deal.

"Meet me at the Yale theater." That will be the slogan to assemble the faithful Friday afternoon when the last gallant stand in the big fight for the state normal will be made. Some money has been raised but more is necessary.

"Tomorrow's rally decides whether or not San Angelo will be in the running for the state normal," said C. A. Broome Thursday. "We must pull together. Everybody that is able should subscribe something, be it great or small.

"The subscriptions have been coming in fast today. A good many that the committees did not see came and turned in their subscriptions without being asked. Enthusiasm is great, but enthusiasm without more money won't do any good.

"The committee earnestly requests the citizens of San Angelo to turn out to the big mass meeting and show their patriotism in the most substantial manner."

The committee wishes to get as many of the ladies as possible to come to the meeting at the Yale. The "fair sex" have certainly done their part in helping out the normal. They have worked up enthusiasm to a great extent and made every possible effort to the success of the movement.

Mrs. George L. Abbott, the president of the Civic league, has been requested to make a short address in behalf of the normal, illustrating the great benefit derived by such institutions. Mrs. Abbott is likewise the principal of the Abbott high school.

Other prominent citizens will make short talks and a scene of great enthusiasm will prevail.

The crisis has arrived; there is no time for dallying or hesitating. If you want to see San Angelo the home of a great educational institution, signify your desire by subscribing to the fund.

The competition is great. A dozen strong cities are in the race with enormous bonuses ready to proffer to the state board. They are confident of success, but still they recognize San Angelo as a powerful factor.

Come out to the mass meeting; whoop, yell and holler to your heart's desire, but don't forget to subscribe!

To San Angelo Merchants.

You are requested to close your places of business Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock in order to attend a mass meeting at the Yale theater, next to the postoffice, for the purpose of raising funds for locating the state normal school in this city.

The money must be subscribed at that time.

Locating the school here means $100,000 per annum, and you get your share.

The committee has been diligent and industrious. We request this assistance from you.

The committee making the above request is: T. C. Wynn, W. A. Guthrie, B. F. Lee, J. P. Sewell, L. D. Parr, John D. Robertson, C. A. Broome, C. B. Metcalfe, W. D. Halcomb, Dr. J. A. March, J. H. Bivings, John Findlater, Norman Taylor, C. C. Walsh and T. F. Owen.

BITING.

O. C. Simmons Back from Fishing Trip on South Concho.

"Fish biting? I should say so," said O. C. Simmons, the land man. "Why, only yesterday I went out to Pendleton's place on the South Concho in company with J. R. Hanna, J. R. Miller and G. W. Pipkin, and the way they bit was marvelous.

"The minute we threw a hook into the water a fish would nab it and away he'd go. We caught a big bunch of fine ones. I fully believe the water of the South Concho was lowered an inch or two. We noticed that it stopped the irrigation ditches from running, anyway."

JACKSON BROTHERS TAKE OVER RANCH

Purchase Lease on Hill Clark, Holding of Eight Sections at Head of Dove Creek—Buy Cattle and Sheep.

P. H. and W. M. Jackson of Rudd have bought a lease on the Hill Clark ranch of eight sections on the Head of Dove creek in Irion county, at $80 a section. This lease is for three years.

They also purchased 400 head of cattle at $15 a round, and 1000 sheep, $3.50 for the grown sheep and $1.50 for the lambs.

Mr. Clarke has purchased a splendid $1500 home in Mertzon and will make that little city his home in the future.

This is only one of the many cattle deals that have been made in the past few weeks, and others of greater importance are now under way. The real estate and live stock dealers are not saying much but they are wearing a satisfied smile, which speaks for prospects. Never before has business been hitting it up at such a lively clip as in these days of good rains and fine crops. Reports come from all over the state to the effect that San Angelo is far ahead of the remainder of the state when it comes to crops and conditions.

INSULTED.

Abilene Appeals to Commission to Enforce Fulfillment of Promise.

The 25,000 club held its regular meeting last night in the club's rooms on Pine street, and the session, though rather slimly attended, was full of vim and enthusiasm.

Very soon after the meeting opened, the old issue regarding the promises of the Texas and Pacific railroad to Abilene to build a new depot here, and the failure of that road to keep said promises, was brought up and made the subject of some lively discussion. As many as three directors present rose to express their opinions of such promises and their just indignation in the matter was heartily voiced by the others. It was moved and carried that the original order, in which the state railroad commission instructed the Texas and Pacific to proceed with the work of erecting a depot at Abilene, be produced. Resolutions were adopted appealing to the commission to have the order enforced, in order that the work might be concluded not later than December 31 of the present year.

After conducting other matters pertaining to the interests of the club and the Abilene country generally, the meeting adjourned.—Abilene Reporter.

Henry Nanny and mother of Del Rio are visiting the family of J. I. Huffman this week.

George Walsh left Thursday to attend to business matters in Brownwood.

Mrs. C. H. Rogers and family left Thursday to visit friends and relatives in Cleburne.

L. C. Williams of Brownwood, who has been in the city for several days, returned Thursday to his home.

G. S. Walker and daughters Hilda and Katie went to Ballinger Thursday on a visit.

T. F. Mitchell left Thursday on a return trip to his home in Tampa, Fla., after spending several days in San Angelo on business.

WILLIAM F. BAKER, HEAD OF THE NEW YORK POLICE, AND NEW POLICE HEADQUARTERS.

Police Commissioner Baker, who succeeded General Bligham at the head of the New York department, has one of the hardest tasks before him that have fallen to the lot of a municipal officeholder in a long time. New York politics is in a bad tangle, and in the city election of next fall the conduct of the police force is bound to be an issue.

LUZZ EXPLAINS WAY TO BOOST

RETURNS FROM VISIT IN MISSOURI AND KANSAS.

PEOPLE TALKING TEXAS

But This State Has Not Been Properly Represented—Literature of Wrong Sort.

O. H. Lutz, formerly with the Paul Abstract company of this city, is back in San Angelo after a prolonged visit in Missouri and Kansas. He says that all eyes are turned toward Texas.

"Why, the people up there are all talking of Texas," he said. "They are simply crazy with the Texas bug. Immigrants from there are always coming out here and it looks as if there will be wholesale work in that line. Texas has been advertised to some extent, but not as much as could be desired.

"When it comes to advertising, Washington and Oklahoma have the whole world skinned. Everything conceivable in the way of advertising matter in reference to these countries has been distributed in Kansas and Missouri. It is my candid opinion that if West Texas were advertised as much as the two aforementioned states we would have them skinned two to one in the way of immigration.

"My idea of advertisement is this: Don't spread on so much in the way of booklet advertisement; that goes a long way but not far enough. The farmers in other states ask themselves 'What do they raise out there? What have they to show substantial for their wonderful boom? Show us their farm products.' That is the sum and substance of it all. Show them what you can raise in that line—let them know by substantial evidence that this is the coming country of the world. Let them see that in the way of farm products we can't be beaten by any country under the sun. Then the tide of immigration will set in at an even more rapid rate than it has ever progressed.

"Of course we all know that if they once come here they will stay, or if they go away they will surely return. The idea is that we want to get them here.

ALL GOOD.

People of San Angelo Pay Their Debts When They Come Due.

"This certainly is an honest town all the way around," declared Harry Burrows, secretary of the Retail Merchants' association. "I am in a position to know, and I tell you the people of San Angelo believe in paying their debts. It is not so much a moral obligation with them as it is a business proposition. They believe in the principle of 'live and let live,' paying their debts most of the time, and thus business progresses without any serious loss to anyone.

"Of course we get a bunch of bad debts at times—that is natural. All towns get them. But so far as I have been able to ascertain, San Angelo leads every town in the state when it comes to a population that will pay its debts.

"I have noticed likewise that the majority of bad debts that are turned in to us are not neglected through natural dishonesty, but through mere inability.

"The people in San Angelo, as a class, have not time to devote to the habits which breed bad debts; they have a purpose to pursue and that is to support families by the sweat of their brow. They do not desire to contract debts which they fully realize they are unable to pay."

SANITARY LAWS BEING ENFORCED

CITY TAKES HAND IN MATTER AND GOES INTO COURT.

TWO WARRANTS SERVED

City Health Officer Chides to Report to City Marshal All Violations—Prosecutions to Follow.

City Marshal Carrol Bates served warrants on two citizens of San Angelo Thursday for not complying with the sanitary regulations. This is the first instance of the kind to be recorded, but unless radical changes are made in the general order of things it will not be a matter of much excitement in the near future.

Considerable trouble is in store for those who do not yield to the importunities of Mr. Childress, the sanitary officer. At the recent meeting of the city council he was instructed to file complaints against all who do not pay their bills and obey the law.

"It is considered necessary for the general welfare of San Angelo for the city ordinances in regard to sanitary matters to be enforced. It concerns to a great extent the health of the city at large, and such laws should be rigidly enforced." Such was the statement of a city official.

MOSQUITOES.

Austin Claims to Have New Breed, Health Officer Investigating.

Austin, Aug. 5.—Since the storm which descended upon Austin about ten days ago it is noticed that the mosquitoes have become very numerous and also that they appear to be of a different breed from the species raised about here. Austin-raised mosquitoes are reported to have small appetites and become very soon surfeited, consequently cause comparatively little discomfort. But the stranger who has come in appears to be very voracious and his appetite is never satisfied.

It is claimed that the stranger mosquito was blown up from the gulf by the storm. If this is true it appears very probable that the gulf coast has been swept clean of the little buzzers. They appear to like their new surroundings so well that it seems doubtful if they will return to their old haunts until the north winds come down and carry them back.

It is not known whether the stranger is the yellow fever or the common swamp mosquito, but City Health Officer Mathews is investigating and will make a report soon.

CHARBON SIGNS MOSELEY RANCH

SEVENTY-FIVE CATTLE HAVE DIED DURING PAST WEEK.

CATTLE MEN ALARMED

Dr. Jarrel of Fort Worth Has Been Notified, but No Word Has Reached Mr. Harris of This City.

From the death of seventy-five head of cattle in the herds of B. A. Moseley of Midland there is cause for suspicion that the dreaded disease of charbon has appeared in that section.

Dr. E. F. Jarrel of Fort Worth, who has just resigned as state veterinary inspector, received a long distance telephone call from Mr. Moseley Wednesday, telling him of the continued loss of cattle on his ranch, and from the description of the symptoms of the cattle, Dr. Jarrel believes that the disease is charbon. He immediately wrote to R. H. Harris of this city, so Fort Worth advises state, referring the case to him, Mr. Harris being the chairman of the state sanitary live stock commission. Nothing has been heard here, however, and Mr. Harris is inclined to the belief that matters are not as serious as pictured. He left Thursday afternoon for Pecos and will not return until Monday.

The appearance of the disease is creating much alarm among the cattlemen of the Midland country, for charbon is considered incurable, and it spreads with great rapidity where the cattle that are infected are allowed to communicate with others.

When the reported case of charbon at Cuero about twelve days ago proved to be only a bit of grass poisoning, the cattlemen of the state were hopeful that the disease had been successfully confined to the territory in southeast Texas, where the disease originally appeared several weeks ago.

Every precaution will be taken by the state authorities to prevent the spread of the disease, in case it should prove to be charbon, and in the event that it is not, it will be closely investigated and its nature and effects determined. This is the first reported case of charbon in the main cattle raising section of the state.

In the conversation with Dr. Jarrel Mr. Moseley said that his cattle were still dying, and he was fearful that the seventy-five might be only the beginning of his loss.

VICTIM.

Empty Canteen by Side of Lifeless Body on Desert Tells Story.

Reno, Nev., Aug. 5.—The desert has claimed another victim in George Lundbloom, whose body was found east of Death Valley Junction. An empty canteen tells the story of the long struggle against thirst.

It is supposed that Lundbloom set out across the bleak sandy waste for one of the numerous camps and ran out of water. The body was found a short distance from the roadside. Lundbloom is the third man to have lost his life recently in this manner.

DISCOVERY.

Capt. Whiffen Learns of Secret System of Telegraph Used by Natives.

London, August, 5.—Capt. Whiffen has arrived here after years of exploration in Southeastern Colombia. Among his discoveries is a secret system of telegraph employed by the natives.

Hollow trees are selected of various thicknesses, which give out high or low notes when struck. The sound travels from thirty to forty miles.

No code is employed, but the natives recognize the words intended from the different musical notes.

Another discovery of Silver City, N. M., is in the city on a visit to relatives. Captain Robinson was at one time a resident of San Angelo.

NEWS FROM THE FRONT.

The difference between delay and procrastination spells worry. The Press-News about a month ago made a definite announcement relative to its intention.

The Associated Press is the most wonderful news gathering agency in the world. It is wonderful in other ways, too. It can not be jarred by dynamite; an earthquake could not shake it, and it can not be frightened by thunder and lightning.

All the preliminaries have been gone through with by The Press-News to secure the Associated Press franchise for this city. The application for membership is now on file and Thursday the following congealing letter was received from Mr. Stone, the general manager of the Associated Press.

That's the last word from headquarters. In the meantime, however, The Press-News is going ahead preparing for the bright days a-coming. "Happy" Dickinson, the smiling salesman for the Mergenthaler Linotype company, was in San Angelo Thursday morning and when he left he took with him an order for a right-up-to-now Linotype, which will be added to the type-setting battery of The Press-News.

And The Press-News has carved and is carving a way that will bring profit to the western section of Texas. The Press-News is always for West Texas. It does not enter, fawn before or kotow to any political accident or predatory potentate on earth.

Every herd has got a leader. If you keep up with The Press-News, after we hit the Associated Press trail, you will have to keep pretty far in front. Watch us grow!

Declaring that since the recent storm mosquitoes have become very numerous, the Austin Statesman appears to be greatly worked up and goes on to say that the breed seems to be of a different kind from the species raised about Austin.

MONEY IN POULTRY.

With eggs averaging 30 cents a dozen the year round, and practically the entire supply coming from cold storage, it seems as if there is a splendid opportunity for a great many people in San Angelo to pick up expense money, anyway, in the chicken business.

In their clamor for bigger and greater things the farmers and stockmen of West Texas have overlooked many smaller matters, such as the raising of chickens, that would pay handsomely, and yet be of little trouble.

Everybody wants fresh eggs, but who wants old ones? As an example of the "freshness" of some of the hen fruit that is being shipped into San Angelo, it will be recalled that only a week ago a prominent merchant, in opening a case, was surprised to see a young chick jump out. The chick was kept, but the eggs returned.

Conditions generally are very favorable to the poultry business here. There is no dew to kill the little chickens, and no chigres to take away their life-giving vitality.

A large flock of hens may be kept at a very small expense. If you have the right breed they will hustle for themselves, and with a little feeding at night may be kept healthy. In order to be good layers your hens must not be fat. They should be hungry all the time.

Have your hen house clean always and your chickens free from vermin, and success is sure to result from the poultry business. Those who do not care to make a business of it may raise enough for their own use.

It will be found that a dozen hens when properly cared for, will lay enough eggs to not only pay for the feed they eat, but to help out materially on the grocery bill for the family.

Hist! The villain is coming from his lair. All people who are opposing Gov. Campbell are doing so because he has been a stickler for platform demands! Do tell! Such asseverations are enough to give irascibly chills to a mummy.

Our board of directors will meet in this office on Wednesday, October 6, and no action can be taken on your application until that time.

The work of building the big perfecting press for The Press-News continues, and this big press will be shipped in about thirty days, unless there is an unexpected delay. The editorial staff is being enlarged. New type has been received in the "ad alley." New head-letter type gives The Press-News a dressy appearance and new advertisers make us feel grateful.

Gov. Campbell has nominated John Marshall to represent him on the board to decide the location for the West Texas normal. John Marshall is honest, as honest as the day is long.

Gov. Campbell has nominated John Marshall to represent him on the board to decide the location for the West Texas normal. John Marshall is honest, as honest as the day is long. He is a business man, and being a business man he knows the folly of the state looking only to the Now in the matter of a location.

political mistakes and political mistakes sometimes stand to a man's credit. He made a lot of enemies and at times he lacked poise of judgment. But his integrity, his desire to do the right thing and his devotion to the material welfare of Texas never wavered.

When it comes to having troubles with railroads, it's hats off to Abilene. Following closely on the heels of the Santa Fe cut-off rumpus and big-to-do comes the announcement that the 25,000 club is to appeal to the state railroad commission in order to force the Texas and Pacific to build a depot.

CONSOLATION.

We mop our brow and curse the heat And moan and groan and cry. And say some things that are not very sweet.

And almost wish to die. And we long to float to a place remote. To a land of cooler bills; But a thought comes nigh when the heat waves sigh.

"There's a hotter place than this."

We fuss and fume and do our best. We chew and cuss the weather. With our nerves all in a wild unrest.

We join and cuss together. As we watch the beam of the noonday gleam.

There comes a thought, I wis-- In the fiery glow of the world below. There's a hotter place than this.

Let heat waves come; they're bound to go.

Though we choke and burn with fire. In time the cooling winds will blow And then we won't perspire.

There's comfort fraught in the blessed thought.

And compensating bliss. When the sun beats down on this old town.

There's a hotter place than this.

With the Exchanges.

Brownwood needs manufacturing plants that can supply every demand on them from the outside. As long as we make enough things to supply ourselves along a few lines we will not prosper as we should.

Manufacturing plants are something that every town in West Texas needs the worst kind. It is a well known fact that if a town has the means of giving employment there will be plenty of people to fill the positions.

New England factory girls who have been forbidden to gossip have very promptly gone on a strike--Austin Statesman.

How womanlike.

P. Palmer, who lives about five miles southwest of town, was in trading Saturday and dropped into the Review office to see what he could learn. Mr. Palmer moved from Rockdale nearly seven years ago with only $400 in cash, and the last $100 of that he had worked sixteen long years to accumulate.

And there are others, too, who have come to West Texas with just enough money in their pockets to buy a square meal, but may now be classed as "most prominent and influential citizens."

The west is waking up and insisting on having a seat at the first table. The El Paso Times thinks East Texas has been running things long enough and makes this earnest plea for recognition:

"For many years this section has been the burden bearer for the more populous east. It has had no right which East Texas thought worthy of consideration, and its interests have been disregarded uniformly. It has been denied any share in the state offices, its legislative needs have been ignored and it has been taxed out of all proportion to its wealth and population.

There should be no sectionalism in Texas. This state is big and the interests of her citizens are diverse, but this bigness and diversity are safeguards against sectional rule. The western portion of the state has furnished several state officers in recent years and the last legislature provided a state normal school and two experiment stations for this section.

HOG PRODUCTION IS SHY IN TEXAS

BETWEEN FORT WORTH AND EL PASO NO PORKERS RAISED.

PANHANDLE DOES WELL

But If It Were Not for Oklahoma Business at Fort Worth Would Not Be Very Brisk.

Announcement that the Fort Worth Stock Yards company will enlarge the pens in its hog division, increasing the daily capacity to about 2500 head, would suggest that the stock yards company, at least, has faith in increased hog production in the territory tributary to Fort Worth. It is true that hog receipts in Fort Worth thus far this year show a greater percentage of increase than is shown at any other market in the country, but in spite of this it is also true that the majority of the increase belongs to Oklahoma.

In some sections of Texas hog production is actually on the decrease. In others everything marketable has been sold out because of the prevailing high prices. Only that high plateau lying some 250 miles northwest of Fort Worth seems dependable upon for a steady supply of pork, and that because of the ease in raising alfalfa, freedom from disease, and mild climate which prevails there.

In the country lying between Fort Worth and El Paso, a stretch of over 500 miles, hog production is almost nil. Northwest of Fort Worth, along the Fort Worth and Denver, hog production is very light until the Panhandle proper is reached. East of Fort Worth to the Texarkana line there are considerable numbers of hogs produced, but they are not of top quality, as a rule, the general condition of all East Texas hogs being soft.

Central Texas is fairly good as a hog producing section, though here, more than anywhere else in the state, hog production is most general.

There are no available statistics on hogs in Texas which can give us any idea of whether the production as a whole is increasing or decreasing. We know that if Oklahoma hog raisers did not ship regularly to Fort Worth there would be no occasion to talk about enlarging the hog pens here. The last census credited Texas, in round numbers, with 3,000,000 hogs. The state of Missouri last year exported more hogs than that to market and ate the remainder of all it produced.

Texas not only fails to produce enough hogs for her own consumption, but it is estimated, spends $15,000,000 a year for pork, lard and bacon shipped in from other states.

Right now, it may be generally known, the Cudahy Packing company is shipping pork and bacon by the earload to Texas every week and selling it within a hundred-mile circle, of which one would suppose absolutely dominated by the Fort Worth packing houses.

The person who starts out to find the reason for Texas' neglect of the hog will get many answers to inquiries, but generally all the replies will include the charge, "Hog raising takes too much trouble." The work of caring for hogs to make pork cheaply and profitably seems to be a bugaboo, especially to the farmer who is willing to spend a whole year on his cotton crop between seeding and final picking.

Hogs do take work and intelligent work at that. Of all the engines about the farm for converting the products of the soil into ready cash the hog is geared at the highest speed, and he is always working under forced draft.

There is money in hogs in Texas at a nickel a pound. This year, when porkers are bringing $7.50, and better, hogs are a little short of a gold mine.

A good strain of healthy stock, care, cleanliness and intelligence to prevent disease, plenty of alfalfa or pasture for the growing pigs and as much milk as they can get, maize or kafir corn for finishing—and the net result is the greatest money-making institution on the twentieth century farm.—Texas Stockman-Journal.

CHAPTER XVII

CHASE COMES FROM THE CLOUDS.

FOR many minutes the watchers in the chateau stared at the burning bungalow, fascinated, petrified. Through the mind of each man ran the sudden, sharp dread that Chase had met death at the hands of his enemies.

Genevra felt her heart torn cold. Then something seemed to clutch her by the throat and choke the breath out of her body. Through her brain went the recollection of his last words to her that afternoon. "They'll find me ready if they come for trouble." She wondered if he had been ready for them or if they had surprised him. She had heard the shots Chase could not have fired them all. Was he now lying dead in that blazing bungalow? She screamed aloud with thought of it.

"Can't something be done?" she cried again and again, without taking her gaze from the doomed bungalow. She turned fiercely upon Bobby Browne his countryman. Afterward she recalled that he stood staring at the fox snatched. Lady Deppingham clasping his arm with both of her hands. The glance also took in the face of Deppingham. He was looking at his wife and his eyes were wide and glassy, but not with terror. "It may not be late," he said to the princess. "There are enough of us here to make an effort, no matter how futile. He may be alive and trapped up."

"You're right," shouted Browne. "He's not the kind to go down without the first rush. We must go to him. We can get there in ten minutes. Where are the guns? Are you with us, Deppingham?"

He did not wait for an answer, but dashed out of the garden and down the steps, calling to his wife to follow. "Stop!" shouted Deppingham. "We dare not leave this place! If they have turned against Chase, they are already for us. I'm not a coward. Browne, we're needed here, that's all. It's too late to help Chase. They've got him, poor devil! Everybody inside. Get to the guns if possible and cut off the servants' quarters. We must not let them surprise us. Follow me."

There was wisdom in what he said and Browne was not slow to see it clearly. With a single penetrating glance at Genevra's despairing face he shook his head gloomily and turned to follow Deppingham, who was hurrying off through the corridor with her ladyship.

"Come," he called, and the princess, feeling Drusilla's hand grasping her arm, gave one helpless look at the fire and hastened to obey.

In the grand hallway they came upon Britt and Saunders, white-faced and excited. The white servants were clattering down the stairways, filled with alarm, but there was not one of the native attendants in sight. This was ominous enough in itself. The sound of a violent struggle in the lower corridor came to their ears. Loud yells, blows, a single shot, the crashing of feet, the panting of men in fierce combat—and then, even as the white-trussed to retreat up the stairway, a crowd of men surged up the stairs from below, headed by Ballo, the major dog.

"Stop, everybody!" he shouted again and again. Bobby Stowens, who Deppingham were covering the retreat, prepared to fight to the end for their women, although unarmed. It was the American who first realized that Ballo was not heading an attack upon them. Ballo and a score of his men had refused to join the stablemen and gardeners in the plot to assassinate the white people. As a last resort the conspirators contrived to steal into the chateau, hoping to fall upon their victims before Ballo could interpose. The major dog, however, with the wily sagacity of his race, anticipated the move. The two forces met in the south hall after the plotters had effected an entrance from the garden. The struggle was brief, for the conspirators were outnumbered and surprised. They were even now lying below, bound and helpless, awaiting the disposition of their intended victims.

"It is not because we love you, excellencies," explained Ballo, with a sudden fierce look in his eyes. "But because Allah has willed that we should serve you faithfully. We are your dogs. Therefore we fight for you. It is a vile dog which bites its master."

Browne, with the readiness of the average American, again assumed command of the situation. He gave instructions that the prisoners, seven in number, be confined in the dungeon, temporarily at least.

"There will be no other attack on us tonight," said Browne, rejoicing the women after his interview with Ballo. "It has missed fire for the present, but they will try to get at us sooner or later from the outside. Britt, will you and Mr. Saunders put those prisoners through the sweat box? You may be able to bluff something out of them if you threaten them with death. They—"

"It won't do, Browne," said Deppingham, shaking his head. "They are fatalists; they are stoics. I know the breed better than you. Question if you like, but threats will be of no avail. Keep 'em locked up; that's all."

Firearms and ammunition were taken from the gunroom to the quarters occupied by the white people. Every preparation was made for a defense in the event of an attack from the outside or inside. The white servants were moved into rooms adjoining their employers. Britt and Saunders transferred their belongings to certain gorgeous apartments. Miss Pelham went into a Marie Antoinette suit close by that of the princess. The native servants retained their customary quarters below stairs.

Far in the night Genevra, sleepless and depressed, stole into the hanging garden. Her mind was full of the horrible thing that had happened to Hollingsworth Chase. He had been nothing to her. He could not have been anything to her had he escaped the guns of the assassins. And yet her heart was stunned by the stroke that it had sustained. Wide eyed and sick, she made her way to the railing and, clinging to the vines, stared for she knew not how long at the dull red glow on the mountain.

The night was still and ominously dark. She had never known a night since she came to Japan when the birds and insects were so mute. A somber, supernatural calm hung over the island like a pall. The smell of smoke mung about her. She could not help wondering if his fine, strong body was lying up there burned to a crisp. It was far past midnight. She was alone in the garden. Sixty feet below her was the ground; above, the black dome of heaven.

She was not to know till long afterward that one of her faithful Thorbergs men stood guard in the passage leading up from the garden, armed and willing to die. One or the other slept in front of her door through all those nights on the island. Something hot trickled down her cheeks from the wide, pitying eyes that stared so hard. She was wondering now if he had a mother, sisters. How their hearts would be wrenched by this! She was thinking of him with pity and horror in her heart, not love.

A question was beginning to form itself vaguely in her troubled mind. Were all of them to die as Chase had died?

Suddenly there came to her ears the sound of something swishing through the air. An instant later a solid object fell almost at her feet. She started back with a cry of alarm. A broad shaft of light crossed the garden, thrown by the lamps in the upper hall of the chateau. Her eyes fell upon a wriggling, snake-like thing that lay in this path of light.

Fascinated, almost paralyzed, she watched it for a full minute before realizing that it was the end of a thick rope which lost itself in the heavy shadows at the cliff end of the garden. She was standing directly in the shaft of light. To her surprise, the wriggling ceased. The next moment a faint, subdued shout was borne to her ears. Her fight was checked by that shout, for her startled bewildered ears caught the sound of her own name.

At last, far above, she saw the glimmer of a light. It was too large to be a star, and it moved back and forth.

"Sharply it dawned upon her that it was at the top of the cliff which overhung the garden and stretched away to the sea. Some one was up there waving a lantern. She was thinking hard and fast, a light breaking in upon her understanding. Something like joy shot into her being. Who else could it be if not Chase? He alone would call out her name. He was alive!

She called out his name aloud, her feet raised eagerly to the bobbing light. Not until hours afterward was Genevra to count the use of her Chien-tzu name by the man to the clouds. Quicker ever, she grasped the handled end of the rope. A glance and a single tug were sufficient to convince her that the other end was attached to a support at the top of the cliff. It hung limp and heavy, lifeless. A sharp tug from above caused it to tremble violently in her hands. She dropped it as if it were a serpent. Again she heard the shout, and this time she called out a question.

"Yes," was the answer, far above. "Can you hear me? Greatly excited, she called back that she could hear and understand. "I'm coming down the rope. Pray for us—but don't worry! Please go inside until we land in the garden. It's a long drop, you know."

"Are you quite sure—is it safe?" she called, shuddering at the thought of the perilous descent of nearly 300 feet sheer through the darkness.

"It's safer than stopping here. Please go inside."

She fully comprehended his meaning. He wanted to save her from seeing his fall in the event that the worst should come to pass. Scarcely knowing what she did, she moved over into the shadow near the walls and waited breathlessly, all the time wondering why some one did not come from the chateau to lend assistance.

At last that portion of the rope which lay in the garden began to jerk and writhe vigorously. She knew then that he was coming down hand over hand through that long, dangerous stretch of darkness. The cliff reared itself sheer to the height of 300 feet directly behind the chateau. At the summit of this great wall a shelving ledge projected over the hanging garden. A rope dangling from this ledge would fall into the garden not far from the edge nearest the cliff. The summit of the cliff could be gained only by traversing the mountain slope from the other side. It was impossible to scale it from the floor of the valley which it bounded.

The rope was undoubtedly attached to the trunk of a sturdy tree at the brow of the cliff.

She could look no longer. It seemed hours since he started from the top. Every heart beat brought him nearer to safety, but would he hold out? Any instant might bring him crashing to her feet—dead, after all that he may have lived through during that awful night.

At last she heard his heavy panting—grating almost—the creaking and straining of the rope, the scraping of his hands and body. She opened her eyes and saw the bulky, swaying shadow set twenty feet above the garden. Slowly it drew nearer the grass-covered floor, foot by foot, straining, struggling, gasping in the final supreme effort, and then with a sudden rush the black mass collapsed, the taut rope sprung loose, the end switching and leaping violently.

Genevra rushed frantically across the garden, half fearful, half joyous. As she came up the mass seemed to divide itself into two parts. One sank limply to the ground, the other stood erect for a second and then dropped beside the prostrate, gasping figure.

Chase had come down the rope with another human being clinging to his body!

Genevra fell to her knees beside the man who had accomplished this miracle. She grasped his hands, warm and sticky with blood. She tried to lift his head from the ground, moaning with pity all the time, uttering words of encouragement in his ear.

Many minutes passed. At last Chase gave over gasping and began to breathe regularly, but heavily. The strain had been tremendous. Only superhuman strength and will had carried him through the ordeal. He groaned with pain as the two beside him lifted him to a sitting posture.

"Tell Selim to come ahead!" he gasped, his bloody hand at his throat. "We're all right!"

Then, for the first time, Genevra peered in the darkness at the figure beside her—a slight, graceful woman in oriental garb. The woman turned and lifted her face to the heights from which she had descended. In a shrill, eager voice she called out something in a language strange to the princess.

A faint shout came from on high, and once more the rope began to writhe.

The princess passed her hand over her eyes, bewildered. The face of the woman in the light, half shaded, half illumined, was gloriously beautiful—youth, dark, brilliant!

"Oh!" she exclaimed, starting to her feet, a look of understanding coming into her eyes. This was one of the Persians! He had saved her! A feeling of revulsion swept over her, combating the first natural, womanly pride in the deed of a brave man.

Chase struggled weakly to his feet. He saw the tense, strained figure before him and, putting out his hand, said:

MALARIAL DISEASES.

How to Avoid Them and the Serious Consequences of Neglect.

"Fix me up something to knock the malaria, doctor," remarked a sallow-faced, sickly looking man, entering a prominent physician's office the other day.

The doctor stepped to his medicine case, took down a couple of bottles, mixed a preparation which he handed to the patient with the customary advice to "shake well and follow directions," and resumed his seat.

"Such cases are frequent," replied the doctor in answer to a question. "The warm days and damp, chilly nights are certain malaria breeders and are most serious to those who have neglected to keep their stomach, liver and bowels in good condition. Such persons are full of the impurities on which the malarial germ thrives, and it is from this class that typhoid fever, pneumonia, Bright's Disease, small pox and yellow fever claim most of their victims whenever these diseases are prevalent.

The proper way to guard against the malarial germ and the serious diseases which follow it is to get into good condition by taking a reliable remedy that will keep the bowels clear and the liver healthy, and to continue with it at frequent intervals during the sickly season.

A dose of Prickly Ash Bitters three or four times a week will do all of this, besides stimulating the digestion, improving the appetite and keeping the bodily energy at the highest pitch.

Prickly Ash Bitters is known everywhere as a system tonic and bowel regulator. It not only removes all traces of malarial poison from the system, but tones up the vital organs, gives new strength and vigor, makes the body strong and the brain active.

"Prickly Ash Bitters is the best all-around medicine for the family I ever used. During the past ten years I have always kept it in my house. Whenever one of my family shows signs of malarial, kidney trouble, indigestion or constipation a few doses in all that is needed to make them well and hearty again.—V. H. McWilliams, Pickering, La.

task of preparing new names for the streets that are duplicated in boroughs of the greater city made its report.

Four hundred new street names were proposed, and among them are Koshier street, Jeffries place and Sandow place, while some of the National League baseball favorites are immortalized in the names of Barbeau, Chesbro and Tannehill streets.

On the North Side four prominent streets are favored with the names Fortitude, Temperance, Prudence and Justice. All four streets are business thoroughfares, and merchants say they'll move rather than accept the new names.

The report was submitted in the form of an ordinance ready for passage by the Councils, and the office of the City Clerk has been crowded all day with angry citizens who want to file protests. The most strenuous objections are to changing the name of Fifth avenue, with its five miles of business houses and splendid residences, to Washington avenue. Fifth avenue is probably the best known street in Pittsburg.

TO FREE CATTLE OF FEVER TICKS

FOUR PRACTICAL METHODS THAT MAY BE EMPLOYED.

EACH ONE IS DEFINED

Bureau of Animal Industry Prepares Interesting Paper, Going into Details About Pest.

(From the Bureau of Animal Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.)

There are four practical methods that may be employed in freeing cattle and pastures of Texas fever ticks: (1) Picking or brushing off the ticks; (2) smearing or spraying the animals with a disinfecting solution; (3) dipping the "ticky" animals in a vat containing a solution capable of killing the ticks without injury to the cattle; (4) a systematic pasture rotation whereby the ticks are eliminated by changing the cattle to one pasture after another, allowing the ticks to drop off, and preventing new ticks from getting on the cattle.

In sections where there are large herds and ranches, dipping or spraying on a large scale has been successfully carried out, either alone or in conjunction with pasture rotation, while in other sections, where the cattle on farms consist of only a few head, hand dressing with oil has been found to be the most practical plan. The methods above suggested, therefore, apply to different sections of the country, and the stockman or farmer should select the one which is best suited to his particular case.

Picking or Brushing Off the Ticks.
 Where the herd is small the ticks may be picked off by hand or scraped off with a dull knife or currycomb. This should be done at least three times a week, in order to remove all the large ticks before they mature and fall off, as by this system the smaller ticks, which at first escape detection, will be found before they are fully developed. After removal the ticks should be destroyed, preferably by burning. Care should be taken to go over the animals thoroughly, and after once going over they should not be neglected, as ticks may be picked up from time to time. If this work is thoroughly done and no ticks allowed to fall off and lay eggs from June 1 to the end of November, the cattle will be free from ticks and the pastures clean.

Smearing or Spraying.
 Greasing the animals all over with cotton seed oil, fish oil, or Beaumont crude petroleum will assist in preventing the ticks from getting on them and destroy the ticks already on them. This method is practicable only when a few animals are to be treated. A mixture of one gallon of kerosene, one gallon of cotton seed oil and one pound of sulphur has proved effective when used two or three times a week during the tick season. It should be applied with a sponge, syringe, brush, mop or broom.

Where a larger number of cattle is to be treated, but not enough to warrant building a vat, spraying has given good results. The necessary equipment consists of a force pump such as is used by orchardists in spraying trees, with a barrel in a wagon or on a platform and a hose with an ordinary nozzle. A 20 per cent emulsion of Beaumont oil or a 5 per cent solution of any of the standard coal tar dips may be used. The sprays should be continued throughout the whole season, and if thoroughly done will leave the cattle and pastures free for the following year.

Dipping in a Vat.
 Where a large number of animals are to be treated, dipping in a vat is a convenient and effective method. Beaumont crude petroleum is considered the most satisfactory dip and may be used either alone or in a 20 per cent emulsion. Animals that have been dipped in the oil, especially during warm weather, should not be driven any great distance immediately afterward, and should be provided with shade and an abundance of water.

Pasture Rotation.
 This system of eradication appeals to many farmers and should be followed whenever practicable or conditions will permit. It consists in placing ticky animals in a small pasture for twenty days. During that time a considerable number of ticks will drop off. Then transfer the cattle to a second small pasture for another twenty days, and if all the ticks have not dropped off, to still another pasture. If the full time has been used sixty days will have been consumed and the stock is then ready to be placed on tick-free pasture. The object of moving cattle from pasture to pasture at intervals of twenty days is to cause all the ticks to drop off and at the same time to prevent the animals from becoming infested again with young, or seed, ticks.

Twenty days is less than the shortest time within which seed ticks will appear from eggs laid by ticks that drop off, and all of the ticks present on the animals will have dropped off in the sixty days. The young ticks, when hatched, will starve if no cattle are present in the pasture for them to get on.

Full information as to how to get rid of the ticks, including directions for the preparations of dips and sprays, the arrangement of pastures, etc., may be obtained free on application to the Bureau of Animal Industry, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Too Much.
 National City, Aug. 5.—The funeral of his life-long friend was more than Thomas Chase could stand. He expired at the obsequies of Herman Copeland.

Chase was 80 years of age. For 18 years he had been a neighbor of Copeland. In recent years he had not been out of his own house because of an affliction. As soon as he heard that his neighbor was dead he insisted that he must attend the funeral.

While standing in the room in which the services were held it was noticed that he was reeling. When help reached him he had expired from heart failure.

MARSHALL TAKES PLACE OF GOV.

WILL REPRESENT CAMPBELL ON STATE NORMAL BOARD.

MASS MEETING FRIDAY

Everybody Urged to Be Present and Help Swell Fund Being Raised for the Bonus.

John Marshall, speaker in the lower house of the Texas legislature, has been appointed by Gov. Campbell as a member of the normal board which meets in Fort Worth August 9 to hear from the various towns in West Texas with reference to the location of the institution. In fact, Mr. Marshall is to represent Gov. Campbell.

Mr. Marshall is well known in San Angelo, and the local committee knows that he will give everyone a square deal.

"Meet me at the Yale theater." That will be the slogan to assemble the faithful Friday afternoon when the last gallant stand in the big fight for the state normal will be made. Some money has been raised but more is necessary.

"Tomorrow's rally decides whether or not San Angelo will be in the running for the state normal," said C. A. Broome Thursday. "We must pull together. Everybody that is able should subscribe something, be it great or small."

"The subscriptions have been coming in fast today. A good many that the committees did not see came and turned in their subscriptions without being asked. Enthusiasm is great, but enthusiasm without more money won't do any good."

"The committee earnestly requests the citizens of San Angelo to turn out to the big mass meeting and show their patriotism in the most substantial manner."

The committee wishes to get as many of the ladies as possible to come to the meeting at the Yale. The "fair sex" have certainly done their part in helping out the normal. They have worked up enthusiasm to a great extent and made every possible effort to the success of the movement.

Mrs. George L. Abbott, the president of the Civic league, has been requested to make a short address in behalf of the normal, illustrating the great benefit derived by such institutions. Mrs. Abbott is likewise the principal of the Abbott high school.

Other prominent citizens will make short talks and a scene of great enthusiasm will prevail.

The crisis has arrived; there is no time for dillying or hesitating. If you want to see San Angelo the home of a great educational institution, signify your desire by subscribing to the fund.

The competition is great. A dozen strong cities are in the race with enormous bonuses ready to proffer to the state board. They are confident of success, but still they recognize San Angelo as a powerful factor.

Come out to the mass meeting; whoop, yell and holler to your heart's desire, but don't forget to subscribe!

To San Angelo Merchants.
You are requested to close your places of business Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock in order to attend a mass meeting at the Yale theater, next to the postoffice, for the purpose of raising funds for locating the state normal school in this city.

The money must be subscribed at that time.
Locating the school here means $100,000 per annum, and you get your share.

The committee has been diligent and industrious. We request this assistance from you.

The committee making the above request is:

T. C. Wynn, W. A. Guthrie, B. F. Lee, J. P. Sewell, L. L. Farr, John D. Robertson, C. A. Broome, C. B. Metcalfe, W. D. Holcomb, Dr. J. A. March, J. H. Divings, John Findlater, Norman Taylor, C. C. Walsh and T. F. Owen.

BITING.

O. C. Simmons Back from Fishing Trip on South Concho.

"Fish biting? I should say so," said O. C. Simmons, the land man. "Why, only yesterday I went out to Pendleton's place on the South Concho in company with J. R. Hanna, J. R. Miller and G. W. Pipkin, and the way they bit was marvelous."

"The minute we threw a hook into the water a fish would nab it and away he'd go. We caught a big bunch of fine ones. I fully believe the water of the South Concho was lowered an inch or two. We noticed that it stopped the irrigation ditches from running, anyway."

JACKSON BROTHERS TAKE OVER RANCH

Purchase Lease on Hill Clark Holding of Eight Sections at Head of Dove Creek—Buy Cattle and Sheep.

P. H. and W. M. Jackson of Rudd have bought a lease on the Will Clarke ranch of eight sections on the Head of Dove creek in Irion county, at $80 a section. This lease is for three years.

They also purchased 400 head of cattle at $15 a round, and 1000 sheep, $3.50 for the grown sheep and $1.50 for the lambs.

Mr. Clarke has purchased a splendid $1500 home in Mertzon and will make that little city his home in the future.

This is only one of the many cattle deals that have been made in the past few weeks, and others of greater importance are now under way. The real estate and live stock dealers are not saying much but they are wearing a satisfied smile, which speaks for prospects. Never before has business been hitting it up at such a lively clip as in these days of good rains and fine crops. Reports come from all over the state to the effect that San Angelo is far ahead of the remainder of the state when it comes to crops and conditions.

INSULTED.

Abilene Appeals to Commission to Enforce Fulfillment of Promise.

The 25,000 club held its regular meeting last night in the club's rooms on Pine street, and the session, though rather slimly attended, was full of vim and enthusiasm.

Very soon after the meeting opened, the old issue regarding the promises of the Texas and Pacific railroad to Abilene to build a new depot here, and the failure of that road to keep said promises, was brought up and made the subject of some lively discussion. As many as three directors present rose to express their opinions of such promises and their just indignation in the matter was heartily voiced by the others. It was moved and carried that the original order, in which the state railroad commission instructed the Texas and Pacific to proceed with the work of erecting a depot at Abilene, be produced. Resolutions were adopted appealing to the commission to have the order enforced, in order that the work might be concluded not later than December 31 of the present year.

After conducting other matters pertaining to the interests of the club and the Abilene country generally, the meeting adjourned.—Abilene Reporter.

WILLIAM F. BAKER, HEAD OF THE NEW YORK POLICE, AND NEW POLICE HEADQUARTERS.

Police Commissioner Baker, who succeeded General Bingham at the head of the New York department, has one of the hardest tasks before him that have fallen to the lot of a municipal officeholder in a long time. New York politics is in a bad tangle, and in the city election of next fall the conduct of the police force is bound to be an issue.

LUTZ EXPLAINS WAY TO BOOST RETURNS FROM VISIT IN MISSOURI AND KANSAS.

PEOPLE TALKING TEXAS

But This State Has Not Been Properly Represented—Literature of Wrong Sort.

O. H. Lutz, formerly with the Paul Abstract company of this city, is back in San Angelo after a prolonged visit in Missouri and Kansas. He says that all eyes are turned toward Texas.

"Why, the people up there are all talking of Texas," he said. "They are simply crazy with the Texas bug. Immigrants from there are always coming out here and it looks as if there will be wholesale work in that line. Texas has been advertised to some extent, but not as much as could be desired."

"When it comes to advertising, Washington and Oklahoma have the whole world skinned. Everything conceivable in the way of advertising matter in reference to these countries has been distributed in Kansas and Missouri. It is my candid opinion that if West Texas were advertised as much as the two aforementioned states we would have them skinned two to one in the way of immigration."

"My idea of advertisement is this: Don't spread on so much in the way of booklet advertisement; that goes a long way but not far enough. The farmers in other states ask themselves 'What do they raise out there? What have they to show substantial for their wonderful boom? Show us their farm products.' That is the sum and substance of it all. Show them what you can raise in that line—let them know by substantial evidence that this is the coming country of the world. Let them see that in the way of farm products we can't be beaten by any country under the sun. Then the tide of immigration will set in at an even more rapid rate than it has ever progressed."

"Of course we all know that if they once come here they will stay, or if they go away they will surely return. The idea is that we want to put them here."

Contract Let.

The firm of Waller, Shaw & Field has let the contract for the erection of J. B. Coleman's big warehouse, to be located back of Long's cafe.

The size of the building is to be 80 by 95 feet.

The contract price has not been made public but it is understood to be around $5000.

OFFICE ROOM.

Conditions Cramped—More Buildings Are Needed.

Office room in San Angelo is scarce. In fact, a person on the lookout for a decent office can only find one by accident.

"We simply must have more room, especially in the main business part of town," said Lawson O. Dalley, a real estate man, Thursday. "Of course, with the Mays building, which will contain about fifty-four office rooms, and the six-story skyscraper of the San Angelo Bank and Trust company, the rush will be relieved to some extent. That is, as matters now stand. But when the Orient trains begin running in here and the Sterling City road gets in the office room problem will have become a grave question. People are going to flock here from every portion of the union."

Real Estate Transfers.

Paul Abstract & Title company's report of real estate transfers recorded August 5:

T. J. Clegg to E. C. Perry, $1928.85; conveys block 637a Mason-Perry company's subdivision No. 3 of Collins ranch.

W. E. Hipp et ux, to P. C. Meador, $1200; conveys lots 9 and 10, block 60, Miles addition.

O. K. Wheeler, who is connected with the Cotton Belt, headquarters at Texarkana, returned home Thursday after spending several days in San Angelo on business.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Spears were passengers on the outgoing Santa Fe Thursday en route for their home in Terrel, after spending several days on a visit in San Angelo.

Mrs. J. M. Forehand, who has been visiting the family of J. C. Simmons for several days, returned Thursday to her home in Palmer.

Mrs. M. A. Martin, who has been visiting the family of B. I. Thorne for several days, left Thursday for Brownwood.

Miss Marvel Morris went to Ballinger Thursday to attend the celebration.

ALL GOOD.

People of San Angelo Pay Their Debts When They Come Due.

"This certainly is an honest town all the way around," declared Harry Burrows, secretary of the Retail Merchants' association. "I am in a position to know, and I tell you the people of San Angelo believe in paying their debts. It is not so much a moral obligation with them as it is a business proposition. They believe in the principle of 'live and let live,' paying their debts most of the time, and thus business progresses without any serious loss to anyone."

"Of course we get a bunch of bad debts at times—that is natural. All towns get them. But so far as I have been able to ascertain, San Angelo leads every town in the state when it comes to a population that will pay its debts."

"I have noticed likewise that the majority of bad debts that are turned in to us are not neglected through natural dishonesty, but through mere inability."

"The people in San Angelo, as a class, have not time to devote to the habits which breed bad debts; they have a purpose to pursue and that is to support families by the sweat of their brow. They do not desire to contract debts which they fully realize they are unable to pay."

CITY TAKES HAND IN MATTER AND GOES INTO COURT.

City Health Officer Childress to Report to City Marshal All Violations—Prosecutions to Follow.

City Marshal Carrol Bates served warrants on two citizens of San Angelo Thursday for not complying with the sanitary regulations. This is the first instance of the kind to be recorded, but unless radical changes are made in the general order of things it will not be a matter of much excitement in the near future.

Considerable trouble is in store for those who do not yield to the importunities of Mr. Childress, the sanitary officer. At the recent meeting of the city council, he was instructed to file complaints against all who do not pay their bills and obey the law.

"It is considered necessary for the general welfare of San Angelo for the city ordinances in regard to sanitary matters to be enforced. It concerns to a great extent the health of the city at large, and such laws should be rigidly enforced." Such was the statement of a city official.

MOSQUITOES.

Austin Claims to Have New Breed. Health Officer Investigating.

Austin, Aug. 5.—Since the storm which descended upon Austin about ten days ago it is noticed that the mosquitoes have become very numerous and also that they appear to be of a different breed from the species raised about here. Austin-raised mosquitoes are reported to have small appetites and become very soon sated, consequently cause comparatively little discomfort. But the stranger who has come in appears to be very voracious and his appetite is never satisfied.

It is claimed that the stranger mosquito was blown up from the gulf by the storm. If this is true it appears very probable that the gulf coast has been swept clean of the little buzzers. They appear to like their new surroundings so well that it seems doubtful if they will return to their old haunts until the north winds, come down and carry them back.

It is not known whether the stranger is the yellow fever or the common swamp mosquito, but City Health Officer Mathews is investigating and will make a report soon.

CHARBON SIGNS MOSELEY RANCH

SEVENTY-FIVE CATTLE HAVE DIED DURING PAST WEEK.

CATTLE MEN ALARMED

Dr. Jarrel of Fort Worth Has Been Notified, but No Word Has Reached Mr. Harris of This City.

From the death of seventy-five head of cattle in the herds of B. A. Moseley of Midland there is cause for suspicion that the dreaded disease of charbon has appeared in that section.

Dr. E. F. Jarrel of Fort Worth, who has just resigned as state veterinary inspector, received a long distance telephone call from Mr. Moseley Wednesday, telling him of the continued loss of cattle on his ranch, and from the description of the symptoms of the cattle, Dr. Jarrel believes that the disease is charbon. He immediately wrote to R. H. Harris of this city, so Fort Worth advises state, referring the case to him, Mr. Harris being the chairman of the state sanitary live stock commission. Nothing has been heard here, however, and Mr. Harris is inclined to the belief that matters are not as serious as pictured. He left Thursday afternoon for Pecos and will not return until Monday.

The appearance of the disease is creating much alarm among the cattlemen of the Midland country, for charbon is considered incurable, and it spreads with great rapidity where the cattle that are infected are allowed to communicate with others.

When the reported case of charbon at Cuero about twelve days ago proved to be only a bit of grass poisoning, the cattlemen of the state were hopeful that the disease had been successfully confined to the territory in south-east Texas, where the disease originally appeared several weeks ago.

Every precaution will be taken by the state authorities to prevent the spread of the disease, in case it should prove to be charbon, and in the event that it is not, it will be closely investigated and its nature and effects determined. This is the first reported case of charbon in the main cattle raising section of the state.

In the conversation with Dr. Jarrel Mr. Moseley said that his cattle were still dying, and he was fearful that the seventy-five might be only the beginning of his loss.

VICTIM.

Empty Canteen by Side of Lifeless Body on Desert Tells Story.

Reno, Nev., Aug. 5.—The desert has claimed another victim in George Lundbloom, whose body was found east of Death Valley Junction. An empty canteen tells the story of the long struggle against thirst.

It is supposed that Lundbloom set out across the bleak sandy waste for one of the numerous camps and ran out of water. The body was found a short distance from the roadside. Lundbloom is the third man to have lost his life recently in this manner.

DISCOVERY.

Capt. Whiffen Learns of Secret System of Telegraph Used by Natives.

London, August, 5.—Capt. Whiffen has arrived here after years of exploration in Southeastern Colombia. Among his discoveries is a secret system of telegraph employed by the natives.

Hollow trees are selected of various thicknesses, which give out high or low notes when struck. The sound travels from thirty to forty miles.

No code is employed, but the natives recognize the words intended from the different musical notes.

NEWS FROM THE FRONT.

The difference between delay and procrastination spells worry. The Press-News about a month ago made a definite announcement relative to its intention. What it then said was said in good faith and that faith will yet be kept.

The Associated Press is the most wonderful news gathering agency in the world. It is wonderful in other ways, too. It can not be jarred by dynamite; an earthquake could not shake it, and it can not be frightened by thunder and lightning.

All the preliminaries have been gone through with by The Press-News to secure the Associated Press franchise for this city. The application for membership is now on file and Thursday the following congealing letter was received from Mr. Stone, the general manager of the Associated Press.

That's the last word from headquarters. In the meantime, however, the Press-News is going ahead preparing for the bright days a-coming. "Happy" Dickinson, the smiling salesman for the Menzies-Linotype company, was in San Angelo Thursday morning and when he left he took with him an order for a right-up-to-now linotype, which will be added to the typesetting battery of The Press-News.

And The Press-News has carved and is carving a way that will bring profit to the western section of Texas. The Press-News is always for West Texas. It does not cater, fawn before or kotow to any political accident or predatory potentate on earth.

Every herd has got a leader. If you keep up with The Press-News, after we hit the Associated Press trail, you will have to keep pretty far in front. Watch us grow!

Declaring that since the recent storm mosquitoes have become very numerous, the Austin Statesman appears to be greatly worked up and goes on to say that the breed seems to be of a different kind from the species raised about Austin.

MONEY IN POULTRY.

With eggs averaging 30 cents a dozen the year round, and practically the entire supply coming from cold storage, it seems as if there is a splendid opportunity for a great many people in San Angelo to pick up expense money, anyway, in the chicken business.

In their clamor for bigger and greater things the farmers and stockmen of West Texas have overlooked many smaller matters, such as the raising of chickens, that would pay handsomely, and yet be of little trouble.

Everybody wants fresh eggs, but who wants old ones? As an example of the "freshness" of some of the hen fruit that is being shipped into San Angelo, it will be recalled that only a week ago a prominent merchant, in opening a case, was surprised to see a young chick jump out. The chick was kept, but the eggs returned.

Conditions generally are very favorable to the poultry business here. There is no dew to kill the little chickens, and no chiggers to take away their life-giving vitality.

A large flock of hens may be kept at a very small expense. If you have the right breed they will hustle for themselves, and with a little feeding at night may be kept healthy. In order to be good layers your hens must not be fat. They should be hungry all the time.

Have your hen house clean always and your chickens free from vermin, and success is sure to result from the poultry business. Those who do not care to make a business of it may raise enough for their own use.

It will be found that a dozen hens when properly cared for, will lay enough eggs to not only pay for the feed they eat, but to help out materially on the grocery bill for the family.

Hist! The villain is coming from his lair. All people who are opposing Gov. Campbell are doing so because he has been a stickler for platform demands! Do tell! Such asseverations are enough to give irrawaddy chills to a mummy. Gov. Campbell is the quintessence of an East Texas politician and this intell is enough to cause thinking western people to look with well warranted suspicion upon him.

Gov. Campbell has nominated John Marshall to represent him on the board to decide the location for the West Texas normal. John Marshall is honest, as honest as the day is long. He is a business man, and being a business man he knows the folly of the state looking only to the Now in the matter of a location.

political mistakes and political mistakes sometimes stand to a man's credit. He made a lot of enemies and at times he lacked poise of judgment. But his integrity, his desire to do the right thing and his devotion to the material welfare of Texas never wavered.

When it comes to having troubles with railroads, it's hats off to Abilene. Following closely on the heels of the Santa Fe cut-off rumpus and big-to-do comes the announcement that the 25,000 club is to appeal to the state railroad commission in order to force the Texas and Pacific to build a depot. Some very harsh remarks were made regarding the worth of promises by the Texas and Pacific.

CONSOLATION.

(Contributed.)

We mop our brow and curse the heat And moan and groan and cry. And say some things that are not very sweet.

And almost wish to die. And we long to float to a place remote. To a land of cooler bliss;

But a thought comes nigh when the heat waves sigh, "There's a hotter place than this."

We fuss and fume and do our best. We chew and cuss the weather. With our nerves all in a wild unrest. We join and cuss together.

As we watch the beam of the noonday gleam. There comes a thought, I wis— In the fiery glow of the world below. There's a hotter place than this.

Let heat waves come; they're bound to go. Though we choke and burn with fire. In time the cooling winds will blow. And then we won't perspire.

There's comfort fraught in the blessed thought. And compensating bliss. When the sun beats down on this old town. There's a hotter place than this.

With the Exchanges.

Brownwood needs manufacturing plants that can supply every demand on them from the outside. As long as we make enough things to supply ourselves along a few lines we will not prosper as we should. A merchant may grow rich selling goods to the home people, but every dollar he makes comes out of the pocket of some other townsman and makes the town no richer.

Manufacturing plants are something that every town in West Texas needs the worst kind. It is a well known fact that if a town has the means of giving employment there will be plenty of people to fill the positions.

New England factory girls who have been forbidden to gossip have very promptly gone on a strike.—Austin Statesman. How womanlike.

P. Palmer, who lives about five miles southwest of town, was in trading Saturday and dropped into the Review office to see what he could learn. Mr. Palmer moved from Rockdale nearly seven years ago with only $400 in cash, and the last $100 of that he had worked sixteen long years to accumulate.

And there are others, too, who have come to West Texas with just enough money in their pockets to buy a square meal, but may now be classed as "most prominent and influential citizens." They all become rich out here.

The west is waking up and insisting on having a seat at the first table. The El Paso Times thinks East Texas has been running things long enough and makes this earnest plea for recognition:

"For many years this section has been the burden bearer for the more populous east. It has had no right which East Texas thought worthy of consideration, and its interests have been disregarded uniformly. It has been denied any share in the state offices, its legislative needs have been ignored and it has been taxed out of all proportion to its wealth and population.

There should be no sectionalism in Texas. This state is big and the interests of her citizens are diverse, but this bigness and diversity are safeguards against sectional rule. The western portion of the state has furnished several state officers in recent years and the last legislature provided a state normal school and two experiment stations for this section.

HOG PRODUCTION IS SHY IN TEXAS

BETWEEN FORT WORTH AND EL PASO NO PORKERS RAISED.

PANHANDLE DOES WELL

But If It Were Not for Oklahoma Business at Fort Worth Would Not Be Very Brisk.

Announcement that the Fort Worth Stock Yards company will enlarge the pens in its hog division, increasing the daily capacity to about 2500 head, would suggest that the stock yards company, at least, has faith in increased hog production in the territory tributary to Fort Worth. It is true that hog receipts in Fort Worth thus far this year show a greater percentage of increase than is shown at any other market in the country, but in spite of this it is also true that the majority of the increase belongs to Oklahoma.

In some sections of Texas hog production is actually on the decrease. In others everything marketable has been sold out because of the prevailing high prices. Only that high plateau lying some 250 miles northwest of Fort Worth seems dependable upon for a steady supply of pork, and that because of the ease in raising alfalfa, freedom from disease, and mild climate which prevails there.

In the country lying between Fort Worth and El Paso, a stretch of over 600 miles, hog production is almost nil. Northwest of Fort Worth, along the Fort Worth and Denver, hog production is very light until the Panhandle proper is reached. East of Fort Worth to the Texarkana line there are considerable numbers of hogs produced, but they are not of top quality as a rule, the general condition of all East Texas hogs being soft.

Central Texas is fairly good as a hog producing section, though here, more than anywhere else in the state, hog production is most general.

There are no available statistics on hogs in Texas which can give us any idea of whether the production as a whole is increasing or decreasing. We know that if Oklahoma hog raisers did not ship regularly to Fort Worth there would be no occasion to talk about enlarging the hog pens here. The last census credited Texas, in round numbers, with 3,000,000 hogs. The state of Missouri last year exported more hogs than that to market and ate the remainder of all it produced.

Texas not only fails to produce enough hogs for her own consumption, but it is estimated, spends $15,000,000 a year for pork, lard and bacon shipped in from other states.

Right now it may be generally known, the Cudahy Packing company is shipping pork and bacon by the ear load to Texas every week and selling it within a hundred-mile circle, of which one would suppose absolutely dominated by the Fort Worth packing houses.

The person who starts out to find the reason for Texas' neglect of the hog will get many answers to inquiries, but generally all the replies will include the charge, "Hog raising takes too much trouble." The work of caring for hogs to make pork cleanly and profitably seems to be a bugaboo, especially to the farmer who is willing to spend a whole year on his cotton crop between seeding and final picking.

Hogs do take work and intelligent work at that. Of all the engines about the farm for converting the products of the soil into ready cash the hog is geared at the highest speed, and he is always working under forced draft.

There is money in hogs in Texas at a nickel a pound. This year, when porkers are bringing $7.50, and better, hogs are a little short of a gold mine. A good strain of healthy stock, care, cleanliness and intelligence to prevent disease, plenty of alfalfa or pasture for the growing pigs and as much milk as they can get, maize or kafir corn for finishing—and the net result is the greatest money-making institution on the twentieth century farm.—Texas Stockman-Journal.

CHAPTER XVII
CHASE COMES FROM THE CLOUDS.
FOR many minutes the watchers in the chateau stared at the burning bungalow, fascinated, petrified. Through the mind of each man ran the sudden, sharp dread that Chase had met death at the hands of his enemies.

"Can't something be done?" she cried.

of her body. Through her brain went whirling the recollection of his last words to her that afternoon, "They'll find me ready if they come for trouble." She wondered if he had been ready for them or if they had surprised him. She had heard the shots Chase could not have fired them all. Was he now lying dead in that blazing— She screamed aloud with the thought of it!

"Can't something be done?" she cried again and again, without taking her eyes from the doomed bungalow. She turned fiercely upon Dolby Brown, his countryman. Afterward she recalled that he stood staring as she had stated, Lady Deppingham clasping her arm with both of her hands. The glance she took in the face of Deppingham. He was looking at his wife and his eyes were wide and glassy, but not with terror. "It may not be to late!" she cried, the princess. "They are enough of us here to make an effort, no matter how futile. He may be alive, and trapped up."

"You're right!" shouted Browne. "He's not the kind to go down with the first rush. We must go to him. We can get there in ten minutes if we're quick. Where are the guns? Are you with us, Deppingham?"

He did not wait for an answer, but dashed out of the garden and down the steps, calling to his wife to follow. "Stop!" shouted Deppingham. "We dare not leave this place! If they have turned against Chase, they are already ready for us. I'm not a coward Brown. We're needed here, that's all! It's too late to help Chase. They've got him, poor devil! Everybody inside get to the guns if possible and cut out the servants' quarters. We must not let them surprise us. Follow me!"

There was wisdom in what he said, and Browne was not slow to see it clearly. With a single penetrating glance at Geneva's despairing face he shook his head gloomily and turned to follow Deppingham, who was hurrying off through the corridor with her ladyship.

"Come," he called, and the princess, feeling Drusilla's hand grasping her arm, gave one helpless look at the fire and listened to obey.

In the grand hallway they came upon Britt and Saunders, white faced and excited. The white servants were clattering down the stairways, filled with alarm, but there was not one of the native attendants in sight. This was ominous enough in itself. The sound of a violent struggle in the lower corridor came to their ears. Loud voices, blows, a single shot, the rushing of feet, the panting of men in service—these and then, even as the whites rushed to retreat up the stairway, a crowd of men surged up the stairs from below, headed by Nellie, the major dome.

"Stop, экспелас!" he shouted again, the same. Bobby Brown was Deppingham were covering the retreat, prepared to fight to the end for their women, although unarmed. It was the American who first realized that Ballo was not heading an attack upon them. Ballo and a score of his men had refused to join the stablemen and gardeners in the plot to assassinate the white people. As a last resort the conspirators contrived to steal into the chateau, hoping to fall upon their victims before Ballo could interpose. The major dome, however, with the wily sagacity of his race, anticipated the move. The two forces met in the south hall after the plotters had effected an entrance from the garden. The struggle was brief, for the conspirators were outnumbered and surprised. They were even now lying bound and helpless, awaiting the disposition of their intended victims.

"It is not because we love you, excellencies," explained Ballo, with a sudden fierce look in his eyes, "but because Allah has willed that we should serve you faithfully. We are your dogs. Therefore we fight for you. It is a vile dog which bites its master."

Browne, with the readiness of the average American, again assumed command of the situation. He gave instructions that the prisoners, seven in number, be confined in the dungeon, temporarily at least.

"There will be no other attack on us tonight," said Browne, rejoicing the women after his interview with Ballo. "It has missed fire for the present, but they will try to get at us sooner or later from the outside. Britt, will you and Mr. Saunders put those prisoners through the sweat box? You may be able to bluff something out of them if you threaten them with death. They—" "It won't do, Browne," said Deppingham, shaking his head. "They are fatalists; they are stoics. I know the breed better than you. Question if you like, but threats will be of no avail. Keep 'em locked up; that's all." Firearms and ammunition were taken from the gunroom to the quarters occupied by the white people. Every preparation was made for a defense in the event of an attack from the outside or inside. The white servants were moved into rooms adjoining their employers. Britt and Saunders transferred their belongings to certain gorgeous apartments. Miss Peilham went into a Marie Antoinette suit close by that of the princess. The native servants retained their customary quarters below stairs.

Far in the night Geneva, sleepless and depressed, stole into the hanging garden. Her mind was full of the horrible thing that had happened to Hollingsworth Chase. He had been nothing to her. He could not have been anything to her had he escaped the guns of the assassins. And yet her heart was stunned by the stroke that it had sustained. Wide eyed and sick, she made her way to the railing and, clinging to the vines, stared for she knew not how long at the dull red glow on the mountain.

The night was still and ominously dark. She had never known a night since she came to Japan when the birds and insects were so mute. A somber, supernatural calm hung over the island like a pall. The smell of smoke hung about her. She could not help wondering if his fine, strong body was lying there burned to a crisp. It was far past midnight. She was alone in the garden. Sixty feet below her was the ground; above, the black dome of heaven.

She was not to know till long afterward that one of her faithful Thoroughbred men stood guard in the passage leading up from the garden, armed and willing to die. One or the other slept in front of her door through all those nights on the island.

Something hot trickled down her cheeks from the wide, pitying eyes that stared so hard. She was wondering now if he had a mother, sisters. How their hearts would be wrenched by this! She was thinking of him with pity and horror in her heart, not love.

A question was beginning to form itself vaguely in her troubled mind. Were all of them to die as Chase had died?

Suddenly there came to her ears the sound of something swishing through the air. An instant later a solid object fell almost at her feet. She started back with a cry of alarm. A broad shaft of light crossed the garden, thrown by the lamps in the upper hall of the chateau. Her eyes fell upon a wriggling, snake-like thing that lay in this path of light.

Fascinated, almost paralyzed, she watched it for a full minute before realizing that it was the end of a thick rope which lost itself in the heavy shadows at the cliff end of the garden. She was standing directly in the shaft of light. To her surprise, the wriggling ceased. The next moment a faint, subdued shout was borne to her ears. Her flight was checked by that shout, for her startled, bewildered ears caught the sound of her own name.

At last, she above, she saw the glimmer of a light. It was too large to be a star, and it moved back and forth. "Sharply it dawned upon her that it was at the top of the cliff which overhung the garden and stretched away to the sea. Some one was up there waving a lantern. She was thinking hard and fast, a light breaking in upon her understanding. Something like 'joy shot into her being. Who else could it be if not Chase? He alone would call out her name. He was alive!"

She called out his name again, her face turned eagerly to the burning light. Not until hours afterward was Geneva to count the use of her Christian name by the men in the clouds.

ted end of the rope. A glance and a single tug were sufficient to convince her that the other end was attached to a support at the top of the cliff. It hung limp and heavy, lifeless. A sharp tug from above caused it to tremble violently in her hands. She dropped it as if it were a serpent. Again she heard the shout, and this time she called out a question. "Yes," was the answer, far above. "Can you hear me? Greatly excited, she called back that she could hear and understand. "I'm coming down the rope. Pray for us—but don't worry! Please go inside until we land in the garden. It's a long drop, you know."

"Are you quite sure—is it safe?" she called, shuddering at the thought of the perilous descent of nearly 300 feet sheer through the darkness. "It's safer than stopping here. Please go inside."

She dully comprehended his meaning. He wanted to save her from seeing his fall in the event that the worst should come to pass. Scarcely knowing what she did, she moved over into the shadow near the walls and waited breathlessly, all the time wondering why some one did not come from the chateau to lend assistance.

At last that portion of the rope which lay in the garden began to jerk and writhing vigorously. She knew then that he was coming down hand over hand through that long, dangerous stretch of darkness. The cliff reared itself sheer to the height of 350 feet directly behind the chateau. At the summit of this great wall a shelving ledge projected over the hanging garden. A rope dangling from this ledge would fall into the garden not far from the edge nearest the cliff. The summit of the cliff could be gained only by traversing the mountain slope from the other side. It was impossible to scale it from the foot of the valley which it bounded.

The rope was undoubtedly attached to the trunk of a sturdy tree at the brow of the cliff. She could lock no longer. It seemed hours since she started from the top. Every heart beat brought him nearer to safety, but would he hold out? Any instant might bring him crashing to her feet—dead, after all that he may have lived through during that awful night.

At last she heard his heavy panting—grunting almost—the creaking and straining of the rope, the scraping of his hands and body. She opened her eyes and saw the bulky, swaying shadow not twenty feet above the garden. Slowly it drew nearer the grass covered floor, foot by foot, straining, struggling, gasping in the final supreme effort, and then with a sudden rush the black mass collapsed, the taut rope sprang loose, the end switching and leaping violently.

Geneva rushed frantically across the garden, half fearful, half joyous. As she came up the mass seemed to divide itself into two parts. One sank limply to the ground, the other stood erect for a second and then dropped beside the prostrate, gasping figure.

Chase had come down the rope with another human being clinging to his body!

Geneva fell to her knees beside the man who had accomplished this miracle. She grasped his hands, warm and sticky with blood. She tried to lift his head from the ground, mouning with pity all the time, uttering words of encouragement in his ear.

Many minutes passed. At last Chase gave over gasping and began to breathe regularly, but heavily. The strain had been tremendous. Only superhuman strength and will had carried him through the ordeal. He groaned with pain as the two beside him lifted him to a sitting posture. "Tell Selim to come ahead!" he gasped, his bloody hand at his throat. "We're all right!"

Then, for the first time, Geneva peered in the darkness at the figure beside her—a slight, graceful woman in oriental garb. The woman turned and lifted her face to the heights from which she had descended. In a shrill eager voice she called out something in a language strange to the princess.

The princess passed her hand over her eyes, bewildered. The face of the woman in the light, half shaded, half illumined, was gloriously beautiful—young, dark, brilliant!

"Oh!" she exclaimed, starting to her feet, a look of understanding coming into her eyes. This was one of the Persians! He had saved her! A feeling of revulsion swept over her, combating the first natural, womanly pride in the deed of a brave man.

Chase struggled weakly to his feet. He saw the tense, strained figure before him and, putting out his hand, said:

MALARIAL DISEASES.

How to Avoid Them and the Serious Consequences of Neglect.

"Fix me up something to knock the malaria, doctor," remarked a sallow-faced, sickly looking man, entering a prominent physician's office the other day.

The doctor stepped to his medicine case, took down a couple of bottles, mixed a preparation which he handed to the patient with the customary advice to "shake well and follow directions," and resumed his seat.

"Such cases are frequent," replied the doctor in answer to a question. "The warm days and damp, chilly nights are certain malaria breeders and are most serious in those who have neglected to keep their stomach, liver and bowels in good condition. Such persons are full of the impurities on which the malarial germ thrives, and it is from this class that typhoid fever, pneumonia, Bright's Disease, small pox and yellow fever claim most of their victims whenever these diseases are prevalent.

The proper way to guard against the malarial germ and the serious diseases which follow it is to get into good condition by taking a reliable remedy that will keep the bowels clear and the liver healthy, and to continue with it at frequent intervals during the sickly season.

A dose of Prickly Ash Bitters three or four times a week will do all of this, besides stimulating the digestion, improving the appetite and keeping the bodily energy at the highest pitch.

Prickly Ash Bitters is known everywhere as a system tonic and bowel regulator. It not only removes all traces of malarial poison from the system, but tones up the vital organs, gives new strength and vigor, makes the body strong and the brain active.

Prickly Ash Bitters is the best all-around medicine for the family I ever used. During the past ten years I have always kept it in my house. Whenever any of my family show signs of malaria, kidney trouble, indigestion or constipation a few doses is all that is needed to make them well and hearty again.—W. H. McWILLIAMS, Pickering, La.

Pittsburgers Unwilling to Submit to Proposed Changes in Street Names.

Pittsburg, August 5.—When Pittsburgers ask Mayor Magee how he'd like to live in a street named for a ball player or a puglist he just looks weary.

Street names have been a burning issue all day. This morning the special commission that has had the task of preparing new names for the streets that are duplicated in boroughs of the greater city made its report.

Four hundred new street names were proposed, and among them are Koshier street, Jeffries place and Sandow place, while some of the National League baseball favorites are immortalized in the names of Barbeau, Chesbro and Tannehill streets.

On the North Side four prominent streets are favored with the names Fortitude, Temperance, Prudence and Justice. All four streets are business thoroughfares, and merchants say they'll move rather than accept the new names.

The report was submitted in the form of an ordinance ready for passage by the Councils, and the office of the City Clerk has been crowded all day with angry citizens who want to file protests. The most strenuous objections are to changing the name of Fifth avenue, with its five miles of business houses and splendid residences, to Washington avenue. Fifth avenue is probably the best known street in Pittsburg.

FOUR PRACTICAL METHODS THAT MAY BE EMPLOYED.

EACH ONE IS DEFINED

Bureau of Animal Industry Prepares Interesting Paper, Going Into Details About Pest.

(From the Bureau of Animal Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.)

There are four practical methods that may be employed in freeing cattle and pastures of Texas fever ticks: (1) Picking or brushing off the ticks; (2) smearing or spraying the animals with a disinfecting solution; (3) dipping the "ticky" animals in a vat containing a solution capable of killing the ticks without injury to the cattle; (4) a systematic pasture rotation whereby the ticks are eliminated by changing the cattle to one pasture after another, allowing the ticks to drop off, and preventing new ticks from getting on the cattle.

In sections where there are large herds and ranches, dipping or spraying on a large scale has been successfully carried out, either alone or in conjunction with pasture rotation, while in other sections, where the cattle on farms consist of only a few head, hand dressing with oil has been found to be the most practical plan. The methods above suggested, therefore, apply to different sections of the country, and the stockman or farmer should select the one which is best suited to his particular case.

Picking or Brushing Off the Ticks.
Where the herd is small the ticks may be picked off by hand or scraped off with a dull knife or currycomb. This should be done at least three times a week, in order to remove all the large ticks before they mature and fall off, as by this system the smaller ticks, which at first escape detection, will be found before they are fully developed. After removal the ticks should be destroyed, preferably by burning. Care should be taken to go over the animals thoroughly, and after once going over they should not be neglected, as ticks may be picked up from time to time. If this work is thoroughly done and no ticks allowed to fall off and lay eggs from June 1 to the end of November, the cattle will be free from ticks and the pastures clean.

Smearing or Spraying.
Greasing the animals all over with cotton seed oil, fish oil, or Beaumont crude petroleum will assist in preventing the ticks from getting on them and destroy the ticks already on them. This method is practicable only when a few animals are to be treated. A mixture of one gallon of kerosene, one gallon of cotton seed oil and one pound of sulphur has proved effective when used two or three times a week during the tick season. It should be applied with a sponge, syringe, brush, mop or broom.

Where a larger number of cattle is to be treated, but not enough to warrant building a vat, spraying has given good results. The necessary equipment consists of a force pump such as is used by orchardists in spraying trees, with a barrel in a wagon or on a platform and a hose with an ordinary nozzle. A 20 per cent emulsion of Beaumont oil or a 5 per cent solution of any of the standard coal tar dips may be used. The sprayings should be continued through out the whole season, and if thoroughly done will leave the cattle and pastures free for the following year.

Dipping in a Vat.
Where a large number of animals are to be treated, dipping in a vat is a convenient and effective method. Beaumont crude petroleum is considered the most satisfactory dip and may be used either alone or in a 20 per cent emulsion. Animals that have been dipped in the oil, especially during warm weather, should not be driven any great distance immediately afterward, and should be provided with shade and an abundance of water.

Pasture Rotation.
This system of eradication appeals to many farmers and should be followed whenever practicable or conditions will permit. It consists in placing ticky animals in a small pasture for twenty days. During that time a considerable number of ticks will drop off. Then transfer the cattle to a second small pasture for another twenty days, and if all the ticks have not dropped off, to still another pasture. If the full time has been used sixty days will have been consumed and the stock is then ready to be placed on tick-free pasture. The object of moving cattle from pasture to pasture at intervals of twenty days is to cause all the ticks to drop off and at the same time to prevent the animals from becoming infested again with young, or seed, ticks.

Twenty days is less than the shortest time within which seed ticks will appear from eggs laid by ticks that drop off, and all of the ticks present on the animals will have dropped off in the sixty days. The young ticks, when hatched, will starve if no cattle are present in the pasture for them to get on.

Full information as to how to get rid of the ticks, including directions for the preparations of dips and sprays, may be obtained free on application to the Bureau of Animal Industry, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Too Much.
National City, Aug. 5.—The funeral of his life-long friend was more than Thomas Chase could stand. He expired at the obsequies of Herman Copeland.

Chase was 80 years of age. For 15 years he had been a neighbor of Copeland. In recent years he had not been out of his own house because of an affliction. As soon as he heard that his neighbor was dead he insisted that he must attend the funeral.

While standing in the room in which the services were held it was noticed that he was reeling. When help reached him he had expired from heart failure.

W. L. McMasters and wife left Thursday to spend a month in Hillsboro, Corsicana and other points in that part of the state.
