Friona ISD free summer meals will end early

The Friona Independent School District has announced that because of low numbers of participation the final day for the free summer lunch and breakfast program is Friday, July 14. The program was supposed to run through July 28 but school officials decided to suspend the free meal program as of Friday

Choir needs dunking help

Friona high school choir director Allison Johnston has asked that all Friona high school choir students come to the Cheeseburger Festival at city park Saturday to help with the dunking booth.

She also needs "dunkees" that want to get wet on a hot afternoon. The dunking booth will be operated to help raise money for the choir's spring trip to South Padre Island. Mrs. Johnston would like students to call her right away if they can help. The festival be-gins Saturday morning at 9 a.m., cheeseburger judging begins at 11:30 a.m., and cheeseburgers will be ready for pur-

The board made adjustments to school bus route driver compensation schedules and approved a letter of engagement for audit services to be provided by Donna West, CPA Inc. In other business the board completed required training for the Texas Open Meetings Act and the Public Information Act as mandated by Texas Attorney General Greg Abbott.

Meeting dates for the month of August were discussed and two dates were selected. The board will meet August 7, 2006, at 7 p.m. to receive certified tax values from Chief Appraiser Curby Brantley after which a notice of a public hearing on August 21, 2006, will be published in the Friona Star.

TWELVE PAGES

The purpose of the hearing will be the discussion of proposed operating budget and a proposed tax rate to fund the budget. Recent legislation requires that school property taxes be compressed to 88.67% of the 2005 tax rate with four additional pennies available to a district under tax rollback guidelines.

Aquifer display at Friona State Bank

A traveling exhibit depicting the geologic features of the Ogallala aquifer will be on display at Friona State Bank until July 21.

"There is a common misconception that the Ogallala aquifer is an underground lake or river receiving recharge from snow melt in the Rocky Mountains," said High Plains Water District manager Jim Conkwright. "The district's technical division staff devel-oped this exhibit to provide the public with a technically accurate depiction of the aquifer's geologic features," he said.

The freestanding display features an artist's representation of the Ogallala aquifer in the Southern High Plains of Texas. Among the geologic features shown are aquifer recharge near playa basins; water migration through the aquifer; saturated and unsaturated zones; the state water table; caliche lavers; and lacustrine (lake) beds

This is the first in a series of displays designed to give the how they can conserve it," Conkwright said. Additional informa-tion about the Ogallala aquifer is available on the water district's web site at www.hpwd.com.

You gotta' have money if you wanna honey, dance with me.

I can't quite remember who sang that old ballad from my youth. I've been humming the melody all day. I know I could look it up on the internet, or google it, or ask somebody on my cell phone but it's not that important. Let's kick around some money stories.

I often bore my kids with how much things cost when I was a boy. A loaf of bread or a gallon of gas for 25-cents. I recognize the dad-is-at-it-again teenage eye-roll. Back then $5 would last all week and have some left. Wow dad, would you hand me the remote?

Several years ago I drove out to Helen Potts' old home place and interviewed her. Mrs. Potts was a Schlenker. She was born at the old home place and never left it until she moved into Prairie Acres a few years back. She will be 97years-old next week. On the wall at the house she had a framed receipt for $10 her dad Charles paid the doctor that rode a horse over from New Mexico and delivered her in 1909. A baby for $10? Wow dad!

Of course these days $10 house. might get you three gallons of gas if you are lucky. I wonder if our kids, when they are in their 60's, will be telling their kids and grandkids how they used to buy a gallon of gas for only $2.99. Or they might say something like, "Why this old home place only cost us $286,000 back in '06. You can't buy a house for that anymore." The first new car I ever bought cost about $2,000. My first house was $10,900 and that was the deluxe model (without central air). The house payment was $79 and we worried about stretching our budget to make the payment.

by Ron Carr

My first job in the travel industry was in 1959 at Braniff Airways where I managed a $75 monthly car payment on a $240 a month salary. The first time I got to $1,000 a month I thought about retiring.

It is different today, especially for our young people. I read that the median house in America goes for about $290,000. In places like Santa Fe, New Mexico or San Francisco, ordinary workers can't afford to live where they work. You can't buy a $200,000 house making $6 an hour. Santa Fe got so expensive to live there the city commissioners passed their own minimum wage of about $9 an hour so average service workers could afford the rent on a trailer

There is a lot of money being thrown around Because he could and poliin this modern era, starting with our ever- diligent porky politicians. Tax and spend has become the norm. Get elected to Washington and sooner or later you can get rich if you play your cards right. Cheating and lying help also.

ticians who don't get rich in office are considered really stupid by their peers.

According to another news report, over 90 former officials at the Department of Homeland Security and the White House Office of Homeland Secu-ernment jobs and are now executives, consultants, or lobbyists for companies that collectively do billions of dollars in domestic security work. In government, as in real life, it is all about the money. Of course the folks getting rich in government are doing it with yours and my money.

Her husband works for Wal-Mart. Some time back he had a serious heart attack and long recovery period. He was covered under Wal-Mart's health plan (which many politicians say Wal-Mart does not have). He had to have emergency helicopter transfer to a hospital and continuing care. The total medical cost for his care and recovery, she said, was $300,000.00. That is more than a quarter of a million dollars.

With a great deal of gratitude in her voice she said Wal-Mart's insurance covered all but# $3,000. Ain't that good? I like good stories. Let's hum along:

Money honey, if you wanna' dance with me.

Words on the walls of the Georgia O'Keeffe Museum

On my last visit to Santa Fe I made my usual stop at the Georgia O'Keeffe Museum. It had an exhibition that highlighted some of the more than 1,000 new works. I've always been impressed with this artist who spent the years 1916 to 1918 in the Texas panhandle creating images of the Palo Duro Canyon. This time, though, I was fascinated with some of her quotations, which were printed on the walls of the museum: "Color is one of the great things in the world that makes life worth living.' "One paints what is around."

"In front of my house there are low scrub bushes and cottonwood trees and, further out, a line of hills. And then I have this mountain. A flat top mountain that slopes off on each side. A blue mountain. And to the left you can see snow covered mountains; far, far away.' "It's my mountain."

"I once spent three and a half months flying around the world. I was surprised that there were so many desert areas with large riverbeds running through them. I made many drawings about one and a half inches square of the rivers seen from the air. At home I made larger charcoal drawings from the little pencil drawings.

"Where I was born and where and how I have lived is unimportant. It is what I have done with where I have been that should be of interest.

"Singing has always seemed to me the most perfect means of expression ... it is so spontaneous ... since I cannot sing I paint.

Some were "kickers" and some were stickers," and there were more kickers than there were stickers and that accounted for the sparse population at that time. But in the thirtyfive years great changes have been wrought, and many of those good neighbors have gone hence. The city has grown from its 15souls to an estimated 1,600 or 1,800 people. The territory has become populated, and all have learned that this country will produce many things other than whitefaced cows and calves, in fact there are not so many things in the line of agricultural products that cannot be produced here

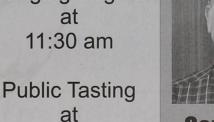

From the one little frame church it has grown to six neat and comfortable church buildings, among them one, that for size and architectural beauty is seldom equaled, and another of the same class will soon be under construction. From the one little three-teacher school we now have a State accredited high school and two large buildings and some twelve to fifteen teachers, and the district owning eight city blocks. And it has now sprouted a "sky line." (Part 3

Gisela Rosas, right, was recognized as Parmer County Community Hospital Employee of the Month for July. Presenting her the plaque is Rhonda Wilkins, PCCH Assistant Administrator. Gisela performed a marathon to get the PCCH computer system back during the Memorial Day holiday weekend. Gisela came to the hospital Saturday evening for a couple of hours around midnight, then came back on Sunday from about 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Her extraordinary efforts to get the system back up made it easier for nursing, lab and radiology to get the information needed. "She gave up time to be with her family over a holiday weekend to make work easier for those of us here working," stated a co-worker. Thanks Gisela for a job well done!

The following is reported weekly by Parmer County Sheriff Randy Geries office:

Cataract?

As people get older, many changes occur in the human body. One of the most obvious is the development of a "clouding over" of the natural "lens" of the eye. The lens is located just behind the colored

A cataract will result when chemical activity in the lens slows down significantly activity in the lens slows down significantly due to aging. Ninety-five percent of individuals sixty-five and over will have some cataract development. However, aging is not the only cause of cataracts. Diabetes, eye trauma, or certain medications can cause a clouding of the lens. Usually people with a cataract will notice that their vision is hazy and distorted, and may become more sensitive to glare, although not always. Fortunately, cataract surgery is now a simple and effective procedure, restoring vision more than ninety-five percent of the time. An artificial lens, called an "limplant," is usually placed where the cataract was. If you suspect you have cataracts, the experts suggest you visit your eye doctor today. Associates, on hand to provide his views on the current Washington legislative landscape for agriculture. Sell covered a wide variety of topics including the growing awareness of the drought situation that is developing

He noted that several Senators have expressed a desire to renew efforts to provide agricultural disaster assistance. He added that as the extent of current problems become clearer the chances for a disaster program including 2006 crops increases

Sell added that a variety of factors will ultimately impact how the disaster assistance effort develops and encouraged PCG to remain in communication with their representatives in the House and Senate to ensure the area's interests are included.

In regard to failed acres and current boll weevil program failed acreage policies, Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation executive director Lindy Patton, reported that the failed acreage and assessment policies in individual zones are based on the program situation that exists in that particular zone

Patton explained that as each zone pays down debt accumulated during the early years of the eradication program the zone grower advisory committees gain additional flexibility to recommend changes to the TBWF Board and the TDA Commissioner regarding failed acreage and assessment policies. He noted that the approval process for grower committee recommendations is started well in advance of the growing season and allows little room for adjustment later on.

Patton advised growers that operate in zones with failed acreage programs that provide credit for acres failed before the Farm Service Agency's Acreage Certification Date to make sure that they get their acres certified as failed before the July 15 deadline. He noted that there is no requirement within the crop insurance program preventing a grower from certifying the acre-age as failed at the FSA office before an insurance representative evaluates and releases the

He also advised that when acres are failed that the producer communicate with local eradication program office personnel to ensure that they are aware of the crops status and the status of any field opera-tions necessary to keep the acreage free of hostable cotton for the remainder of the growing season.

In other business, the Board was given an update on State legislative issues by State Representative Delwin Jones of Lub-bock, adopted a 2006 2007 Operating Budget and discussed upcoming PCG participation in a number of industry sponsored

Plant pathologist on Ag staff

South Plains cotton and peanut producers have a new ally in their fight against yield-robbing plant diseases. Dr. Jason E. Woodward, Texas Cooperative Extension plant pathologist, joined the staff at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center at Lubbock on July 1. His position is a joint appointment through Texas A&M University's Department of Plant Pathology and Microbiology and Texas Tech University's Department of Plant and Soil Science.

As an Extension plant pathologist, Woodward will conduct applied field research, developing and conducting educational programs which will focus on cotton and peanut diseases. He will also teach plant pathology at Texas Tech.

"I look forward to establishing myself in this position, and working with Texas A&M and Texas Tech personnel to provide our cotton and peanut producers the best possible disease management options available," Woodward said.

A native of southwestern Oklahoma, Woodward earned a bachelor's degree in biology from Southwestern Oklahoma State University, a master's degree in plant pathology from Oklahoma State University and a doctorate in plant pathology from the University of Georgia.

Before joining the Lubbock center, he served as a plant pathology graduate research assistant at the University of Georgia's Coastal Plains Experiment Station at Tifton, Ga. He was recently, awarded the 2006 George Washington Carver Award for his work on integrated management of peanut diseases.

That award was established in 2001 by the National Peanut Board. Woodward and his wife, Jennifer, have two sons, Jacob and Jack They will reside in Lubbock.

Northwest Plains pest management news BY MONTI VANDIVER.

Extension Agent Integrated Pest Management

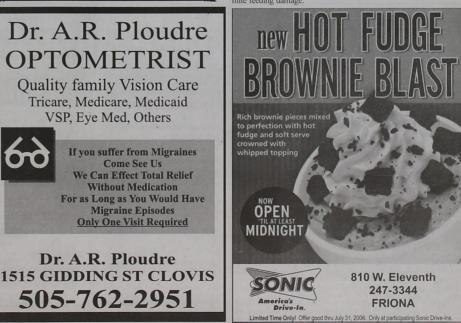

Hot, dry, and wind dominate current agriculture issues in the Northwest Plains of Texas. Crop demands for moisture have many irrigation systems already operating at a deficit and the hot, dry winds have most irrigation systems working less efficiently. Irrigation costs are skyrocketing and are a looming potential disaster. Thrips pressure in cotton has subsided this week, few fields exceeded economic threshold. Late planted and/or late emerging cotton has not had, nor is expected to have, the significant thrips pressure observed in earlier planted cotton.

Weeds on the other hand continue to be a problem in most fields and a huge problem in some. Post emergent herbicide efficacy continues to be hampered by extreme environmental conditions. Many times "tried and true" weed management tactics fail to be considered or are only considered as a last resort, especially when technology fees have been previously paid to obtain the newest weed management technology

Cultivation is a very effective method of weed control, even the toughest annual weeds are no match for "iron" (as illustrated by the image below). Delays in effective weed management can, and will, stunt crops and reduce potential yield.

Spider mites continue to be found in most corn that is over a foot tall. Environmental conditions have been very favorable for spider mite development. Adequate and proper timing of irrigation, which is currently easier said than done, will help plants withstand mite feeding damag

Shipping dairy calves to New Mexico? Don't forget their "Identification!"

SUBMITTED BY CODY HILL, Parmer County Extension Agent New Mexico livestock health officials have implemented and are enforcing animal identification requirements for dairy calves shipped into their state to assist in tracking potential disease introductions, particularly cattle tuberculosis (TB). Dairy cattle are no more susceptible to TB than beef cattle, but in confinement operations, such as dairies, infected animals may transmit the disease more readily. Commercially produced milk is pasteurized, or heat-treated, to kill bacteria and ensure product safety

'New Mexico requires dairy calves to be individually identified with an official USDA ear tag, or a commercially produced ear tag that shows the state and premises of origin, if the calves are not imported into the state as part of a cow/calf pair. If commercial tags are used, the original owner's name, address and an individual animal number must be imprinted on the tag, and the commercial tags must be pre-approved by the New Mexico Livestock Board," said Dr. Dee Ellis, head of animal health programs with the Texas Animal Health Commission (TAHC), the state's livestock and poultry health regulatory agency. The New Mexico Livestock Board may be reached in Albuquerque at (505) 841-6161.

Dr. Ellis noted that New Mexico requires dairy and beef cows and bulls from all states to have a negative TB test within 30 days prior to importation, and these animals are tagged. Calves entering New Mexico, however, are not TB test-eligible until they are 12 months old, and many would not otherwise be identified. By requiring dairy calves to be tagged, New Mexico livestock health authorities can notify the state of origin, if an imported calf later tests positive for cattle TB. This action may also protect New Mexico's TB-free status, which was regained in 2005, with the exception of a small zone in the southeast portion of the state.

"New Mexico is working to protect its cattle TB-free rating," commented Dr. Ellis. "Texas lost cattle TB-free status in 2002, and since then, more than 500,000 cattle in Texas have been tested. The U.S. Department of Agriculture may reinstate Texas' as TB-free later this year, and like New Mexico, we also will guard that hard-earned status. Currently, TAHC entry requirements specify that each sexually intact dairy calf entering Texas have an official USDA ear tag, but identification to the herd of origin is not

Think about this Holiness in Spirit #4

BY T. LEON TALLEY, Sixth Street Church of Christ A big attitude problem we often harbor is bitterness. Bitterness rises in our hearts when we do not trust the sovereign rule of God. Think of Joseph. If anyone ever had a reason to be bitter it was Joseph. He was sold by his jealous brothers into slavery. Falsely accused by his master's immoral wife. Forgotten by the one he helped in prison. But Joseph never lost sight of the fact that God was in control of all that happened to him. In the end he was able to say to his brother, "You intended to harm me, but God intended it for good to accomplish what is now being done, the saving of many lives." (Genesis 50:20)

Bitterness toward people is the result of an unforgiving spirit. Someone wronged us, either on purpose or by accident. We refuse to forgive that person. We harbor thoughts of bitterness toward the person. When we've been wronged, the tendency is to retaliate. We need to remember the words of Paul "Do not take revenge, my friends, but leave room for God's wrath for it is written; 'it is mine to avenge; I will repay, says the Lord.' (Romans 12:19)

All of these ugly attitudes will destroy us if we don't destroy them. They keep us from becoming what God wants us to be Remember, your thoughts ultimately determine your character.

There may be a cure of someing dentists have dreaded and husbands and wives have fought. over every morning for years: post-nasal drip. Just kidding! Of course I am referring to a much more seri-ous malady: bad breath, or *halito*sis. It is the only health problem everybody else knows you have before you do. The first sign is then your coworkers begin coming to work wearing oxygen masks.

Other signs are when insects put up a no-fly zone around your mouth, the dog begins sleeping in the next room, your toothpaste turns around and goes back into the tub, and rotting fish look to you as their leader. If you ignore these hints, people will confront you and ask questions like, "Do you literally wait with baited breath?" or, "Did you eat a walrus for lunch?" Finally, when your spouse begins using take one's breath away as a daily prayer rather than a phrase of wonder—a prob-able change should be considered.

What do we do? Go to the source. People are oozing too much ozone. This has created an angry atmospheric pressure that is stirring up some of those pesky sulfuric gases in our mouths. These gases

This is bad because it allows bacteria to run free, as opposed to charg-ing them. These bacteria break down proteins and transform them into sulfides. These create odor and bad taste and slip into our system undetected across the state line from Kentucky.

FRIONA CENTENNIAL MOMENTS (This is one of a series of weekly articles pertaining to Friona's 100th anniversary, which will be observed throughout 2006)

The Schlenkers of Parmer County

BY DON & GLADYS SPRING

the doorway of the wood frame house wrapped snuggly in a quilted robe. She shivered from time to time in spite of the heavy garment. "Winter mornings in Texas were just as cold as the ones in Des Moines," she thought. Her eyes took in the great flat expanse of blackened prairie

The great prairie fire of 1906 had raked the land bare from New Mexico to Oklahoma some time before and the still black sprigs of a former grassland made the land even more deso-

The small woman stood in late. She had ridden the train corner and she would surely from Des Moines a week or so before with her nine children to the church services. Oh well, join her husband, Charles in their new home in the Panhandle of Charles had the fire going so it Texas. Her mind drifted back to the rolling hills of Iowa and the streams and trees she had always took for granted.

She also very much missed the churches and stores there, and the friends she so much enjoyed. Even as flat as the land here was she couldn't see a single other home no matter which direction she looked. Christmas was just around the miss the songs and parties and the children were stirring and was time to busy herself with breakfast. She didn't go to town for seven years.

Charles Schlenker had left Des Moines with the words from his wife, Amelia, ringing in his 'Now Charles, don't buy ears. any land out there, you hear? But the lure of cheap land and fertile soil was just too great a lure. In just a few days he had written to her, "Dear Amelia, Today I plowed a row over a mile long and never hit a stump or a rock. And the soil is very rich. She knew that the deal had already been sealed so she just got the children ready for the trip. When he returned to sell his holdings in Iowa, he was full of stories about the new land. Charles, like his kin for many generations, reaching back Germany, was close to the land. He was only happy farming and raising farm animals and he knew that this country was made for raising wheat and hogs and kids, so he brought his eldest sons out to the new farm and they built a frame house for the family and then the others followed on the train.

Nine children from Floyd at fourteen to Louisa a babe in arms made up the trainload of ans moving to Texas. Oscar, Willard, Esther, Mabelle, Flothe other children. After coming to Texas, John (Chick) and Helen were born. Also one child was stillborn. The Schlenker family soon learned that the weather cycles on the plains could be very severe and unforgiving, and some years were very lean. After a period of drought and low prices, Charles decided to quit and move back to Iowa. He went to his banker in Bovina and informed him that he just couldn't hold on another year. The Banker said, "Charles, we need good men like you here Why don't you buy a good herd of cattle and graze them on the Rhea Brothers free range? It won't cost you anything and I'll loan you money. Just go over and buy some of those low priced yearlings and try for another year.' Charles did just that and it worked out well for the family. Farm life back then was much different because there was not the daily sojourn to town. Everything that the family needed was pretty much provided by the land. Butchering was done mostly in the fall and hogs, cattle and any other butcher animals were strung up on the windmill and became the table fare for the family. The lard and other rendered products were used for the necessities of the family

Soap was made using the hog lard and a little lye and a lot of delicacies of the day such

"cracklins" were all part of the living process. Amelia baked twenty-three loaves of bread a week for the brood and a certain day of the week was set aside for the tremendous washday. Charles and the boys tended the crops, animals and the outdoor chores. The trip to town every four or six weeks was not a pleasure trip although I'm sure the children counted it as pleasure, but the wagon ride alone took almost all the day.

As time went on the boys began to get jobs and eventually met and courted local girls. Three of the Schlenker boys married Reeve girls. Floyd married Malinda Reeve, Oscar married Alice Reeve and Willard married Frances Reeve. Of course the same was true of the pretty girls of the family and in time all the children moved away from home and some moved out of the country. Oscar and Alice moved to California, as did Bula and Florence and Willard and Frances. The rest scattered over the lower 48 except for Floyd, Chick, Mabelle, Helen and born.

Charles suffered a massive heart attack in 1939 and died suddenly. Grandmother Schlenker lived on the farm until the late 1950's when she moved to Friona and lived with Mabelle. She died in 1963. Only two girls remain of the children. Helen and Louisa, but the far strewn cousins, second cousins and etc. remain tight knit today. They celebrate a family reunion every two years and usually over a hundred interested "kith and kin" attend the functions

This year on the 14th thru the 16th of July over two hundred Schlenker relatives will grace the great city of Friona, Texas to mark the centennial celebration of Charles and Amelia's arrival in as Charles and Amelia Schlenker gave their progeny much more than life. They imparted a deep

Friona Mayor John Taylor signs a proclamation designating July 15 as Charles & Amelia Schlenker Day. Present at the Prairie Acres signing were sisters Helen Schlenker Potts, left, and Louisa Schlenker Wilson, residents of the nursing home. Helen will be 94 on July 17. Louisa will be 100 on September 25. She was about two-months-old when the family came to Parmer County in 1906.

This is probably the home that Charles and the older sons built before Amelia and the rest of the family came to Parmer County in December 1906. The date on this photo is 1914. It was after Floyd and Malinda Reeve married in 1912. Malinda is in the photo with the rest of the Schlenker family.
