

Week's Cotton Trade

Cotton prices during the week December 27-January 2, were fairly steady, and higher excepting on Friday when prices broke rather sharply. Final quotations for the week, however, were up from 2 to 13 points. On the New York Cotton Exchange January future contracts were up 13 points, closing at 23.67c as compared with 23.80c the previous week and 24.21c one year ago. On the New Orleans Cotton Exchange January future contracts closed at 23.80c as compared with 23.88c the previous week and 34.55c one year ago. January future contracts on the Chicago Board of Trade closed at 23.85c as compared with 24.05c the past week.

The average price for Middling spot cotton in ten designated spot markets was about unchanged, closing at 23.78c as compared with 23.76c last week and 34.45c one year ago.

The prompt stopping of the heavy volume of January notices was commented upon quite freely by the trade as indicating underlying strength in the market. Domestic mills during the week were reported also to have fixed prices. Only a fair business was reported to have been put through in the cloth markets during the week with prices somewhat stronger.

Exports for the week amounted to 361,185 bales, compared with 218,572 bales the previous week and 220,608 bales one year ago. Total exports from August 1, 1924, to January 2, 1925, amounted to 4,519,698 bales, as compared with 3,394,041 bales during the corresponding period last year. Figures include exports to Canada to November 30.

Certificated stock at New York on January 2, was 180,930 bales, and at New Orleans 116,044 bales. Total stocks all kinds at New York were 212,088 bales, and at New Orleans 442,428 bales.

New York future contracts closed January 2: January 23.67; March 23.99, May 24.30, July 24.44, October 23.75. New Orleans closed: January 23.80, March 23.90, May 24.20, July 24.22, October 23.42. New Orleans spot cotton 23.80 per lb.

PASSING SHIPS OF YESTERYEAR.

"Rotor-Motors" Are Taking the Place of Sails and Efficiency the Place of Romance on the Seas, Writer Says.

R. Howard Spring in the Manchester Guardian Weekly.

The Victory lies somewhere about our shores, and the Cutty Sark takes her ease in the spacious elbow-room of Falmouth harbor. And somewhere on the high seas, accompanied by the Flying Dutchman moves the ghosts of all beautiful ships that ever were. Flecker had a glimpse of the ghost and strained his eyes.

To see the mast burst open with a rose
And the whole deck put on its leaves again.

We shall see the like of these things no more. Shall we much longer see even the

Dirty British coaster with a salt-caked smoke-stack or is that familiar, homely tramp to go the way of the "quinquereme of Nineveh" and the "stately Spanish galleon"? We tremble to remember that in a German port there is a desperately efficient contrivance called the "rotor-motor ship"—a hull surmounted by things that look as beautiful as stumpy mill chimneys.

The rotor-motor ship is, without doubt, a boon and a blessing. Let us pay tribute to the genius of the man who has eliminated so much hard dangerous work; and then let us remember what a thing of beauty it is that is passing. The desperate struggle, belly-flat on the high spars, between the wind that sought to snatch the canvas and the man who sought to reef it, and all the other bits of work that made sea romances so thrilling and life on the sea a hell—these, presumably, will soon be among the obsolete things. Let us be thankful; but let us remember that the price of beauty is often agony.

Sinking to Baseness.
A frank sentimentalist may fitly mourn, first of all, the passing of beautiful names, for even in names—especially in names—we are sinking to baseness. What a glow along the nerves could be excited by the thought of a galleon or felucca, a schooner or brigantine, a gallery, caravel, or clipper! Even a "tramp" suggests a picturesque sloucher upon the deep; but a "rotor-motor ship!" It is too much to hope that a poet will ever see a rotor-motor ship "treading the quiet water like a fawn."

It is easy to smile at the regrets of a sentimentalist, but the fact is that one of the great inspirations of poetry is passing away. Ships have been among the most beautiful things the minds of men have conceived and the hands of men made. Poets have lavished their love in describing women and ships, and when at a loss they have illustrated the one by the other. How surely Congreve has put a fine woman on record for all time! "Here she comes, I' faith, full sail, with her fan spread and streamers out, and a shoal of fools for tenders."

Look where you will in the long story of ships, you will find the page illumined with beauty. You will begin with Cleopatra's barge which

like a burnished throne
Burn'd on the water; the poop was beaten gold;
Purple the sails, and so perfumed that
The wind were lovesick with them.

From Egypt you can go on to Greece and consider that Hellenic armament which set out from the Piræus for Syracuse rather more than four hundred years before Christ. How Thucydeeds' description gives you the warmth and color and movement of the occasion—the captains spending lavishly on flourishes and adornments "one and all making the utmost exertions to enable their own ships to excel in beauty and fast sailing;" the excitement in the city and the crowds thronging to the shore "to see a sight worth looking at and passing all belief;" the final trumpet commanding silence through the fleet, and then all those on board all the ships uttering their prayers aloud in unison, following the voice of a herald; the libations of wine from gold and silver goblets; and, that done, the whole long line of ships moving in column out of the harbor and racing each other as far as Aegina.

A Fine Sight.
That was perhaps one of the finest days for ships in all the history of the world; and it must have been a fine sight to see the high-pooped pride of Spain standing out under canvas towards the doom Drake held for it. Those two days and one other will always live in the history of ships, and that other is the most finely recorded of all. It was the day when the ships left Mudros, in Lemnos, for Gallipoli; and the heart thrills at Mr. Masefield's record of the scene. "No such gathering of fine ships has ever been seen upon this earth, and the beauty and the exultation of the youth upon them made them like sacred things as they moved away." Read those few pages of "Gallipoli" if you love ships and if your heart can be moved by the high deeds that men and ships have done together in the world. They left the harbor very, very slowly; this tumult of cheering lasted a long time; no one who heard it will ever forget it. * * * Presently all were out, and the fleet stood across for Tenedos, and the sun went down with marvelous color, lighting island after island and the Asian peaks, and those left behind in Mudros trimmed their lamps, knowing that they had been for a little brought near to the heart of things."

When men have gone out in ships on deeds like these, and on quests like that of Columbus and that of Scott and Cook, it is small wonder that ships have become the symbol of life's seeking and searching. Hitherto men have always made their symbol the most beautiful of their work. A sentimentalist must be pardoned if he feels a little shaken in nerve at the news about the rotorship.

Announcement

—We are pleased to announce to the many friends that this store has made in its long life of service that a radical change in character and a change in name has been made.

—From the Brigance & Hunt Necessity Store the name now becomes the A. C. Brigance Dry Goods Co. and the store completely changes to a strictly dry goods stock.

—After February first Mr. A. C. Kincaid will be associated with us. Mr. Kincaid is a dry Goods man of long experience and well knows the needs of the local field.

—Extensive interior changes are being made in our store room on the north side of the square, not the least of which is our closing out of all lines other than Dry Goods. In a variety store such as we had there are hundreds of needed household articles—and these must be quickly sacrificed to make room. We are therefore offering remaining stocks of every line, except dry goods, at practically your own price—most of them below less than wholesale cost.

—This close out sale should mean much to you, as well as the announcement that we are very soon to be in position to care for your every Dry Goods need.

—We have appreciated your past patronage and will appreciate a continuation of it, believing that you will approve the changes that we are making.

SOME THINK FREEZE DID DAMAGE TO GROWING WHEAT.

SUNSHINE, Jan. 13.—The weather continues to stay cold, but is clear and dry and most of the farm work of 1924 is finishing up. A small amount of cotton and some threshing is about all that remains. Threshing is going on this week on the Redinger and Struve farms. No plowing has yet been done on account of the frozen ground and most farmers wishing to graze their fields out. It is feared the wheat was injured by the hard freezes, but we hope not.

GRAIN THRESHING IS ORDER OF DAY AT RUNNINGWATER.

RUNNINGWATER, Jan. 15.—Cotton has about all been picked and row crops stacked. Some few are threshing their grain. Mr. Ed Kiser and George Roberts threshed their bundles Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Shields of the eastern part of the county spent a few days with John Eakin and uncle last week.

Mrs. Gladys Davis and children recently returned from Wichita Falls where they have been for a visit.

Father Tarwater is spending the winter with a daughter in Nashville, Tenn.

Jas. Meyers and family of San Angelo now occupy the farm southwest of Runningwater which was recently occupied by Guy Morton. Mr. Morton has moved to Plainview.

Mr. Stimpson and family have moved to a farm in the Cousins community.

The Mullis brothers and families, one from Memphis, Tex., the other from Floyd county, visited with their sister, Mrs. Lillian Fortenberry and mother, Mrs. Mullis, a few days ago.

Mr. Nicholson and family, who formerly occupied the Will Stansell place, four miles west of Runningwater, are moving to central Texas.

Quite a few of our people have visited in the Dan Kimble home in the Valley View community recently. They have installed a new radio receiving set.

The baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Roberts was buried in the Runningwater cemetery last Saturday afternoon. We extend our sympathy. Mrs. Roberts is getting along very nicely. She is in the home of Mrs. Phipps of Plainview.

It was reported that another case of scarlet fever is in the McClung home. We sure hope for them a speedy recovery. They are under quarantine.

Mr. Ed Kiser will leave at an early date for Temple where he will be under treatment for his eyes. He expects to be away some ten or twelve days.

We are very glad to state that little Emma Lee Holt, who was quite sick the latter part of last week, is very much improved at this writing. She was threatened with pneumonia.

Mr. W. J. Leonard made a business trip to Amarillo Tuesday of this week.

Mr. Horace Rogers came in last Thursday from Georgia where he spent the holidays with relatives. He reports very cold weather there Christmas.

Rev. Earl Degg of Center Plains was in our community Thursday.

The small daughter of Mr. Shannon happened to a very painful accident last week while cutting kindling. A piece flew up, striking her in the eye, putting her eye entirely out. She was hurried to the Plainview Sanitarium where medical aid was given. She is doing well as could be expected at present.

James Holt was absent from school Thursday on account of sickness.

Marvin Eakin and sister motored to Silvertown Monday. They were accompanied by Mrs. John Eakin and baby.

Mr. Ed Kiser butchered a hog last week that weighed seven hundred and some few pounds.

Mrs. Stevenson's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis, recently moved on the place formerly occupied by A. W. Angle, two miles west of Runningwater.

Mrs. Fortenberry had the old school building moved today onto her lot east of the store. She will move her stock of groceries soon and use it for a store.

So another New Year faces us. The first few days will pass away just as today is passing, silently, surely unerringly. No matter how we celebrated New Year Day, it will leave us as today with our sense of gratitude or ingratitude, and with our consciousness of having spent it well or ill. "Each day is a new beginning," the poet puts it, but he might have said "each hour, aye, each minute, is a new beginning." In other words, time does not amount to much only as we value it for the high privilege of good living.

It is life that counts. Life makes the years significant either for good or bad. 1924 has moved the world nearer to better ways. Common sense has been its slogan. Or better stated, life has moved the world nearer to God and sanity and sanctity. Religion has been on its front page.

Religion has been coming more and more into its own—genuine religion, practical religion, God and soul. The youth, wild and unrestrained, may think and even say that "religion is far-fetched; on the contrary, religion is of yesterday, today, and tomorrow, the newest, freshest reality among mankind, and why? Because of the things for which religion stands. These are eternally new and interesting. They are such things as faith and love and hope; righteousness, truth and justice; such things as home, and school and church. 1924 says to 1925: "You are young. I am old—aye, passing away. But remember, I was also young, and I found myself linked to the past as well as to the present and to the future. And I found it well. For it held me where I would have made shipwreck. I learned in time to catch wisdom from the past in adapting myself to the new and untried. So, my dear young year of 1925, be you also wise and fear not the new or untried. Go steadily, cautiously forward. Be creative. Leave 1925 as your father left 1924—a little better for having been here." This is an indirect figurative way of saying to myself: "I am here this New Year. What am I going to make of this year? Everything the best possible—my job, my soul, my country." Good. No resolution can be better than the best. And we wish one another this kind of a Happy New Year and may God bless us all in such endeavor—as he will.

A. J. EDWARDS, 74, DEAD.

A. J. Edwards, 74, died Thursday night at his home, 25 miles northeast of Plainview. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Tulla Baptist church by the pastor. Interment was made in the Tulla cemetery under the direction of Plainview Undertaking Company.

PRESIDENT AND FIRST LADY ON SKIS.

PRESIDENT ON SKIS. WPA.

President and Mrs. Coolidge herewith are shown trying out the new skis presented to them by the National Ski Association through a delegation which called at the White House and invited the Chief Executive and the First Lady of the Land to attend the association's ski tournament at Coonton, S. D., in February. Despite the fact that there was no snow in Washington at the time, the President and Mrs. Coolidge negotiated the White House lawn in the skis while the delegation looked on and applauded.

"Resolushuns, Like Bad Habits, Are Easily Made, But Air a Lot Easier Broken Than Bad Habits"

As everybody elts is makin Noo Yeers resolushuns, I sippose I'd jist as well make a few too, altho I aint used but very few of the ones made in previous yeers. Resolushuns, like bad habits, air easily made, but air a lot easier broken than habits. Joe he ses I better resolve to quit gossippin 'bout my nabers an I tole him rite out that war one thing I wantt guilty of I aint that it was a sin an a waste of time. I up an tole him hed better resolve to spend less time settin on a keg whit-till down at the ginrel store. Of course I occasionally repeat to you what I herd Mis Whaley sayin to Miz Van Smithers over the party line about how much Mis Doc Skinner pade fer them new satin shoes an how dretfully extravagant she is, but my land, that aint gossip, is it?

Jest now Milo Center is in the middle of the epidem: that is sweepin the whole white race an sum of the colored folks in Ameriky. The cross wurd puzzle seems to spread faster than bugs in a tater patch. It attacks everybody from grandfathers down to infants. Of coarse the infants can't tell how they suffer except to tear an scratch at the puzzle plague that keeps mother in her chair from early morn till late at nite, an the only thing that gives poor mother temporary relief is large doses of dictionarys. I thot shore Joe Aldridge was immune, but one rainy Sundy he tuck it in the worst form. Now Vilet an Johnny have it too, an I have my hands full doin all the wark while all the fambly is down with puzzleitis. So fer I aint ketchid the disease, as a preventative I use cotton in both ears.

Mis Ralston was over to see me last week an brung her knittin along an spint the day. Probly you don't know nothin about her as she has only lived hear a few yeers. She's the kind that thinks organs an lace curtains air still in style—just plane as an old shue an a fine nabber, an gits more genuine pleasure out of the few diversions she does have than anybody I know. A simple air on the organ gives her a deeper joy than a whole orchesty can give a milyunair. Jazz an home brew may have a big kick fer a time fer the welthy flappers an jelly-beens, but the folks who live the longest an find life sweetest air the ones that air content with simple plesures.

A woman writin to one of these here "Confidential Heart Chat" pages in a newspaper wants to know if she shud git a divorce frum her husband. She ses their trends ridicule them because she is the tallest. Well, her head is shorter than his! Pore woman, she must have been a pet in a cage, fer people will find sumthin to joke about, an joke they will whether its about your secont mother-in-law, yure big feet or red hair. Jest let them have their little joke, probly they air jokin the old made across the street about buyin out the paint shops an thin failin to catch a husband leep yer.

I notis ma Ferguson will have a big ball whin she goes in office, which is a little ahead of pa. Ma is bein balled in, pa was balled out.

The Milo Center Ginrel Merchandice company are advertizin a Janiwary clearance sale. It's a clearance sail alrite—just go n there an buy a few things an yure pocket book will be clear as a spring morni whin you git outside agin. They say they air cuttin the price in half. Probly they air—they cud cut the price in quarters an thin make 2 hunerd pir scent net profit.

I reckin its about time I was gettin redly fer bed. Joe he has been snorin fer an hour. Vilet is emtertainin Pete Ralston with her cross wurd puzzle book. Its tin o'clock. I think I'll jist drop a hint casual like that—its time honest people was at home in bad.

Clarissa Gwendolyn aint bin well lately, so I tuck her down to Doctor Skinners office Sattiday, but he didn't seem to know what war ailin her. I'm feelin porely myself—rumatism bin botherin me durin the frequent blizzards. Joe he lows just because I'm in the house I ain't gittin no exercise, but I git a site more exercise in a day than Joe Aldridge gets in a week. Now I jist must quit or I'll oversleep an have to sind the chillern to school without breakfast.

The Van Smithers, Whaleys, Granny, Ralstons, Doc Skinner an all the rest wish you a happy noo yer, an so does

MARY ANN ALLDRIDGE.

Customers of Public Utilities Invested $500,000,000 in Them As Owners During 1924

Half a billion dollars—one-third of the total amount of new capital invested in the public utilities of this country in 1924—was supplied by the customers of these utilities.

Last year their investment was about $300,000,000. It is only within the past few years that the users of public utility services have become owners of the public utility properties to a considerable extent.

The public utility—for instance the service of electric power and light—is necessary to the people of any progressive community.

This service must go on all the time. It must be supplied at a reasonable cost to the user. The interest of the user in keeping the service going adequately is very great. That is probably why so many people are investing their savings in the properties that supply them with these essential services.
