LEGISLATURE ADJOURNS; NEFF MAY CALL SPECIAL SESSION

After being in session 61 days, the regular session of the Thirty-seventh legislature has adjourned sine die. The governor has intimated that some time during the summer it would be called again in special session.

Before final adjournment both branches of the legislature adopted the free conference committee report on the house joint resolution proposing an amendment to the constitution to increase the salaries of the governor to $8000 a year, the attorney general to $7500, safe treasurer, controller and secretary of state to $5000 each, members of the legislature to $10 per day, for regular sessions of 120 days' duration, and $5 per day thereafter, and $10 per day for special sessions.

The amendment will be submitted to a vote of the people on the fourthaturday in July.

ST. GEORGE HOTEL STRUCK BY LIGHTNING—LITTLE DAMAGE

Wednesday's shower, accompanied by thunder and lightning, lasted but about 10 minutes, but sufficient rain fell to spread out over the streets in running streams. A little hail accompanied the shower.

During the height of the down-pour a bolt of lightning struck the St. George hotel, doing, however, very little damage. It appeared that the bolt was shattered just before striking and passed mostly along the many wires nearby.

T. C. Mitchell reports that he got an excellent supply of water, filling all his tanks.

One of the best rains in years fell in the Alamita country. The precipitation was good in the Valentine country. Captain Gillett, the report of the weather was visited with a splendid shower.

Thirty-Seventh Adjourns

After a session of 61 days the Thirty-seventh legislature adjourned sine die. The governor has intimated that "some time during the summer months" there would be a called session. The governor is not pleased with the action of that body in rejecting or failing to pass several bills recommended by him and threatens to go before the people with them.

Ex-Representative

M. M. McFarland, formerly representative from this district, still claims his home at Alpine. He is now engaged in the oil game in Dallas, and is doing well. When in the legislature he was one of the principal workers who finally succeeded in having the Sul Ross state normal located at Alpine.

D. L. James

George and Kehoe Shannon left Thursday for the Hot Springs in Colburn county, where they go to look after their uncle, Dave James, who is reported very ill. Dave James is the ex-sheriff of Jeff Davis county and a noted peace officer in the early days of the Big Bend.

Creating Interest

Alpine and Marfa Methodist Sunday school contest is creating much interest in both schools. Last Sunday Marfa had two over their average, with eight new members, and Alpine had 10 over its average.—Alpine Avalanche.

John Riordan Pytcher

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Frances L. Pytcher of El Paso, a son, 91-2 pounds. The many friends of Mrs. Pytcher, nee Catherine Riordan, and especially the New Era, extends congratulations and well wishes for the health and happiness of John Riordan.

Workers' Conference

Rev. C. S. Harrison and quite a delegation of his church people left for Alpine Friday evening for the monthly workers' conference that meets with the Alpine Baptist church Saturday, March 19.

All gentlemen with incomes are able to tell congress exactly the class of incomes that ought to be exempted from taxation.—New York World.

Chautauqua Presents Lieurance's Little Symphony

Thurlow Lieurance, Noted American Composer and Authority on Indian Music, Creates and Coaches an Organization Unique in the World of Good Music

Thurlow Lieurance, the noted American composer, is sending a company of his own creating and coaching to the Ellison-White Chautauquas this year. They will appear here on the closing day, presenting a full concert at night. Lieurance's Little Symphony is an all-string combination, four violins, two cellos and a pianist, offering representative sketches from standard symphonies and leading operas, together with a wide repertoire of Mr. Lieurance's own compositions, including "By the Waters of Minnetonka." The organization is one of real artists who have caught the spirit of their noted organizer, implicitly believing that nothing short of the best in music can completely satisfy the craving of the real American musical soul.

Resolutions

To the Worshipful Master, Wardens and Brethren, Marfa Lodge, A. F. & A. M., Marfa, Texas.

We, your committee, appointed to draft resolutions on the death of Brother A. O. Hubbard, beg to submit the following:

Whereas, it has pleased our Father to remove our beloved brother and co-worker, A. O. Hubbard, from this world and state of this imperfect existence to that "house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens," and

Whereas, for more than 40 years he has been a "true and faithful brother" Mason, and during 18 years of that time he was an active and helpful member of Marfa lodge, for which this lodge signally honored him by voting to him a life membership therein, and

Whereas, our deceased brother never, by act or deed, cast the semblance of a cloud upon the good name of our order, but during the long term of his membership he was ever jealous of its honor and prosperity, and

Whereas, he was always willing and ready, by precept and example, to assist his brethren, and always met them with a happy smile and a word of good cheer.

Therefore, be it resolved by Marfa Lodge No. 596, A. F. & A. M., first, that in the death of brother Hubbard this lodge and the Masonic fraternity generally has lost one of its most worthy and valuable members.

Second: That every member of our order has lost a true friend and brother on whom we could lean in time of trouble and whom we all shall greatly miss.

Third: That it is the sense of this lodge that not only our own order but the world all around was made richer by the life and example of brother Hubbard, and it is made poorer by his departure.

Fourth: That we greatly loved him while among us and since he is gone we shall always revere and honor his memory; that our deepest sympathy goes out to the wife of our deceased brother in her dark hour of sorrow and bereavement.

Fifth: That a copy of these resolutions be spread on our minutes, a copy furnished the press and copies furnished the family of our deceased brother.

Fraternally submitted,

C. E. MEAD,

H. M. FENNELL,

F. C. MELLARD,

Committee.

Property taken in prohibition raids in five states last year netted the government over $1,000,000, and it cost only $7,000,000 to capture it.—Washington Post.

Corporal Newman transferred to Del Rio, Texas, and Corporal Littlejohn from Del Rio to replace him as lineman.

Supply Troop

Master Sergeant Henry Traxler returned from S. D. at Sanderson, Texas, and departed for the city of El Paso, Texas, the same day, so you see that we did not get a chance to ask Henry how he enjoyed his furlough.

Private Special Fifth Class Marf T. Kuykendal returned with Master Sergeant Traxler and Red tells us that Sergeant Traxler sure is some field cook and knows how to rustle the cats.

Private Special Fifth Class Pierce is now off the sick, lame and lazy report, and says that he is going to do duty for a week or so this time.

Troop A

Troop A now leads the basketball schedule with still a score of 1000 and we hope they will keep it up till the season is over.

Troop C

Sergeant Collins is getting the baseball team in trim and expects to cop the title this season. The team has all new equipment, thanks to our troop commander.

Troop E

The basketball game between Troop E and Troop I, last Saturday, resulted in a victory for Troop I, with a score of 7 to 17.

Troop F

Our basketball team played a very good game last Sunday, but the whistle was always blown just as luck started our way. The baseball players have been warming up, the pitcher is getting along so well that the troop commander issued an order that no baseball playing is permitted near the barracks.

Troop G

Corporal Gladly has been appointed chief of the troop fire department. Sergeant Johnson says that he will stay in the hospital as long as they serve hard liquor twice a day.

Sergeant Albert Johnson, troop first sergeant of this troop, has recently returned to the regiment, after an absence of two years. During his absence he has been a sergeant instructor with the national guard. Sergeant William Henry Schofield has gone to El Paso, Texas, as an orderly to a prisoner. His most fervent desire is to see the zoo. We have had another addition to the strength of the troop in the shape of five sons and daughters of Boliver, the troop mascot.

Troop H

Sergeant Wills has returned from New York city, where he spent a 30-day furlough. Outside of being a little hsy at the elevated cars he had a good time. He said that the statue of liberty still looked the same and was expecting a lot of her boys to pay her a visit this summer. Sergeant Harris just returned from El Paso, where he spent four days the past week. He says it is the best little town in the U. S. A. We believe him, as one of us have been there. Private First Class Urbanski left last week for Newark, N. J., on a 30-day furlough.

Troop K

Private McCasland returned from Camp Travis, Texas, where he spent several months at the E. & R. school.

Private Odion, who copped the first prize for dancing while away at San Antonio, was unable to get a dance at the Service Club last Saturday. Our first sergeant, who has been under the weather for the past couple of weeks, is again able to growl.

CONSOLIDATION EFFECTED BY CATTLEMEN'S ASSOCIATIONS

San Antonio, March 14.—Merging of the Cattle Raisers' Association of Texas and the Panhandle and Southwestern Cattle Raisers' Association has been effected. The consolidation was effected by the executive committee meeting preceding the opening of the forty-fifth annual convention, which will start Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock for a three-day session.

A committee of seven to meet with a similar committee from the Panhandle association and discuss plans for the consolidation was appointed by the Texa Cattle Raisers Association's executive committee.

Luke Brite, ex-president of the Panhandle and Southwestern, who arrived here Monday morning to attend the convention, announced that a committee of five has already been appointed by that association to meet with the cattlemen. Lucas C. Brite, retiring president, J. H. Nations, of El Paso, Henry Reynolds, of Marfa, W. P. Fisher, of Marfa, E. W. McKenzie, of El Paso were the members of the Panhandle association committee.

San Antonio, March 17.—The Cattle Raisers and the Panhandle associations have been merged and hereafter will be known as the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association. The Cattle Raisers claim to have had about 7,000 members, reaching into seven states, and the Panhandle about 6,000 members. The new association will be and is now the strongest cattle association in the United States. The San Antonio Express says editorially in part as follows:

President Turney's impression of the bigness and power of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers' Association, from the very hour of the merger, must be the universal impression.

"But it is of infinitely more consequence that his appeal for the right use of this bigness and power become promptly the idea and the rule of conduct of every livestock-producer belonging to and served by the association.

"The united front" he urges, for the imperative protection and even the salvation of this basic industry, alone can make the association worth while—as great in deeds and beneficial results as in its membership, in the extent of production represented thereby, in the territory covered, and in "jurisdiction."

San Antonio indeed is honored and famed in being the birthplace of the greatest cattle raisers' organization in the world."

Albert Oscar Hubbard

A. O. Hubbard, for a number of years a prominent citizen of Presidio county, on March 3, 1921, at San Antonio, Texas, passed quietly to rest. He was born in Malone, N. Y., March 4, 1848. When 21 years of age he moved to Fairview, Dakota (this was before the division of the state); where he worked for the C. M. & St. P. Railway Company as telegraph operator. He also lived at Yankton, Dakota, where he engaged in farming and taught school for a while. During this time he was sent to the legislature, where he took a prominent part in political affairs of the state. Afterward, he went back to work for the C. M. & St. P. railroad, acting as agent and operator both at Akron, Iowa, and Vermillion, Dakota. From Vermillion he went to Dryden, Texas, his first appearance in Texas with the S. P. system; from there he was transferred to Clint, Texas, where he remained for 14 years. After the expiration of his stay at Clint, he came to Marfa as agent, which responsible position he held for 16 years, when he was retired from the company on a pension. At Akron, Iowa, Jan. 31, 1881, he was married to Miss Eda Jenkins. He is survived by his wife and one daughter, Mrs. Eda Winters of Clemeneau, Arizona, and five grandchildren.

For more than 40 years he has been a member of the Masonic order, being at the time of his death a member of the Marfa lodge and chapter, also of the El Paso consistory and shrine. He was at the time of his decease a member of St. Paul's Episcopal church at Marfa, also for years was a vestryman of that church.

About the time of his retirement from the railroad service he became greatly troubled with his eyes. Several months ago, with his devoted wife, went to New Orleans, where a cataract was successfully removed from one eye, and on return to their home in Marfa they stopped with Judge W. W. Bogel in San Antonio, where they were visiting their daughter-in-law, Mrs. Harry Hubbard, a daughter of Judge Bogel, and their two grandchildren. While there on Thursday, the day before his birthday, he was suddenly stricken down, the result of an old ailment, and thus fell asleep. As a representative of the railroad he was ever faithful, competent and honest; as a citizen he was quiet, law-abiding and well posted on current affairs, both in the city, state and nation. He was always a Republican of the old school, yet was never offensive in presenting his views on public questions and his party's policies, according to every one the right to his particular views. As a husband and father he was ever kind and affectionate, and to those of his loved ones left behind he leaves the heritage of a stainless name, an impeccable character and the blessed memory:

"When the stream Which overflowed the soul has passed away, A consciousness remains that it had left.

Deposited upon the silent shore Of memory, images and precious thoughts, That shall not die and cannot be destroyed."

Beatrice Lucile

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Tedford died March 11, aged 12 days, and was buried March 12 in the Marfa cemetery. Short services at the home and at the grave were conducted by J. S. Stockard of the Christian church.

A Fine Preacher

John D. Cowdan and wife left Monday for Del Rio and Uvalde, where they expect to visit for a few days before leaving for their home in Nashville, Tenn. Brother Cowdan is a splendid Christian minister and has written several notable books. His sermon at the Christian church last Sunday evening was a great presentation from the text: "What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, and to love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God?"

It is now discovered, according to press reports from Washington that the nation is ruled by an "inner circle," a kind of potential assistant government, which has gathered at the seat of government and is dictating to the law makers of our government.

COMPROMISE ON LEAGUE

It is now believed that the many problems of adjustment following the great war will eventually force Harding to accept in general the plan of the league of nations. There will probably be a compromise of some kind. A Washington writer says:

"The reparations dispute not only 'hung up' American peace with Germany, but arrested any concrete steps in the direction of 'world association.' The president, Secretary Hughes and senate leaders like Lodge and Knox, are agreed there is no virtue in consulting European governments while they are occupied with a 'new war' with the Germans. Any communications of their own views European powers may care to make—such as those France has just submitted in Washington—will be received and filed for future reference. There will be no action upon them for some time. The Harding administration wants as clean a European slate as possible, upon which to inscribe its ideas for 'world association.'

"It would be a rash prophet, one is authoritatively assured, who would say Harding irrevocably has turned his back on the league of nations. His secretary of state, Charles E. Hughes, is not an irreconcilable bitter-ender. The man named incessantly as his negotiator-in-chief with Europe, when the time comes—Elihu Root, does not share the Borah-Johnson view of the "utter unacceptability" of the Versailles covenant. Pro-league Republican leaders did not rejoice in the appointment of Mr. Hughes to the secretaryship of state without cause. From one of the most renowned of them this week word has come to Washington 'not to jump to the conclusion Charles E. Hughes will submit blindly to the league killers on Capitol hill.'"

HIGH PRICES

At the national shippers' conference held in Chicago, called with the view of bringing about a reduction of railroad rates, the consensus of the different speakers' views on high prices was to the effect that the railroads were responsible for the high prices now prevailing.

Speakers said "cabbage selling in Chicago for 7 cents per pound is sold for $3.50 a ton in Texas," and "oranges are rotting in California under signs reading: 'Too cheap to sell, help yourself.'"

The conference, representing farmers, manufacturers, miners and others, rejected a proposal that a permanent organization be formed to be known as the National Organization of Shippers and Consumers, but indicated resolutions of protest would be sent to congress and to the railway executives.

E. H. Cunningham, representing the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation, declared: "Farmers are helpless and agriculture is flat on its back in the gutter."

Iowa corn, he said, costs the farmer 22 cents a bushel to Chicago, where he gets 38 cents, notwithstanding that it costs 93 cents a bushel to produce.

Judge S. H. Cowan of Fort Worth, Texas, representing livestock shippers, said:

"The railroads must take their losses to get business started. Abolish the increased rates and business will boom."

Luther Walter, Chicago, railroad attorney, recommended abolishment of the system of agreements regarding railroad labor.

Glenn Plumb, author of the Plumb plan, said 23 officials of the Pennsylvania railroad received 100 percent more in salaries than the 23 highest government officials, including the president.

After the News

The editor of the Tipine Avalanche is in earnest about gathering the news for his live and interesting paper. He says:

"Has any one died, had a fire, eloped with his neighbor's wife, found a baby, been divorced, had a party or going to have one, sold a farm or ranch, left town between two sons or otherwise, had twins or the colic, sold a cow, lost a dog, painted his house or built an addition to his garage, lost an auto, stolen a sheep, committed suicide or murder, fallen from an airplane or into a legacy—tell the Avalanche about it."

Baptist Church

Our Sunday school reached a high mark last Sunday. Growth has been steady for weeks. Let all of our people continue their present interest in the Sunday school and we will soon have a great work.

There will be preaching service at 11 a. m. and 7:15 p. m. Sunday.

The B. Y. P. U. meets at 6:30 p. m. We give a rousing good welcome to all who attend our service.

OUR EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM AND SOME OF ITS PROBLEMS

(Contributed to The New Era)

In an address to the sick and wounded men at Walter Reed hospital, General Pershing made the statement that "as a result of the draft we found that 30-odd per cent of the young men of the country, though physically perfect, were illiterate," and he added: "To me the thought is shocking that there should be in certain localities such neglect that one-third of our young men cannot read and write." The general branded it as "a crime, a shame and a disgrace upon our esculcheon," and urged upon his hearers that when they return home they use such influence as they may have to work for the cause of education.

The accuracy of General Pershing's statement cannot be doubted, since his facts were obtained from the draft records. But they will prove most surprising—and "shocking"—to intelligent people, who will be as distressed as is the commander-in-chief of the expeditionary forces.

Throughout this "land of the free and home of the brave," scattered here and there throughout the rural districts, one can find school houses with the windows boarded in and the doors locked. Some of them have not served the purposes for which they were constructed for several years. The children in many of these communities have had no opportunity to obtain even the rudiments of an education. In other instances, children have been obliged to travel several miles to attend overcrowded and undermanned schools in neighboring villages.

Why are these schools locked and barred?

Why do children have to travel in "barges" for several miles to attend school in a neighboring district when their own schools are silent and deserted?

The one outstanding reason is the fact that there are not enough teachers to man all the schools.

Thousands of them have left the teaching profession and entered the business world, for the simple reason that the pay received for teaching the children of America was not sufficient to meet their expenses. Other fields offered far greater opportunities in financial and other ways.

Under the circumstances, they undoubtedly have been justified in entering other lines of endeavor.

The general public, which includes every citizen, man and woman, in the United States, have been their employers while they taught the public schools. The teachers, in the majority of cases, have never had an organization worthy of the name. They have been obliged to accept what the public, through its officials, offered them, or get out. And thousands of them "got." The teachers, though it is vital to their welfare, have failed to observe that the present-day trend in all lines is toward organization for the protection of mutual interests and welfare. If they have observed, they have failed to act. Some (we believe few) have failed to organize because they believed their profession should not be connected with the American Federation of Labor; that association with the organized toilers of America would contaminate and demean their calling. Such people are mere snobs. Why the great majority have not organized to protect their rights to decent compensation we do not know. If what we believe to be the minority reason were the attitude of the teaching profession as a whole, the fact still remains that the doctors, the lawyers, the merchants, the cattlemen, the farmers, the dentists, and practically every professional and business man is a member of a local, county or national organization—it matters not what cognomen they affix to the particular name, the principles of unionism and mutual benefit are the actual reasons for its existence. In short, they all belong to unions.

The doctors usually have a county organization. At its meetings, the amount of fees to be charged patients are, discussed and decided upon. We refer to "minimum fees." The members may charge more—if they can get it—but they must not charge less. If a patient is unable to pay the minimum fee per visit, in most associations the doctors are bound by their organization to consider it a charity case. They must not cut prices; they must not accept a case if another doctor has been treating that patient, until the first doctor has been notified that his services are no longer desired; the doctor must not advertise. He is allowed to publish a "card" in a newspaper, but he must not print "display" advertisements. The doctors say that when they obey these rules, written and unwritten, they are "conforming to the ethics of the profession." They are in fact practicing, under another name, principles of unionism.

So, after all, those teachers who feel "above" the working people of America may remain—when they organize—on a par with the professional and business "classes."

In scattered localities throughout the United States the teachers have already formed organizations, and have obtained higher remuneration for their labor. We are informed that some of them have adopted rules which do not recognize the right to strike. This is as it should be, for in most instances a fair award will be made through the process of arbitration. This statement is not mere guesswork, for in some fifteen years previous to the last year of the war, the International Typographical Union had no strikes in its jurisdiction, which includes all of the United States and Canada. Every dispute was settled by arbitration. When it is remembered that every daily newspaper in the United States and Canada, with possibly a half-dozen exceptions, is printed under union conditions, as is almost every magazine of national circulation, besides thousands of "job" offices, comment is unnecessary.

This union has a membership of between 50,000 and 60,000 men and women. Each member pays dues of 2 per cent of his earnings to support the various departments of his organization. If a member dies, his family receives a mortuary of about $500. If he reaches the age of 60 years, and has been a continuous member for the previous 20 years, he receives a pension of around $35 per month for the balance of his life.

When the scale of a local union, usually signed for one year, expires, a committee of employees (we have no "walking delegates") endeavors to reach a settlement with the employers, individually or through their association (union). If unable to do so, they usually request that the International officers send a representative to confer with them. They have the privilege of requesting permission from the International officers to strike, but except in extraordinary circumstance, it is usually refused. Then, all else failing to bring about a settlement, the local union selects two men to represent them, the employers select two other men, and these four choose a fifth. Whatever award is made by this body is binding on the local union. Under no circumstances may a local union strike without permission from the International executive committee at Indianapolis.

Tuberculosis is a curse of the printing industry. When a man is stricken with the dread "white plague" his local union make application for his admittance into the Typographical Union Home in Colorado Springs. His expenses are paid to Colorado; however long he may remain at the home he receives a reasonable monthly allowance for spending money for tobacco, theater admissions or whatever purpose he may wish.

The home buildings occupy a site on the outskirts of Colorado Springs which is many acres in extent. The main buildings are, roughly, about five times as large as the Marfa courthouse. A hospital occupies the right wing of the main building, and a physician is on call at all times, while, resident trained nurses care for the patients. To the south of the main buildings numbers of octagonal tent houses are located for the use of tubercular patients. The tents are steamheated, and are furnished with cot, chairs, bureau, etc. In the floor are small elongated shutters, perhaps two inches wide and two feet long, which may be opened or shut as the patient may wish, to regulate the flow of fresh air through the tent. At the top of the conical roof is another ventilator which provides for the exit of impure air. Beside the cot, within easy reach of the patient's finger, is a button which, in case of night emergency (he may push, ringing a bell in the hospital and lighting a red light on the top of his tent so that the night nurse may know where she is needed).

Southeast from the main buildings is the power house, laundry, etc. In this building the electric current is generated for lighting the various buildings and tents, and steam from the boilers is carried into the buildings for heating purposes. A little to the north and east is the dairy barn with a large herd of pure-bred jerseys, and also the poultry yard. All milk and eggs used by the patients come direct from the Home farm.

The main building contains a dormitory, an immense library, with thousands of volumes of classics, fiction, philosophy, religion, and every subject under the sun. Printers are voracious readers, and quantities of new books are added to the library yearly both by purchase and bequests. The climate of Colorado Springs is much like that of Marfa except that the wind seldom blows there as it does here. The sun shines almost continuously the year around there and the inmates of the home wander about the grounds or read in the big library as the whim strikes them.

During the spring, summer and fall months the grounds about the home present a wonderfully beautiful picture. Flower beds of innumerable designs dot the spacious lawns and myriad hued blossoms make glad the eye of patients and visitors alike. Large trees shade the lawns and settees are scattered here and there for those who wish to rest and look down the long, wide avenue that leads to Colorado Springs, while over all towers the snow-capped Pike's Peak.

Lest it be inferred that only those suffering from tuberculosis may find the rest, the care and life-giving ozone of the Colorado Rockies, let it be understood that any member of the Typographical Union who is ill with any but a contagious disease, or those who are worn out in the battle of life may find a haven or heaven in which to spend their days free from care until they are again able to care for themselves or enter the sleep from which there is no waking. These men are not the objects of our charity. They have paid for the privilege of residing there if misfortune comes to them. Their loyalty and devotion to the craft in which they have spent their lives entitle them to the privilege of the home which every one of us has helped to provide. The Typographical Union, in this respect at least, has progressed immeasurably further than humanity in general, for there is no stigma of charity attached to the brothers who of necessity must sojourn at the home. Let us repeat: They have earned the right to enjoy this blessing. We know it and they feel it.

The one seeming lack in the present Home may soon be remedied. No provision has heretofore been possible for the lifelong helpmate and comrade of the stricken printer. There is now on foot a movement to provide room for the wives of those who come to the Home, so that in the near future those accepting the hospitality of the Home will not be separated from their wives.

Before an apprentice may become a member in full standing of the International Typographical Union he must serve five years learning the trade. In addition to this, he must study with the correspondence school of printing maintained by the union and pass an examination as to his proficiency. The union is doing everything in its power to turn out men who are efficient in their work. We work under union conditions in every town and city of any size in the United States and Canada. Our wages are sufficient to allow good food, decent clothes and reasonable amusement when our work is done. For the eight-hour day we paid $6,000,000 some fifteen years ago. We, John Smith and William Jones, paid that $6,000,000 out of our own pockets in a short period of time, figured in months—and it was well worth it. Today, we are caring for those who are unfortunate, aged and infirm. The boys who will follow us are imbuing the spirit of unionism along with their knowledge of the different styles of typography and of the linotype. In the years to come we may be afflicted as are some of our members at the present time, and these boys will then make us feel that we are entitled to the benefits of the home. These boys of today, the journeymen of tomorrow will say to some of us: "Go home, John; the Colorado air will make a new man of you. And be sure and write, telling us how you are getting along. We hope you'll be back with us again in a few months!" And so we'll go out to "our home" and perhaps in a few months we'll come back and work once more beside the boys we know; or perhaps, who knows, loving and regretful hands may lower us into a last resting place in the International Typographical Union plot in the Colorado Springs Cemetery and those same kind hands, of brother printers will tend our grave and keep it green and beautiful while we sleep on and dream of the old days in the composing rooms of the big city dailies and of the boys we knew in the dim long ago.

In limited space has been presented a glimpse of what the open shop means to the victims who must work under it. The open shop employers in this case (the public) have been so penny-wise and pound-foolish, so niggardly in the stipend with which they rewarded the public school teachers, that today they can no longer find teachers to fill the positions, and in the cities as well as the country the children of the nation are paying the price. Thousands of teachers have been obliged to cast aside years of special training in normal and college to start again near the bottom of the ladder. Their employers, the public, refused to pay them a sufficient wage and they took the only alternative that offered; for individually they could have done nothing. On the other hand, we have tried to give the reader a glimpse of what one union is doing and have tried to show to some extent what unionism means.

Today our workrooms are sanitary, the linotype is piped to the out-of-doors so that the gas and lead fumes are carried out of the room; the lavatories are kept clean and in the larger cities these rooms are usually entirely of marble; good ventilation has come to be the rule instead of the exception, and plenty of light reaches to every corner of the modern composing rooms. The weekly wage today averages very close to $40, if it has not passed that mark. The highest wage approximates $60 weekly, in cities like Chicago and New York. The lowest are found in the country towns. The eight-hour day is force today in practically every printing office of any description in the United States. We paid for that with the $6,000,000 before mentioned. The non-union man in our industry has received the benefit of what our money paid for. Why should we submit to the open shop; to working with men who reap the benefit while we pay the bills. If he wishes to work in a union shop he has the privilege of becoming a member and paying his share. No one is barred who has served the required time; who has a clean record in the past, and who is competent. There is no red tape, no "nigger in the wood pile," and nothing to hinder him if he is willing to do his share.

When the Millennium dawns we will no longer need unions, or a Home, or worry about adequate wages with which to support our loved ones. Until that day does come, however, we will be found banded together to curb the rapacious money-grabber who would organize himself but would deny us the same right if he had his way. We have no differences with the fair-minded employer—and there are many such, as we well know. The men at the head of the open-shop movement failed before their task was undertaken. Unions, under this and other names, have been in existence for hundreds of years. These organizations will improve with the years and function centuries after the open shop question is forgotten. When will the teachers of the public schools of the nation realize that self-preservation is the first law of nature?
