A SOLEMN_OBLIGATION OF CATIZENSHIP.

There is a reason why every qualified wanter in Texas ought to go to the polls on water election day. It is that the fate of sthe constitutional amendment removing the wint limitations on independent school disdricts will be determined on that day. A Democrat may feel certain that the nominees of his party will be elected without the help of his ballot, and a Republican umay feel equally certain that the nominees this party will not be saved from defeat By his ballot, But that feeling can not this year justify either in remaining away from the polls. Neither Democrat or Remublican can count it a certainty that this constitutional amendment will be adopted, and the uncertainty makes it the duty of tweey one who favors its adoption to go to the polls.

It would not be easy, if possible, to exsuggerate the importance of this amendment. The schools of Texas as a whole are weefully inefficient. The rural schools are a particularly so, and it is precisely those supchools which would be helped by the idention of this amendment. We have Whennel so often that our schools are inefficlent as probably to make us somewhat inambible of the significance of that fact, It mouns that a million children are gabwing in Texas insufficiently educated, even my the test of the low standard that has manerailed in the past, for our schools are, mot better, but worse than they used to be. It means that the next generation of men mail women of Texas will be less equipped for the contests of life and the duties of ditizenship than the generation that has than a holpful thing.

It is this danger that the penting con toward the end. interional amendment is meant to remove.

market centers and meat way up over the counters in retail shops. The farmer gets 35 to 40 cents per gallon for his milk and the consumer pays from 85 cents to $1. Not long ago a decrease of 8 cents per gallon to consumers in Dallas was accompanied by a decrease of 12 cents per gallon to the producer, the distributor profiting 4 cents per gallon by the process. The warehouses are full of virgin wool and no demand while the consumer pays $50 for a suit of shoddy. Cotton collars are 40 to 60 cents a piece and one pound of 22-cent cotton will make twenty-two of them.

Go on down the line, if you will, and find, if you can, a single reduction in the cost of living that has cost the manufacturer or distributor a single cent of his wartime profits. Your investigations will disclose the fact that the farmer-producer has been the victim each time.

The manufacturer and the distributor work on the percentage basis. The higher the price the greater the profits on a single transaction. The farmer works on an acreage basis. The more he produces the less he gets. This fact has been forcibly brought to his attention on numerous occasions. It is beginning to make an impression. The farmer is beginning to realize that he has the whip hand. He is becoming conscious of the fact that by confining his production to his own needs, he can bring the world to its knees. Not that the average farmer wants to bring about justice through the starvation process, but he is becoming more determined than ever to secure a square deal, and the length to which he may be forced to go will depend largely upon the consideration accorded him .-- Farm and Ranch.

Preparations are being made to warehouse the 1921 crop of farmers belonging to the United Cotton Growers Association of America. President Fred Roberts purposes to oversee the carrying out of the ware- section as "Uncle Petter" cases will be built of concrete, and which will be constructed in accordance with government specifications.

The officers of the organization want it understood that what is being sought by the growers is not a maximum price for their crop, but a price which shall be the equivalent of the cost of production plus a reasonable profit. This cost of production and a reasonable profit is to be accurately determined by experts. It will, of course, vary from time to time. One year it may run as high as 50 cents for middling cotton, while another year it may rescend to 20 cents or less.

The idea of the association is no only to build warehouses, but to coordinate them in one big and smoothly-functioning marketing system presided over by specialists who are experienced in this sort of work. In this way, it is hoped to create a marketing system of 12 months in place of the present sales period of three or four months.

It is anticipated that this marketing system, when complete, will be free from the whims and caprices of Wall Street manipulators and of the mere greed of buyers. Every effort will be made to eliminate every unnecessary middleman and to shorten the line from producer to spinner. The association is proceeding on the supposition that only the producer and the spinner have any business with a bale of cotton. Another reformation that is being advocated by the United Cotton Growers Association of America is the complete establishment of the principle of gin compression. This principle has received the endorsement of the United States Shipping Board and various other government agencies. It has on numerous occasions been proved practicable, and there are at the present time a number of companies engaged in the manufacture of compress machinery that may be installed in the ordinary gin. Gin compression has a great many advantages, all of which are quickly recognized by the sensible-minded person. It makes possible a more rolls efficient utilization of warehouse space, reduces the amount of space required by approximately twothirds. It also has the effect of eliminating most of the "country damage," and of making possible cheaper transportation, and of eliminating many small expenses all along the line, furthermore, gin compression results in a better fiber, than that which is usually delivered to the spinner. Another important feature of the program of the United Cotton Growers Association of America lies in the plan for financial selfhelp. It is purposed to create an associational loan company which shalal, in the course of ten years or so, be able to acquire capital of, say, $75,000,000. This large sum could be raised by the payment of two or three dollars per bale per year, without inflicting any hardship on anyone. In this way farmers of straitened circumstances could be loaned a reasonable amount on the amount of their crop, for the purpose of holding. This two or three dollars-and the cost of warehousing. for that matter-could easily be paid cut of only a part of the increased price that would result from such a cremendous cotton pool.

to our camp. Oh, how I prized that suit! I kissed it a thousand times, and slept with it under my head.

dreaming of our parting kiss and embrace (the memory lingers yet,) with no outside covering but the stardecked heavens.

But for the noble, loyal women of our Southland, we should never have endured the hardships and privations of four long years without pay from the government; living as we did most of the time on parched corn, and goobers, not even having crackers. (hardtack, 'as the Yankees called it) except when we drove them from their camps and captured their rations. During the war, and at its close, I was first sergeant of our company, and kept the company

We started out with over 140 men and during the war we had enrolled more than 300 men (recruits kept coming in.) At the close we were 37 strong; and the bones of the bal ance were bleaching on battlefields and skirmish lines from Cape Girardeau, Missouri, to Yellow Bayou, Louisana. When I think of the brave noble boys who faced the cannon's mouth and yielded up their lives for our Southland, and the self-sacrificing heart-broken widows and sweethearts left at home, my heart is saddened beyond expression. The few grizzled veterans left will soon pass over the river, and rest beneath the trees of Life. When we meet in our reunions we grasp each other's hands and tears unbidden flow as we recount the hardships and deeds of our | 347. or phone 44. Pecos.

camp life. In 1891, on account of the failing health of my dear wife, we sacrificed our beautiful home in Johnson county, and moved to Pecos. I have traveled over a good portion of the United States, and I want to state that I have never lived with or found a more generous, liberal-hearted people than are in Pecos. I will never forget the noble, good women of this town, who, day and night, ministered then and there to answer a petition pecting in the Pecos and Toyah oil fields that deserve credit. The furor and splurge are over. The man who picked up cheap acreage only to unload it, never expecting to develop the 22nd day of November, 1920, then and there to it; not caring whether oil was to be found or not-he is gone his way to try other and less exploited fields. The hotels of Toyah and Pecos are not jammed with fortune hunters. No tents are pitched in the streets to accommodate the surplus speculators. But there remain in these west Texas towns the quiet, diligent, patient believers in the signs of something doing. There remain men who are willing to live away from the cities and spend their time and money in testing out what nature has to offer in the way of petroleum. They are not the speculators, but the true pioneers.

And it is they who should be rewarded. If there be oil beneath the crust they are the men who should make the profits, for they mean business. They do not seek quick profits, nor plan to run when they have "cleaned up."

There is still reason to believe that somewhere west of the Pecos and south of the Panhandle there is oil. Eminent geologists who respect their profession too much to misrepresent something for a few dollars and whose predictions in other fields have panned out, have said there is oil in southwest Texas. More power to the honest prospector.

Dallas, Texas, Oct. 8 .--- West Texas and the Panhandle Plains sections of the state are still badly in need of cotton pickers according to numerous inquiries to the Texas Chamber of Commerce. Floyd county alone can use 1,000 cotton pickers, according to a wire today from F. R. Jamison, secretary of the Panhandle Plains Chamber of Commerce, to James Z. George, geneal manager, of the Texas Chamber of Commerce. There are two sources of labor now open to the West Texas and Plairs farmers, according to information received by the research department of the state chamber. The first is the small available surplus in the lower coast country of Texas where the cotton' crop is largely gathered, and the second is the labor supply of Tamaulipas, Nuevo Leon, Coahuila, and Chilhuahua, the northern border states of Mexico. The available supply of labor in the lower coast country is not large, according to indications from that territory, though there are some sections where cotton picking is entirely of laborers have been released. Regarding the labor supply of northern Mexico, a wire from the

Prepared for The Enterprise by the First Vational Bank in St. Louis.

The preliminary figures for the foreign commerce of the United States for the month of August are now avalable. Our trade totals for August show a considerable decline in the value, of exports as compared with both the last few months and with August, 1919. The value of our immediately preceeding months 1920 also shows some decrease.

Our exports for the month of August were valued at $584,000,000, decrease of $67,000,000 from the total for the month of July and $62,-000,000 less than that of the exports of $646,000,000 in August, 1919. For the eight months period ending with August of this year our exports were valued at $5,482,000,000, an increase of $211,000,000 over the exports for the first eight months of last year. Our imports in August were valued at $519,000,000, a decrease of $18,000,000 from the July total of $537,000,000, but $212,000-000 more than imports for August of last year. However, it occurred on the gridfron and while every point made accrues to the advantage of the player carrying the ball it couldn't very well go down as a tribute to stick work. Instead the Tigers merely rolled up an imposing score for their future rivals to look at when they faced the Pecos High school eleven Saturday afternoon at the big cement stadium. The final score 69 to 0, is quite the most onesided event Mrs. Simpson is a sister of S. W. Ward of the season, but it does not tell of and daughter of Mrs. Julia A. It was here that all of their touchdowns were scored as when nearing the goal posts they simply worked a quick trick play and sent the ball over for any distance from 55 yards to one yard. The score would have assumed even greater proportions had it not been for the infliction of a number of penalties upon the Tigers who in their desire to roll up as large a score as possible frequently left their positions before the ball was snapped.

Lee Slaughter, Louis Springer, Portillo, Ragsdale, Dawson and Uhlig carried the ball in masterful style. They showed a pep and speed that was quite in keeping with Tiger history. Slaughter was particularly good at pounding the line and he never missed for a gain when going
