Indians Enjoy Modern Conveniences

Last week there passed through this city a cavalcade of nine motor cars, owned and driven by Osage Indians from the Osage reservations in Oklahoma. They had been over in New Mexico on a deer hunt and were on their way back home after a successful trip. These Indians are all wealthy and none of the cars that they were driving could have cost less than $2,000. This method of travel is somewhat different from the style used by the grand sires in their trips over the same hunting grounds. Some folks say times change. We'll say that they do.—Clarendon News.
