Lives Are Risked to Get Daring Motion Pictures

Miss Mary Fuller Slid From a 7-Story Building on a Rope Made of Bed Sheets and Drove a Racing Motor Boat

Miss Mary Fuller, a Motion Picture Actress, in the Indianapolis Star.

Never, so long as I live, will I forget the day I slid down a rope of bedclothes from a window seven stories above the ground.

I had done many perilous things, but this was the most terrifying because there was no intense dramatic action to take my mind off the danger. The director simply asked me in a matter-of-fact way if I would slide down a rope from that height. I gasped for a moment and then fearing the thought of being a coward more than the perils of the feat, I closed my eyes and answered that I would.

As we started out to do the scene I began furtively to watch the buildings. That tall one, it must be eight or nine stories high—I counted them—it was only six. Heavens! I was to slide down from a point higher than the building, dangling into space.

Finally we came to the apartment house which had been chosen and were ushered up to a room on the seventh floor. I was recognized when I stepped from the motor car and the appearance of the long rope of bedclothes started the rumor that I was to do something extraordinary. By the time we had tested the rope and every thing was ready a crowd of curious people were gazing upward at the window.

The Rope Gives a Little

The view from that window will live forever in my mind's eye—the rope was stretching downward to eternity—no not eternity, but worse still, a pavement of unyielding stone; the iron picket fence that surrounded the little area way—I could feel the sharp points penetrating my poor body—the upturned faces, many of them already becoming anxious as the realization of what I was to do dawned upon them.

I suddenly realized that if I remained in that window for another moment that I would be panic stricken and powerless to make the descent. I waved my hand to the director, shut my eyes and swung out on the sill. I counted the windows as I passed them, not daring to look down. I had gone about half way when the rope gave a little. My heart stopped as the vision of that picket fence flashed before me. The rope held—Would it hold until I reached the bottom?

When I was about twenty feet from the ground the crowd began to cheer but I could hear above the cheer the noise of a tearing blanket.

I shut my eyes again but my hands seemed to rebel at further torture and then I dropped.

But it was only ten feet and I was hot hurt. Yes, unhurt, if bleeding hands and a body that ached in every fiber could be called unhurt; but I had done it and I was happy.

The Motor Boat Kicked

But that is only one incident. There are many more. On one occasion I was called upon to pilot a motor boat at top speed. I had never driven a motor boat in my life but I was determined that I would see it through if I drowned in the attempt. I was told, no matter what else I did, that I must not swerve the boat from one side to the other.

The camera man was placed on the back of the boat with his camera securely lashed. We lined up for the start, the gun was fired and we were off. I suddenly found myself in control of a plunging monster that leaped faster and faster every moment. I had had several horses run away when I was riding them and the sensation I received now was something similar.

But there was one hundred and twenty horses instead of one—and there was only one little me. The roar of our engine and that of the other boats was deafening. I turned my head to see whether or not we were gaining on the others and in that instant I lost control of the boat. It made a frantic plunge and pitched over to one side, but by a desperate effort, favored no doubt by my own ignorance, I succeeded in preventing the boat from capsizing.

We continued on to the finish and won the race. As I sat back exhausted a sputtering cry of rage caused me to turn and there was the camera man dripping from head to foot, clinging to the camera, which had swung out of position.

When I lost control of the boat near the start of the race, the mad careening of the boat had thrown the camera out of focus and the man could not take the picture. The roar of the boats had drowned out his yells of protest and entreaty and he had designed himself to saving his camera from plunging into the water.

EMANUEL PAYS TRIBUTE TO HIS FATHER'S MEMORY

ROME, Mar. 14.—Unusual precautions were taken today when King Victor Emanuel, Queen Elena and Queen Mother Humbert attended the annual requiem mass over the tomb of King Humbert at the Pantheon. To prevent the possible repetition of another attempt against the life of the king, similar to that made two years ago when the king was driving to the mass, the streets leading from the Quirinal to the Pantheon were lined with troops and the squares in front of pieces were massed with soldiers. Unusual interest attached to the service today because of the rendition by a select choir of a requiem mass selected through a national competition.

PARCEL POST SHOULD LESSEN FARM WASTE

Millions of Bushels of Fruits and Vegetables That have Rotted Can Be Sent to Town Folks

The prime factor in the increased cost of living is that the supply has not kept pace with the demand. But this supply could be immensely increased if the millions of bushels of fruit and vegetables that are left on the farm to rot could be marketed. Heretofore the cost of distribution of this produce has made it impossible to market to an advantage. Parcel Post with its new weight allowance of 29 pounds within the first and second zones is opening up new channels of business writes the editor of the Orange Judd Farmer.

Much produce that formerly could only be turned at a low price to the local store, in trade, can now be marketed at a good profit to the consumer. Many of the farmers' wives or son or daughters are now building up a profitable mail order business in the nearby cities and towns. It is an easy matter to get customers and suitable cartons for shipping can easily be obtained.

The great variety of things that may be included in these 29-pound shipments will enable the farmer to take advantage of the maximum weight allowance, while the city prices obtained will yield a handsome profit after deducting all expenses, including the postage charge.

Get all the particulars of this parcel post plan from your local post office and see if you can't build up a profitable business in disposing of your surplus produce.

Of course, this will be of large benefit to those living near cities but the enterprising farmer and his wife should find large profit from it, even around Plainview.

Make a specialty of some one product, secure customers for it, then you can get these customers to take other articles of fruit and vegetables you may have from time to time.

FOR DELICATE CHILDREN

A Mother's Letter to Mothers. Mrs. E. W. Cooper of Bloomfield, N. J., says: "My child, seven years old, had a bad cold and was weak and quite run down in health. She had been in this condition for about six weeks when I began giving her Vinol. It was a wonderful help to the child, breaking up her cold quickly and building up her strength beside. I have also found Vinol a most excellent tonic for keeping up the children's strength during a siege of whooping cough."

Vinol is a wonderful combination of two world-famed tonics—the medicinal body building elements of cod liver oil and iron for the blood, therefore it is a perfectly safe medicine for children, because it is not a patent medicine, everything in it is printed on every package, so mothers may know what they are giving their little ones.

Therefore we ask every mother of a weak, sickly or ailing child in this vicinity to try Vinol on our guarantee.

The Church And The Theatre

Apropos of the recent discussion as to whether self-respecting people attend theatres, the following editorial from the current issue of Collier's Weekly is more or less timely:

"While Chicago's Baptist ministers were debating whether amateur drama and moving pictures might not assist in holding young people, the Rev. C. W. Finwall, a 'converted actor,' said: 'But few people on the stage are clean. The word "actor" comes from the same Greek word as "hypocrite," and that alone should be sufficient to condemn it. You are getting our young people away from God by these amusements. There is no room for them in any church.'

"Joe Jefferson, seeking a place where funeral services might be held for an actor friend, was once turned down by the smug rector of a fashionable Fifth Avenue congregation and referred to the 'Little Church Around the Corner.' Yet one will have to look far before finding more beautiful examples of home life than obtain among certain people of the stage. Even churchmen are coming to realize the error of the old view, by which the actor was, by reason of being an actor, damned for all eternity. Workers in the Church Federation Movement in New York lately gave a luncheon to Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson. Nine denominations of Christianity and Judaism turned out, and deans of the cathedral and rabbis sat down together with one who would have been classified, in Shakespeare's day, with vagabonds and 'hardy beggars.' The church cannot ignore the stage—and it does well to honor the interpreter of 'The Passing of the Third Floor Back.' The theatre's influence is past reckoning; to condemn it all, without discriminating, is as stupid as to condemn the entire press as immoral—simply because some newspapers print tainted advertisements and some magazines capitalize the present exaggerated sex interest.

Opportunity For Profit Assured

Instances of appreciation of values of Plainview real estate can be offered by the score. Hardly a week passes in which some transfer does not reveal large increases in values within a comparatively short time.

Those men who failed to profit by the recent growth of Plainview are too apt to regard their chances as having forever flown.

The Evening Herald believes Plainview will have a population in excess of 25,000 five years hence, and that its growth cannot help but enormously stimulate increased values and business generally.

Beyond all question, property that to-day is purchasable at a price relatively as low as the value fixed five years ago on the lots on Pacific and other main thoroughfares, five years hence will show profits quite as large.

Plainview has not reached the apex of its growth. Plainview has not discounted its future.

Never in Plainview's history were the opportunities as many or profits so thoroughly assured.

President Wilson's First Year

One year ago this month Woodrow Wilson took his seat as President of the United States. At the Baltimore convention, when Wilson's name was first brought forward it was not regarded with favor. After he was nominated to lead the Democrats in one of the greatest political fights in American political history, there was a general feeling that Wilson was not practical.

He was sneeringly called the "Professor," even by thousands in his own ranks. "Surely, he can prove to be nothing but a theorist," was the general acclaim from East to West.

Public opinion often times swerves right around. So it has been in the case of Wilson. Those who were most strenuously opposed to him in the beginning now declare themselves loudest in his acclaim.

No President has done as much as has been done during this one year of Wilson's administration.

He has caused vital and essential laws to be made.

The breaking up of interlocking directorates, the elimination of the Congressional lobby, the voluntary dissolution of the telephone trust, the successful fighting off of an impending panic by tactful methods, are some of the other achievements he has accomplished.

The President proved himself to be a man of firmness, intellectuality and poise in leading the way to the speedy enactment of the two great measures of the administration—the tariff revision act and the banking and currency bill.

More than any President of modern times, Mr. Wilson has developed the administrative possibilities of the high office to which the American people called him.

Through some wizardry of control, the President is converting Democracy from a party of negation to a party of performance. He has repressed dissent and compelled unanimity of action. This fact alone lifts him far above any of the Democratic leaders since the days of Tilden.

Woodrow Wilson has made good.

Wilson's Famous Bryan Puff

Pursuant to a resolve formed in early boyhood never to be outdone in display of magnanimity, the president now in a letter to a Baltimore friend, not marked 'personal' return the compliment in a characteristically felicitous phrase. Inasmuch as it was the appearance of this generous tribute that induced these humble affections, we quote with undisguised satisfaction

You reference to the Secretary of State shows me comprehensively that you have looked on during the past few months. Not only have Mr. Bryan's character, his justice, his sincerity, his transparent integrity, his Christian principle made a deep impression upon all with whom he has dealt, but his tact for dealing with men of many sorts, his capacity for business, his mastery principles of each matter he is called upon to deal with have cleared away many a difficulty and have given to the State Department a definiteness and dignity that are very admirable.

I need not say what pleasure and profit I myself have taken from the close association with Mr. Bryan or how thoroughly he has seemed to all of us who are associated with him here not only to deserve our confidence but our affectionate admiration.

"William Jennings Bryan, Last in War, First in Peace and Safe in the Hearts Of His Countrymen."—Col. Geo. Harvey.

Col. George Harvey, original Wilson man but now the most energetic critic of the Wilson administration thus toasts the Secretary of state at the conclusion of a highly entertaining article in the March number of the North American Review of which he is editor.

It is called 'Mr. Bryan Rides Behind' from the quotation by which it is introduced, "When two Men Ride an Ass, one Must Ride Behind. Col. Harvey, who has never been a Bryan disciple has tried to preserve a fair, open mind throughout his analysis of the Nebraskan's career as premier of the Wilson administration, and though he falls, occasionally into irony and sarcasm that they might not consider fair, Mr. Bryan's warmest friends should feel satisfied with the result, coming as it does from the camp of a hostile faction. As a whole, the article gives Bryan his due and pays a happy, not to say remarkable to the Secretary of State. In commenting on Bryan's proclivities for the motion of peace, Editor Harvey says this service alone ranks him with Washington and Jefferson.

Moreover, President Wilson and his chief cabinet officer, work together like parts of a harmonious machine, and while Bryan rides behind because there would be no other place for him to ride with Woodrow Wilson, he is generous enough and good enough not to kick the mule in the flank and cause it to buck. Col. Harvey writes:

"When two men ride an ass one must ride behind. It is a very foul year now since Mr. Bryan took his seat in the second saddle upon the flanks of the ass of Democracy and the continuing stability of his sturdy form is equal only by the fixity of purpose which illumines his expressive countenance. How well we recall the dire predictions when another of slighter build leaped upon the withers of that lean and hungry beast of burden and the greatest of commoners accepted an assignment to ride behind "The ass" 'twas commonly said in the words of Miguel de Cervantes, 'Will carry its load, not a double load, and now behold! is not that a sleek and well fed animal?

"And upon his strengthened back are now two bounding spirits close knitted as were the souls of Jonathan and David, two hearts that beat as one. Was ever a prettier sight in the eyes of the host that wandered oh! so long! in the bleak and barren wilderness?

Continuing, Col. Harvey says:

The Fight on Bryan Falls

"The election had taken place, and predestination, aided and abetted by the effacious citizen who is now attending snake fights in South America, had triumphed. Immediately there developed vigorous opposition to the designation of Mr. Bryan as Secretary of State. Conservative public journals implored the President-elect to hesitate before hazarding the confidence of the country by putting into first place one whose policies and theories were not generally considered sound and were generally regarded as unsound and had thrice been repudiated at the polls. Wellwishers directed attention to the temperal unfitness of Mr. Bryan for a position requiring trained intelligence, painstaking application and the nicest sense of propriety in dealing with representatives of foreign powers. Politicians urged that the persuasive commoner would overshadow the administration."

Col. Harvey deposes that with things in this condition Bryan went to Florida and began a "period of watchful waiting," and at the critical moment posed for a striking portrait and sent a copy to the president. Harvey says the president studied it carefully and could not escape so he sent Col. Edward M. House to negotiate the colonies. In return Mr. Bryan was allowed to continue his lectures in order to provide for his declining years and was relieved from serving wine at banquets. Mr. House he says was constituted assistant president, with full power to sit in the presidential box, and Mr. Bryan was made secretary of state with the understanding that the president should make all appointments and shape all foreign policy at the theater.

"How scrupulously the terms thus arranged have been observed by the subscribers is known to all," Col. Harvey says "and at the end of a full twelvemonth the compact remains unbroken, to the complete satisfaction of the league triumvirate and to the inestimable benefit to our native land. Mr. Bryan was the first to proclaim his constantly growing appreciation of his colleague—if we may use the president's own considerate terms—and his personal happiness to be permitted to whip up the donkey while the president held the reins.

"As early as April 17 he informed the public that he had never known a man with a more open mind than Mr. Wilson's and added "the more I see of him the more intimate becomes my relations with him, the larger he grows." In using these words Mr. Bryan did not mean to imply that the increase in the President's mental stature was attributed to contact with himself, he merely noted the impression upon his own mind of greatness previously developed which he had not

TOO MANY LONELY BREAKFASTS

Men Who Dream of Pretty Face Across The Coffee Pot are Disappointed

From the New York Times.

Lord Tennyson, late in life, said sadly to a friend, "I have taken breakfast alone for twenty-five years." This was after my wife became a confirmed invalid and my family was scattered.

There are men who breakfast alone whose wives appear very vigorous at the bridge table or the club meetings, or the dance class, and who are, in fact, equal to almost any effort but appearing in the morning before their husbands go to business—or the children—if there are any go to school or to the parks.

An eligible bachelor said the other day, "I used to dream of a pretty face across the coffee pot, but a dozen years in a smart apartment hotel have dispelled several illusions. To begin with, I hardly know of a married man there who would not like to keep house but their wives don't want to take the trouble. Why, I know two dozen women who never get up to breakfast."

INDUSTRY FACES AN ACTIVE YEAR

The World Has Been Liquidated and Business Now Promises to be Bottomed on a Firmer Foundation than Ever Before. The Improvement is General

General Situation Improving.
Indianapolis News: There can no longer be any question as to the general business situation and in the feeling in regard thereto.

The outlook for a good business year is indeed cheering. Even in Europe which has suffered much more severely than this country, there is a turn for the better. The world has been going through a process of liquidation and also one of vast economical waste due to the recent wars. Business, as a result of it all, will be on a sounder basis than ever before.

Amazing Growth and Strength
Savannah News: When Secretary McAdoo returned to Washington a few days ago after traveling about over the country with the members of the Federal Reserve Bank Organization Committee he said: "Facts and figures presented to the committee in all parts of the country show amazing growth and strength and disclose a condition of financial, industrial and commercial soundness and prosperity that leaves no doubt as to the future."

Business Is Not Bad
Philadelphia Times: Business is not bad in this country at this time. All of the benefits promised by tariff revision may not have occurred but on the contrary, the business disasters so gloomily predicted have not occurred. With four months experience in the new law, business and industry have been successfully adjusting themselves to the new conditions and whatever hesitation there was is no longer felt.

Cane Growers Cheering Up
New Orleans Times-Democrat: Although conditions in some respects continue bad, although prices are low and the Underwood bill still faces us, a better feeling prevails and it is evident that a determined effort will be made to weather the storm. The hope is entertained that the sugar industry has already gone through its worst period and may expect some improvement from this time forward.

Depression Fast Vanishing
Houston Globe: Sanguine sentiment in trade, which became noticeable throughout the country as soon as tariff and currency questions were out of the way; shows no abatement at the present time, in fact it increases. The business depression from which we have suffered is fast vanishing.

Better Outlook for Carriers
Cincinnati Enquirer: It will be but a few weeks now until the gross earnings of the railroads will show increase as the growth of trade throughout the country is already adding to the freights offered for transportation.

More coke for the furnace and mills, more ore, more material, greater output and sand greater shipments of these outputs.

Safely Through an Ordeal
Houston Post: There is not the slightest reason why the stringency felt a few weeks ago should continue to embarrass business. This stringency was due to the impounding of money, the general curtailment of credit and the suspension of enterprise which resulted in unusual depression. The country passed safely through the ordeal and the skies are bright once more.

EVERYBODY KNOWS

ABOUT THE AUTOMOBILE, ABOUT THE AEROPLANE AND ABOUT WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY

But Do You Know About

CHIROPRACTIC

The automobile, the aeroplane and wireless telegraphy are foremost among the well known modern inventions and improvements of this present day progressive age, each of these representing in its own sphere the spirit of progress of the world today, but none is nearly so modern and revolutionary as the new science of CHIROPRACTIC, (pronounced ki-ro-prak-tic), the principles of which, so tersely put by B. J. Palmer, D. C., Ph. C., President of the Palmer School of Chiropractic, "The Fountainhead School," Davenport, Iowa., follows:

Chiropractic is the knowledge, (not theory or belief) of philosophy of cause of disease; the science of knowing how and the art or ability to adjust it. The brain is the dynamo where life currents are concentrated. The spinal cord and nerves are the purveyor of this mental force. If brain absorbs, spinal cord conveys, nerves transmit, and tissues, organs and viscera receive the life current, health is the product. Obstruct transmission of the current and disease is the product. Body plus life equals health. Body minus life equals death. Disease is the abnormal fluctuation between these two quantities caused by varying degrees of pressure upon nerves, interfering with transmission. A Chiropractor knows why, where and how to remove the pressure, and permits current to continue transmission for the purpose of reconstructing disease to health. Health is the restoration of currents; not the stimulation or the diminution of how little does exist. If sick, no matter what or where your ailment, mild or severe, INVESTIGATE. We can prove that Chiropractic is right and applicable to your case.

Chiropractic is not medicine, surgery or osteopathy. It is a new way of analyzing the symptoms and adjusting the cause of disease. It is the method you will eventually use.

Chiropractors do not heal, cure, treat, manipulate or operate upon disease. Disease is an effect. It has a cause. Chiropractors locate the cause and correct it.
