Woman's Great Part In the World War

Women of Reeves County Are Expected to Register For Nation's Service.

Every woman in Reeves County is expected to go to her nearest registration center on Saturday, and "sign up with Hoover" for food conservation and domestic economy. Or she can clip the pledge in this issue of The Enterprise, fill out and mail to the nearest chairman.

There is nothing compulsory in the movement—every patriotic housewife wants to cooperate for the largest possible production of food and the smallest possible quantity of waste, as a factor in winning the war, and volunteers throughout these United States are inundating the main office at the National Capital with their memberships. It is desirable to secure every woman in America engaged in the personal control of food to enlist, thus entirely directly into the National service.

Herbert C. Hoover says: "We not only want the name and address, but we want the number of persons in the household, we want to know whether the household employs a cook, whether it has a garden, and we want to know the occupation of the breadwinner. There are no fees or dues to be paid. The food administration wishes now to have as members all of those actually handling food in the house. On receipt of the pledge we will send out preliminary instructions and the household tag, to be hung in the window. The insignia of the food administration will consist of the National shield surrounded by heads of wheat, and we hope to have the shield displayed in every home in the United States.

The object of this volunteer service for women—a vast army who are quite as necessary as are the regulars—is to develop the resources and to promote the efficiency of women in meeting their every-day responsibilities to home, to state, to nation and to humanity; to provide trained, organized groups in every community, prepared to cooperate with the Red Cross and other agencies in dealing with any calamity—fire, famine, flood, economic disorder, etc., and in time of war to supplement the work of the Red Cross, the army and navy, and to deal with questions of woman's work and woman's welfare.

The registry of women who are ready to volunteer for full or part time for patriotic service to their country, will go on perhaps as long as the war lasts. Women will be called upon to fill all manner of positions formerly occupied by the men in an industrial way, and the volunteer service registration blank will systematize, in tabulated form, each one's particular fitness for certain work.

No fees are to be paid. Saturday's registration is strictly for the services of food conservation. The pledge card, as being distributed broadcast for signatures, follows:

Mrs. M. A. Grisham, of Toyah, has charge of the entire work of Reeves County, and those who will be in charge as sub-chairmen, are: Mrs. T. Y. Casey, Pecos, Mrs. J. B. Woolfolk, Saragosa.

TO THE FOOD ADMINISTRATOR, Washington, D. C.:

I am glad to join you in the service of Food Conservation for our Nation and I hereby accept membership in the United States Food Administration, pledging myself to carry out the directions and advice of the Food Administrator in the conduct of my household, insofar as my circumstances permit.

Name _____
Number in Household _____ Do you employ a cook? _____
Occupation of Breadwinner _____
Will you take part in authorized neighborhood movements for food conservation? _____

There are no fees or dues to be paid. The Food administration wishes to have as members all of those actually handling food in the home.

DIRECTIONS.

Give your pledge card to your nearest chairman and you will receive FREE your first instructions and a household tag to be hung in your window.

Upon receipt of ten cents with your pledge card and a return addressed envelope the official button of the Administration, and if desired, the shield of the Food Administration will also be sent you.

Resident Foreigners Buy Liberty Bonds.

It is not American citizens alone who subscribed to Liberty Loan Bonds. A great number of citizens of other nations living here, who have never taken out naturalization papers, subscribed liberally to the bonds. The International Nickel Company at its Bayonne, N. J., plant, has nearly two thousand foreigners in its employ, and those foreigners purchased more than one hundred and fifty thousand dollars of Liberty Loan Bonds.

It has been noted, too, that American cities with large populations of foreign birth, were notably liberal in their subscriptions to the Liberty Loan Bonds.

Now that our soldiers are actually in France, and our people familiar as never before with the details of Government issues, the next Liberty Loan Bonds will receive undoubtedly an even more enthusiastic support than its predecessor.

Balmorhea Boosting for Good Roads.

Quite a number of autos from Balmorhea and Saragosa went over to Fort Stockton last Monday to meet with the Commissioners' Court of Pecos County and assured them that Toyah Valley was willing to do all in their power to put the San Antonio-El Paso State Highway that has been designated from Fort Stockton to El Paso, via-Balmorhea and Kent.

The Fort Stockton people are very enthusiastic over the new route and are looking for good results from the State Highway Commission in centering more of their routes through Fort Stockton. The commissioners of Pecos county assured the visitors from the Toyah Valley that they were ready and willing to do all in their power to put the proposed highway in first-class condition to the county line.

Already a large amount of travel is coming over this route as it means a saving of over 100 miles, but the road should be put in first-class condition before tourists complain, for we want to hold the travel we already have and interest other tourists to come this way.

The Herald has an engraving house preparing a cut of a map of the route and as soon as received will issue several thousand folders calling attention to the advantages offered and the scenes through Toyah Valley.—Toyah Valley Herald

The new motor car that is to be operated on the new schedule of the P. V. S. instead of the regular train, made its first trip Tuesday and arrived on schedule time. It would be a great convenience to the people of the Toyah Valley if the railroad company would operate this motor car from this end of the line, so that those who desired to go into Pecos and transact business and return in the evening could do so without having to stay away from home over night. By arriving in Pecos in the morning it would make the desired connections with the T. & P. or Santa Fe trains, and by returning to the Valley in the evening could bring home those who wished to return. As it now is, time and money can be saved by going to Pecos via auto, but the dirt roads are getting so near impassable that the railroad would receive a good patronage if operated as suggested.—Toyah Valley Herald.

"Gerard in Germany."

That's the title of the big story The Star-Telegram has purchased and which will begin on August 6th.

"GERARD IN GERMANY" will undoubtedly prove the biggest story of the year—in fact the biggest story of the war.

Ambassador James W. Gerard will write the story himself. He will expose the whole system of German court intrigue. He will bare to the world what went on behind the scenes in Germany; what the German government that of the United States, what their officials said of the United States and what they planned to do to the United States. Ambassador Gerard's story will prove a sensation. It will be absolutely truthful; it will deal with every phase of the situation and will be backed by facts and documents.

(On account of the acute shortage in print paper THE STAR-TELEGRAM regrets to state that it cannot increase its output of papers, so in order that all may be able to read this most unusual document, subscribers are requested to save copies of the paper and pass them to their neighbors).

The chief medical officers believe that Texas troops will grade very high and prove among the very best appearing that will go to make up the great army the nation is assembling.

The 12,000 men Texas is now enlisting in the Guard in my opinion will be as good as not better physically than will be produced by any state," he says. "Texas has long been known for her big men, strong and sturdy, and of wonderful vitality and endurance.

Major O'Reilly believes that there will be little question of men accepted in the Guard of passing the federal examination which comes after the troops are mustered into federal service.

Maj. O'Reilly is greatly pleased with the character of men offering themselves for service in the medical department. "The people of Texas have every reason to be grateful that the very best men in the medical profession are entering the service and will be assigned to duty to troops in their immediate vicinity," he said.

"Of course there will be some sickness and it should be a comfort to the ones who are to stay at home to know in case of sickness or accident their loved ones will be taken care of by medical officers who come from the foremost ranks of medicine and surgery in Texas and who have been appointed from the office of the Surgeon General of the United States Army."

A much better class of recruits are offering their services to the Guard than first answered the call to the colors. This is best typified by the number being rejected on examination. When the call first went out those responding were turned down by scores because of physical defects.

Our Financial Strength.

Two billion dollars is a tremendous sum of money. Yet the American people have loaned their government that much and have barely touched their resources. The money was raised so easily it only seemed to show the tremendous financial strength of the country.

It is not one-tenth of our deposits. It is less than one-eighth of our bank loans for a year. It was less than one-half of our national income for that year, according to estimates.

Not only has this first Liberty Loan Bond issue of two billion dollars much larger than the initial loans of any other of the nations engaged in the war but it was raised in much less time with much less effort and was subscribed to by a vastly greater number of individuals; this too when danger was far from us and the nation in a calm frame of mind.

The coming second issue of the Liberty Loan Bonds, with the great mass of the people of the country much better educated as to government bond issues and government finances in general, it is reasonable to suppose, will be disposed of with even greater success than the initial issue.

The over-subscription to the initial issue of over a billion dollars augurs well for the success of the next loan. There are several million more investors in government bonds in America than there were a month ago. Then there were some three hundred thousand holders of United States bonds while now there are over four million. And the thrill of the thought of our soldiers in France will rally the people to the nation's call.

He left early this week for El Paso for a few days and has orders to report to Dallas for service in the Texas Volunteer Army on the 6th of August. Mr. Humphries has spent the last two years in Trinity University, at Waxahachie, and is one of the boys who has the vinegar and the vim to make good at anything he undertakes, and his many Pecos friends wish him much success and happiness wherever he may cast his lot.

Mrs. Ethel Reynolds gave a most delightful party Saturday evening in which dancing and games of "42" furnished amusement. Delicious and refreshing ice cold punch was served and the handsome Victrola presided over by Miss Jesse Heard furnished beautiful music for the dancing. Those present were Misses Letota Beauchamp, Jane Looby, Irene Prewitt, Gladys Prewitt, Aileen Love, Bynnie Bozeman, Edna Wadley, Jessie Heard, and Mrs. Tom Levy, and the Messrs. Henry Floyd, Charles Parker, Burette Hefner, Joe Glover, Hill Hudson, Cicero Dyer, and Mr. Carson, of Bartstow.

News Notes of Fort Worth - El Paso Highway.

In spite of adverse weather conditions, work on our highway still continues in several of the counties. In Mitchell county, their regular road force has been busy for several weeks and are still at work graveling the road west of Colorado City.

An election has been ordered in Eastland county for August 10th, to vote on a road bond election for $130,000.00. Engineer Meriwether is on a short vacation.

A meeting of the vice presidents and President Penix will be held in Big Spring within a few days to take up some matters connected with the future work of the association.

Let us remember that the State Highway Commission's designation of our highway does not mean that it has been built and our work is finished.

Those who continue to work when conditions are bad have that much less to do when the times are better. Most of the improved highways in West Texas have been built when condition were very adverse.

Boy Scouts on Way to Davis Mountains

A party of Boy Scouts from Midland, enroute to the Davis Mountains, where they will spend several days, passed through Pecos Tuesday afternoon in three autos, in charge of Scoutmaster W. H. Rohlfing, C. H. Hahn, and I. W. Towers. The boys in the party were: Thomas White, James Harrison, Wickliff Curtis, Clifford Hill, Richard Cain, Virgil Shaw, Bert Wakefield, George Sinclair, Robert Crigler, Page Shumake, Alvin Johnson, and Duncan Garner.

Editor J. H. Mullane, of the Van Horn Advocate, was a business visitor in Pecos between trains Wednesday, and made The Enterprise an exceedingly pleasant visit. While here he purchased from The Enterprise editor the Country Campbell press recently installed, but which was made useless on account of the consolidation of The Enterprise and the Pecos Times. The press is now being dismantled and moved to the station to be shipped at once. Jim is a chip off the old block of the Wm. H. Mullane character, which has made The Carlsbad Current a success for the last 30 years, and Jim is making a successful and splendid paper of the Advocate. The Enterprise wishes both of these gentlemen continued success.

Quite a crowd was out Tuesday night to witness a demonstration of T. E. Brown's new automatic stereopticon machine. T. E. Brown, the furniture man of Pecos, is the inventor. He has spent five years in perfecting this machine and it's our hope and belief that he will reap a grand reward for his labors. It is a wonderful invention and may revolutionize the advertising business.—Ward County News.

Nan of Music Mountain

gers on his throat, for a minute, and talk to him, tell him what I think of him—I might know what I would want to do—Nan might be there to see and judge between us. I'd be almost willing to leave things to her to settle herself. I only want what's right. But," the oath that recorded his closing threat was collected and pitiless, "if any harm comes to that girl now from this wild trip back among those wolves—God pity the men that put it over. I'll wipe out the whole accursed clan, if I have to swing for it right here in Sleepy Cat!"

John Lefever, Jeffries, Scott in turn took him in hand to hold him during three days, to restrain the fury of his resentment, and keep him from riding to the gap in a temper that each of them knew would mean only a tragedy worse than that had gone before. Even three days of tactful representation and patient admonition from cool-headed counselors did not accomplish all they hoped for in De Spain's attitude. His rage subsided, but only to be followed by a settled gloom that they knew might burst into uncontrollable anger at any moment.

A report reached McAlpin that Gale Morgan was making ready to return to Music Mountain with the remnant of Sandusky's gang, to make a demand on Duke for certain property and partnership adjustments. This rumor he telephoned to Jeffries. Before talking with De Spain, Jeffries went over the information with Lefever. The two agreed it was right, in the circumstances, that De Spain should be nearer than Sleepy Cat to Nan. Moreover, the period of waiting she had enjoined on him was almost complete.

Without giving De Spain the story fully, the two men talking before him let the discussion drift toward a proposal on his part to go down to Calabasas, where he could more easily keep track of any movement to or from the gap, and this they approved. De Spain, already chafing under a hardly endured restraint, lost no time in starting for Calabasas, directing Lefever to follow next day.

It added nothing to his peace of mind in the morning to learn definitely from McAlpin that Gale Morgan, within twenty-four hours, had really disappeared from Calabasas. No word of any kind had come from Music Mountain for days. No one at Calabasas was aware even that Nan had gone into the gap again. Bob Scott was at Thief River. De Spain telephoned to him to come up on the early stage, and turned his attention toward getting information from Music Mountain without violating Nan's injunction not to frustrate her most delicate effort with her uncle.

As a possible scout to look into her present situation and report on it, McAlpin could point only to Bull Page. Bull was a ready instrument, but his present value as an assistant had become a matter of doubt, since practically every man in the gap had threatened within the week to blow his head off—though Bull himself felt no scruples against making an attempt to reach Music Mountain and get back again. It was proposed by the canny McAlpin to send him in with a team and light wagon, ostensibly to bring out his trunk, which, if it had not been fed to the horses, was still in Duke's barn. As soon as a rig could be got up Page started out.

It was late November. A far, clear air drew the snow-capped ranges sharply down to the eye of the desert—as if the speckless sky, lighted by the radiant sun, were but a monster glass rigged to trick the credulous retina. De Spain, in the saddle in front of the barn, his broad hat brim set on the impassive level of the western horseman, his lips seeming to compress his thoughts, his lines over his forehead, and his hands half-slipped into the pockets of his snug leather coat, watched Page with his light wagon and horses drive away.

Idling around the neighborhood of the barns in the saddle, De Spain saw him gradually recede into the long desert perspective, the perspective which almost alone enabled the watcher to realize as he curtailed his eyes behind their long, steady lashes from the blazing sun, that it was a good bit of a way to the foot of the great outpost of the Superstition range.

De Spain's restlessness prevented his remaining quietly anywhere, for long. As the morning advanced he centered out on the Music Mountain trail, thinking of and wishing for a sight of Nan. The deadly shock of Pardaloe's story had been dulled by days and nights of pain. His deep-rooted love and his loneliness had quieted his impulse for vengeance and overborne him with a profound sadness. He realized how different his feelings were now from what they had been when she knelt before him in the darkened room and, not daring to plead for mercy for her uncle, herself that he had seemed so slow to give. Something reproached him now for his coldness at the moment that he should have thought of her suffering before his own.

It was while riding in this way that his eyes, reading mechanically the wagon trail he was aimlessly following—for no reason other than that it brought him, though forbidden, a little closer to her—arrested his attention. He checked his horse. Something, the trail told him, had happened. Page had stopped his horses. Page had met two men on horseback coming from the gap. After a parley—for the horses had tramped around long enough for one—the wagon had turned completely from the trail and struck across the desert, north; the two horsemen, or one with a led horse, had started back for the gap.

All of this De Spain gathered without moving his horse outside a circle of thirty feet. What did it mean? Page might have fallen in with cronies from the gap, abandoned his job, and started for Sleepy Cat, but this was unlikely. He might have encountered enemies, been pointedly advised to keep away from the gap, and pretended to start for Sleepy Cat, to avoid trouble with them. Deeming the second the more probable conclusion, De Spain, absorbed in his speculations, continued toward the gap to see whether he could not pick up the trail of Page's rig farther on.

Within a mile a further surprise awaited him. The two horsemen, who had headed for the gap after stopping Page, had left the trail, turned to the south, down a small draw, which would screen them from sight, and set out across the desert.

No trail and no habitation lay in the direction they had taken—and it seemed clearer to De Spain that the second horse was a led horse. There was a story in the incident, but his interest lay in following Page's movements, and he spurred swiftly forward to see whether his messenger had resumed the gap trail and gone on with his mission. He followed this quest almost to the mountains, without recovering any trace of Page's rig. He halted. It was certain now that Page had not gone into the gap.

Perplexed and annoyed, De Spain, from the high ground on which he sat his horse, cast his eyes far over the desert. The brilliant sunshine flooded it as far as the eye could reach. He scanned the vast space without detecting a sign of life anywhere, though none better than he knew that any abundance of it might be there. But his gaze caught something of interest on the farthest northern horizon, and on this his scrutiny rested a long time. A soft brown curtain rose just above the earth line against the blue sky. Toward the east it died away and toward the west it was cut off by the Superstition peaks.

De Spain, without giving the weather signs much thought, recognized their import, but his mind was filled with his own anxieties and he rode smartly back toward Calabasas, because he was not at ease over the puzzles in the trail. When he reached the depression where the horsemen had, without any apparent reason, turned south, he halted. Should he follow them or turn north to follow Page's wanderings? If Page had been scared away from the gap, for a time, he probably had no information that De Spain wanted, and De Spain knew his cunning and persistence well enough to be confident he would be back on the gap road, and within the cover of the mountains, before a storm should overtake him. On the north the brown curtain had risen fast and already enveloped the farthest peaks of the range. Letting his horse stretch its neck, he hesitated a moment longer trying to decide whether to follow the men to the south or the wagon to the north. A woman might have done better. But no good angel was there to guide his decision, and in another moment he was riding rapidly to the south with the even, brown, misty cloud behind him rolling higher into the northern sky.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

De Spain Rides Alone.

He had ridden the trail but a short time when it led him in a wide angle backward and around toward Calabasas, and he found, presently, that the men he was riding after were apparently heading for the stage barns. In the north the rising curtain had darkened. Toward Sleepy Cat the landscape was already obliterated. In the south the sun shone, but the air had grown suddenly cold, and in the sharp drop De Spain realized what was coming. His first thought was of the southern stages, which must be warned, and as he galloped up to big barn, with this thought in mind he saw, standing in the doorway, Bull Page.

De Spain regarded him with astonishment. "How did you get here?" was his sharp question.

Page grinned. "Got what I was after, and c'm' back sooner'n I expected. Half-way over to the gap, I met Duke and the young gal on horseback, headed for Calabasas. They pulled up. I pulled up. Old Duke looked kind o' ga'nted, and it seemed like Nan was in a considerable hurry to get to Sleepy Cat with him, and he couldn't stand the saddle. Anyway, they was heading for Calabasas to get a rig from McAlpin. I knowed McAlpin would never give old Duke a rig, not if he was a-dyin' in the saddle."

"They've got your rig!" cried De Spain.

"The gal asked me if I'd mind accommodatin' 'em," explained Bull deprecatingly, "to save time."

"They headed north!" exclaimed De Spain. The light from the fast-changing copper-colored sky across his horse and figure, McAlpin, followed by a hostler, appeared at the barn door.

"They've Got Your Rig!" Cried De Spain.

Bull nodded to De Spain. "Said they wanted to get there quick. She fig'ed on savin' a few miles by strikin' the hill trail in. So I takes their horses and lets on I was headin' for the gap. When they got out of sight, I turned round—"

Even as he spoke, the swift-rolling curtain of mist overhead blotted the sun out of the sky.

De Spain sprang from his saddle with a ringing order to McAlpin. "Get up a fresh saddle-horse!"

"A horse!" cried the startled barn boss, whirling on the hostler. "The strongest legs in the stable, and don't lose a second! Lady Jane; up with her!" he yelled, bellowing his orders into the echoing barn with his hands to his mouth. "Up with her for Mr. De Spain in a second! Marmon! Becker! Lanzon! What in h—! are you all doing?" he roared, rushing back with a fusillade of oaths. "Look alive, everybody!"

"Coming!" yelled one voice after another from the depths of the distant stalls.

De Spain ran into the office. Page caught his horse, stripped the rifle from its holster, and hurriedly began uncinching. Hostlers running through the barn called shrilly back and forth, and De Spain springing up the stairs to his room provided what he wanted for his hurried flight. When he dashed down with coats on his arm the hoofs of Lady Jane were clattering down the long gangway. A stable-boy slid from her back on one side as Bull Page threw the saddle across her from the other; hostlers caught at the cinches, while others hurriedly dubbed the legs of the quivering mare. De Spain, his hand on McAlpin's shoulder, was giving his parting injunctions, and the barn boss, head cocked down, and eyes cast furtively on the scattering snowflakes outside, was listening with an attention that recorded inflexibly every uttered syllable.

Once only, he interrupted: "Henry, you're ridin' out into this thing alone—don't do it."

"I can't help it," snapped De Spain impatiently.

"It's a man killer."

"I can't help it."

"Bob Scott, if he w's here, 'ud never let you do it. I'll ride w' me myself, Henry. I worked for your father—"

"You're too old a man, Jim—"

"Henry—"

"Don't talk to me! Do as I tell you!" thundered De Spain.

McAlpin bowed his head.

"Ready!" yelled Page, buckling the rifle holster in place. Still talking, and with McAlpin glued to his elbow, De Spain vaulted into the saddle, caught the lines from Bull's hands, and steadied the Lady as she sidestepped nervously—McAlpin following close and dodging the dancing hoofs as he looked earnestly up to catch the last word. De Spain touched the horse with the lines. She leaped through the doorway and he raised a backward hand to those behind. Running outside the door, they yelled a chorus of cries after the swift-moving horseman, and, clustered in an excited group, watched the Lady with a dozen great strides round the Calabasas trail and disappear with her rider into the whirling snow.

She fell at once into an easy reaching step, and De Spain, busy with his reflections, hardly gave thought to what she was doing, and little more to what was going on about him.

No moving figure reflects the impassive more than a horseman of the mountains, on a long ride. Though never so swift-borne, the man, looking neither to the right nor to the left, moving evenly and statuelike against the sky, a part of the wily beast under him, presents the very picture of indifference to the world around him. The great, swift wind spreading over the desert emptied on it snow-laden puffs that whirled and wrapped a cloud of flakes about horse and rider in the symbol of a shroud. De Spain gave no heed to these skirmishing eddies, but he knew what was behind them, and for the wind, he only wished it might keep the snow in the air till he caught sight of Nan.

The even reach of the horse brought him to the point where Nan had changed to the stage wagon. Without a break in her long stride, Lady Jane took the hint of her swerving rider, put her nose into the wind, and headed north. De Spain, alive to the difficulties of his venture, set his hat lower and bent forward to follow the wagon along the sand. With the first of the white flurries passed, he found himself in a snowless pocket, as it were, of the advancing storm. He hoped for nothing from the prospect ahead; but every moment of respite from the blinding whirl was a gain, and with his eyes close on the trail that had carried him into danger, he urged the Lady on.

When the snow again closed down about him he calculated from the roughness of the country that he should be within a mile of the road that Nan was trying to reach, from the gap to Sleepy Cat. But the broken ground straight ahead would prevent her from driving directly to it. He knew she must hold to the right, and her curving track, now becoming difficult to trail, confirmed his conclusion.

A fresh drive of the wind buffeted him as he turned directly north. Only at intervals could he see any trace of the wagon wheels. The driving snow compelled him more than once to dismount and search for the trail. Each time he lost it the effort to regain it was more prolonged. At times he was compelled to ride the desert in wide circles to find the tracks, and this cost time when minutes might mean life. But as long as he could be clinging to the struggle to track her exactly, he saw almost where the storm had struck the two wayfarers. Neither he knew, was insensible to its dangers. What amazed him was that a man-like Duke Morgan should be out in it. He found a spot where they had halted and, with a start that checked the beating of his heart, his eyes fell on her footprint not yet obliterated, beside the wagon track.

The sight of it was an electric shock. Throwing himself from his horse, he knelt over it in the storm, oblivious for an instant of everything but that this tracery meant her presence, where he now bent, hardly half an hour before. He swung, after a moment's keen scrutiny, into his saddle, with fresh resolve. Pressed by the rising fury of the wind, the wayfarers had become from this point, De Spain saw too plainly, hardly more than fugitives. Good ground to the left, where their hope of safety lay, had been overlooked. Their tracks wandered on the open desert like those who, losing courage, lose their course in the confusion and fear of the impending peril.

And with this increasing uncertainty in their direction vanished De Spain's last hopes of tracking them. The wind swept the desert now as a hurricane sweeps the open sea, scattering the fallen snow from the face of the earth as the sea-gale, flattening the face of the waters, rips the foam from the frantic waves to drive it in a scudding fragments across them.

De Spain, urging his horse forward, unbuckled his rifle holster, threw away the scabbard, and holding the weapon up in one hand, fired shot after shot at measured intervals to attract the attention of the two he sought. He heaved his rifle ammunition, without eliciting any answer. The wind rose with a roar against which a man's report could hardly carry, and the snow swept down the slope of the mountain, flakes torn by the gust of the gale were stiffened by the wind and into powdered ice that stung nose and rider. Casting away the useless carbine, and pressing his horse to the limit of her strength and endurance, the unyielding pursuer rode in great, coiling circles into the storm, cut in, if possible, ahead of his victims, firing shot upon shot from his revolver.

Hoping Against Hope for an Answer.

and putting his ear intently against the wind for the faint hope of an answer.

Suddenly the Lady stumbled and, as he cruelly reined her, slid helplessly and scrambling along the face of a flat rock. De Spain, leaping from her back, steadied her trembling and looked underfoot. The mare had struck the rock of the upper lava bed. Drawing his revolver, he fired several shots from where he stood. It could not be far, he knew, from the junction of the two great desert trails—the Calabasas road and the gap road. He felt sure Nan could not have got much north of this, for he had ridden in desperation to get abreast of or beyond her, and if she were south, where he was asked, in the name of God, could she be?

He climbed again into the saddle—the cold was gripping his limbs—and, watching the rocky landmarks narrowly, tried to circle the dead waste of the half-buried flow. With chilled, awkward fingers he filled the revolver again and rode on, discharging it every minute, and listening, hoping against hope for an answer. It was when he had almost completed, as well as he

LEMONS BEAUTIFY AND WHITEN THE SKIN. Make This Beauty Lotion Very Cheaply For Your Face, Arms and Hands

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream one can prepare a full quarter pint of the most wonderful lemon skin softener and complexion beautifier by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white. Care should be taken to strain the juice thru a fine cloth so that no pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months.

SUDDEN DEATH Caused by Disease of the Kidneys.

The close connection which exists between the heart and the kidneys is well known nowadays. As soon as kidneys are diseased, arterial tension is increased and the heart functions are attacked. When the kidneys no longer pour forth waste, uric acid poisoning occurs and the person dies and the cause is often given as heart disease, or disease of brain or lungs.
