PECOS OIL FIELD HOLDS INTEREST OF VISITORS AND INVESTORS — TOYAH-BELL STILL AN ACTOR

Unabated interest attends the work of the drillers in the Trans-Pecos oil field. Visitors and investors have dotted the streets of Pecos the past week, coming here from almost every section of the country. Many having holdings in the field, have come here to refresh their faith in the greatest undeveloped oil territory in Texas, and have imbibed freely of the evidences which are shown daily in the Toyah-Bell, in its periodical flowing heads.

Visitors to this well during the week assert that it is continually growing in strength, and the hope and imagination of observers is strengthened as the result of the striking of a very hard, flint like shale formation, which occurred Wednesday.

According to the opinion of eminent geologists, this is a hard formation separating the several oil-bearing sands believed to be at the 4400-foot level, and when this shale is punctured a greater increase in production is anticipated, if not indeed a real head well.

Flows of several heads a day have been recorded for the past week, and continuance of this activity is calculated to keep the interest of the field to a white heat. While the watchful waiting on this hole requires a high degree of patience on the part of those directly interested and the public at large, those who have witnessed this visible demonstration of what appears to be a great oil pool held in leash by some unknown secrets of the hidden recesses of the earth, are sincerely expecting that any minute will release the main spring of liquid gold.

WITH THE OTHER DRILLERS
While the Toyah-Bell has apparently crowded off the boards all other manifestations of activity in the Trans-Pecos field, it is nevertheless true that operations in the other locations of the territory are being pursued just as rapidly and with as great hope of being the first to startle the world with a gusher. The report by individual locations is given herewith:

THE LAURA WELL
The Laura well of the Federal-Sunshine Corporation, 174 H. & G. N., will this week complete the job of pulling 8 1/2 inch casing from the 2240-foot level in order to correct a water leak in the string. When this work is accomplished, drilling will then be resumed. It is hoped that they will be able to drill to 2685 feet when the 8 1/2 inch casing will be set.

BELL WELL NO. 1
Bell No. 1, Section 20, Block 2, H. & G. N., is drilling in a very hard gray sandy lime at 2431 feet. Drilling was resumed Wednesday morning following installation of new drilling cable, and 1 foot was made that day. Only 3 feet was drilled yesterday owing to the resistance of the formation. The motive power for this location is being driven from oil taken from the hole.

WILLOUGHBY NO. 1
Willoughby No. 1, Section 2, Block C-13 Public School Reeves county, has passed the Comanchean cretaceous formation at 345 feet, entering blue shale at 365 feet where a strata of lime rock was encountered, believed to be Permian. Under this the drill hit black shale formation and are still drilling at near 400 feet. Mr. Willoughby says he is elated over the formation and is confident of bringing in a well in the Permian which he now feels certain the drill is working on.

RAMSEY NO. 1
Ramsey No. 1, Section 80, Block 1, about 500 feet northwest of the Toyah-Bell, is drilling at 500 feet.

HAWKEYE-PECOS
A new rig has been moved to the location of the Hawkeye-Pecos Oil Company on Section 9, Block 55-4, and activities are to be pushed. The rig formerly on the site was in bad mechanical condition, and considerable delay resulted. This hole is 700 feet.

THE LOS-PECOS
The Los-Pecos well, Section 20, Block 2, H. & G. N. will resume drilling this week at 920 feet following receipt of some repairs for machinery.

SODA LAKE WELL
It will be necessary to remove a string of broken casing at the Soda Lake well in Ward county before drilling can be

FREE FIELD SEEDS FOR FARMERS IN PECOS COUNTRY

Washington, D. C., Jan. 24, 1922.
Mr. J. G. Love, Pecos, Texas.
Dear Jack:—
The Department of Agriculture has placed at my disposal the distribution of the following seeds:
50 four-pound packages of Kansas-grown alfalfa seed.
100 four-pound packages of Feterita seed.
100 four-pound packages of Kafu seed.
100 one-pound packages of Sudan grass seed.

Now, Jack, I desire to help out the farmer in every way possible, and to place in his hands these seeds knowing that they will benefit him during these hard times, and it will be a means of saving him expense. You are a very busy man, I know, and I call on you entirely too much and take too much of your time, but if you will get someone there to give me the names of real farmers, both in your county, and also over at Barstow, Grandfalls, Buena Vista, Saragosa and Balmorhea, something like fifty to one hundred that would appreciate these seeds, I will appreciate it very much.

You know, Jack, in times past these Government bounties have been sent out indiscriminately by Congressmen to lawyers, businessmen, etc., who could and would not make use of them. I want to get them in the hands of those who will make use of them. If it is possible for you to give me this list right away I shall be very much obliged to you.

Very truly your friend,
C. B. HUDSPETH.
Farmers desiring to avail themselves of this opportunity to secure these free field seeds, should communicate at once with J. G. Love, Pecos, Texas, specifying the kind they want.

Six Cars of Lambs Shipped to K. C.

Six cars of lambs were shipped from Pecos this week to the Kansas City market, being finished on alfalfa. The lambs were in prime condition and should command the top of the market.

The following gentlemen had two cars each in the shipment: Sol Mayer, J. W. B. Williams and C. Honaker.

J. T. Lanehart of Jal, N. M., was in town today and states that it is yet dry in his section of the country. He is still selling enough butter from his herd of Jerseys to keep a daughter in the Midland College. Mr. Lanehart is a milk goat enthusiast and brought along a fine, purebred Toggenburg buck which he exchanged with the editor for a purebred Saanen—the exchange being made on both sides to prevent inbreeding.

PINAL DOME WELL
The Pinal Dome location, in Loving county, is reported drilling in salt rock at 4700 feet.

PECOS-ANGELES
The Pecos-Angeles, Section 68, Block B, H. & G. N., is cleaning out its 900 foot hole, and will pull and reset casing in order to control water.

THE TRANS-PECOS
This location, Section 206, Block 31, H. & T. C., Ward county, is reported drilling at 1,750 feet.

Operations are being carried on at fifteen locations in the Pecos field. Six of these are on the east side of the Pecos River, the Pinal Dome Oil Co., the Ramsey Oil Co., two wells, the Trans-Pecos Oil Co., and the Arthur Pitts Oil Co., two wells. West of the river nine locations are active, the Bell No. 1, of the Diveland Syndicate, the Pecos-Angeles, the Los Pecos Syndicate, the Sunshine Oil Corporation, the Hawkeye-Pecos Oil Co., the Willoughby Petroleum Co., the Toyah Central Oil Co., Wesner & Anthony, and the Owens No. 2.

PRESIDENT OPENS FARM CONFERENCE

The conference concluded its work this afternoon. Among other matters of importance the conference recommended the consolidation of the projects of the National Agricultural Conference at Washington. From the President down, all speakers agreed that agriculture is in a "bad way". The 325 delegates from all branches of agricultural activities, showed a decided willingness to take action on all recommendations made by Secretary Wallace. Provision for greater capital or farm loans received first attention. Pictures show Secretary Wallace, President and Secretary Wallace (lower) President Harding walking from White House to conference, accompanied by private secretary Christian.

PECOS HIGH BASKET BALL TEAM DEFEATS BALMORHEA TEAM

Thursday afternoon the Pecos High School basketball team and a large band of loyal rooters chartered the P. V. S. train and journeyed to Balmorhea with the avowed purpose of getting the scalp of the high basketkeeters of that little city. That the work was well done, is found in the fact that the home team defeated the Balmorheans to the tune of 31-27.

The home team received the strongest kind of support from the student body, who turned out by the score, 108 entraining by rail, and some 20 finding passage in automobiles.

Those witnessing the game state the boys played and fought hard to the last signal of the whistle, and while there were many thrills, the locals did not have a walk-away with the Balmorhea team. The game meant the championship for the western side of the district, and both teams were on their toes from start to finish.

The Pecos delegation are loud in their praise of the Balmorhea players and those who assisted them in tendering a reception. The locals will remember the game and the hospitality of the vanquished in the kindest spirit and a higher appreciation for High School athletics.

The line-up for the game was as follows:
Pecos—Thurston and Wheat, forwards; Kerr, center; Ross and Hoffman, guards; Moran, Camp and Caroline, substitutes.
Balmorhea—Horrigan and Countz, forwards; Odell, center; Harrigan and Zimlock, guards; Van Dearaz and Bozeman, substitutes.

FARM FURNISHES MEAL TICKET

The Enterprise has unbounded faith in the ultimate uncovering here of one of the greatest oil fields in the world, but while the capitalists are developing this hidden wealth, we should not lose sight of the more enduring resources of the Pecos Valley, which are found in a soil and climatic conditions that are wonderfully adapted to the growing of some of the finest field, garden and orchard crops to be found in the wide world. In other words, in the feverish quest for oil, we must not allow ourselves to be inebriated with an oil anaesthetic, rendering us impotent to develop these resources which are calculated

PECOS SECTION OFFERS UNRIVALLED CLIMATIC CONDITIONS FOR GROWING HIGH-GRADE COTTON

The Enterprise and the Pecos public at large is indebted to J. G. Love, president of the Pecos Valley State Bank, for compiling data which accurately represents the production of cotton and cotton seed in the Pecos trade territory, embraced in the counties of Reeves, Ward and Pecos. In this industry, as in all other matters concerning the resources of the Pecos Valley, Mr. Love is a veritable bureau of facts and figures.

"A crop that will yield to the Pecos trade territory three-quarters of a million dollars for one season, is not such a bad 'baby' after all," said Mr. Love, "and when you consider that the growing of cotton is in its very infancy, or embryo stage of development, the possibilities of the staple are unbounded, and should cause every empire builder here to encourage the industry."

"The cotton and cotton seed receipts from the Pecos trade territory for the last season netted above three-quarters of a million dollars, and that in face of the fact that the overflow of the Pecos river at the season of planting prevented many farmers from turning their acreage to this crop."

"It is well known among the buyers of cotton that the Pecos valley staple is of long fibre, turns out an excellent sample and invariably commands a premium. I am told on good authority that during the last season not less than fifty buyers came to this section expressly to bid on our long staple cotton, and that more careful attention on the part of growers to seed selection and handling of the crop will enable them to always sell their product at a premium, and instead of ever becoming a drag on the market, will always command the attention of the buyers from abroad. I find that considerable headway has been made in maintaining the standard of our cotton, but naturally we are just starting. Buyers tell me that cotton grown here turns out a staple from 1 1/2 to 1 3/4 inches, and when you consider that about 90 percent of the crop averages the latter length fibre, it can readily be seen that already we are on the road to turning out a grade of cotton which will eventually make this section famous."

"I am advised that the acreage to cotton will be increased here the next season by 50 per cent. This illustrates the faith of our growers in the possibilities of the crop, and those watching the industry from a distance believe that their faith is well founded."

Following is a table showing the cotton and cotton seed raised in this section during the seasons 1918-19, 1919-20, 1920-21 and 1921-22:

1009 GET POLL TAX RECEIPTS IN REEVES COUNTY

There was a very marked increase in the payment of poll taxes in Reeves county this year, the tax collector's records showing that 970 had paid, while there were 30 exemptions, making a total of 1009 persons in the county who will be eligible for voting in the year's elections as far as this qualification is concerned.

The poll tax payments by precincts are as follows:
Pecos ..... 604
Exemptions ..... 26
Balmorhea ..... 140
Exemptions ..... 1
Toyah ..... 164
Saragosa ..... 71
Exemptions ..... 3
Total ..... 1009

There were 21 poll taxes paid in Loving county, with 1 exemption. 432 persons paid poll tax in the city of Pecos, and exemptions were issued to 16.

The large increase in the number paying poll taxes in the county is attributed to the newly earned franchise of the women and the requirement that they pay poll tax in order to vote, the making of the poll tax compulsory upon the payment of the community property tax, and the added incentive of being able to participate in county and district selection of officers.

THOUSANDS HONOR WILSON

Several thousand persons recently made an impromptu pilgrimage to the home of former President Wilson in Washington, D. C., to pay their respects to him. He spoke to them from the doorway of his home, expressing confidence that the League of Nations would eventually take its place. The marchers came from a meeting of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation at a local theatre.

HUDSPETH SAYS TEXANS DON'T CALL NEGRO 'MISTER'

The only member of the Texas delegation who voted in favor of the Dyer anti-lynching bill in the House of Representatives last week, was Representative Harry M. Wurzbach, republican, of the San Antonio district. The bill passed after one of the most determined contests witnessed in the House for many months, by a vote of 231 to 119.

Hudspeth Makes Fight

The re-adoption of Sec. 7 of the bill after it had been defeated was criticized by Representative Hudspeth, whose district borders for several hundred miles on the Mexican frontier. The section proposes to protect foreign citizens, the rights of whom are secured by treaty, by declaring that any act committed by State or Territory of the United States in violation of such rights, which act constitutes a crime under the laws of such State or Territory, shall constitute a like crime against the peace and dignity of the United States, and may be prosecuted in the Federal courts. Mr. Hudspeth pointed out that the border country was beset with criminals who sometimes made raids from Mexico, and that this provision of the bill would make the enforcement of order difficult in the border country.

Mr. Hudspeth denied the statement made by Representative Miller of Washington, that in his speech against the bill Representative Buchanan of Texas had "openly favored lynching and mob law." Mr. Hudspeth offered to submit the speech of Mr. Buchanan to the Republican side of the House for a verdict. Mr. Hudspeth told the House that he "used to travel with the Texas Rangers."

"It was said we had in our custody some rather bad ones at times—niggers—who committed assault," said Mr. Hudspeth. "We don't call them 'Mister' down there, and there never has been a case where a mob took a man away from the Rangers, white or black, and lynched him." He said that the warning of Republican members that the bill would be passed was a correct statement, "with the administration and the President behind it," after relating briefly the fight at the Alamo, he continued:

"I want to say without any delinquency of your laws, you can pass this bill; it will not create any disunion or disloyalty in my State, but when you attempt to put the black heel

FLIPPANT FLAPPER NEEDS FRESH AIR SAYS CLUB HEADS

A campaign to save the "flapper" is on. Give her air, say the national executives of the Camp Fire Girls, who are in conference at Washington.

But let the air be fresh air, these advocates advocated, asserting that young girls who inhale the unclean, contaminated ozone are less likely to flap into the flames of folly. These executives said the flapper, when "fresh aired," would give up jazz, bobbed hair and unwholesome habits.

"All that is needed to change a flapper into a sweet, wholesome American girl is to interest her outdoors and provide recreation and work that will give her the stimulation she now gets from jazzing and lurid movies," said Lester F. Scott of New York.

"Girls would not get homesick for Broadway if their interest was aroused in outdoor pleasures," said Miss Edith Tabbs of Stockton, California.

"Girls who have plenty of outdoor sports and other wholesome fun to amuse them, don't care for jazz dances, they don't bob their hair and they don't want to spoon."

Miss Grace Brown of Detroit declared "girls should never be told not to bob their hair or not to do this or that."

All the members of the conference said that the flapper is not to blame. And they all declared that nothing was wrong with the modern girl except her parents.

POULTRY RAISING NOW AN INDUSTRY OF IMPORTANCE

Time was when every house had its yard full of scratching chickens. As a food supply for the family, they helped.

With the passing of time and the subsequent development of the country, cities grew where communities had existed. Quite naturally, neither time nor room could be spared for tending chickens.

About all the average city dweller knows about the chicken industry is to show a morbid interest in any creature containing a mechanism that can produce a product selling at a dollar a dozen.

A large section of the city population of our country knows only about chickens—that you pay 35 cents for two of their eggs soft-boiled in any dairy lunch either or both of which is likely to go "pop" and distribute a yellow motif over the waistcoat at the first crack of the knife.

On the other hand, the farmers, in their efforts to appease the ravenous appetite of the busy cities, turned their attention and labor to producing profitable provisions. Poultry raising as a paying business was unthought of, or carried on on a small scale.

With the advent of the poultry fancier—generally a rich man with a hobby and some knowledge of chickens—came the first step in the recognition of the farmyard fowl as a possible source of profit.

As the fancier took to breeding and cross-breeding, gradually he produced stronger and better chickens—better layers, better flesh, better feathers, better breeders.

Close on his heels came the business man—eyes wide open for a paying proposition. His shrewd intellect saw a great future in poultry, and he stepped in.

The breeder and the business man combined. The former donated his knowledge of breeding and raising—the latter applied his commercial instincts to the marketing. The result was inevitable.

Interest has grown to the extent where national and state farm organizations have begun to co-operate with the breeders. Colleges have established poultry farms, where science is applied to the culture of chickens.

Poultry raising has come into its own.

DOCTORS GIVE ADVICE AS TO GETTING OUT OF BED

There's comfort for us folks who have known all along that it was ruinous to one's health to bounce out of bed in the morning.

London physicians now offer advice on "getting out of bed."

The burden of it is this: "To jump out of the covers immediately upon awakening is to throw the entire system out of gear for a whole day. During sleep the vital organs have been at rest. The vitality is low and the circulation weak."

"Suddenly to jump out of bed the moment one awakens is to shock the entire system, especially the heart. The blood starts pumping too suddenly."

"Instead, lie awake at least five minutes before attempting to get up. A little leisurely reading is a good thing. At least one should take time to stretch every limb before arising."

AN EVENIN' HYMN

If you eat a hearty supper, you will have the night to dread, fer you'll dream of havin' half a dozen fights; and you'll crawl out in the mornin' with a feelin' in yer head, that will take a quart of dope to set to rights. You won't need any breakfast on that gastronomic jag, that you took aboard with shameful lack of sense,—and you'll feel about as frisky as a seven-bushel bag, while the soul is allers sorry that repents. If you want to fill yer system up with somethin' better'n wealth, don't germanidize of evenin's when you're tired. It's safer not to tinker with the laws of perfect health, when a little bit of judgement is required.

The evenin' is intended fer its hours of peaceful rest, to ponder o'er the blessin's of the day—and a double-jointed rasher underneath a feller's vest, gets busy when a feller hits the hay. I like to front the table, with a bowl of mush an' milk, with a pewter spoon of regulation size,—an'I'll wake up in the mornin' a feelin' finer'n silk,—it's healthy, mebbe wealthy,—allers wise.

Then paste this little jingle in the linin' of yer hat, an' take the time to read it, once a day. If you ever feel rebellion in the place yer stomach's at, take my advice, an' watch it fade away!

At that time young Garland had refused to accept the fortune left by his father last year. Now, however, since Lilian has come into his life, he says he will claim the money. He says he will sacrifice even his baby, if it is for the new soul mate.

tion that patrons of those somewhat shady institutions had a right to expect. Everywhere there was a new air of smartness and a loggiaity concerning profits which bespoke a combination of the newness and the juvenile mind. May, 1921, there are myriads of disappointed gentlemen glooming over the fragments of departed fortunes. Alas, there are innumerable Riches weeping for the fiery that lasted but a little while. Everywhere there is complaint of deflation, there is deploing of the reverses which sweep almost suddenly from land's end to land's beginning. And yet there has been no vital loss. The same resources of nature and science that made possible our pitiful dream of prosperity are with us still. What has occurred is an evaporation of artificial values and of magnified self-deceptions. A dollar today buys a day's plain provisions for a considerable family. Two years ago two dollars would not buy as much. Two years ago all of us were in a fever of acquisitiveness and a swoon of splurge. It was not prosperity, but counterfeit riches. Many wage workers were receiving unprecedented wages and spending them with unprecedented folly. Many others were striking for better pay, and separating themselves from life-time jobs. Men imaginatively rich were tring of their old wives, and wives taking their first fling in the sedisant smart set were impatient with their old husbands. It was a time of giddiness and incertainty superinduced by a loosening of the restraints of war and enforced economy. It is mostly over with now. Some are holding on and holding out under the spell of their self-deceptions. Others, facing debts accumulated under the inspiration of the speculative mania, are denouncing everthing except the one thing they should denounce their own shortsightedness. Today the American people, and all other people, are facing a world of actuality. There is no more romance in figures and tokens of wealth. Stern fact is again in the saddle. But fact is not a harsh taskmaster. Fact is an easy boss. Fact butters more parsnips than fancy does. Fact is long-suffering and kind. Fact gives the poor cheaper food and cheaper clothing, even though it does take from the speculative rich the surplus that was theirs in the form of symbols on paper. Come to Texas.—State Press in Dallas News.

Community Standardization of Cotton Wins

Cotton is often judged by the company it keeps. If one or two farmers produce cotton of a good grade and staple while the other farmers in the community produce a lower grade and a shorter staple, the two farmers will more than likely have their crop penalized. This is more apt to be the case if farmers sell their cotton on the street.

A community with a reputation for good staple cotton is beneficial to the farmer who has cotton of less value.

It has been demonstrated that there is a distinct advantage in the community standardization of cotton. If a buyer can go into a community and secure a hundred bales or more of cotton of a uniform grade and staple, it is to his advantage to pay a better price for he can fill an order without scouring the country in order to complete his shipment. There is another advantage in community standardization of cotton. It is found in the fact that to bring a uniformity of staple, good seed must be purchased so farmers gain by having a better cotton for sale.

There are several varieties of cotton all of which meet with requirements of good staple. Some varieties will do better in certain sections than others. Farmers in each community should determine which to adopt and then stick to it.—Farm & Ranch.

Friends:

About two years ago at a show in Bartlesville Oklahoma, I realized that I was nothing but a work ox; a mere human animal. I saw in that picture a multitude of men, women and children and realized that most of them were indeed human animals like myself. We saw a ragged news boy beaten and sent to bed hungry; saw his drunken father spend his "paper" money for whisky; saw that boy REBEL and leave home; saw that run-a-way beggar rise to the head of a great going, successful enterprise; saw his home for boys; we saw more; how easy to distinguish the FRIENDS of the news boy and beggar; a happy; contented; well-to-do lot of friends, and we saw the great majority of that throng of men, women and children remain human animals.

What caused that boy to rebel? A dog may be beaten but it will never leave home. Something greater than animal instinct or animal intelligence caused him to rebel against the curses of poverty, environment and parental abuse; that something carried him on and on; made of him a MAN; a leader amongst men; a benefactor to orphans and friends who left the herd of human animals.

Was it luck? Was he a born genius? Was it a gift of God? A thousand times No. It was that same "something" that made Napoleon, Webster, Washington, Abe Lincoln, Edison, Carnegie; the same thing that makes all great men; the same thing that gives any man a home; the same thing that makes every worthwhile thing in all the universe; the thing that builds all great fortunes; it has made all else and it will make YOU.

What changed me from a work-ox, a mere human animal to the presidency of an oil company in two years? How have I, since last September, built the Willoughby Petroleum Company to one of the large land holding companies of South West Texas? How, friends, have I been able to finance the drilling of an oil well in these HARD TIMES? That "something" which made a success of that bare-foot beggar whispered to me that night in the show; it has since talked to me in confidence; told me "YOU CAN" and I answered "I WILL."

Four months ago you saw us an infant; today you recognize and admit that we are one of the going oil companies of the Great Trans-Pecos country; tomorrow we will be a successful oil producing; profit paying concern and our friends will have left the herd of human animals.

That same something that has carried us thus far is growing as we grow. Every morning and every afternoon this week we have banked money; every week the drill bit has ground its way nearer the oil; every man knows where and how his money is being spent; knows we are going on to a quick success in oil; every friends of ours know that same SOMETHING is giving them a square deal and they know that when I say we expect to pay TEN FOR ONE within a very short time I mean it. "Something" is telling me that $10.00 will very soon return you $100.00; that $100.00 will very soon return, you $1,000.00. If you can close your eyes and hear our drill pounding; hear that "something" called SUCCESS knocking at your inner self it will tell you the same.

THAT "SOMETHING" MADE ALL THE GREAT MEN, ALL THE MILLIONS AND IT WILL MAKE YOU. THAT "SOMETHING" OFFERS YOU OIL, RICHES, SUCCESS. WILL YOU HEED ITS CALL? IT WILL CALL TO YOU; TELL YOU TO "GO ON" BUT IT WILL NOT LINGER. THE TIME TO ACCEPT THAT "SOMETHING" IS NOW. Throw off that yoke of drudgery; want and poverty.

Sincerely yours,

C. H. WILLOUGHBY, Pres.,
The Willoughby Petroleum Company.

MORE FACT THAN FICTION

The world is so full of such a number of spleens some of us are as unhappy as queens. The variety, quantity and tenacity of miseries which the human mind is capable of conjuring up for its own use surpasses the normal imagination. Just now the mind of mankind the world over is fixed upon the low visibility of the economic situation. Men today are feeling poor and obscure who a year or two years ago were flattering themselves that they were rich and conspicuous. The things they thought they had did not make them particularly happy, but the things they now think they have lost are making them morose to the degree of despondency. Two years ago the man who was accustomed to a modest style of living flared out with an unwonted prosperity. He became an expert in motor cars, and discussed learnedly the fine points of motive power, became a connoisseur of caravansaries, and could tell you at a moment's notice where the best hotels of the Nation were located and the charms of the menu and service at the most famous metropolitan restaurants. Men who had been content with comfortable but not ornate homes, who had traveled but little and always with narrow frugality, became authorities on Pullmans and dining-cars and the character of atten-

CONSIDER THE COTTON PLANT

A poet of the long ago imbedded a great lesson to mankind in the words: "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin—that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these." Applying this law of nature in a modern presentation and application to an industry which has come to furnish mankind with sustenance, Mr. J. G. Love, one of the most foremost builders of this great domain, offers in this week's issue of The Enterprise a very instructive study in the possibilities of cotton culture in the Pecos Valley.

This paper believes that cotton will become one of the most prized and remunerative products of the Valley, both in quality and quantity. However, it should be observed that in growing the crop we are dependent upon irrigation methods and a rather limited area under present conditions, and that the grower of the staple must seek quality in the product rather than bulk yield. The so-called dry farming sections of West Texas are great producers of cotton in the bulk, but its staple is short and commands only the lowest market. On the other hand, the Pecos Valley product is of long staple, an unusually good sample, and always commands a premium.

The Pecos country is certain to come into great renown as a cotton producing section for several reasons, chief of which is that while its available acres are limited, the per-acre yield is high, averaging two bales when given proper attention, and the quality of the staple is going to be one of the deciding factors in its distinction, as already noted.

Then, too, it must be remembered that in the major part of the South, which has been devoted to the culture of cotton in the past, the boll worm and the boll weevil has driven the grower completely out of business, and he is now looking for a field where these pests are as yet unknown. This paper believes that this fact alone will be the means of filling the Valley with farmers at a very early date, who will come here to identify themselves with a section which now presents a golden opportunity to the grower who will master the science of irrigation and proper seed selection.

Come to Pecos.

NO "ACHING VOID" HERE

Brenton Root was "editor-in-chief" of this week's Whirlwind and got out a very creditable edition at that. It is an easy matter for most anyone to get out one edition but then, were they compelled to get out another immediately they would be blown up. This week's issue is long on editorial matter of which this paragraph is a fair sample:

The high school seems to be an organization that the literary wits of the town can neither get along with nor without. The high school furnishes an inexhaustible supply of disagreeable criticism for columns that have a vacancy. We don't object because the subject above mentioned is a long way in advance of the usual articles.

Mr. Root says: "The High School furnishes an inexhaustible supply of disagreeable criticism for columns that have a vacancy." The Enterprise is at a loss to know just what he is driving at. If anyone has made any "disagreeable criticism" about the Pecos High School The Enterprise is not aware of it. Why does not Mr. Root come clean and tell who it is and then the public who are ignorant of such publicity can have some redress. He must be alluding to some publication for he said "columns that have a vacancy." The Enterprise would be pleased to meet up with such an animal in Pecos so it could thoroughly denounce same. It is fortunate for the Whirlwind that Mr. Root is "editor-in-chief" for only one week, for the grouch evinced in this and other editorial which will be cared for in another place in this paper would soon guide the Whirlwind hopelessly on the breakers.

Newspaper a Mirror To Town

The Enterprise is in receipt of a communication from San Francisco, Calif., which confirms the contention of the publisher that the best advertisement this town can possibly maintain at home and abroad is a creditably edited and patronized newspaper.

The Enterprise has always contended, in season and out of season that the newspaper worthy of the name was the best spokesman Pecos had, and that it served as a mirror or index to the commercial, industrial and social life of the community as no other medium does.

For this reason, this paper has been rather insistent at times in an appeal to local merchants and other lines of trade, that they reflect their names, their business and their wares in the advertising columns of The Enterprise if the community is to maintain its prestige abroad as a real live, honest-to-goodness, vibrating, pulsating and progressive citizenship. The Enterprise has preached this gospel, not because the publisher might reap a harvest of dollars, per se, but because it knows the value of a good newspaper to the community's interest abroad.

Fortunately for Pecos and the publisher of The Enterprise, the management of this publication has been able to maintain a standard of service of the highest quality without the patronage of a representative number of the business lines represented in the town. True, there have been a very few of the faithful in all lines of business, who appreciate the efforts of the management to carry on, and who have used the advertising columns consistently, realizing that not only were they helping to put the town's best foot forward, but that they were also making a good individual investment.

The lack of patronage of the larger number of Pecos business men has in no wise tended to make the publisher a grouch or to sulk in his tent, for the Pecos public is bound to admit that the paper continues to serve as a medium of publicity second to none on the Pecos slope. There is not a weekly paper between Ft. Worth and El Paso that maintains a better batting average in all of the real points of newspaper excellence, typographically, editorially, quantity and variety of news matter, or that half way equals its circulation, which is the real test of its value to the advertiser.

So desirous has the Enterprise been at times that the paper should show to the world that Pecos has more than one or two stores, one bank, a postoffice and a blacksmith shop, that the publisher has thought of making a proposal to the half hundred other business establishments of the city that we be allowed to display their names and wares in our advertising columns without cost to them, but really it keeps us pretty busy these days meeting the payroll as it is. The Editor believes that nothing is too good for Pecos, and has done his dead level best to sing its praises abroad, but this California fellow's letter attacks us at our most vulnerable point. The Enterprise can't make any kind of a defense for a situation which has given the editor more concern during his labors in Pecos than anything else connected with his work of editing a newspaper.

The Enterprise always believed that Pecos' business people would some day wake up to their opportunities of selling their town abroad through their patronage of the local newspaper, and shall continue to hope that the heaven is working for the accomplishment of such a concert of action.

The Editor of the California inquirer follows:

San Francisco, Calif., July 24, 1922.

Mr. John Hibdon,

Pecos, Texas.

Dear Sir:

I desire to get some information about the country near Pecos. I get one of your papers, but what's the matter with you or the people here? Generally speaking, by looking over the ads, one can judge something of the town, but I do not find any hotel, no grocery, clothing, drug store, doctors, dentists, stationers, stenographers, restaurants, cafes, garages, no picture house, hardware, soft drink place, and but one auto ad, and one tire ad.

You have one bank and six real estate firms, so that as far as the advertisers in your town are concerned, they don't give an outsider much information. Perhaps there are none of the named firms there, if so is there business enough to be had for a man to start one?

I will continue to take your paper for a while to see what I may learn.

Yours truly,
 E. D. BAKER

FUTURE OF PECOS ASSURED

Before the excitement and consequent influx of people in the Pecos oil field, Pecos was living normally and growing normally. With the rush of the land of liquid gold, there came to Pecos many strangers with diverse manners, with but one ambition, however, and that was to obtain riches by seeking the John D. stuff. More than 1500 souls lived in Pecos and her merchants prided themselves on being the center of a section of Texas that would produce some of the finest field, garden and orchard crops in the world.

Then came the frenzy of oil. The strangers came. Pecos was filled with them. They were here today, and gone tomorrow, but always were there others to take their places, and a constant stream of new faces came and went. There were those who caught the fever and indulged in the exciting pastime of oil dealing. There was rushing to and fro by individuals, fortunes were made and lost, but through it all Pecos is sitting tight, holding to the view that while oil will undoubtedly come and make many rich, the real basis for the ultimate and enduring permanence of the city is in the development of its vast farming, horticultural and livestock resources.

During the first oil boom days, building and trading in real estate began on a scale that was unprecedented. Residences and business houses were constructed, stocks were increased, men talked in thousands where they had been wont to speak in hundreds. And then the first flash of excitement wavered, came to a stand, receded, wavered again, then ebbed. And Pecos, staid, substantial, believing in itself, true to its citizenship, remained better, bigger, with a brighter future, with more wealth, and known the nation over.

Interest in oil activity is again on the increase. New drilling contracts are being made. The citizenship is alive to the possibilities of the future. The town bids fair to grow even more rapidly and far more substantially than it did during the oil agitation which has come like a rush of mighty waters. With the gradual increase in oil prospects, rejuvenated business in these lines having to do with such prospects, the old Pecos, gainer in all that men require for happiness and prosperity, awaits development.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

In The Pecos Enterprise. Rates 40 cents an inch or 10 cents a line for readers.

The editor of "The Whirlwind," the local High School publication, mounts a "nuga-horse" in his editorial comments this week, in castigating "one of the local papers" which had the temerity to charge some miscreants with a crude form of vandalism at the Baptist church one night last week during the engagement of Dr. Allen Moore. In the first place The Enterprise objects to being referred to as "one of the local papers," for the publisher has an identity and a personality which assumes all responsibility for utterances through its columns. In the next place, the editor made no reference to the student body of the local public school, and when the article to which exception was taken was written it did not refer to the evening when the pastor of the Baptist church enjoined good behavior upon the occupants of the galleries upon pain of ejection by the peace officers. Reference was made to the engagement of Dr. Moore the evening following, when some boys evidently not yet of the age of "accountability" made a play-house of one of the Sunday School rooms of the building, leaving in their wake some cigarette stubs and other evidences that they were not old enough to be trusted away from home. All of which shows that "The Whirlwind" editor should consider well the power of the printed word before he undertakes to make capital of a report which has a foundation in fact.

The Enterprise knock the High School boys, No Never. The editor has owned and edited newspapers for as many years as the oldest of them and they are the first to find out that the columns of the papers edited by the present owner of The Enterprise had a "vacancy." They were at least the first ones to inform the writer. The Enterprise has had as good and successful newspaper men on its staff as could be secured. The only way the editor sees to get out of this dilemma is to secure the service of one of Pecos' High School boys to show the force how to get out a real newspaper. Who will volunteer for the job? At least one of the bunch should have interest enough in his home town to see that Pecos has a real newspaper which is filled with real news matter, whether he has any regard for the editor or not.

Pecos has as fine lot of High School pupils as can be found in the entire State, taking the number into consideration. They are, as a rule, up to the highest standard in intellect and behavior, but if the best of them are to be judged by the worst of them they will be in a mighty bad fix. Disturbing public worship is a serious thing and if some, which the Whirlwind admits were mostly High School boys, are not brought to answer for their conduct at one of the local churches recently, it will be as the editor sees it, judging from what he has heard from more than one of the gentlemen of affairs in our city, it will be because some one got cold feet.

A combination airplane and automobile was successfully demonstrated recently at Paris. The craft was mounted on four automobile wheels, with four speeds and reverse transmission and with a shaft-drive from a ten-horsepower motor. On the ground it was driven like an automobile. It made an extended flight, and landed in good condition. Its wings were then folded and it was driven into a garage of about the usual width.

BEFORE DAY OF ABRAHAM HEN WAS ABOUT HER BUSINESS

Ever since history began, poultry has been mentioned by historians, and none of them has mentioned the fact that it was a newly acquired part of the established order of things.

Ages before the days of Abraham and Sarah, men kept hens. There seems no exaggeration in the statement that the hen is probably the oldest domestic animal.

Certain it is that Neolithic men, the true founders of European civilization, kept domestic fowls, since remains have been found in the Swiss lake-dwellings, and other Neolithic deposits.

Grecian history recognized the domestic fowl about the middle of the second century. B. C. Jeremiah says of this ever wakeful harbinger of morn, "Man shall rise at crow of cock," and certainly St. Peter had good cause to know the cock whose crowing proved the falseness of his oft-protested fidelity.

In the fourth century the monasteries began to apply themselves to the breeding of poultry. After this it was taken up, quite naturally, by the peasants in Italy, France and Germany, and for a long time were permitted to pay their taxes with poultry and eggs.

Although the domestic fowl was known to the ancient Britons before the Roman invasion, "hen fever" did not break out in Great Britain until about 1845, when the British ambassador to China sent Queen Victoria a beautiful pen of Cochin Chinas. Then people became "Cochin China" mad. Trios from favorite strains were thought to be cheap at $250. The infection spread to this country, and in 1848 the first poultry show was held in New York City. The Brahmas made their appearance two years later, then in 1855-57 the Shanghai craze developed. During this "epidemic" it is claimed that one man cleared $30,000 from the sale of breeding fowls of this variety alone.

Interest in Thoroughbreds. After this, interest in thoroughbred fowls was less spasmodic, and steadily grew, becoming so general in almost all classes of society that much of the mongrel stock was crossed with improved breeds.

At that time there was not a poultry paper in the country, and even in the 80's there was then not more than a dozen, with a combined circulation of less than 30,000.

The Chinese and the Japanese have been expert poultry breeders for many centuries, and the large-sized ducks and fowls of China, and the long-tailed fowls of Japan are examples of the skill of these Oriental people in molding and shaping fowls to suit their fancy.

Eggs have no doubt been an important diet from the earliest ages. Even in darkest Africa the earliest explorers were able to purchase eggs and poultry in the remote market-places of the dark continent.

Although produced in incredibly numbers, the demand is also incredible, as eggs are an absolute necessity in manufacturing, finishing, or purifying innumerable articles, fabrics and liquids, that more or less form a part of our daily wants; and no real substitute for the albumen which they contain has ever been found, it is claimed.

New Breeds.

American "pep," which put into English resolves itself into the slogan that nothing is so good but that it can be made better, is particularly true of our poultrymen. By persistent effort, carrying out the theory that nothing is so good that it cannot be improved, they have created new breeds, and have even changed the standard and characteristics of our staid old timers to suit themselves.

By varied crosses, sorting and classifying the different colors and kinds as a lady does her embroidery silk, they have developed new breeds entirely, until aristocratic individuals in poultrydom sell for as much as a pedigreed cow, horse, Poland China or Duroc.

At the poultry show, black, white, red, brown, gold, faced, barred, ring-streaked and speckled feathered giants announce to the world in clarion tones that in his own estimation he is king.

The smaller, but none the less valuable strains, proclaim that their object in life is to keep the winter egg basket filled.

In each case the breeder is to be congratulated upon his success, and perhaps if he continues breeding, crossing and classifying with as much skill in the future, as he has in the past, he may develop a breed as large as the traditional Moas, which ranged in size from a little larger than a turkey to that of the giant among giants, Dinornis Maximus, which stood at least ten feet high, or the Aepyornis, which produced an egg which would hold the contents of 148 hen's eggs, or 30,000 hummingbird's eggs.

What a corner on omelets for the lucky breeder! Until that time the humble "hen" will continue the useful and profitable appendage of cottage, homestead and farm.

Poets have sung her praises; painters have immortalized her on canvas, and on the lips of children her name is a household word.

FIGHTING PARSON IS NEW LEGION CHAPLAIN

Rev. Earl A. Blackman of Kansas, newly elected chaplain of the National American Legion earned his title of "Fighting Parson" when he offered to do battle with any A. E. F. sky-pilot in France and received no acceptances. Now he holds dances in his church in Kansas, teaches pugilism to Sunday School pupils and says Blue Laws are bunk.

GRIN, BUT DON'T BEAR IT

"He is one of the finest fellows you ever met. Never lets anything worry him. He is losing money every day, but you never know it to look at him and hear him talk. He is no piker. He is a good loser."

I knew the man of whom my friend was speaking. He was, indeed, a good loser. He had had considerable practice in losing. He had been in a number of enterprises, and he had failed in every one of them largely because he met each situation with a smile—and nothing else. But because he trailed through smiling, because he always had a cheerful explanation as to why things did not go right—in short, because he was such a likable sort of fellow—he found money for new enterprises.

A cheerful disposition is all right in its way, but one must know how to handle it, and especially in business. I should not like to hold stock in a company with Pollyanna as president.

The notion seems to have grown up that what is called prosperity is purely a state of mind and can be beguiled into our midst by pretending that it is already here, by keeping a stiff upper lip, by chasing away the glooms, by calling a man a crape hanger who does not agree that everything is lovely, by saying that the worst is past.

A considerable number of concerns that have been kept alive by an oxygen-pumping process are going to be reorganized within the next six months. Likewise there are going to be many reorganizations of personnel. When a factory goes on part time only the best workmen are retained. The selective process applies all the way through business. The weak sisters, be they workers, executives, or corporations, must pass away. They always do pass; nothing has happened to make the world safe for the incompetent. Nothing will happen. We can pray that something may or we can say that something will happen. But it won't. The optimist is just as abnormal as the pessimist. One hopes too much and the other fears too much. Neither faces the facts.

What are facts? There is today plenty of business for those who know how to get it. They are getting it. They are getting it not merely because they are optimistic, not even because they have faith in the U. S. A., but because they have gone out and got the business as individuals, from individuals. They adjusted themselves to the needs of their customers. They took losses, but they were not merry about them.

Business is bad, and it is bound to be bad, it ought to be bad, and it is going to keep on being bad for all those who are standing around waiting for something to happen.

Business begets business. And who is going to get the final reward? The man who has made a scientific adjustment of his business and is working, or the man who says he is manfully standing up and taking his medicine?

Good business is not a "good sport." It does not sit and grin while its money is being taken away. It takes losses to heart and prefers to be known for a while as a bad loser, so that it can later be known as a good winner.

You Can Depend On The Man Who ADVERTISES

Nine times out of ten you will find that the man who advertises is the man who most willingly returns your money if you are not satisfied.

He has too much at stake to risk losing your trade or your confidence. You can depend on him.

He is not in business for today or tomorrow only—but for next year and the years to come. He knows the value of good will.

You get better service at a fairer price than he could ever hope to sell if he did not have the larger volume of business that comes from legitimate advertising and a product that bears out the promise of the printed word.

Don't miss the advertisements in The Enterprise. The live firms of the city are represented in its pages. It is the man who is broad minded in his advertising policy who will be broad minded with you.

Don't Fail to Read the Advertisements

A Drop of Ink Makes Millions Think

AN AMERICAN MAGAZINE reporter once asked John Wrigley, the fifty million gum magnate, what he attributed his huge business success to, and the man replied that it was 90 per cent advertising.

Mr. Wrigley is used as a study among journalism classes as the man who accumulated three fortunes and each time spent them for advertising, after which he started in over again.

It is a well known fact that he spent one million dollars advertising his gum products on Broadway, New York, alone.

THE FUNDAMENTAL FACT —

however, is that after the gum king had spent three fortunes on advertising he did not stop. He let drop a secret that may well be applied to any business, however big, or however small:—

"That advertising is a good deal like feeding a furnace—you have to keep shoveling in the coal in order to keep the fire alive."

A little "ad" dropped here and there in your local paper is really of little value. It is the persistent, weekly and daily call that makes the people sit up and take notice.

WHAT THE ENTERPRISE CAN DO

It can place advertising, based on the inch rate, in 2,300 homes, virtually circulated among 14,500 people for 50 cents. To attempt to reach the same number of people by post card, the only other means of communication, would cost $115.00.

It can readily be seen that there is no argument from an economic standpoint as the cheapest and most effective way of reaching the public.

HUSBAND IN WILL WRITES A POETIC TRIBUTE TO WIFE

Many husbands appreciate their wives during lifetime. But few place their appreciation on record for all the world to read.

William Bedford Glasier, a London lawyer, who died last November, paid a tribute to his wife in his will that constitutes a poem in itself. He left her his entire property, amounting to about one hundred thousand dollars. This is what he wrote:

"I will express in this my will that I fell in love with my wife at first sight. To live with Elise was to live in Elysium. No words could express the devotion my wife showed for me.

"She saved my life and devoted her abilities, her energy and love and affection on my behalf. We have never quarreled, and I have never said an unkind word to her in my life.

"Our life has been together, with the exception of one night spent in a house of rest at the doctor's request after an operation. No words could express the devotion my dear wife showed for me.

"Her love passes comprehension. She was described by a celebrated French actress as 'the faintest little lady London or Paris had produced.'

"She was respected by all with whom she came in contact. All her life she had God's blessing, to which she was entitled.

"United in life, united in death, giving me hope in a happier world than Heaven.

"No better world ever lived. Mrs. Glasier is my dear and my lead husband's tribute.

"I have been the happiest woman in the world, and I am proud to say that I am dead. I must not grieve for his memory will always live with me.

"He never kept a single thought or action from me, for he felt it was the greatest of a husband's privilege to tell everything to his wife. We never had the slightest dispute.

"I certainly did my best, but my gratitude was sufficient reward."

CARING FOR FARM MANURES

On farms where there are live stock—and most farms should have livestock—it is possible to eliminate much of the fertilizer bill. For the manure from the animals, if taken care of, is rich in the elements which make plants grow and produce food for man and beast.

Different farmers have different ways and means of caring for their barnyard manures, but suffice it to say, do not let it be run exposed to the rain or sun. If possible, keep it piled up in order to prevent the escape of gases which are rich in plant food, as often as practicable, haul the manure to the field, scatter and plow it deep under. However, if manure is to be plowed under, the plowing of crops on that land should not be too long delayed, because water from rains cause much of the soluble plant food to leech out if there is no available, growing crop to take up this plant food.

Farm manures may be reinforced by adding raw phosphate or "float." Lime should never be mixed with manure, since a chemical reaction takes place when these two are mixed and much substance passes off in the form of gases.

Thousands and millions go to waste on American farms every year because farmers fail to properly take care of the animal manures of their farms. They fail to realize, it seems, that herein lies one of the greatest assets of their farms.—Florida Agricultural News Service.

A carload of chickens was shipped recently by the Tom Green County Farm Bureau from San Angelo, Texas, to Sweetwater. The car contained 5700 chickens, and brought the farmers around $5000. In December this Farm Bureau sold a carload of turkeys, numbering 1800 birds, for approximately $7000.

IN LINE FOR FEDERAL AID FOR ROADS IN REEVES COUNTY

The Pecos, Balbocha and Fort Davis road, known as the Mate Park Road, has been officially designated for State and Federal aid by the State Highway Commission, according to Representative W. W. Stevens, who has returned from a trip to Austin, where he placed the request before the commission.

The decision of the board will permit the start of work on the Old Spanish Trail route through Reeves county, which was halted because it was discovered that a four-mile stretch of the road had not been designated for Federal aid under the 7 per cent plan now in operation.

It will also permit the construction of a hard road from Pecos to Saragosa to connect with the Old Spanish Trail and also the completion of a hard road through the Limpia Canyon region in Jeff Davis county.

This road leads into the heart of the Davis Mountain country, which the Legislature is considering for conversion into a State Park in order to preserve the wild scenery and the wild animal life.

City Man Dreams of Ideal Farm

Very seldom does their imagination run to a large farm. To them, the small farm is best. They have in mind a few good cows with an abundance of milk, cream and butter; a small orchard containing every fruit which can be grown under the conditions which they have prepared; plenty of berries of all kinds and vegetables in abundance; and in addition they have their flock of chickens, a few pigs and other freshets. When they dream of the nearby "city" worker, who these are not many farms of the kind that they are dreaming of.

The city man is not to be criticized for dreaming of an ideal home in the country any more than the farmer who hopes to see the time when he can move to town. Neither fully or honestly appreciate the problems and worries of the other.

Yet, has the city man cultured an impossible? There are farms of that kind just as there are farms in the city who are busy and congested streets. There should be more farms of the character described. Many a farmer would be letter off if he would devote his attention to the intense cultivation of forty acres instead of trying to operate 200 without sufficient labor, power or machinery. Large farms have kept many a farmer in poverty and too rapid expansion and lack of working capital is responsible for more bankruptcies than any other cause.

When our greed for land subsides, when we learn to diversify intelligently and produce our own living at home; when we learn that important than increased acreage, there will be more of these ideal country homes in the Southwest. Our dreams of a prosperous, contented and home loving rural population will have come true.

PASSING THE BUCK

The reason why every home hasn't a garden isn't because people are unaware that gardens are desirable for the things they produce, but because the making of a garden involves work, and darned be he who adds hoe and rake to the instruments of torture to which many householders already are subjected. It ought to be a pleasure for any healthy man to raise a garden. Yet the number of healthy men who would rather work a golf club in the blazing sunshine, or maneuver an automobile on a dusty road, or sit on a shady porch and read trash, far surpasses the number who would be glad to make a garden if they had elbow room. The excuses a man can find for not making a garden are equalled only by the reasons he can express for not keeping his wife fed up on chocolate bonbons.

The Prince of Wales last year made his debut as a poultry breeder and exhibitor by exhibiting Rhode Island Reds.

AT THE BAPTIST CHURCH

Sunday February 5, 1922 There will be all regular services at the Baptist church Sunday. The Superintendent is to tell us the requirement for the "Standard of Excellence" just acquired by our Sunday School.

Don't forget the story telling for small children of parents remaining for the morning service. Eighteen were present last Sunday and the experiment proved a great success. This is a great opportunity for mothers who have the little ones to contend with. They can hear the sermon while their children are educationally entertained.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE CARD TABLE

This will be the subject of the pastor's talk at the Methodist church Sunday evening, February 5, at 7:30 o'clock.

Those who play cards are especially invited to come, and I give my word for it that God being my helper only kindness and tenderness will characterize the hour. I've never been able to do any good by the abusive route. The spirit of Galatians, sixth chapter and first verse is my desire. Of course I shall take the position that the card-table is wrong for Christians, and every card-playing church member owes it to himself or should it be herself to hear the message on this subject.

Come, and may God help me and you to make the most of this occasion.

The subject in the morning will be "The Holy Spirit and the Christian Life," second installment.

As always so now most emphatically the church must pray if God's Kingdom is to come as it should. Therefore I exhort that men pray everywhere lifting up holy hands without wrath and doubting.

L. H. THURSTON, Pastor.

Officers Capture Still 3 Miles From Pecos

A fairly well equipped manufacturing and dispensing plant of "white mule" was yesterday seized at the Jim Martin residence, three and one-half miles northwest of Pecos, by Sheriff E. B. Kiser, Deputy U. S. Marshal Elmer Johnson, and B. W. Holzman, prohibition enforcement officer, of El Paso. The officers are said to have located the plant through the information given by one of its male customers, who confided to his wife the whereabouts of the supply, the wife in turn giving the information to these authorities.

Jim Martin, occupant of the premises, was arrested and brought to Pecos. He was today arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Carroll, who bound him over to the Federal grand jury with bail at $750.

The officers state that the seizure included an eight-gallon capacity still, and the premises disclosed a barn well equipped for the manufacture of the "joy-water." It is said that the supply of mash on the place had been emptied in a well on the place when the owner discovered that he was apprehended in his occupation, and that the supply of beverage had evidently been poured into a hole dug for the purpose. The barn is said to have been designed with a trap door which would permit of concealment of the barrels of mash underground.

In this connection, Sheriff Kiser stated to a reporter of The Enterprise that he has this week seized two barrels of mash in the Mexican settlement at Patrole, some 10 miles north of Pecos. He has had the place under surveillance for some time, but was not able to locate the still. After watching the mash for three days, no one appeared to denote its ownership, so the sheriff confiscated it.

West Needs More And Better Cows

James R. Howard, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, recently said:

"Wisconsin, through its dairy industry, gives its farmers a very nearly constant level of income throughout the year with only slight reductions through the not summer months."

Minnesota, bordering Wisconsin on the west, and formerly a grain farmer's paradise, is now also becoming a great dairy state. The farmers of Minnesota are taking pattern after their Wisconsin neighbors and are ambitious to rank the Badger State in dairy products. One crop farming in Minnesota paid just so long as the soil was new cultivation, but a few years' cropping began to result in poorer yields and the wise farmers began to produce good dairy animals.

They have been able to reduce their acreage per farm, are busier in their soil and enjoy a regular monthly income, whereas, in the old grain farming days, they borrowed money to put in their crop, sold it at harvest time and paid the bank if the crop was good and pressed tight, and if not, asked for an extension of time. The methods used were just about the same as those in vogue with our crop farmers in the South.

The Southwest is without the great city markets for products enjoyed by the farmers in the Great Lake region, but even so, our own demands for butter, cheese and milk are far greater than our Southwest production. Eighty per cent of the butter consumed in our cities in Texas is made outside of the State, while great quantities of condensed milk consumed comes from Wisconsin, Ohio and New York. If the Southwest was supplying its own demand for dairy products we would be milking a million more cows than we are now credited with. If the Southwest consumed dairy products in quantities suggested by our leading health advocates, that number could be doubled.

The consumption of dairy products per capita is rapidly increasing. Educational campaigns have doubled consumption in some cities. In the Southwest, excluding three or four large cities, but comparatively small quantities of milk and cheese find their way to the family table. The opportunity for increasing the demand for milk, butter and cheese should afford encouragement to those interested in dairying or those who contemplate becoming interested in that industry. Better cows and more of them is one of the important needs of Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana and New Mexico.

Herding sheep by airplane was the experience of an Australian explorer. During the trip over North Queensland the airman was offered the task of rounding up two large scattered flocks of sheep. He swept his plane around the outskirts of the flock and collecting all the stragglers, drove them all together toward the paddock. The job was done quickly and without any great effort.

AN ETERNAL EXAMPLE

From the Washington Star: So long as dar's cheatin' in a crap game." Uncle Eben, "it's gwinter be hard to put a complete stop to fightin'."

Prepare Now For Early Honey Flow

Now is a good time to prepare for a good honey flow next spring. All colonies should be gone over carefully to determine the amount of store in the hive for it is necessary that the bees have plenty of food in order to "strengthen up" by the time the early flowers begin blooming.

If there are not more than five or ten pounds of stores in the hive, then the bees should be fed a thick syrup consisting of two parts of sugar to one of water.

If colonies have been well housed and fed in the fall, there will be no occasion for feeding this spring.

It may happen that spring will open up warm, suddenly, with no natural pollen available. This warm weather may last several days and during this time brood-rearing will start up rapidly; and if there is no pollen in the hives, the bees will be hunting around in the barns and stables and chicken coops for bran or chopped feed. Consequently, it is necessary at such times to give artificial pollen. Traps should be set out in sunny places, under cover if possible, containing a few quarts of rye or pea flour—Florida Agricultural News.

ECONOMY IN PRODUCTION

Economy in production does not mean neglect of crop. It does mean the exercise of good judgment in the selection of the field, in the preparation of the seed bed, in seed selection, in cultivation and in gathering the crop. It is possible for a farmer to spend too much time and too much labor on a crop, but this mistake is seldom made. More often production cost is increased by the cultivation of too large an acreage and the consequent neglect of the essentials necessary to large acre yields. The man who devotes time to proper plowing and harrowing, and who spends money for good seed and fertilizer, more often has a lower production cost than the man who hurries with his plowing, who plants any kind of seed at hand and who lets nature take its course without spending a dollar to help her along.

Conditions which make possible a large acre yield are the same as help make quality of product, and the larger the yield and the better the quality, the lower the cost of production. This rule is general. It is proven by the exceptions to the Field & Farm.

FINANCIAL REVIEW

Prepared For The Enterprise By The First National Bank In St. Louis.

Railroad operating revenues in 1921 stood at $5,625,000,000. This was a decline of $600,000,000 or 9.6 per cent from 1920, but was some $441,000,000 greater than in 1919. With the exception of 1920, railroad revenues in 1921 were the greatest in American railway history. In comparing the revenues of 1921 with those of 1920, it must be remembered that the present increased level of rates was in effect during the whole of 1921, while in 1920 it was effective only from August 26, or a little more than four months. This fact emphasizes the decline in revenues of 1921. It is estimated that had the traffic of 1921 been maintained at the level of 1920, the operating revenues would have been greater than in 1920 by some $700,000,000 instead of being $600,000,000 less. Freight revenues declined $385,000,000 or 9 per cent in 1921, while passenger revenue fell off about $104,000,000 or about 8 per cent. The decline of $55,000,000 in mail revenue is more than accounted for by the fact that this revenue in 1920 was inflated by some $60,000,000 of back mail pay, actually earned in earlier years, but was not taken into account in 1920. Deducting this inflation in 1920, the mail revenue for 1921 was slightly greater than for 1920. Express revenue declined $38,000,000 or about 26 per cent.

SOME PRICE REDUCTIONS

Retailers are frequently charged with not reducing prices as fast as they should. True some prices are still high. But manufacturers in many lines say they have not been able to effect reductions in the cost of production. In our own case, we have reduced prices just as fast as the manufacturers' prices are reduced regardless of the cost of stock on hand. As a result most lines are quite a little under last year's figures. The following comparisons between prices a year ago and today's prices on 25 articles (and there are many others) show a decided decline.

Table with 3 columns: Item, War Price, Today's Price. Includes items like Number 2 Galvanize Tubs, 1 inch 13-foot Team Lines, 30x3 1/2 inch Kelly Tires, etc.

Your $118.10 will buy as many goods as $173.70 did then or in other words it is worth $55.60 more now than a year ago and yet some people say that prices have not declined.

We are doing our part, selling dependable goods at lowest prices.
