PLATEAU SINGING CONVENTION BROUGHT LARGE CROWDS-

TAYLOR AGAIN PREXY

One of the largest crowds ever in Plainview was that in attendance at the annual great Plateau Singing Convention Sunday. Thousands were here, most of whom came from within fifty miles, but hundreds from greater distances.

The convention was in session at the municipal auditorium Saturday and Sunday, and the long program of singing-solos, duets, trios, quartettes class and chorus singing-was rendered, and was much appreciated by the large audiences. Sessions were held Saturday morning, afternoon and evening and Sunday morning and afternoon, adjournment taking place at Simmons and Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans are en route hore to make the explanation.

This was known today by Grand Kleagle George W. Keeling. The meeting of the imperial officers with the klansmen of Texas will be held Tuesday night "somewhere in Bexar county.

Kleagle Keeling, who is a Protestant preacher, says klansmen want to know where the money they pay into the parent organization is going. He says he has scores of telegrams and special delivery letters from exalted cyclops of various klaverns indicating they would be on hand Tuesday to hear the explanations.

It is understood that the imperial officers will be accompanied by a retinue of goblins, nighthawks, kludds

ROTTEN SEED WHEAT

Farmers Should Be Very Careful In Selection of Seed to Make Success

The farmers of the United States, particularly those of the great grain belt of the Middle West and Southwest, are losing millions of dollars each year because of the lack of proper seed wheat or through the n the United States, the Glacier to cultivation of poor quality. The remedy for this loss, which is apto a position among the most import- paling is close at hand and can be applied by every energetic and progressive wheat grower.

The foregoing, in substance, is part few, if not the only, highway in the of a statement just issued by H. M. Inited States that travels north and Bainer, director of the Southwestern Wheat Improvement Association, upon his return from an extensive trip Most of the north and south roacs through a large portion of the wheat

In some localities we found rye mixtures in fifty per cent or more of the fields, and in other sections fields showed lack of purity, some revealing mixed varieties of hard wheat, and in some there were mixtures of hard and soft wheat."

Mr. Bainer made it clear that the present is the time for wheat growers facing this problem to use the solution at hand.

"Now, before wheat cutting time, is when every farmer who raises wheat should be preparing for good seed for the fall sowing," he continued. "Only those fields or parts of fields that are pure unmixed and free from rye and smut should be saved for seed."

Mr. Bainer, who is recognized as one of the foremost authorities on the subject of wheat, declared that a field can be regarded as good prospect for proper seed if it is pure, excepting for a slight mixture of rye. The rye, he pointed out, can be removed by pulling out the plants before harvest, thus rendering the wheat itself free from any of the contaminating mixtures which so dangerously lower the grade of the crop. Mr. Bainer emphasized the necessity manager. Harry L. Miller is secre- of pulling out the entire plant in this operation because of the danger of new tillers putting out later heads which mature with the wheat.

LIQUOR FORCES SEEM DETER-MINED TO MAKE POLITI-CAL CAMPAIGN

The chief topic of political comment last week has been the discussion of the action of Governor Al Smith of New York in approving the law passed by the legislature of that state to annul the state enactment for the enforcement of the prohibitory law. In signing the bill Smith committed himself squarely to the 'wets". The plea for the action of the New York legislature is that it was a protest against the Volsteal act, and not the constitutional amendment upon which the Volstead act is based. The prohibition leaders of the country, however, declare that the New York declaration is the first step in the program of the liquor interests to finally annul the constitutional amendment. Smith insists that it merely is a move to force the modification of the Volstead act in order to lift the ban against wine and beer. The prohibition leaders see in the New York action the first step in a nation wide fight against prohibition; a movement to, have every state the "wets" are able to control annul the state enforcement laws, leaving the enforcement of prohibition entirely in the hands of the federal government. The prohibition amendment to the federal const ution says that the federal and state governments shall have concurrent responsibility for the enforcement of prohibition. The politicians see in the Ne. York situation the injection of prohibition into politics. The National Republican, official organ of the Republican national committee, openly condemna the action of Gov. Smith in an article headed: "Nullification Lifts Its Ugly Head Again." President Harding in a letter two weeks ago declared his readiness, as president, to mee: the challenge of the state of New York and raised the issue that in its nullification of the state enforcement laws New York had aligned itself, oficially, against the Constitution of the United States.

William Jennings Bryan, one of the feremost advocates of prohibition, is the only one of the leading Democrats of the country up to the p esent time to arraign Gov. Smith for his action. Bryan denounces the action and intimates that Smith is playing for the nomination for president, or at least seeking to array the wets for a presidential candidate upon the issue of anulling prohibition.

Following the action by Governor Smith comes a movement by New York Democrats to take the Democratic national convention of 1924 to New York City. Two elements of the party oppose such a move. The Hearst wing of the party raises the cry of Wall street, saying that the of the special interests to control the nomination of the party. The "drys" oppose the location of the convention in New York City because of the influence it might have in committing policy or a "wet" candidate.

Additional Acres in Cultivation It has been estimated that nearly 300,000 acres of new land is being put under cultivation this year, the major portion of it being planted to cotton. In Lamb county and around Littlefield there is a big acreage going under the plow for the first time. the most of it being planted to the fleecy staple. It has been estimated that throughout the entire South Plains county there will be at least 50 per cent increase in cotton production over any previous record .-

WITH THE DEAD

Compacts with the dead remain unkept, claims Harry Houdini, the aerobatic magician famous for his uncanny ability to worm out of straitjackets, handcuffs, and man-tight devices without limit. Mr. Houdini, with his familiarity with hypnotism and legerdemain, has often impersonated spiritistic mediums, and claims there is not one trick of the mediums, no matter how unearthly it may appear, that he is not able to reproduce. When he complains, there fore, that not one of the seven friends who pledged to communicate with him after their deaths has kept his pledge and come back, he surely knows. A hard-headed wizard, who has delved into the vitals of clairvoyancy and the mystic, should recognize a message from the Beyond, if it were possible for it to come through. In the July number of The Watchman Magazine of Nashvile, Tenn., Walter Hart Hall tells the story of committed suicide in the United Houdini's attempts to hear from his friends who had preceded him in death, and tells why he failed. It certainly was not Houdini's fault, for he himself says, "No one could accuse me of being unwilling to re-

It may be surprising to those faabout the "souls in glory looking this way," to hear that the Bible says nothing like that. Mr. Hall quotes extensively to show that the Bible teaches that "the dead know not any-Special delivery letter receipts will thing, neither have they any more a be required again effective July 1. reward; for the memory of them is according to Postmaster F. "The dead cannot communicate partment revised its special delivery with the living," he continues, for the service and quit demanding receip's. Bible plainly says, 'He that goeth down to the grave shall come up no more. He shall return no more to his house, neither shall his place know him any more.' This is definite indeed; this departed one does not return to his place. His haunts, his home, his business knows him no more. That is settled. He does not come back. Wherever he goes, there of town where a barn was on fire. he stays. This is what crafty Mr. Houdini has proved. The seven pacts made with his friends ended with their death. They would have returned if they could, but they could not. If you ever feared to pass a cemetery at night, fear no more; the inmates are sleeping." Mr. Hall claims further that the terms "spirit" and "breath" are interchangeable and at death it is the "breath of life" that leaves the body and returns to God, to be kept by Him until He returns it to the body at the awakening, or the resurrection. In answer to the puestion, 'De we then have no souls." Mr. Hall says "Oh, yes; but the body is not the oul, nor is the breath the soul, but the combination of breath and body makes possible the soul .-- the entity.'

Spent Time in Court So close to the fountain of oratory, Marvin Jones with other youths spent considerable time in the court room. On one occasion he was interested in the outcome of a case which had its origin in his neighborhood, and he was a spectator at the trial. It terminated contrary to his judgment of what it should have been and all due, according to the youthful conception, to the lax attention of the counsel. The future member of congress said that he could have done better himself. That implanted in him a desire to master the intricaties of the law so he could thunder in the courthouse before jurge and jury. Then started in his breast the battle between the courthouse ambition and the glamour of the open range, ending in his completing a course at the Southwestern University with A. John H. Stephens, then of Vernon, had represented what had been the old Jumbo district of Texas, composed of eighty counties, for eighteen years. When represented by S. W. T. Lanham, the district extended from the upper Panhandle line south to Weatherford and west to El Paso, and embraced ninety-five counties, it is still the largest district with fiftythree counties. Stephens was a man of rugged honesty and specialized in legislation that had to do with protection of the Indians of what is now Oklahoma, later in creation of the new state, and was probably the most popular man politically that section of Texas had produced until the young University graduate with his growing board of legal examiners for the 7th Supreme Judicial District, the youngest that has held that position in Texas, announced his opposition to Stephen's re-election for the tenth term. CORSICANA MAN CLAIMS C. P. TASKER FIRST SETTLER IN CANYON BLANCO

"I see in a Sunday issue of The News that you have a picture of a house built in Canyon Blanco by Hank Smith in 1877," says J. M. Gordon of Corsicana in a letter to The Dallas News. "Now I don't care to detract from the glory of Mr. Smith, but I happened to be a cowboy for C. P. Tasker, who was the first settler herd of cattle into the canyon for him. * * * * Bufg and Emerson built the house that Hank Smith got credit for." The house is in Crosby county. The story referred to was printed on June 6. Mr. Gordon tells of some incidents of the time and neighborhood that

Bad Men There

Tasker then came to Fort Griffin, Texas, an dleased land in the canyon and on the Plains, whica land ed out to build a new house, five I believe was then Eastland school land. Below the house and close to Catfish Creek we dug a well and also made a dugout. At that time Hank Smith was a running a corsal in Ft. Griffin and also a boarding house upder a hill near the Fort. Lottie Deno ran a saloon and dance hall across from Hank's Smith's. Charles Baker also had a saloon and dance hall further down the street. You danced a set, went to the bar, took a drink and paid your 50c. Crager was sheriff and Bill Gilson was city marshal. The officers could not keep down lawlessness and fights. There were some "bad men" in the community who loved the smell of powder. I have seen several men shot down in Lottie's dance hall and others on the street.

> "In those days men hardly ever went by their Christian names. Nicknames were used. When the first court was held there the women had such hard names that the judge instructed the sheriff to go after wit nesses and not call out their names.

> "After Tasker bought his herd he went to Fort Worth for ranch supplies. Tasker was a tenderfoot and bought many things, both useful and not useful. He was a "dreamer" and easily taken in-a "fish" for the oldtimers in '78.

Learn A Lesson from the Hen

Reasons which seem of real import move us to urge every reader of this newspaper of voting age to cast a ballot in the Presidential Voting Test being taken to learn, so far as possible, public sentiment regarding the coming election. If every country town in which the vote is now being taken measures up to a proper standard of interest the effect may be far-reaching.

This newspaper, by reason of its exclusive franchise in the Publishers Autocaster Service of New York, will record the voice of small towns and country America when the final figures are announced, and it is important that our town should supply a representative expression of local opinion.

Quit apart from the interest that all of us take in learning what our people think of the Presidential Contest, a very vital interest will be taken by politicians. It is the small towns and country America that finally must decide this Presidential issue. The big cities seem wonderfully important, but only to those who live in them. Only one-third of our population lives in towns of over 25,000 inhabitants. The balance is distributed as follows: In towns of 10,000 to 25,000 6.6, in towns of 5,000 to 10,000 4.7, in towns of 2,500 to 5,000 4.8, in villages of less than 2,500 8.5, in other rural territory 40.1.

A really representative vote from small towns and the country is likely to have a marked influence on the handful of men who as leaders play so important a part in deciding on the future government of America. Astute politicians ever have their ears to the ground, and they are not apt to fly in the face of public opinion if it be definitely and aggressively asserted.

Vote for your choice for President regardless of party. Keep your identit; secret if you wish, but cast your vote.

Let Our Town Be Heard From

If the great American hen could talk, the principles of democracy would soon be spread over the globe, for there is scarce a land under the sun where the cackle of our barnyard fowl is not heard

The fiscal year of 1923 will show that approximately thirtynine million dozen American eggs were shipped abroad in that period, and if we include those sent to our own colonies and not included in the government figures as exports, then the number will exceed forty million dozen. To this must be added the eggs and yolks, frozen, dried, or canned, which brings the sum total up to quite a half billion, having a value of $12,000,000.

In the year preceding the war the value of eggs, dried and frozen, entering the United States, chiefly from the Orient, advanced $37,000. 1 1919 it had risen to $8,000,000. Then Uncle Sam's scientific department workers perfected the methods of press ag the product and in two years our importation dropped to $3,000,000.

-se silent and poorly paid workers in bare looking experimental rooms in the national capital every now and then add a million or two of dollars to the income of the nation. They should take a lesson from the hen and let themselve be heard

Doing Our Duty Leads to Power

DUTY.—This is a positive world. Upon every living creature is imposed an obligation. Duty demands that this obligation be met. He who fails to meet it is a drone. The world discards its drones. Do not let yourself be cast into the discard.

Duty is a stern taskmaster. It commands us to be useful, not according to our desires, but according to our powers. Duty will tolerate neither slight nor neglect. The more you shirk It the higher it piles up be ore you.

If you treak the thread in the loom by being false to your duty today you may confront the flaw tomorrow, when you will have forgotten its cause and are helpless to mend it. Duties seldom come through choice. They are the lot of destiny.

The reward for doing one duty is the power to fulfill another. The arm that swings the hammer grows scrong. The conscience that, soldier-like, pursues duty daily develops character.

Duty is the acid test of manhood. It marks heroes and shows the shame of pretenders.

Duty is not spasmodic,-it does not confro." us occasionally; it is constant. Some duty meets each of us face to face every day. We cannot meet it by long fumps. We must follow it step by step. Duty measures time cautiously. With every duty we are given the time in which to do it. But we are not given time to spare.

lect will for elt fuifillment. Do your duty now. Take no chance. Duty delayed spells failure. Pleasure often appears to be in conflict with duty because in attempting to discharge our duty we do only what we are strictly obliged to do, and we feel we are seldom praised for it. Yet the pleasur a man of honor enjoys in the consciousness of having performed his duy is a reward he pays himself for all his pains.

The first, the last, and the greatest pleasure to life is the sense of having discharged our duty. Copyright, 1923, by Richard Lloyd Jones.

LET THE BIBLE ALONE

Heretical, rationalistic forces do not seem to be satisfied with the wreck they have produced. They are responsible for the late war. They are also responsible for the crime wave sweeping this country and Europe. The orgy of sin and crime can be traced directly to false teachings.

Like the vultures they make feast of the decaying carcass. Not satisfied with the murder, expense, wreck, and ruin produced, they have witten a shorter Bible which will perpetuate the orgy.

The astonishing thing is that there are leaders connected with the certain religious organizations who have lent their names and their influence to the infamous, hell-born production called the Shorter Bible. If these organisations permit their names and the names of their ler 's to be attached to this abortion, then the righteous, orthodox Christian forces of America should crush them. Our boys and girls cannot be entrusted to the leadership or to the educational and club features of institutions drawing their sustenance from the churches of the living Christ, to have the faith of those children undermined by such infamous attacks upon God's infallible Word.

The Shorter Bible, so called, is one of the most blasphemous attacks that has been made upon God's Holy Bible.

Orthodox, self-respecting, consecrated men and women will not be insulted by such attacks of the rationalistic forces.

Two rilgrims were following the road to Mecca. At the treasury steps they met up with a squirrel that reminded the one who looked as if he owned a railroad to say to the other:

Children are among the most beautiful springtime decorations of the national capital.

The freshness of these buman flowers is something that never grows old. They are among the decorations that are with us always.

After the children had played, the "eats" were served. Even the smallest ones were given a little ice cream. Sonny enjoyed his thoroughly.

Children Like "Play Care."

"Play as You Enter" is the welcome ign on the sides of the "Jollytown" trolley cars in Baltimore, near one of the city parks, where the traction company has set aside several cars for the children to play in. The cars are complete in every detail except that the power is turned off and they are anchored to the ground. Instead of the usual advertising cards, Mother Goose rhymes and animal pictures are displayed along the sides. The constant din of register bells, clanging gongs, starting and stopping signals, and the loud calling of imaginary and unheard-of street names afford a noisy proof to the amused passers-by of the extreme popularity of the "play cars" as the crews take them along fancled

"Man on Horseback" Proved That He Could Unbend-Truly a "Very Lovely Sunday."

The man on horseback has stood through many centuries as the type of the haughty, superior person. He rides while others plod. He looks down upon the rest of us. And riders in the park are very superior persons indeed. Yet one who easily bestrode a handsome chestnut horse was seen the other Sunday afternoon to stop beside the railing near the Sixty-sixth street gate, westward, where stood a woman with many children,

He reined in, borrowed an urchin and set it on the pommel of his sadile. Very gently he trotted off, very lightly he turned and very softly he centered back, never getting beyoud the brave but anxious mother's sight. Then he borrowed another urchin and did it again. And then another. And each time, as he handed the proud child back, he slipped something into its hand.

A man who walks in the park regularly says he has never in many years of walking there seen the like happen before. It was a very lovely Sunday .- New York Times.

Staid Lady and Pink Garters. I am somewhat of a staid lady of mature years, whom no one would suspect of wearing a pair of pink ruffly garters. But I had a new pair, nevertheless, and being rather tight, to ease myself. I pulled them down around my ankles when eating breakfast, on a nice spring morning recently. I started out. I was tripping along happily when I happened to glance downward. Horrors! There were those pink garters around my ankles, and my skirt was after the flapper type. There was nothing to do but stoop and pull them up. A hasty glance over my shoulder revealed a man behind me with a broad grin on his face. I lost no time in turning a corner.-Chicago Tribune.

Don't you think it would pay to have it overhauled before the breakdown comes and to see if the machinery is really being run efficiently?

In Hygeia, Dr. Haven Emerson, professor of public health in Columbia university, gives reasons enough to convince the most skeptical that health examinations pay, not only in increased health but also in dollars and cents. "It has grown to be a custom" for people who employ men and women in large numbers in shops and factories "to have each new employee examined to see if he or she is in sound health." And again: "Many of the unions are requiring an annual health examination of their members, because they have found this the best way to prevent the illnesses which cost their sick benefit funds so much." If these people who are in big business find it worth while and economical there is probably something in it.

An attempt to attack the conquering cotton boll-weevil by more subtle means than have hitherto been employed is about to be started by the Department of Agriculture. crude methods as gassing and polsoning having been ineffective, the insect is going to be lured to his doom through his sense of smell. At least such is the hope of the department experts.

A research is about to be begun to find out if there be any particular plant which attracts the weevil. If such is found, it will be studied until the chemical substances which cause its action are isolated. It is hoped these may then be made synthetically and used to lure the pest of the cotton fields from the cotton to poison baits or else to cause him to raise a family before the cotton is developed enough to furnish them with proper means of support.-By Science Service.

Schools in Philippines.

The Philippine islands have a total of 8.174 schools, public and private, with an approximate enrollment of education and the superintendent of the Philippines have a population of 2,500,000 children of school age.

Public schools alone number 7,641 and attendance reached a total of 1,094,472 during the last year, while private schools number 532 and have an enrollment of 64,835. Eighty-five per cent of the private schools in the Philippines are religious institutions, and only 15 per cent secular. Seventy-seven per cent of the religious private schools are Catholic, while the remaining 8 per cent are Protestant.

The public school system, in which English is taught, includes 24,878 teachers, 341 of whom are Americans.

The galena detector is responsible of course, and when a radio enthusiast says his reflex receiver is as "clear as a crystal" he means it .- New York Times.

TESTING STRESS ON PLANES 'Accelerometer" Registers Information of Value to Builder, as Well as Showing Pilot's Ability. Not long ago the national advisory committee for aeronautics undertook to obtain information about the stresses that are produced in maneuvering an airplane. At the beginning of a series of experiments it was observed that, when the plane was flying a straight and level course, a spring balance with a one-pound weight attached to it would register just one pound. If the craft was put into a turn or made to rise, the apparent weight of the one-pound object increased to two or three pounds. while on a downward dip the spring balance would indicate less than one pound or even zero. Based upon the conclusions of these tests, an instrument, which has been called an "acrelerometer," was designed, to detect and record the variation and relative odor or emanation from the cotton magnitude of the forces that tend to set up stresses in an airplane structure when in flight. In doing this. says Popular Mechanics Magazine, it also gives an unblased record of the relative ability of pilots in handling their machines in the air, and in making a satisfactory landing.

In the same year the tomb of Queen Hatshepsut was cleared out by him on a Davies' endowment. Under a Davies' commission, Mr. Carter discovered the last resting place of Queen Ti, mother of King Akhnaton, predecessor of Tut-Ankh-Amen. He gave up his government post in 1904 to prosecute his recent search.

Flea Season.

Have you a little flea in your home? If you have not you're not in the scratching these days. If you have, don't try to camouflage by calling it a "sand flea," because it is just plain dog and cat flea.

That's what H. F. Dietz, assistant state entomologist, says. Fleas are beginning to become numerous. It takes a flea only a little time to be a great-great-grandfather, Dietz sald. The flea question has become so engaging that the entomology division of the state conservation department has prepared a bulletin on how to wage war on the flea. It will be ready for distribution soon, but one has to go some to get a jump ahead of a flea .-Indianapolis News.

Natives of Alaska are descended from the Mongolian races, according to Dwight H. Robinson (Private "Bob") of San Francisco. This conclusion he drew while serving an army enlistment in the "north country," where he had an opportunity to observe the inhabitants first hand. Aside from certain biological resemblances these people bear to the Japanese and other Mongolians, many of their customs and beliefs would indicate that they are a branch of the same family, he said.

Are Mongolian

"It is likely that the two continents were at one time connected at the point where Bering straits now is," said Mr. Robinson. "This 50-mile channel is now traversed by the natives in little walrus-hide canoes, which when operated by a single person are called 'kiyaks' and if of a size to accommodate two passengers are named 'bidarkes.' This journey, which in ages past was probably taken overland, is frequently made. The inhabitants of Russian Siberia on the other side of the straits who are Mongolian have many characteristics in common with the Alaskans, which would indicate that they were all of one race.

"Both indulge in ancestor worship, One of the most odd expressions given this belief by the Alaskans is the significance they attach to the aurora borealis. The northern lights have alternate shafts of dark hues with those of exquisite shades and tints. The somber colors, they say, represent the old men and squaws and the beautiful colors their illustrious relatives, who were great warriors."

PECULIAR PROPERTY OF EYE

Why Some Persons "See Red" and No Other Color for Duration of Their Lives.

When a man suddenly selzes a knife or revolver and runs amuk amongst his fellows, he is said to be "seeing red."

As a matter of fact, many of the gentlest and kindest of people actually see red for the whole of their lives. The eye is a very delicate organ; and the slightest derangement may throw its whole mechanism out of gear. Cases of colored vision are not uncommon. There are people who always see as though they were looking through red, green, or even purple glass. Others cannot see colors at all. To them the brightest flower bed is as.

drab as a photograph. Most people have one eye that sees colors more brightly than the other. Try the experiment of looking at a stained glass window or a brightly-painted picture with first one eye and then the other. You will probably find there is a distinct difference in the impression conveyed. Both eyes see the colors, but to one they are a good 1.160,000, according to the bureau of the antiquities of upper Egypt and deal less vivid and less contrasting than to the other.

> Why Humidity is important No system of heating and no sort of fuel, however, will heat a house properly unless the householder pays attention to the matter of bumidity. Air in the open contains a large percentage of moisture. When we shut up our houses we dry the air. Moist air is like a blanket. It holds the heat within our bodies. Dry air allows it to escape. A properly humid air willi feel warmer at 65 degrees than a dry air at 80 degrees and be much morewholesome. To moisten the air is a much cheaper way of heating than tobuy coal at $14 a ton. So keep the kitchen tea kettle spouting steam, and on occasion open the cocks of the steam radiators. Set out some pans of water to evaporate. We keep an ornamental brass bowl full of water on the big wood heater in our living room. Warm water evaporates faster than cold water. Keep your air moist, and it will help you to keep your fuel bills low.-From the Outlook.

> > Why Indians Are Protesting.

Yakima Indians in the state of Washington are highly incensed because sheep grazing on Mount Adams huckleberry fields have destroyed their age-old natural resource.

The red men who each year make trips to the wild berry fields of the mountainous regions have appealed to Governor Hart to protest the pasturing of live stock in certain parts of the national forest reserves where wild fruit abounds. Klickitat and Yakima Indians from the earliest traditions of these tribes have annually depended on the products of the berry fields for part of their winter supplies and the part of Mount Adams where huckleberries grow profusely they call Sweet Mecca, by the Indian name of Husum.

Recent Invention Also Captures Har monics Which Hitherto Have Been Completely Lost.

A new use has been found for the remarkable device which photographs sound on motion picture film and then reproduces the sound from the film. C. A. Hoxie, the inventor, has now devised a pickup or microphone, using the principle of the pallophotophone reproducer.

The microphone is the link between the artist or instrument in the studio and the electrical circuit; it converts or transforms the variations of tone anto corresponding variations of current. Microphones now in general use are constructed on the principle of the telephone transmitter in which the compression or expansion of granular carbon affects the electric current, in the pallophotophone pickup s very sensitive diaphragm is set vibrating by sound. The movement of the diaphragm is communicated to a mirror three sixty-fourths of an inch equare. A strong light strikes the chacing mirror, which reflects the light beam at a sensitive light cell. The variation in the beam of light, caused by the vibration of the mirror, varies the effect on the light cell and thus produces a corresponding variation in the electric circuit. Amplification is then obtained in the ordinary way by means of pliotrons.

The new pickup eliminates the hiss which accompanies the use of the ordimary microphone; it is more sensitive and responds more readily and accurately to sound waves, capturing harmonics which would ordinarily be lost. -Exchange.

PRINCIPLE IS NOT "MODERN"

Amoient Egyptians Built Charlot Wheels That Correspond to Those Used on Autos Today.

Speculation on how many ages ago the basic principle of the modern motor car wheel was discovered has been revived sharply by the find of several richly ornamented charlot wheels in the temb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen at Luxor, Egypt.

Expert scrutiny shows remarkably "modern" notions in these wheels and rim construction have graceful outlines combined with great strength. The wheels were used on charlots probably designed for war, which involved driving at top speed across rough ground and often crashing into other war charlots.

One way the motive engineers of the ancient king's time gained the followed this punishment. desired wheel strength was by using an excessively long hub with a small diameter to reduce friction and help in holding alignment. Motor car hubs today make use of the principle. In vanity. the bronze used for spindles and bearmetal modern workers never have been able to duplicate. One cent a gallon has been added to the wholesalers of gasoline. They will pass this on down to the retailers and the retailers pass it to the they will be able to stick a tax on W. H. Crow and family left Sat- anything for the corporations or the right to pay they have another guess coming to them. The consumer has always paid the freight and will continue to do so until the laws set the price the manufacturer must get for his goods and this is too sociliastic to be right.-Claude News.

Ellerd Barn on Fire

The fire department was Tuesday morning to the old Ellerd place one and a half miles northwest of town where a barn was on fire. The trucks made a quick run but the blaze was almost extinguished before they arrived. Very little damage was
