For hostages to Khomeini

Militants yield responsibility

Iranian militants met with Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini today and turned over "responsibility" for their 52 American captives to the government, U.S. officials, who are considering Iranian terms for their release, said the development was encouraging.

"We will from now on delegate responsibility for the (hostages) safeguarding to the government and will engage in the most important current issue of the revolution, defense of the Islamic homeland," Tehran Radio quoted a statement from the militants as saying. The militants were referring to Iran's current border war with Iraq.

Plans for the physical transfer of the hostages will be worked out following a "meeting before midnight" (3:30 p.m. EST) between the government and the militants, officials of the Iranian prime minister's office reported.

The militants' statement said the government during that meeting would "introduce (their) representative for delivery of the American spies."

The aides to the prime minister said Algeria was delegated to handle talks with Washington and the captives' release if the U.S. government meets Iran's demands. They said that in the meantime Iran will continue to have custody of the hostages, who will "remain where they are," presumably meaning the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

In Washington, White House press secretary Jody Powell said the transfer "will be a very positive sign," and presidential aide Jack Watson, interviewed on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," called the transfer plans "a very positive development."

Representatives of the Islamic militants who seized the American Embassy and its staff last Nov. 4, 366 days ago, met for two hours today with Khomeini following the approval Sunday by the Majlis, Iran's parliament, of terms for the release of the Americans.

Tehran Radio said Khomeini later thanked the students and added: "This service that these youths have made — and seized these corrupt people and kept them — crushed all fears in the mind of the people and in the minds of the peoples of nations and governments, and the monstrous picture they had drawn of the superpowers is torn."

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai met with Algeria's ambassador in Tehran, and the two agreed Algeria would take care of the hostages, Pars said. It was not immediately known if this meant the captives would be flown to Algeria or remain in Iran under Algerian supervision.

"In this meeting it was decided that the Moslem and brother country of Algeria will take care of the U.S. hostages," Pars said of the 30-minute session between Rajai and Abdul Karim Garaib.

"In reply, the Algerian ambassador said we wish that Algeria will be able to do all it can to fulfill the desires of the government of Iran and to safeguard Iran's interests and expand bilateral relations as much as possible."

The ambassadors of Switzerland and West Germany also met with Rajai this morning, Pars said. During the meeting, the Swiss ambassador submitted a message from President Carter to Rajai, but there were no immediate details, the agency said.

A senior aide to Rajai said the official English-language text of the conditions which the Majlis agreed on for the release of the Americans would be given late today or early Tuesday to the Algerian Embassy for delivery to the U.S. government.

Algeria handles Iranian interests in the United States while Switzerland represents the United States in Tehran.

Rajai's aide said his government had no plans to deal directly with the United States or to include U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim in the negotiations, which presumably will be channeled through the Swiss and Algerian governments. He said Iran would be represented in the negotiations by a committee made up of the prime minister, senior officials of the Foreign Ministry and Behzad Nabavi, the minister of state for executive affairs.

The Majlis turned responsibility for the crisis over to the government after adopting the recommendations of a special parliamentary committee named to draw up terms for the release of the captive Americans.

President Carter said the Majlis conditions were a "significant development" that "offer a positive basis" for ending the hostage crisis. But Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie told ABC-TV's "Issues and Answers" arrangements to free the hostages "are obviously going to be time-consuming" and may not be completed by Election Day.

The Majlis said the hostages should be freed if the U.S. government pledged not to interfere in Iran's affairs, released all Iranian assets frozen in the United States, cancelled all American legal actions against Iran and returned to Iran all assets of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and his close relatives.

These were the same conditions made in September by Khomeini. But the Majlis said if all the conditions were not met at the same time, then the hostages should be released in groups. As each condition was fulfilled, "a number of criminals will be released with the approval of the Islamic government." And if the U.S. government failed to meet all or some of the conditions, Iran's judicial system "will carry out its duty and punish the criminals."

Bond election discussion set

The public is invited to attend a special work session in City Hall, 6 p.m. today, during which councilmen and members of the Citizens Advisory Council will discuss plans for an upcoming bond election.

According to City Manager Don Davis, a list of priorities will be discussed during the meeting. Davis expects that repairs of city streets and water lines will top the list.

All in all, the city hopes to raise $13 million or more for improvements proposed by the various committees that make up the advisory council. Costs of suggestions by all committee members totaled $25 million, but council members pared that to just over half.

Campaign almost over; Texas' 26 votes viewed as crucial

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas voters put an end Tuesday to one of the longest, hardest and most expensive presidential campaign seasons.

The final polls have been taken, the debates are over and now it's up to the voters.

Secretary of State George Strake estimates 4.25 million Texas voters will show up at the polls, although 6.3 million out of the 9.6 million voting-age population are registered.

In 1976, the last presidential election, a little over 4 million voted out of the 6.28 million registered.

Jimmy Carter carried Texas in 1976 with a 129,000-vote margin over President Gerald Ford.

Political surveys and polls indicate Texas is more of a toss-up this year. Some predict the winner will be decided by an edge of as few as 10,000 votes.

But when did it all start?

There was plenty of presidential talk before 1980 but for Texans the official filing date was Feb. 4. That was the deadline for political candidates in Texas to declare themselves in or out of the Democratic or Republican primaries.

Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, former Texas Gov. John Connally, former United Nations Ambassador George Bush, and Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., became the official candidates for the Texas GOP presidential primary. The winners in the May 3 primary would divide Texas delegates to the national convention for the presidential nomination.

Texas Democrats, who held a one-time presidential primary in 1976, decided to elect national convention delegates at a state convention. Later, the party chose to have a straw poll or "beauty contest" in its May 3 primary that would not affect selection of delegates by the convention. Carter, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and California Gov. Jerry Brown were selected for the ballot.

By May 3, Connally and Baker were out of the GOP presidential race, with Reagan and Bush making determined bids for the Texas vote.

Reagan won 52 percent of the Texas GOP vote and Bush 47 percent, but Reagan ended up with 61 of the 80 national convention delegates.

Bush dropped out of the presidential race in June and asked his 19 delegates to vote for Reagan at the July national convention, which they did. However, when Reagan picked Bush as a running mate, seven Texas delegates voted against Bush, although he easily won convention approval.

In the Democratic primary, Carter won 56 percent of the "beauty contest." Kennedy got 23 percent, and more than 18 percent wanted neither. Brown had dropped out of the race earlier.

Election process undermined by TV, says ex-LBJ aide

Harve-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Television has undermined the election process by usurping the role of political parties and focusing on images instead of issues, a former presidential assistant believes.

"Media coverage lands a horse-race mentality to the contest," said Douglass Cater, who served as a special presidential assistant to Lyndon Johnson and now is vice-chairman of The London Observer.

"Pollster predictions, urgently projected by the broadcast networks, dismiss contenders while the fight is still raging and effectively close off their opportunities for funding and support," he said at a University of Texas lecture on the presidential election process.

While the electronic media provide information to millions and allow voters to judge the candidates, such benefits are outweighed by their role in exploiting a candidate's image instead of educating viewers about his platform, he said.

"Much like the professional actor before his mirror, the candidate must engage in absorbing preoccupation with his image," recomposing word and gesture as well as hair and dress style to communicate such fundamental virtues as sincerity, determination, momentum, invincibility. He must marshal his energies for the staging of events which will attract media attention," Cater noted.

The media, however, is not the only factor contributing to the demise of the election process, Cater said.

Instead of serving as a "random jousting ground to test a hopeful's pro prowess," state primaries now determine major party contenders months before the nominating conventions meet, he said.

While acknowledging that the primary system offers minorities a greater voice in the election process, Cater suggested several reforms to correct its abuses.

He said limiting primaries to an eight-week period beginning on June 1 would encourage candidates of national stature whose political commitments bar them from full-fledged involvement in the present "marathon primary system."

"To make the method of determining state delegates more equitable, Cater suggested fixing bound delegate ratios in proportion to the total voter turnout. Citizens wishing to defer their choice could support an uncommitted slate drawn up by the state's party leadership, he said.

To eliminate the circus-like atmosphere of nominating conventions, Cater suggests imposing constraints on its size and conduct and scheduling debates and other activities that will attract serious citizen interest.

Cater also recommends that televised debates become a regular feature of the presidential campaign, with nonpartisan organizations sponsoring as many as eight such debates to prevent "the fate of the election turning on one debate one week before the election."

Cater said Americans should not be content with the system merely because it was survived the test of time.

"The challenge should be how can it be better in the future," he said.

At the June state Democratic convention, Carter won 104 of Texas' 152 national delegates, Kennedy got 38 and 10 were uncommitted.

Before going to the August national Democratic convention, at least 40 of Texas' delegates said they thought Carter should withdraw from the race. However, in New York, 108 cast their votes for Carter for a second term, Kennedy got 38 votes, and the rest were uncommitted or for other candidates.

After the national conventions, Texas, with its 26 electoral votes, emerged as one of half a dozen crucial states that Carter and Reagan needed to win the presidency.

The state Reagan-Bush campaign spent more than $3 million, much of it on telephone banks in 35 cities manned by 30,000 volunteers, plus extensive newspaper and television advertising.

Democrats spent more than $1.5 million, also primarily on telephone banks, plus TV and newspaper advertising. A number of labor unions organized their own telephone banks to contact union voters.

Reagan made five campaign trips to Texas and his running mate, Bush, eight trips. Houston, Dallas-Fort Worth and South Texas were their favorite targets, but there also were trips to West, Central and East Texas. Gov. Bill Clements, accompanied many times by Connally, campaigned throughout Texas for the Reagan-Bush ticket.

Carter made four trips to Texas, and there were other visits by his wife, Rosalynn, and Vice President Walter Mondale. Surrogates, including Carter family members, rode in caravans over much of the state. Cabinet members frequently appeared in Texas.

Now the campaigning is over. The decision is up to the voters.

Staubach's Amy interested in another type of bomb

DALLAS (AP) — Politically they're on opposite sides of the fence, but former Dallas Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach, now a CBS Sports commentator, and President Carter do have one thing in common.

The both have a daughter named Amy and both have spoken about their daughters on television.

When President Carter remarked during the nationally televised debate with Republican Ronald Reagan that he had discussed nuclear proliferation with his daughter, Amy, it gave Republican pundits a field day.

When Staubach told a television audience about his conversation with his daughter about another type of bomb, the kind thrown by National Football League quarterbacks, it created a furor.

Staubach was working as color commentator Sunday with Frank Glierber, a CBS announcer, during the game between the Dallas Cowboys and St. Louis Cardinals.

Glierber, who also works as a Dallas sportscaster, encouraged Staubach to discuss means of stopping the Cardinals' high-powered offense.

"Talk about stopping this Cardinal offense," Glierber said to the retired NFL quarterback.

"In fact, I talked to my daughter

Amy this morning about it, and she said the No. 1 problem was the bomb," Staubach replied.

The "bomb" Staubach had discussed with his daughter was a long touchdown pass such as the one Cardinal quarterback Jim Hart threw against the Cowboys.

The similarity of the remark by Staubach to the one by Carter during the debate touched off a furor. A CBS sports official in New York reportedly called the television booth at Busch Memorial Stadium in St. Louis and told Staubach, "No more politics."

Staubach has endorsed Reagan and has appeared on stage with him at several political rallies in Texas.

KDFW-TV, the Dallas CBS affiliate in Dallas, reported receiving several calls from angry Carter supporters.

Reached at his Dallas home following the game, Staubach had little sympathy for the angry callers.

"Good for them. I've been hot about Carter for four years," Staubach replied.

"Johnny Carson has done it (poked fun at the Carter debate remark) every night on NBC. Why don't they call him?"

"I'd say Amy Staubach, at age 4, knows as much about football as Amy Carter knows about nuclear proliferation," Staubach continued.

Focalpoint

Action/reaction: Lives endangered

Q. Were those Iranians held for deportation forced to take medication against their will? Sounds like we're guilty of Seventh Century thinking ourselves.

A. They were forced to take liquid nutrients and glucose to keep them from dying, that's all. Officials took the step because the prisoners' lives were endangered from fasting.

Calendar: Nurses meet

TODAY
The Big Spring Community Concert Association will present its first concert of the year for its members, beginning at 8:15 p.m. in the Municipal Auditorium. Performing will be pianists Rostal and Schaefer. The Licensed Vocational Nurses Association will meet in Texas Electric Service Company's Ruddy Room at 7 p.m. All members are asked to attend.

Big Spring Sports Booster Club meets in high school cafeteria, 7 p.m. Freshman football players and their parents will be introduced.

TUESDAY
La Posada, 206 NW 4th St., will hold a fund raising benefit for the Big Spring-Howard County United Way from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. A buffet style dinner will be served with proceeds to aid the UW campaign. Cost of lunch will be $4.
Post 2013, V.F.W. and Auxiliary will meet at 7:30 p.m. in the V.F.W. Hall on Drivers Road.

Tops on TV: Election special

Two contests will receive coverage on the small screen tonight. The first is between the Cleveland Browns and the Chicago Bears. It airs at 8 o'clock on ABC. The second is between Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan. CBS will present "Campaign '80: Preelection Special" at 8:30 p.m. The able Bill Moyers also will take a look at this year's election on PBS at 9:30 p.m.

Man shot to death in Wurstfest traffic jam

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas (AP) — A 31-year-old man was shot to death after an altercation with a driver in snarled traffic leaving the Wurstfest weekend activities, police said.

The victim was identified as Timothy Joe Nelson, of Austin. The Travis County medical examiner ruled Nelson was shot to death shortly after 1 a.m. Sunday.

New Braunfels police Lt. F. Roque said Nelson and several friends in a van apparently tried to ease into a steady flow of traffic following the Saturday night festival.

Witnesses told police a man got out of the van and began to bang on cars and shout obscenities at drivers, Roque said. After arguing with the driver of one car, the man punched the car's windshield, shattering the glass, Roque said.

Moments later, a shot was fired, and Nelson was struck in the left side of the chest, Roque said.

The vehicle then backed up, jumped an island of grass and fled, witnesses told authorities.

Police had not located the vehicle late Sunday night.

Digest

St. Helens water released

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Everything went according to plan when the center section of a dam on the South Fork of the Toutle River gave way and released water that built up as a result of activity at Mount St. Helens, engineers said.

The section was designed to break when impounded water reached a certain height and to release the water at a rate that would control flooding. It did so Saturday, said Kay Piotrkowski of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

The dam caught debris running off from the mountain. The volcano's May 18 eruption dumped tons of ash on the area and stripped the land of trees and vegetation which normally would control runoff from rain and snowmelt.

Tenth fire victim dies

CHICAGO (AP) — A fire that swept through a two-story house on the city's South Side last week has claimed its 10th victim, a 7-month-old boy, officials said.

Devon Anderson, who died Sunday, had been in critical condition at the University of Chicago Hospital since Tuesday's fire, which also killed his two brothers and a sister and six other children. The boy's mother, Brenda Boyd, 29, remained hospitalized in fair condition, a hospital spokesman said.

Police are still investigating the blaze. Initially, police investigators said the fire was set, but on Sunday said they had no evidence of arson.

Burned teenager dies

EAST MEADOW, N.Y. (AP) — A teen-aged woman who set herself afire two weeks ago and ran across the field during a school soccer match has died at Nassau County Medical Center, hospital officials said.

Peggy Hayes, 19, of Nesconset, parked her car behind the Great Flow Junior High School on Oct. 17, set herself ablaze and then ran across the athletic field, officials said.

Miss Hayes, a student at Suffolk County Community College, was burned over 65 percent of her body and was given only a 25 percent chance of survival when she was admitted, hospital officials said. She died Sunday.

Remains of woman found

ELMONT, N.Y. (AP) — The mummified remains of an 88-year-old woman who had not been seen for four or five months have been found in the bedroom of her home, police said.

Police said they discovered the remains of Julie Spath on Saturday after other relatives of the woman told police they had not seen her since May or June. Police said the woman apparently had been dead for several months. The cause of death was not immediately determined.

A nephew by marriage, 46-year-old Everett Oest, and his two daughters, aged 12 and 19, had been living with the woman, police said. Police would not comment further.

Mother's murder trial may go to jury today

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Attorneys make their final arguments today to jurors who will decide the fate of Patricia Ann Frazier, accused of carving out the heart of her four-year-old daughter last winter.

The defense — which has argued that Miss Frazier was temporarily insane when she killed her daughter, Khunji Wilson, on Feb. 22 — rested its case on Friday.

The 25-year-old defendant claims she was hallucinating when she took a butcher knife and cut into her daughter.

Police found the child's body wrapped in a blanket on the front seat of the mother's car. The tiny heart was wrapped in a bloody wash cloth nearby.

Dr. Enrique Macher, the final defense witness, said his examination of the defendant after the slaying showed her to be an acute paranoid schizophrenic. His diagnosis matched that of two other psychiatrists who testified.

The prosecution produced witnesses during the trial who said that Miss Frazier's actions were normal the day of the slaying.

FIRST PLACE WINNERS — The Big Spring Steer Band flag line won first place in their competition in the Southwest Auxiliary Championships Saturday held in the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum. The contest is held for the auxiliary units of the band; those groups that march but do not play horns.

Steer Band impresses

By DON WOODS
The Big Spring High School Steer Band auxiliary teams placed strongly amidst the spangle and sequins of Saturday's Southwest Auxiliary Championships, when the teams won sweepstakes by placing in six of the seven events.

The Big Spring flag ensemble won the "outstanding" classification. The ensemble is composed of Lisa Real, Michelle Torres, Christi Garcia and Brenda Salazar.

The flag line, which is composed of a larger group of girls, won first place in the competition. Monterey High School, Lubbock, won second with San Angelo Central placing third.

Big Spring won second place in the twirling line competition. Midland Lee won second place with Monterey Lubbock placing third and Sundown High placing fourth.

Big Spring placed second in the rifle team competition also. Lake Highlands H.S. placed first with Midland Lee placing third.

Big Spring placed second in the drum line competition with Central placing third. Lake Highlands placed first with Midland Lee placing second. Big Spring placed second in the drum line competition with Central placing third and Coronado of Lubbock placing third.

Educators evaluating school system here

A 60-member committee of educators from Southern Association of Colleges and Schools is evaluating Big Spring's three secondary schools today and Tuesday.

The committee includes experts in curriculum, as well as administrators and librarians. Also superintendents, and business managers will evaluate the business end of Goliad Middle School, the high school and Runnels Junior High.

"We try to get people from school districts approximately the same size as we are," said Big Spring Superintendent Lynn Hise.

The evaluation kicked-off Sunday night with a steak dinner at the high school. The committee is chaired by Region 16 Education Center Executive Director Dr. Kenneth Laycock, Amarillo. Laycock outlined the details of the two-day evaluation at the dinner.

The team review a lengthy self-evaluation done last spring by the school district. The high school's evaluation was 200 pages, while Runnels and Goliads each had 100-page evaluations.

Facilities and staffing will be evaluated from the self-evaluation "to see if you are doing what you say you are doing," said Hise.

The association evaluates the district every 10 years. A warning is issued if the district does not meet with the association's approval.

"I believe the way they go through a status they give us a warning if things are not the way they should be," said Hise, but he didn't feel that this would occur here.

Hise said the district runs a good secondary program and therefore wants the association's opinion of it. He

Suspect held for rapes

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — An escaped inmate sought for questioning in a series of nine rapes and beatings that terrorized the community of Fife, Wash., was captured Saturday at a motel, authorities said.

Daniel Rybolt, 27, a fugitive from the Maricopa County Jail in Phoenix, was taken into custody in the suburb of Glendale, police said.

Trish Berg, a spokeswoman for King County Police in Seattle, said Phoenix police arrested Rybolt at the Sage Motel in Glendale after receiving an anonymous tip that he was staying there.

Rybolt jumped from a rear window of the motel but was caught and arrested by officers who were waiting.

Police Beat Two held in robbery

Two Odessa men are in custody in city jail following an attempted armed robbery, early this morning.

The attendant at the Seven-Eleven Store, 1801 Gregg, told police that a man wearing a ski mask walked into the store around midnight Sunday. The man held a knife to the clerk's throat and forced her into a storage room at the back of the store and then locked the room's door.

The robber then apparently set about trying to open the cash register, which was locked. Before he could do so, however, a car-full of customers drove up, speaking him.

The suspect ran from the store, hopped into a car, and headed off down Gregg Street. Realizing that something peculiar was going on, the two men and two women customers gave chase, only to lose sight of the suspect's vehicle two blocks from the store.

Police were alerted to the robbery at 12:07 a.m. today, and all available patrol cars began combing the area around the store. Within a few moments, officers spotted a man sitting in a car parked on the 1800 block of Gregg.

Searching the car, patrolmen found a ski mask, and noted that the clothes worn by the man matched the description given by witnesses. Danny K. Orr, 17, was arrested on the spot.

Shortly thereafter, Howard County Sheriff's Deputies Raymond Hall and Gary Porter arrested a hitchhiker wearing no shirt, west of the city on IS 20. The suspect was Vincent P. Dunigan, also 17.

Both men have been charged with armed robbery. Bond was set at $30,000 each by Justice of the Peace Lewis Heflin.

Detective J.D. Carter and Officer Mike Hillers will travel to St. Paul, Minn. today to extradite a prisoner suspected in the armed robbery of two businesses here in November of 1979. St. Paul authorities arrested Ricardo Flores, Odessa, on suspicion of burglary earlier this week.

Flores is also suspected of an armed robbery here that netted a total of $1,300 from the Airport Grocery and Joboy's Restaurant.

While Lisa Ann McMillan, 1869 Silver Heels, was inside the Taco Villa Restaurant, Sunday night, vandals smashed the rear window of her car parked outside. Damage was estimated at $200.

Sophia Ortega, 608 N. Gregg, told police that someone she knows punctured a tire on her car while it was parked at the Cuatro Copas Club, West Highway 80, Sunday night. Damage was estimated at $60.

Ernest Rodriguez, 1301 Johnson, believes he knows the man who pointed a gun at him and threatened to kill him, 1:20 a.m. today. Police will investigate further.

Iraq holds Iranian oil minister POW

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran, which has held 52 Americans hostage for a year, invoked "all international codes and regulations" today in demanding the release of its oil minister, who was captured by Iraqi forces on the Abadan battlefield.

But Iraq, which reported the capture of Mohammed Jawad Baqir Tunguyan and five aides Friday, said the captives were prisoners of war. The demand for their release was made by Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai, who also plans to take part in indirect negotiations on the American hostages.

Rajai's office said Sunday that Iran was "honored to find its officials ambushed alongside the people while safeguarding the glorious revolution." It called on Iraq to ensure the officials' welfare, but said they were ready "to sacrifice their lives."

Tunguyan, 30, took office when Rajai formed his government two months ago. Iraq, which invaded Iran 43 days ago, has launched a new drive on Abadan, Iran's last stronghold on the Shatt al-Arab River and the source of 60 percent of its refined oil.

An Iraqi military communique Sunday said Iraqi soldiers threw a mobile bridge across the Bahmanshir River in an effort to breach Abadan's defenses in suburban Zolfaqa, east of the city. Iran said Abadan's "heroic defenders have so far prevented the enemy from penetrating the city," raining "crushing blows on the attackers."

Tehran Radio admitted the defenders suffered "numerous losses" and considerable damage "over the past two days."

A communique issued in Baghdad, the Iraqi capital, said 76 Iranian troops were killed and seven tanks and three armored personnel carriers destroyed in 12 hours of fighting in the Abadan area from Saturday evening to Sunday morning. It said 32 Iraqi soldiers were killed and two tanks destroyed with one raiding Iraqi MiG jet fighter downed near Abadan.

The new drive on Abadan apparently began Saturday

McKinneys say 'no presents'

Mr. and Mrs. J.B. McKinney, who will be honored at the State National Bank Tuesday from 1 to 3 p.m., on the 50th anniversary of their wedding, have urged that people do not bring gifts.

"We don't know where we would put them if we got any," Mrs. McKinney said. "We'll be honored simply with your presence."

Temperatures, snow fall in Northeast

By The Associated Press

Temperatures and light snow fell in the northeast today, with early-morning readings as low as 5 degrees in central New York. Skies were clear elsewhere, except for a few patches of rain.

Flurries were expected to last through the day in New England and New York.

Old Forge, N.Y., in the Adirondack Mountains, reported 5 degrees at 4 a.m. EST. In Albany, the 21-degree reading matched a record low for the date, set in 1875.

Overnight, there were widely scattered showers over southern Alabama and into southern Mississippi; from northeastern South Dakota through western Nebraska; and along the coasts of northern Oregon and southern Washington.

More rain was predicted for the Great Lakes area and the northern part of the Ohio Valley, and in the northern Rocky Mountains.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 a.m. EST ranged from 16 in Concord, N.H., to 80 in Key West, Fla.

During Texas campaign

Carter stresses Demo history

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — President Carter tried to instill a sense of history in Texas voters on his final pre-election swing through the crucial state and warned them to "think what it would be like to wake up Wednesday morning and discover a Republican in the White House." Carter jetted to Houston, Brownsville, San Antonio, Abilene and Fort Worth Saturday in a final pitch to the pivotal state and its 26 electoral votes. He was flanked by Texas

Democratic heavyweights such as House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Fort Worth, U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, former Texas Attorney General John Hill and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

In the one-day trip designed to draw in minority voters and wavering Democrats, Carter said Republicans historically have opposed social programs such as the minimum wage, Medicaid, rural electrification, Social Security and civil rights legislation.

If that wasn't bad enough, the president said, the Republicans persist in quoting Democrats 20 years later.

"They said it was communism, socialism, to make an employer pay 25 cents an hour," he said in Fort Worth. "I predict 20 years from now the Republicans will be saying nice things about Jimmy Carter's second term," he told his largest San Antonio crowd of the fall campaign, repeating the prediction in Abilene.

He outlined his priorities for a second term, saying his goals if re-elected, the president said. "Peace abroad and economic and energy security at home would be his goals if re-elected, the president said.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements did not escape Carter's attack on Republicans, but his opponent, Gov. Ronald Reagan, was the subject of only passing references.

In Abilene, Carter noted Clements was not present and said: "I hope he is home reading the third commandment," referring to the governor's statements that Carter was a "goddamn liar." The third commandment refers to taking the Lord's name in vain.

Carter: Talk of natural gas profits tax Republican ploy

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — President Carter says allegations that he is considering a profits on natural gas are untrue and probably a Republican campaign ploy.

During a campaign appearance in Dallas last week, Republican presidential nominee Ronald Reagan criticized the Carter administration's windfall profits tax on oil and asked if a such a tax on natural gas could "be far behind."

But Carter, in an exclusive interview with The San Angelo Standard-Times, said he had "never heard of" such a tax and that "no one in my administration has proposed" one.

"It's probably something the Republicans dreamed up to confuse Texas voters," he added.

In a copyright article in Sunday's editions of the newspaper, Carter said he would continue to emphasize deregulation of the oil and gas industry if elected to a second term.

"For some the rate of deregulation has been too slow, and for others too fast," he said.

Deregulation has had a healthy effect on the petroleum industry, he said, pointing to record oil exploration and rig counts and skyrocketing natural gas production. The president granted the interview aboard Air Force One as he flew from a campaign appearance in Abilene to his final Texas stop in Fort Worth Saturday.

He said he was confident his anti-inflation programs were working and criticized the Reagan-Kemp-Roth tax cut proposal as "ridiculous and radical... a massive tax giveaway for the rich which will result in uncontrollable inflation."

The president also spoke proudly about his administration's agricultural record, especially its passage of the 1977 Omnibus Farm Bill.

"My family has been farmers for centuries," he said, "and I believe farmers should have a decent and stable living."

The bill, which expires in 1981, was designed to achieve price stabilization and "was written with the complete cooperation of farm organizations, of (Agriculture) Secretary (Bob) Bergland and myself," Carter said.

"It is a fine program and those who criticize them should consider how things were under the old law," Carter added.

"Never has farm growth income increased or net income increased as much

Neither rain, nor sleet, but a man's reach stops mail

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — For two months, Ron Gomez didn't get much mail. When he finally found out why, he also learned he faced foreclosure on his mortgage and $3,000 in bills. The Postal Service failed to tell him it was having trouble making deliveries.

"We didn't do our job," said mail carrier supervisor Gary Fong.

Gomez, a barber who works in San Francisco's financial district, says he had even called the post office looking for mail before deliveries were so infrequent — and so sparse.

"I was getting maybe a letter a week, but I knew something was wrong," Gomez said Friday. "I called the post office at least three times, but they always said they had no mail for me."

A week ago, Pacific Telephone disconnected his phone, and Gomez decided to investigate. He visited his local post office, only to find 80 pieces of mail, including a mortgage foreclosure warning, notices from companies cutting off credit and $3,000 worth of bills with $300 in penalties.

Gomez learned that his old mailman, Don Gilchrist, had been able to reach through an iron security gate and place mail into his mailbox. But when a new letter carrier took over the route, he couldn't reach as far. Gomez' mail started to pile up at the post office.

"We neglected to inform him his mail was being held," said Fong. "We didn't do our job."

Bush runs through key states of Texas, Illinois

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush swings through the key states of Illinois and Texas today with his political fate tied to a matter beyond his control.

Bush was to join his running mate, Republican presidential hopeful Ronald Reagan, and former Republican President Gerald Ford at an election eve rally in Peoria, Ill., before heading to his home state of Texas to await the outcome of Tuesday's elections.

But the climatic election eve rally was being overshadowed by developments that held the possibility of freedom for the American hostages in Iran. And Bush was finding himself more and more occupied with questions on how well President Carter is handling the situation and not with questions on his favorite theme — the economy.

The development has changed Bush's public mood and assessment of the presidential race from almost euphoric to a more cautious optimism.

Bush began a campaign swing through Pennsylvania on Sunday insisting the development would have no effect on the presidential race. But by nightfall he was saying he just didn't know what the impact would be.

And he was publicly admitting for the first time that Republican efforts to attract black voters were not paying the hoped-for dividends.

Bush told a local television interviewer in Philadelphia, just before flying back to Washington, that he was nervous about the election.

Asked why, he said "Because you can't read clearly. You can't see it all clearly. I think we're going to win. And I think we have a chance to win fairly substantially. But there's that unknown factor floating around — this hostages thing. I've got a gut instinct that it won't affect the election one way or another — but I can't tell you that because I don't know."

And Bush also admitted that Republican efforts to pick up black support — support that could be decisive in several key industrial states — was not producing the desired results.

"I believe we'll get a respectable percentage but I must say I'm concerned about polls," he said. "They don't show up. It doesn't show up. It's not breaking in there the way we want it to. I can't tell you I'm encouraged by the polling results."

Earlier in the day, Bush had said on the CBS news program "Face the Nation" that the four conditions set by the Iranian parliament for release of the hostages "certainly give us the grounds for reasonable negotiations."

He also said he did not believe President Carter is using the hostage issue for political gain. However, he indicated that he thought Iran might be trying to influence the American elections.

And he said the United States must avoid the appearance of taking sides in the current war between Iran and Iraq.

Do we have company out there in space?

If you're hooked on the subject of unidentified flying objects, you have plenty of company in the world of academe.

Consider the belief of Robert Jastrow, professor of earth science at Dartmouth College and professor of astronomy at Columbia University, repeated in Science Digest recently.

Jastrow is of the opinion that forms of life far more intelligent than our own may have visited the Earth from another older star aboard a UFO.

Variations of that story have been carried on television and in science fiction books for a long time, but Jastrow makes an interesting case. Says he:

"ONE HUNDRED BILLION stars like the Sun surround us in our galaxy alone, according to solid astronomical evidence. Many have planets made of the same ingredients as Earth. All the necessary elements for the evolution of life are present — simple, unthinking life at first, and complex, intelligent life later on.

"I believe that life is common on the many planetary systems in the cosmos.

Intelligence, says Jastrow, permits a flexible response to changing conditions and has a greater survival value than any other single trait.

"This," he says, "leads to the conclusion that life on other worlds is not only billions of years older than man's but also billions of years beyond him in intelligence."

Noting that Dr. Allen Hynek has made a study of reported UFO sightings and concluded that several were unmistakably UFOs, Jastrow goes on:

"Such extra-terrestrial contacts are more probable today than ever before in the history of our planet. Since about 1960, television stations scattered across the Earth have been spraying their signals into space. The shell of signals, moving away from Earth at the speed of light, has now swept past more than 40 stars in the neighborhood of the Sun.

"IF ANY OF those stars harbor intelligent human beings, our presence is now known to them. As it took 20 years for our signals to reach these stars, it must take 20 years for their reply. Unless man is alone in the cosmos, we can expect a message — or a visit — by the end of this century."

Science Digest magazine then asks: "Would these superior beings bother to talk to us? In their eyes," one observer notes, "Einstein would qualify as a waiter and Thomas Jefferson as a busboy." Jastrow thinks they would. "Where else in the galaxy have they seen a creature like man?" he asks.

Men of great intellect shudder at the thought that we are alone in this vast universe and remain forever hopeful that somewhere out there in infinity there is life. If not, why was the universe created?, they ask.

Moods differ

Evans, Novak

PITTSBURGH — Euphoria over President Carter's hard-hitting offensive against Ronald Reagan in the Cleveland debate possessed Carter's high command the instant the confrontation ended, from abnormally ebullient Hamilton Jordan to effusively confident Stuart Eizenstat.

"We did it," Eizenstat told us. "We took the offensive, we held it to the end and we appealed to every constituency in the Democratic Party."

That euphoria by Carter insiders grown accustomed to the worst of political times for most of his presidency quickly shrank when Air Force One landed here in the cold light of Wednesday morning. Glimmerings of a sudden knockout blow disappeared, replaced by a hard truth: Whatever else the debate proved, it left Carter's battle for reelection as unpredictable as before. That means Carter is striving even harder to nail Reagan not only as a nuclear arms racer against the Soviet Union but also as a passivist willing to watch quietly as "terrorist" nations collect nuclear bombs of their own to threaten the world.

EMERGING FROM AIR FORCE

One at the airport here, Al Barkan, who shared some of the presidential euphoria after viewing the struggle from a seat inside Cleveland's public music hall, got a dash of cold water from a top Pennsylvania labor strategist there to meet the president. "A stand-off, Al," the union leader told Barkan. Barkan is chief of the AFL-CIO's potent political arm called OPE. He has played a key role in Carter's long, arduous uphill struggle to overcome multiple economic disasters in his re-election campaign. "A stand-off, or at best the slightest tilt for Carter," Barkan was informed.

A somewhat similar disclaimer from the rampant optimism of Carter's top aides came from Ohio's popular Sen. John Glenn. Glenn warmly congratulated Carter at a post-debate victory celebration for scoring points against Reagan. Later, he remarked that in all his previous debates, Reagan has seemed defeated on points, but ends up winning.

Glenn's astute observation helps explain the Carterites' genuine post-debate glee. Television is as much a visual as an auditory medium, perhaps even more. Reagan's relaxed style, which has served him so well in previous political debates, may have carried more weight with the immense TV audience than Carter's tightly-controlled self-discipline in holding the offensive. Although neither seemed unduly tense, Carter did reach for his glass of water 11 times during the 90-minute debate.

With hopes of a debate knockout dashed, and preponderant polling evidence giving Reagan an edge, the president quickly added a new line here to his war-and-peace attack on Reagan. Answering questions before a friendly audience at a town meeting in the Trinity Episcopal Cathedral in downtown Pittsburgh, he first set the stage with an unprovable claim that the panelists who asked questions at the debate believed that nuclear arms and the war-peace issue were their "preeminent" concern.

HE THEN CHARGED that Reagan was taking an "extremely dangerous approach" to nuclear arms control by ignoring the risk of "radical or terrorist" nations making nuclear weapons of their own capable of threatening devastation to the world. Here was a fresh elaboration of Carter's favorite theme: that Reagan and nuclear arms are combustible.

Big Spring Herald Mailbag

Dear Editor:

The reliable U.S. Chamber of Commerce tells us that we have more generals and admirals in the military today than in World War 2, who commanded 12.5 million men. We now have 2.5 million men in all the military. Our defense budget is $120 billion today, which is more than the entire United States budget was a few years back.

Yet we are told that we have no navy equipment that is modern and adequate; we have no planes nor helicopters that can get off the ground as demonstrated in the fiasco of the attempt to rescue our hostages. We have no spare parts for any military equipment, we are told. For what is the $120 billion going? Paying the expenses of the Chief traveling all over the world, with his incompetent staff, plus all the security personnel. A chief of a modern corporation anywhere in the world would be promptly dismissed should he produce such a record.

We have 300,000 military personnel plus their families in West Germany, on whom is being spent billions of dollars in our tax money. All of us have read of the involvement of many of these in dope because of the time on their hands with nothing better to do. West Germany is one of the leaders in the world of prosperity. Can't we get leaders that have the guts to tell them we will be glad to furnish the manpower but they must pay the bill? That would stop about $3 billion yearly of our deficit.

Our Chief told us in the beginning that he would control inflation, lower unemployment, and cut the number of bureaucrats with their uncontrolled power. Poor fellow. I believe he has done his best. The best he could do was appoint a bunch of other Georgia incompetents, foreign policy and military. Are intelligent people going to put up with this another four years?

The Chief has thumbed his nose at Texas in every conceivable manner, but more especially the oil industry. I cannot imagine anyone in this great state, regardless of party affiliation, voting for such a record. If the Chief is against industry in Texas he is against labor. They are inexorably tied together. Think about that.

From what we have experienced in Washington in the past 3½ years, only we have one way to go — up. Only if we change chiefs.

Dear Editor:

Reference here is made to personal attack on me by a Mr. Kerwin of Midland denying comments by me re Mr. Reagan and condemning Billy Carter for certain acts during the period Billy was an addicted alcoholic.

It's too bad that a Midland right wing radical is permitted to have printed such trash in a Big Spring paper while Big Spring is where the Herald gets its support, and, more especially, since I know several letters from Big Spring were in the hands of The Herald supporting Mr. Carter and setting forth certain Republican liabilities, but not yet printed.

I wonder if Mr. Kerwin admits that Mrs. Betty Ford was an addicted alcoholic during Mr. Ford's Presidency and a resident of the White House? All America praised Mrs. Ford for admitting her problem and seeking treatment. I join in that position. Why should Jimmy Carter be condemned because of Billy's actions while he was sick. He has since taken the cure as did Mrs. Betty Ford and any Christian would say glory to the spunk of each of them. No reasonable person would write a public letter such as Mr. Kerwin's which could cause a previous alcoholic to revert to his previous illness.

My charges of Mr. Reagan's burdening California with excess taxes can be proven from the record and also their reason for Proposition XIII.

Mr. Nixon initiated this dirty politics with his character assassination of Mrs. Helen Gahagan Douglas when he beat her for the Senate in California. The Republicans have continued the commie practice of telling the "big lie" in their campaigns since that date. Lies to them is only a word in the dictionary without political meaning.

I have been getting literature from Jake Garn, Mr. Reagan and Orrin Hatch soliciting funds for phony issues for 2 years and also from Jesse Helms on the prayer in school issue. I point out the lies in their literature and return it with zero contribution. They never reply but continue to beg money on distorted facts. I now have one on my desk, one of the nastiest pieces of political propaganda I have ever seen sent through the mail. As is the case in all of these, they never identify themselves with a political party, so I must look that up and everyone of them is a Republican. This latest is from Bob Dorman a California Congressman and he also is a Republican. Such filthy propaganda as put out by him would not be permitted in the mail except as a political action; he would be sued and certainly damages justified.

I think the public is becoming more aware of Mr. Reagan's unrealistic and phony promises. His Staff will not permit off-the-cuff question and answer sessions. He has steadfastly refused to debate Mr. Carter one on one and regularly demands help from his compadre Republican Anderson so it will be two against one. Anyone with half sense can see Mr. Reagan's position. Mr. Reagan is a coward when it comes to facing the issues alone, squarely. His promises cover all phases of the spectrum; he has never been a steady person. His first wife divorced him and his current wife is the second edition. The Republicans attacked Adlai Stevenson when he ran for President because of his being divorced; now they promote one.

I think it quite refreshing to note here that a few days ago I saw a T.V. program on P.B.S. Big Spring Channel 5 where a teacher interviewed students from a Dallas High School on prayer. The principal had allowed the students to vote on whether or not they would like a devotional on the high school P.A. system. They had voted over 800 to a bit over 20 to have a 25 second devotional daily, and it is currently continuing and no court problems. Why are certain Republicans posing as holier than thou under a guise of putting prayer back in schools? The Supreme Court did not ban prayer; it only ruled against a state prepared prayer. No action bars prayer per se, but it is being used as a guise to raise money. Anita Bryant divorced her husband for using her name to commercialize under the guise of religious fund raising. These Republicans seek money and more money and hope to buy the election just like Mr. Bill Clements bought the Governor's Office in Texas.

What's your alibi for this, Mr. Kerwin? Why did you not put your address on your letter so people could contact you direct?

Every successful project is surrounded by people who deserve recognition, but never seem to get it.

This is not the case in the efforts given to Washington Elementary PTA Fall Festival held Oct. 18. The rewards to the following people will be the happiness and joy given to the children of our school when we purchase the much needed items with the $1,927.72 taken in by our festival.

I would like to thank the following merchants for their contributions:

Al's Barbecue, American Muffler, Mary Ellen Atkinson, Big Spring Country Club, Big Spring Theaters Inc., Cathey Construction, Chapman's Meat Market, Cosco First National Bank, Gibson's, Gill's Fried Chicken, Hubbard Packing, K-Mart, La Contesa Beauty Shop, Little Giant Food Store, Mrs. Baird's Store, Don Newsom, North Birdwell Grocery, Roger's Auto Repair, Terry's Drive In, T.G.&Y Highland South, Wall's Industries and Weaver's Pawn Shop.

If there has been any merchant left out, please forgive me.

I would also like to thank the following: Cleo Carlile, principal; Mrs. Shirley Beauchamp, secretary; all the Washington faculty; Joe Hernandez, maintenance; Barbara McWhorter, cafeteria worker; all homeroom mothers for getting workers and building booths; all parents bringing cake and sweets and a special thanks to Danny and Cindy Heckler for their contribution to our school project; Mary Ellen Atkinson, Marcia Rogers, Pat Hogg, Laura McEwen, Sandra Logback, Virginia Oliver for their special efforts.

It took all these people to prove a combined effort will have the end product of success.

Success story

Around the rim

Tommy Hart

It's nice to be brought up to date on a one-time Big Spring resident who looked adversity in the eye and became a more successful, wiser person for the experience. More recent generations of Americans could take lessons.

Joe Scott Jr., now 59 years of age, delivered the Herald as a kid. When he was 11 years old, the old Civilian Conservation Corps camp was located in Big Spring and Joe took papers out there to distribute.

After he had covered his paper route, he would often go out to local golf courses and caddy.

One day, he was a little late coming home after he completed his paper route. When his mother inquired as to his whereabouts, Joe said he had helped a Mr. Early, who drove a candy and cake truck, unload an order and Early had given young Scott a box of candy as a reward.

Joe overcame the temptation to take the sweets home, instead stood on the street corner and sold all the candy bars, then turned the money over to his mother.

Young Scott always put ten per cent of every dollar he made in a glass jar, tithing for his church. He has professed deep religious faith all his life.

Joe opened a trading post in Big Spring in 1946. The building was constructed of rolled-out five-gallon lard cans. Located on West Hwy. 80, the structure had a dirt floor, no electricity, water or indoor plumbing.

By 1947, Joe was doing well enough to move into a second building here — one that had a floor, electricity and indoor plumbing. He was on his way.

By 1948, Scott had moved to Marysville, Cal., where his first store was in a small garage at the side of a house. There, he sold everything from hub-caps to fruit jars to wood-burning stoves.

Still using the trade name he employed here ("Joe's Trading Post"), Joe moved on down the road in Marysville in 1949 to a building which once was a military barracks, which he had purchased from Beale AFB.

He did well enough there that in 1951 he opened up another store. That proved to be a favorite of his children, who loved to explore the "treasure boxes" and fascinating antiques picked up on his buying trips to San Francisco.

The store grew to the extent that in 1960 Scott purchased a two-story furniture store from a friend and stocked it with used furniture and antiques. He used the second floor for a warehouse.

Later, Joe acted as his own contractor and built a spacious building in Marysville his firm now uses. He concealed the fact that he couldn't read a blueprint. Needless to say, it has been a favorite stopping place for shoppers since the day it opened.

A resident of California since 1950, Joe Scott's mother says the family loves California but still misses the "good people" in Big Spring. (Joe's father went to his reward in 1977). The family had called Big Spring home for a quarter of a century before moving west.

Crises in politics

Joseph Kraft

WASHINGTON — Both candidates did their followers proud. But neither had good answers to hard questions. So the Great Debate points up anew the crisis of American politics. It defines the gap between a self-indulgent public opinion and the harsh realities confronting the country.

Governor Reagan entered the debate at the edge of a cliff. He has a slender information base. He is prone to loose statement. There is in the country at large a widespread impression of a big-time meane subject to the kind of tiches that end up as war and hard times.

IN THE DEBATE, Reagan walked skillfully around those hazards. He made no mistakes of consequence. He showed himself as an agreeable fellow with a nice sense of humor. He had a good word for peace, and for the aged, and for people trapped in central cities.

At one point he even came on strong with numbers. He laid to rest — once and for all, I hope — the president's spurious claim that his administration began the restoration of national defense after eight years of Republican cuts.

Mr. Carter needed a lift from the debate — to be born yet again. His stretch drive to mobilize the Democratic constituencies has slowed in the last week. The latest inflation numbers focus attention on an inglorious chapter of his administration. So does the rush of attention to the hostages in Iran.

In the debate, Carter scored undoubted points. He controlled the dialogue and consistently put Reagan on the defensive. Most important, instead of sounding like a computer, he presented his arguments on two critical subjects in broad, historic terms understandable to all Americans. First, Carter showed that, like all past presidents, but unlike Reagan, he favored arms control in an unmistakable and unambiguous way. Second he showed that, unlike Reagan, he stood in the "mainstream" of his party in supporting programs that promote health, education and job opportunities for ordinary Americans. On a strict man-to-man basis, Carter, in my view, came out slightly ahead in the debate.

But the biggest winners by far were the journalists who put the questions, or rather the questions themselves. For neither candidate showed the glimmerings of a capacity to cope with the national problems, to master the difficulties facing the nation, to govern effectively.

DEALING WITH foreign adversaries — mainly the Soviet Union but also the radical Third World countries prone to practice blackmail and terror — represents the most important problem. Especially since it affects oil supplies. Arms control is Carter's answer.

But he cannot get the SALT II treaty with the Russians past the Senate. His ham-handed efforts to limit the spread of nuclear weapons have been counterproductive — witness the supply of material and equipment to Iraq by France, Italy and Brazil. Moreover, while important in itself, limiting the flow of nuclear arms is a distant and remote approach. It is indeed a moribund cop-out on the messy, daily problems of living with the Castros and Ayatollahs and Colonel Kadafis of the world.

A similar cop-out, however, comes from Gov. Reagan. He wants a generalized increase in defense spending. But that will neither bring the Russians to terms, nor count much in distant places like the Persian Gulf. It is a mark of flabbiness that Reagan answered Barbara Walters' question on Iran by coming out for a congressional inquiry. It is sheer witlessness for him not to point out that while Carter cannot pass a SALT treaty he, Reagan, can.

Inflation presents another critical problem. Reagan proposes a tax cut bound to be highly inflationary. Carter favors a tax cut that is only slightly less so. Neither gets at the root of the problem — wage and price increases. Indeed, both swear off the subject.

A third crucial question — though nobody had the courage to pronounce the word — centered on the problem of race. Both candidates talked vaguely of progress.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I heard someone place that the Bible teaches that Satan sometimes is like an angel. What is meant by this? — R.B.

DEAR R.B.: You are probably thinking of II Corinthians 11:14 "For Satan himself masquerades as an angel of light." What this means is that Satan (who is completely evil and absolutely opposed to God and his purposes for us) does not always act in ways that are obviously and clearly evil. Sometimes, Satan seems to be doing good, and hopes that we will think there is little harm in joining in his causes. But it is only a disguise or mask for Satan's true nature.

I think Jesus' encounter with Satan at the beginning of his ministry is a good illustration of this. (You can read about it in Matthew 4:1-11). Jesus fasted for 40 days, alone in the desert. Then Satan came to him and urged him to turn stones into bread — not only to satisfy his hunger, but to prove his power as the Son of God. Now at first glance there would seem to be nothing wrong with that. As one who was not fully God but fully man, Jesus needed food like every other human being. But he refused to follow Satan's suggestion because he knew that Satan was really setting a trap for him. If he had followed Satan's suggestion (and the other suggestions Satan made to him) he would have been acting selfishly and not following God's will.

Every true Christian knows that he is engaged in a spiritual battle. Satan will do all he can to get a Christian to doubt God's Word, or to commit some other sin. But Christ is stronger than Satan, and Christ alone is worthy of our trust and allegiance. We need to know what God's truth is, and we can, because he has given it to us in the Bible. Then we need to resist Satan, no matter how attractive his lies may seem.

Remember the Bible's command: "Be self-controlled and alert. Your enemy the devil prowls around like a roaring lion looking for someone to devour. Resist him, standing firm in the faith" (I Peter 5:8-9).

News in skin care 'Natural' products usually aren't

LOS ANGELES — Although the chemicals in skin care products haven't been proven to be harmful, many consumers in this carcinogenic-conscious age would rather not take a chance on using preparations that are less than natural.

These shoppers head for jars and bottles with labels bearing the words "herbal" or "natural," believing that anything containing wheat germ, honey or other such wholesome-sounding ingredients can't help but be good for the skin.

But it isn't that simple. If they stop to examine the labels on the "organic" items they're buying, shoppers will discover that creams and moisturizers claiming to be natural are only marginally so.

A great many take only their fragrance from nature. And for good reason — natural oils, by themselves, don't work very well. They sit on top of the skin, looking and feeling greasy, instead of penetrating to cleanse or moisturize.

Hence the lubricating and moisturizing ingredients in most "natural" products are chemically emulsified so they can mix freely with water and the skin's natural oils. The process is similar to the chemical treatment that mixes oil and vinegar in prepared salad dressings.

But last June an invention was submitted to the U.S. Patent Office by Martin Mandelker, Ph.D., that could change all that. Drawing upon his nearly 20 years of experience as an herbalist, he has invented a natural herbal process which permits these same skin care ingredients to penetrate the skin and help protect its natural moisture without the use of any chemical agents.

Dr. Mandelker started in the skin care business accidentally. Fed-up with the big city life, he left New York City and ended up as a small town journalist in New Mexico, covering an Indian maiden's coming of age celebration. The Indians intrigued him. He spent all his free time studying their ways, and before he knew it, he was becoming an expert on how to gather, prepare and use herbs, the Indian way. This led to the discovery of the process which is the basis for his skin care products, containing no chemicals, preservatives or soap.

The main problem Dr. Mandelker sees with the Nuage line is the cost. It is expensive to use herbs and vegetable oils in the amounts his formulas call for, but he refuses to skimp on these natural ingredients and decrease the effectiveness of his products.

Cubans no health problem, says CDC

According to the Center for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta, the recent influx of some 50,000 Cuban refugees in the U.S. "shouldn't be a source of unusual medical problems."

As reported in Emergency Medicine, a CDC spokesman reports that "the health of the refugees is good. Illnesses in the population appear to be in such miscellaneous categories as one would expect in any such large group."

All the refugees are receiving a blood test for syphilis, a chest x-ray for TB, and a visual examination for any other problems. All refugees up to 19 years of age are being immunized against measles, mumps and rubella. The immunization program in Cuba concentrated on diphtheria, pertussis, tetanus, and polio.

It takes two to tango

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Dr. Wallace: I'm a 14-year-old boy and it seems like I always read in your column where girls are getting pregnant and they are blaming the boys. In my hometown, most of the girls just can't keep their hands off of the guys.

I'm sure that many of the girls who wrote to you complaining that they are pregnant made the first move. Remember, it takes two to tango. — Rod, Elizabethtown, Ky.

Rod: I hope you don't mind that I changed your name to protect you from being lynched by most of the girls in Elizabethtown.

Yes, I agree that girls are becoming more assertive and they are equally responsible in unwanted pregnancies.

Dr. Wallace: I'm a 16-year-old girl and I have a baby daughter who is almost 2. I live with my parents and that is my problem. I'm in school, but I am supposed to get a welfare check for my daughter's needs. I never see the check because it comes in my mother's name and she uses it on herself.

My parents and I don't get along at all. In fact we hate each other's guts. Do you think that I should leave home, get a job and raise my daughter alone, so no one will be on my back? — Valarie, Lake Charles, La.

Valarie: I think that you should stay at home and continue going to school to get the best education possible. Even though things are not going smoothly at home, it could be much worse by yourself. I don't see how you could make it financially on your own even if you received the welfare check.

Rent, food, medical expenses, baby sitters, etc., would overwhelm you financially. Wait until you are at least 18 or out of school before striking out on your own.

Dr. Wallace: I'm 14 and want your opinion. Over the Labor Day weekend our family went camping. One night there were a couple of dances, a disco and a country and western. I went to the disco (naturally) while my parents went to the country and western. Both dances started at 8 p.m. and ended at midnight.

At 9:30, my parents came by the disco and said that they were tired and that I had to leave with them. I begged them to let me stay until 10:30 but they said no. I was really enjoying myself and felt crushed that they would not trust me for another hour.

The dance was only a half a mile from our campsite and I could have walked back or my dad could have picked me up in our van. Your opinion, please. — Connie, Chehalis, Wash.

Connie: I think your parents should have allowed you to stay at the dance until 10:30 and then should have picked you up in the van.

'Fair' attitude

Americans have strong ideas on what is and is not fair, reports the American Council of Life Insurance in its national survey of public attitudes.

Not fair, say most, is special treatment for the wealthy, such as better health care or more influence in local government.

What, is fair, they say, is that persons who accumulate lots of money be allowed to leave it to their children.

Also deemed "fair" by 3 in 5 of those surveyed, is the unequal distribution of "the good things in life" as long as everyone has an equal opportunity to compete for them, notes the Council.

Female Cops Get Green Light from Readers

DEAR READERS: A policeman's wife, signed JEALOUS, recently wrote that her husband was on squad car duty from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. with a "cute, single, bright, funny partner." She was upset that the two of them were riding around together all night, frequently "bored," so she asked her husband to request a male partner. When he refused, she sought my advice.

I told her to quit nagging her husband; that she had nothing to worry about.

Well, my mail has been running 100 to 1 against my advice. A few sample letters in agreement with me:

DEAR ABBY: Applause, applause! Your answer to JEALOUS was right on! I've been married to a policeman for 12 years, so I know what I'm talking about. He's worked the graveyard shift with female partners, but I wasn't jealous.

Wouldn't the two of them be rather conspicuous snuggling in a parking lot in a patrol car? Or checking into a motel for a few hours in uniform? And how would they handle answering the car radio and making calls in the middle of a romantic encounter?

I am far more worried about the prospect of my husband being taken from me by a strung-out dope addict, a trigger-happy robber or some belligerent drunks in a domestic squabble than by a "cute, single, bright, funny policeman."

NOT JEALOUS IN DENVER

DEAR ABBY: I'm glad you told JEALOUS not to get worked up because her husband worked nights with a woman partner. Nowadays nearly every job involves contact with the opposite sex. Women are fighting fires, flying airplanes, working on oil rigs and marching alongside men in the military, too.

If JEALOUS thinks she will eliminate temptation by demanding that her policeman husband work with men only, she's dreaming. A man in uniform is like a magnet to most women. If he's going to cheat, he's not about to risk doing it on the job. He'll meet her off the job when they're both out of uniform.

Me, hiding in my oversized raincoat.

Becky Hendricks' True Story:
It seemed like everyone who came into my family's store asked me if I was putting on weight. That hurt my feelings, but I knew I had gained too much. Although I'm tall (5'10"), I couldn't excuse 164 pounds.

When I saw a newspaper ad for Pat Walker's salon close to my Stockbridge, Georgia home, I went in for a complimentary treatment. From my very first visit, I liked the encouraging attitude of the counselors. They taught me so much about how to eat sensibly, without denying myself my favorite foods.

I really like relaxing on Pat Walker's passive exercise unit, too. Those sessions (2 or 3 times a week) kept my figure smooth and firm while I lost 24 pounds and a total of 30 inches.

Now, everyone compliments me on how good I look. I tell them I couldn't have done it without Pat Walker's.

After fleeing communism

Asian herders seek Alaska

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (AP) — A tribe of nomads who have fled communism for half a century — from the Soviet Union to Afghanistan to Pakistan — harbors a dream to settle in Alaska, along with their thousands of sheep and camels and yaks.

Rahman Qul, leader of the Kirghiz tribesmen, last May traveled to the U.S. consulate in Peshawar to present a letter addressed to President Carter requesting permission to settle the remnants of his tribe in the "land of freedom" — particularly in that part known as Alaska.

Qul, a man in his 60s, told a consulate official he first heard of Alaska about five years ago when a U.N. wildlife expert — an American named Ron Peters, he said — showed him photos of Alaska's mountains.

Qul says his tribe lived a spartan existence in Afghanistan, surviving on the milk, meat and wool derived from their animals. They heated their round yurts — tents of skins stretched over poles — with sheep dung, which was also their cooking fuel.

But since the tribe of some 1,400 people migrated two years ago, more than 150 — mainly children and the elderly — have died. Qul blames the deaths on the change in climate from the 17,000-foot heights of Afghanistan to the relatively low level of 7,000 feet near the town of Gilgit, 351 miles northeast of here.

The summers are hotter than the Kirghiz are used to, and malaria has taken many lives. Qul fears many more may die if they remain.

In addition, Qul told Philip Covington, the U.S. vice consul in Peshawar and a former Peace Corps volunteer in Afghanistan, that the tribesmen were losing their sense of community and cultural identity because they had been forced to find non-traditional employment.

For all these reasons, he wants to resettle his tribe amid the vast, underpopulated areas of Alaska.

Qul, a quick-witted herdsman with a knack for business, has himself prospered in Pakistan. He traded some of his livestock and opened a shop in Gilgit dealing in tribal handicrafts, carpets and fabrics.

Staffers for Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, said a Kirghiz representative contacted them last year, asking help from the senator. The nomads later applied through normal diplomatic channels for permission to immigrate.

Haida Boucher, Gravel's administrative assistant, said she had kept Gravel advised of the Kirghiz situation but added that he had taken no active role.

"My own feeling was that until we knew what kind of federal or state land might be available to them — would it be adequate for a nomadic tribe? — nothing further could be done," said Mrs. Boucher.

U.S. diplomats in Pakistan say Qul also has not yet received a reply from his letter to Carter.

"This is a classic ethnic tragedy," said a State Department official in Washington. "But as a government we don't have the instruments to cope with this problem."

He said Pakistan had some 1.2 million Afghan refugees and the United States could not single out a tribal minority for aid.

Current legislation allows for the immigration of about 2,400 Afghan refugees each year. To permit the Kirghiz to settle in Alaska as a group would use up half the annual quota, said the official, who did not want to be identified.

An additional obstacle, he said, is that existing law requires all refugees to have sponsors.

The official said special legislation would be the only solution but that the administration was not inclined at present to come up with its own proposal.

Qul said he had Alaska on his mind when he led his followers, along with their 10,000 sheep, 200 yaks and 13 Bactrian camels out of Afghanistan after the 1978 Marxist takeover.

Escaping communism has been a recurring theme in Kirghiz life this century. As the Soviets pressed their control over parts of central Asia following the Russian revolution, Qul's tribe fled to Afghanistan while other Kirghiz headed for Turkey and China.

A few of those who settled in China's Sinkiang Province managed to escape to Taiwan before the communist victory in 1950.

Some 800,000 Kirghiz — Sunni sect Moslems who speak a language similar to Turkish — still live in the Soviet Union.

The Afghan Kirghiz settled in an austere slice of real estate known as the Wakhan Corridor, which extends to Afghanistan's 50-mile border with China.

AP marketbasket survey

Sugar prices leap again

By The Associated Press
Sugar prices took another leap last month, rising to their highest level in almost six years, according to an Associated Press marketbasket survey which found that a five-pound sack of sugar costs twice as much today as it did at the start of the year.

The rise in sugar helped boost the average price of a roost marketbasket of grocery items by almost half a percent last month. If it had not been for the increase in sugar prices, the AP found, supermarket bills would have dropped by more than 1 percent during October.

The AP survey is based on a list of 14 commonly purchased food and non-food items, selected at random. Prices were first checked at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973 and have been rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month.

The latest survey indicated that the marketbasket total increased at the checklist store in six cities during October, rising an average of 2 percent. The bill decreased in seven cities, down an average of nine-tenths of a percent. On an overall basis, the average bill at the start of November was four-tenths of a percent higher than it was a month earlier. During September, in contrast, the marketbasket bill was unchanged.

When sugar was removed from the list, the picture changed. The AP price check found the marketbasket bill without sugar increased in five cities and decreased in eight, for an overall drop of 1.1 percent.

The price of a five-pound sack of sugar went up last month at the checklist store in 11 of the cities surveyed by the AP, rising to an average of $2.84. At the start of the year the average price of a five-pound sack of sugar at the checklist stores was $1.42. The price of sugar is approaching the all-time high of about $3 for a five-pound sack, reached at the start of 1975.

The price increase is caused by an increase in demand. Sugar consumption is expected to outstrip sugar production during the current year, forcing exporters to dip into stockpiles to satisfy the global sweet tooth.

The AP survey results were not weighted according to population density or in terms of what portion of a family's actual grocery spending each item represents. The AP did not try to compare actual prices from city to city. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentages of increase or decrease.

The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar. A 15th item, chocolate chip cookies, was on the original list, but was dropped when the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey. The cities checked were: Albuquerque, N.M., Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, R.I., Salt Lake City and Seattle.

Crowd eats, then boos Reagan man off stage

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A crowd invited to a political rally devoured 1,000 free fried chicken dinners, then booed a pro-Ronald Reagan speaker off the stage before he could speak.

Josea Williams, a Democratic state representative from Atlanta, endorsed Ronald Reagan last month. When the black lawmaker attempted to speak, the crowd began shouting and booing, drowning Williams' attempts. Williams left the rally and immediately went to the San Antonio airport, where he left without commenting on the incident.

The rally was gathered as the largest meeting of black voters in the city's history and was sponsored by the National Black Voters for a Republican Congress.

20 REASONS NOT TO VOTE FOR CARTER

Unless You Want a President Who:

1. Would authorize leak of military secrets to attempt to gain political advantage.
2. Sends his political yes-man, Secretary of Defense Harold Brown, about the country at taxpayer's expense to claim military strength, hoping we will forget his veto of the B-1 bomber, delay of the MX missile, cancellation of the Navy ship building program, and denial of the neutron bomb to our allies in Western Europe after having first promised they would have it.
3. Let our friends in Nicaragua be taken over by the Communists and permitted our only really stable friend in the Mideast to be replaced by Khomains.
4. Told Castro he will not permit Russian combat troops in Cuba, then conveniently forgot about it and is repaid by the release of American prisoners two weeks before the election. (With Russian combat troops and missiles still in place.)
5. Without consultation with Congress or the American people, broke our treaty with Taiwan and entered into an alliance with the same Communist government in China that helped to kill our servicemen in Vietnam, and which is now systematically murdering the Cambodian people to the point of extinction.
6. Gave the Panama Canal to the Dictator of Panama and tried to force a treaty upon the U.S. Senate (SALT II) which would have insured the permanent military superiority of Russia.
7. Has sent several billion dollars of sophisticated aircraft to Saudi Arabia to protect that country against aerial attack from Iran while at the same time permitting Israel to furnish Iran with American war supplies.
8. As his most outstanding reaction to the invasion of Afghanistan, forbade our participation in the Olympics, thereby making us appear ridiculous to the world leaders who had supposed we were still that great nation which was capable of some meaningful response to any action which threatened world peace and security.
9. Penalized the American farmer by stopping grain shipments to Russia; and then, one month before the election, entered into mammoth grain contracts with China, bringing up the question of which Communist is a good Communist.
10. Knowingly permitted his brother to go to Libya and stand on the platform with Khadafi (Dictator of Libya) celebrating the tenth anniversary of his despotism at substantially the same point in time when the Libyans had launched a violent assault upon and burned the American consulate in that country. (You may be naive enough to believe the President had no way of knowing that Billy was also taking money from the Libyan government on the promise of the use of his influence as brother of the President.)
11. Broke seventy-four percent of the promises he made while campaigning for office in 1976, including his promise to reduce bureaucracy in Washington and then created the Department of Energy with a budget of twelve billion dollars and the Department of Education with a multi-billion dollar budget. P.S.: One-fourth of all delegates to the Democratic National Convention were members of the liberal aggressively-political wing of the National Education Agency.
12. Promised to reduce inflation from 7.8 percent under President Ford to not more than four percent, but has managed to destroy the savings and living standard of the retired and elderly with thirteen percent inflation. He promised a balanced budget and instead gave us a sixty billion dollar deficit this year alone — and he still doesn't understand this is the principal cause of our inflation.
13. Promised to eliminate unemployment and has brought us a recession which has at this time put eight million able-bodied men and women out of work.
14. Brought us eighteen percent interest rates to bring the homebuilding industry to a standstill, bankrupt many small businessmen, and close many of our automobile factories.
15. Has claimed economic success for his administration while the value of the dollar, not only domestically, but also measured against foreign currencies, has plummeted; while the productivity of the American worker has constantly gone down and we have become second to Japan and West Germany in industrial manufacturing per capita and second in steel manufacturing; and whose only advice to the American people is that to respond to the decline of America in domestic production and world trade, all we can do individually is simply lower our own standard of living.
16. Broke his promise of freeing the oil industry of taxes from governmental price control and placed a punitive tax upon the industry which will take twelve billion dollars a year from Texas to be divided in various ways between the residents of the Northern and Eastern states.
17. Has used the members of his cabinet and their staffs, as well as his own White House staff (all of whom are paid and furnished with travel expense with your tax dollars), as his personal campaign workers, and has allocated millions and quite possibly billions of tax dollars to strategically selected politically important areas (New York, Chicago and Miami) just months or weeks before the election to buy more votes with your money.
18. Has even paraded his religion for political purposes, while at the same time accusing his opponent of dividing the country between Christians and Jews.
19. Has destroyed the integrity of our Federal Judiciary by appointing 143 liberal-minded federal judges, carefully apportioned with little regard for legal qualifications between Blacks, Chicanos, and women, while criticizing his opponent for having said he might appoint a woman to the Supreme Court.
20. If elected in 1980, would guarantee you would have Teddy (Chappaquiddick) Kennedy as your President in 1985, 1986, 1987, 1988, 1989, 1990, 1991 and 1992 — if the Republic should survive so long.

We cannot tolerate any more years of such a gross mismanagement and socialist domestic policies.

Absentee voting in Howard County 'best ever'

Just how important is year vote Tuesday?
It's important. For example:

Election guide

Big turnout favors Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nine biggest states that are the decisive battlegrounds in the 1980 presidential election, there should be some early indications on Tuesday night whether President Carter or Ronald Reagan has an edge in the race for the White House.

Philadelphia was 255,579.
There are signs Carter will run behind normal Democratic majorities in the Wilkes-Barre and Scranton areas with large blue-collar and ethnic voting populations targeted by Reagan.

—MICHIGAN
Detroit turns out one-third of the Democratic vote in the state and gave Carter a majority of 200,179 in Ford by 197,028 votes.

And away we go with Walt's "hot shots" the day before the general election or decision '80.
Ronald Reagan said, if elected, he will appoint a woman to the Supreme Court.

Many good citizens are shocked and angered by Commoner's language. And now for the first time they

Another dreadful scenario: The second presidential debate goes on the air -- and loses in the Nielsen ratings to a rerun of "Death Valley Days."

John Anderson can't understand why Jimmy Carter doesn't want to get close to him. Anderson already has changed his deodorant and stopped eating onions.

Some Texas ministers are reacting against the Moral Majority. Are those two groups trying to decide which Christians should be thrown to the lions?

Here, state by state, is a rundown on what to look for in the big states:
—NEW YORK
With 41 electoral votes, the second biggest prize among the states. Carter came out of New York City in 1976 with a margin of more than 716,000 votes and carried the state by more than 288,000.

Anderson is a factor in the contest for his home state's 26 electoral votes.
Carter must carry Chicago by at least 350,000 votes and do better in the suburbs than he did in 1976, when Ford carried the suburban counties by 376,600. That left Carter with a lead of only 42,400 going into the Downstate areas which Ford carried by 155,300.

—ILLINOIS
Carter has a factor in the contest for his home state's 26 electoral votes.
Carter must carry Chicago by at least 350,000 votes and do better in the suburbs than he did in 1976, when Ford carried the suburban counties by 376,600. That left Carter with a lead of only 42,400 going into the Downstate areas which Ford carried by 155,300.

Democratic nomination. Because of it, he avoided a Democratic campaign clouded by the mass kidnapping and captivity of Americans whose government could neither protect them nor free them. It was a campaign marked at crucial moments by decisions made half a world away, in the councils of a hostile regime.

Wallace says, "The only way in the world that the average citizen can judge the candidates' qualifications is to check with somebody who is familiar with them."

For voters without a ear to the legal grapevine, Wallace offers the results of a poll of Houston attorneys. The bar poll in the city where both men have worked went overwhelmingly to Wallace, 1,054 to 20. He also won the State Bar poll, 4,348 to 541.

Wallace, speaking from experience on one of those 14 courts, says, "We have got every bit of the work we can do now handling civil cases."

Brady says he strongly supports Proposition 8. "We have to do something to speed up the criminal appeals process," he says.

Reagan must counter the New York City Democratic votes with big GOP majorities in the suburbs and Update New York.
—NEW JERSEY
Three densely populated counties — Hudson, Essex and Middlesex — across the Hudson River from New York have big Democratic majorities in registration. In Hudson County that margin is 11 to 1, but the county also is an area targeted by Reagan in his appeal for blue-collar votes. If the vote is close in those three Democratic counties, Reagan probably will carry the state.

Reagan's home base is the biggest prize with 45 electoral votes. The early returns usually come from heavily Democratic Northern California. Carter would have to open up a lead of at least 150,000 in the early returns to offset later totals from heavily Republican districts in Southern California.

—FLORIDA
Carter will have trouble matching the usual large Democratic majorities in the Miami area because of the disaffection among black and Jewish voters.

On Tuesday, the voters will decide whether the hostage situation will work one last time to the advantage of the Democratic president. Ronald Reagan's strategists fear that it might, in a close contest for the White House.

Brady readily admits he is not a favorite in the legal community: "I haven't been too popular because I've been critical of lawyers."

His most recent financial report had not been filed at the secretary of state's office as of Friday morning.

Also on Tuesday's ballot are two proposed constitutional amendments related to the state's judicial system. Brady and Wallace disagree on how Texans should vote.

Proposition 2 would give state prosecutors and defendants the right to appeal pre-trial rulings. The state has had no appellate rights since 1876. Wallace says passage would cause delay and added cost. Brady is for the proposal.

"UNITED THEY STAND..." — Sen. Edward Kennedy and Vice President Walter Mondale arrive at Detroit's Metro Airport Sunday for a rally that President Carter was to attend at Detroit's Cobo Hall. The two former political-opponents came together when Carter stayed in Washington to work on hostage negotiations.

Wallace vs. Brady

By JACKIE CALMES
Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — Jim Brady and James P. Wallace agree that the primary issue in their race for Place 1 on the Texas Supreme Court is experience. Predictably, they disagree on whose is best.

Democrat Wallace, 51, cites his present service as associate justice of the First Court of Civil Appeals in Houston, and past experience as a district court judge and a two-term state senator, as being superior to Brady's resume.

Republican Brady, 60, points to 34 years as a trial lawyer in San Antonio, Houston and Austin. He says, "I think if you compare our experience, it should be very plain to anyone that I've had much more experience in the kinds of cases that come before the Supreme Court."

On election eve Economy puzzles voters

NEW YORK (AP) — Many will enter the voting booth on Election Day wrestling with the issue of what happened to the American economy.

They know things are changed over the past decade — their wallets, worries and waning aspirations are evidence enough — but few people can identify all the hows and whys.

Since everyone seems to be groping for some practical positions, two of them are related here, gathered from the statements of ordinary citizens, investors, economists and just about anyone else.

You may not subscribe to the thoughts, but they seem to have a universal appeal, heard as often in the bar as in the boardroom.

This has been the most selfish generation in history, living off the fat of the economy and the efforts of those who went before, and seeking to finance it with the efforts of generations to come.

We have lived well; borrowing to do so, and we have passed the bill onto future generations as an unprecedented load of federal, state and municipal debt. How else can we be pensioned at an early age?

We have sanctified consumption and vilified production. We have destroyed productivity because we have used up the capital needed for production. We have demanded the productive America be our servant.

We have become the ultimate materialists and hedonists, surrounding ourselves with goods and gadgets for our comfort, and refusing to worry about the consequences, such as paying the bills.

We have devoured the nation's resources; we have insisted on luxurious cars; we have demanded an extra bath in our new houses.

In the process, we have forced up prices and interest rates, especially the prices of the homes we own, but we have denied shelter to our children because we have priced them out of the market.

Politicians have sacrificed the economic stability of the country, trading special interest legislation for votes. Voting for spending projects doesn't cost the politician a thing, but oh the benefits.

And oh what it does, saddling the nation with deficits, more than $290 billion in just the past six years, that were inconceivable just a few years ago. And creating inflation and high borrowing rates.

It isn't just with appropriations that the damage is done. Even more oppressive is the creation of regulatory conditions that make it impossible for business to operate efficiently and at a profit.

Profit? The self-serving politician doesn't understand it. Profit doesn't bring in votes. There's more to be gained by shackling the company, calling it the enemy and posing as the hero of the people.

It works, over the short term, but then jobs are lost because the money to operate the factory has been transferred to the fund that supports the regulators. Odd, isn't it, that private enterprise is the way the country makes its money, but we've been clubbing it senseless?

Bullock says he'll be 1982 factor

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Politicians usually like to let the suspense build about their future races, but not Comptroller Bob Bullock.

Bullock picked today — one day before the 1980 election — to announce he will run for re-election in 1982.

He noted that in 1974 and 1978 he was "first to announce and first at the finish line — just where I intend to be '82."

The comptroller said he announced early to "end all speculation and give lot of county-level politicians who may have toyed with the idea of running a chance to make up their minds."

Bullock, 51, said his platform would be "my record for getting the job done."

"There are a few tax deadbeats and delinquents who don't like it, but the vast majority of honest taxpayers and business people support our energetic and equal enforcement of the tax laws. The people realize that every delinquent dollar collected — both in Texas and from out-of-state — is a dollar they don't have to make up in new taxes," he said.

Bullock captured 70 percent of the vote when he was first elected in 1974 and was unopposed in 1978.

Following ruling

Suit is assured

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today cleared the way for a federal antitrust trial for an Odessa, Texas, cable television operation charged with illegal competitive practices.

The justices, without comment, left intact a ruling that cable operations are not immune from such lawsuits just because the broadcast industry is under stringent federal regulation. Today's action is a victory for owners of the now-defunct Midland Telecasting Co., which once operated a UHF television station from Midland, Texas. The station broadcast over channel 18 from 1969 to 1971 and from 1973 to late 1974.

In 1967, Community Cablevision Company was created for the purpose of operating a cable system in nearby Odessa. It was a joint venture by Midessa Television Co., Doubleday Broadcasting Co., Hodge Enterprises and Cablecom-General Inc.

Both Midessa and Doubleday were direct competitors with Midland.

In its lawsuit, Midland alleged that from 1969 until the filing of its suit 1974 the cable operation had refused to carry its signal despite repeated requests.

The suit charged that those refusals were aimed at eliminating Midland Telecasting from the Midland-Odessa television broadcasting market.

"In light of the fact that (the Federal Communications Commission) regulation of carriage access for cable broadcasting did not conflict with antitrust principles in the context of (Community Cablevision's) decision to carry Midland's signal, there is no justification for holding that (the cable operation owners) have antitrust immunity," the appeals court said.

Stenholm rates low with consumer group

WASHINGTON — When it comes to consumer protection, Texans get some of the worst congressional representation in the country, according to a lobbying group that says it rights for consumer-oriented laws.

Ratings published by the Consumer Federation of America claim that the 25-member Texas delegation rarely voted "right" on 15 key consumer-interest issues before Congress.

Only three of the 24 representatives and two senators rated higher than 50 percent in a CPA rating system which considers 100 percent a from Texas, more than from any other state. The group included Republican Sen. John Tower and Reps. Marvin Leath, D-Marlin, Tom Loeffler, R-Hurt, Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, and Joe Wyatt, D-Bloomington.

The federation said consumers were generally similar. CFA criticized the congressional removal of Occupational Health and Safety Administration regulations from businesses with 10 or fewer employees and good safety records.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, voted correctly in CFA's view, when he joined a two-vote majority which rejected an amendment designed to strip the FIC of its power to take action against professionals such as lawyers and doctors regulated at the state level.

But CFA said both Bentsen and Tower voted "wrong" when they supported a bill to exempt soft drink bottles with exclusive territorial arrangements from federal anti-trust laws; voted against a proposed, and rejected, repeal of the oil depletion allowance for independent oil and natural gas companies; agreed with the senate majority on the reduction of OSHA powers and voted against a $1.6 billion appropriation for housing assistance to the poor and elderly.

A House companion vote to reduce OSHA regulatory and inspection powers was opposed, as CFA wanted, only by Eckhardt, Gonzales, Rep. Jim Matter, D-Dallas, and Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock.

Stenholm unsuccessfully sought to deny funding to programs requiring local governments to buy wheelchair lifts for public places. The Stenholm effort to cut the law requiring such provisions for the handicapped lost overall, but received the support of 18 other Texas representatives. Eckhardt, Gonzales, Rep. E. de la Garza, D-Missam, Rep. J. J. Pickle, D-Austin, and Rep. Abraham Kazen Jr., D-Laredo, voted against Stenholm — "right," in CFA's view.

Of his "zero" rating, Republican Sen. Tower responded, through a spokesman, by saying: "What one group bases its ratings on may not reflect what the vast majority of people think of as in the best interest of consumers. You also have to distinguish between short-term and long-term interest. We may have to do things today to increase productivity and the nation's energy supply that will be in the best interest of consumers in the long run."

SIMMS FUMBLES — Tampa Bay Buccaneer defender Bill Kollar (77) leaps for the ball as Phil Simms of the New York Giants runs behind. Simms lost the ball as he attempted to pass in second quarter action. Tampa Bay went on to score on a field goal by Garo Yepremian.

Hill's heroics enable Cowboys to triumph

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Coach Tom Landry called the play "amazing." Wide receiver Drew Pearson said "It's better to be lucky than good." And Tony Hill, the hero himself, didn't even know it was fourth down.

With just seconds left, Hill leaped in front of cornerback Roger Wehrli to corral a Danny White pass and cap a 69-yard drive. The 28-yard scoring strike allowed the Dallas Cowboys to escape Sunday with a 27-24 win over St. Louis in a game which saw the lead change hands five times.

"Tony just made a great catch," said White. "I let the ball go earlier than I wanted to. Tony hadn't made his move yet."

Hill also said he was planning to make a cut when the ball was thrown.

"I just jumped up and caught it," the wide receiver said. "I didn't know where Wehrli was. My concentration was on the ball."

"I didn't even know it was fourth down," Landry said. The Cowboys were "fortunate to win" the battle with arch-rival St. Louis.

"It was amazing he caught it," Landry said. "The ball just fluttered and he just outjumped him."

Pearson, the secondary receiver on the play, saw the winning touchdown and offered his better-than-lucky description. "I thought Roger stumbled a little bit. But it was that kind of day. So many things can go wrong or right."

Wehrli offered no excuses. "He walled me off and I couldn't get around him. I saw the ball at the last second."

The White-to-Hill heroics was not the only big play by the Cowboys. They appeared doomed earlier when St. Louis had the ball — and a 17-13 lead — on the Cowboy 16-yard line early in the fourth quarter. But on second and ten, Cowboy pressure on St. Louis quarterback Jim Hart forced a pass that went off the hands of running back Otis Anderson and into the arms of Dallas safety Dennis Thurman.

Thurman galloped 78 yards for a touchdown that gave the Cowboys a 20-17 lead.

"That interception gave us new life," said Landry. But the Cardinals bounced right back into a 24-20 lead as Hart hit Pat Tilley with a 46-yard bomb, and then connected with Mel Gray four plays later for a 34-yard touchdown with nine minutes remaining.

On two subsequent possessions, St. Louis kept the ball on the ground and couldn't pick up a first down. After the Cardinals punted the second time, White connected with Pearson for 22 and 15 yards to set up the clincher to Hill.

The Cardinals moved to the Dallas 40 with 20 seconds remaining, but Hart was sacked twice to move St. Louis out of range for a possible tying field goal.

Disease killing college sports

Who will bell the cat?

By The Associated Press
It's an infectious and potentially terminal disease afflicting major college sports, particularly football — and the doctor has a name for it.

"Keeping up with the Joneses is killing us," says Dr. Leroy Walker, former Olympic track coach, educator and current president of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics.

"Unless stringent measures are taken, and taken soon, we will wind up with two concepts in our university system — one with the emphasis on education with sports an ancillary, the other a collection of athletic factories, highly commercialized, dedicated to entertainment rather than learning.

"Before it's too late, we must return to the philosophy of Plato, who said sports and education are not just for an elite few but for everyone, men and women alike, Plato originated Title IX."

Walker, president of North Carolina Central University in Durham, N.C., is a Paul Revere sounding an alarm and a summons for a return to sanity in sports.

Calling attention to abuses which have brought penalties to half the teams in the Pac-10, including Southern Cal and UCLA, probations for Auburn and Oklahoma State and scandals at New Mexico and Long Beach State covering various violations, the well-known Southern educator listed three principal concerns:

1. Over-commercialism.
2. Commitment to entertainment rather than education.

3. Deterioration of ethics in sports.

"But who," he added, "is going to bell the cat?"

"The trend is for more and bigger stadia, more appearances on national TV at $400,000 a pop, stronger and more successful teams regardless of the cost, win, win, win."

"It's time for a new Sanity Code."

Few can speak as knowledgeably of the collegiate situation as this self-educated black man, born in Atlanta, one of 13 children, who attended

Benedict College in Columbia, S.C., got his Masters Degree at Columbia University and his PhD at New York U., all the while winning 12 letters in four sports.

He is renowned as the track and field coach who accompanied the first U.S. team to Mainland China, tutored the U.S. team in the 1976 Olympics and became an executive board member of the U.S. Olympic Committee.

As president of the NAIA, headquartered in Kansas City, he presides over a complex of 515 colleges with 1.2 million students which is called the "little brother" of the NCAA. The body, made up largely of smaller colleges, holds 250 different district playoffs.

Said Walker: "You don't need to be rich and big to produce an athlete and a scholar. It's best when you can have both."

Ennis knocked out of unbeaten ranks

By The Associated Press
Only three of the top teams in The Associated Press schoolboy football poll came out losers last weekend, but Ennis alone had the dubious honor of dropping a key game to another powerhouse squad.

James Richardson returned the second-half kickoff for a score as Corsicana, ranked seventh in Class 4A, scored two touchdowns in three minutes to stun previously unbeaten Ennis, 21-6.

Ennis, a recent addition to the rankings, had entered the contest in the No. 9 spot.

Besides Ennis, two other top-ranked teams took it on the chin during the ninth weekend of the Texas schoolboy season.

Lubbock Coronado, ranked No. 7 in 5A, was upset by Hereford, 24-11, while Baird, the ninth-rated team in 2A, suffered a shocking 40-13 loss to Hamlin.

Fourth-ranked Beaumont Hebert in 4A had to settle for a 10-10 tie with Jasper, but took the advantage in district play with a 12-11 edge in first downs.

Should the two teams tie for the district lead, Hebert would advance to the playoffs.

Defending state champion Temple dashed the upset hopes of arch-rival Killeen, 31-9.

The Wildcats, No. 1 in 5A, have a 48-game, regular-season winning streak dating back to the final night of the 1975 season — when Killeen came out on top.

In other games involving top-ranked 5A teams, No. 2 Port Arthur Jefferson blasted Port Arthur Lincoln, 37-6; third-rated Odessa Permian blanked Midland Lee, 13-0; Conroe, No. 4, trounced Spring Klein, 27-7; and Bryan, in the fifth spot, overran Killeen Ellison, 35-8.

Running back Bobby Booker ran for 167 yards and two touchdowns as Bay City, the top-rated team in 4A, demolished Brazosport, 52-0.

Second-ranked Gainesville finished off Fort Worth Carter Riverside, 40-6; No. 3 Gregory-Portland edged Beeville, 8-7; and sixth-spotted Wichita Falls Hirsch embarrassed Graham, 29-2.

Eighth-rated Navasota decapitated Magnolia, 54-7, and No. 10 Paris outdueled McKinney, 14-7.

No. 5 Andrews had the weekend off.

In Class 3A, top-ranked Childress won over Tulia, 27-6; No. 2 Stamford beat Clyde, 26-7; third-rated Pittsburg routed Mount Vernon, 47-0; Edna, in the fourth spot, creamed Karnes City, 42-0; and Slaton, No. 5, outgunned Roosevelt, 28-2.

No. 6 Allen blitzed Commerce, 48-7; eighth-rated Breckenridge popped Abilene Wylie, 24-10; ninth-ranked Decatur blanked Aledo, 46-0; and Refugio, No. 10, creamed Mathis, 60-0.

Seventh-ranked Cedar Hill did not play.

In Class 2A, top-rated Pilot Point romped over Coppell, 54-6; No. 2 Waskom booted Karnack, 54-0; third-place Troup shut out Cushing, 47-0; fourth-ranked Groveton posted a 27-13 win over Corrigan Camden; and Shiner, No. 5, outplayed Lexington, 45-6.

No. 6 Panhandle baffled Coppell, 54-6; seventh-ranked Tidehaven slipped by Brookshire Royal, 15-8; eighth-rated Wheller blasted Memphis, 34-7; and Rotan, No. 10, clobbered Albany, 50-0.

There's only 1 Campbell

DENVER (AP) — Bum Phillips, the Houston Oilers head coach, once said of star running back Earl Campbell, "I don't know what class he's in, but it don't take long to call the roll."

Sunday, Phillips added to the Campbell legend by saying, "There are a lot of imposters, but there ain't but one Earl Campbell."

The bruising Campbell carried 36 times for 157 yards and two touchdowns Sunday to help the Oilers down the Denver Broncos 20-16 and raise their National Football League record to 6-3.

Both of Campbell's scores were set up by long passes from Houston quarterback Ken Stabler—a 54-yarder to Ken Burrough in the second quarter and a 41-yarder to tight end Mike Barber in the third period. Campbell's 9-yard burst up the middle for

Lions fall; Rams win

Quarterback Mike Miller produced some big play magic Saturday night to carry Southwest Texas State to a 37-26 Lone Star Conference victory over previously unbeaten East Texas State Saturday.

Miller rushed for three first half touchdowns and passed for a fourth to compile a school record 392 total yards.

Angelo State whipped Texas A&I 83-16 to remain in a tie with Southwest Texas for the league lead.

Angelo State and Southwest Texas collide Saturday at 4 p.m. in San Marcos for the LSC leadership. Both own 4-0 records.

In other games last weekend, Sam Houston State dumped Howard Payne 23-14, and Stephen F. Austin tripped Abilene Christian University 24-23.

Miller gained 157 yards on 25 carries and hit 14 of 22 passes for another 235 yards in the greatest offensive showing ever by a Bobcat.

And Miller needed every yard of it.

Hawk Queens win opener, 82-64

RANGER — Howard College came from behind in the second half to defeat Ranger College, 82-64, in a girls' basketball game here Saturday evening.

The contest opened the season for the Hawk Queens. The Big Spring club plays McMurry College at 6 o'clock this evening in Abilene and moves to Waco Wednesday for the McLennan Classic Tournament, opening play against Hill College at 4 p.m.

The Hawk Queens were behind as much as ten points in the first half but took the lead shortly after the second half opened, at 40-38, and never relinquished it.

Durbin leader in PBA event

FAIRVIEW PARK, Ohio (AP) — Mike Durbin took the lead after four rounds of the Professional Bowlers Association's $75,000 Northern Ohio Open at Westgate Lanes, totaling 5,946 pins.

Durbin captured his last five matches, including a 225-215 final game decision over Warren Nelson.

The victory over Nelson and the 30 bonus pins that accompanied it allowed Durbin to slip past Jay Robinson by eight pins. Robinson finished the round at 5,938.

Yanks defeat Japanese feds

TOKYO (AP) — The 12-member U.S. women's golf team beat Japan by 19 strokes and won the team title for the second straight year in the $100,000 Japan-U.S. Pioneer Cup Women's Professional Golf Tournament.

The American team shot a three-round total of 2,290 strokes on the par 73 Genjyama Country Club course.

Amy Alcott sank a short birdie putt and beat Sally Little in a sudden death playoff and captured the individual title. The players ended the regulation play with 224 totals. Alcott had a final-round 75 and Little shot 73.

Vote to Keep Judge Will Garwood on the Texas Supreme Court

Judge Will Garwood has widespread support from Democrats, Republicans, Independents, three former governors, four former attorneys general, 11 former Supreme Court justices, 15 Texas Bar presidents.

Texas lawyers endorsed Judge Garwood by 82%. He won local judicial preference polls by 86% in Dallas, 86% in Houston and 80% in Fort Worth.

Judge Garwood is the choice of so many because he's fair-minded, non-partisan and better suited to the job through personal qualifications and superior training.

He has over twenty years experience in private civil law practice. He served with the Judge Advocate General's Corps, U.S. Army, and was first in his class every year at The University of Texas School of Law, receiving his LLB with honors.

"The appointment of Will Garwood to the Texas Supreme Court sounds like a chapter of Texas history repeating itself. The Garwoods have a long record in the judiciary. Will Garwood's grandfather, Hiram Garwood, was county judge of Bastrop County in 1888 and at one time president of the Texas Bar Association. W. St. John Garwood, son of the county judge and father of the new associate justice, was the first Houstonian to be named to the Texas Supreme Court in 80 years. . . . This three-generation record of public service is in the finest Texas tradition"

— HOUSTON POST

"Garwood's legal credentials are, to put it modestly, magnificent."

Steelers eke one out

Greene: Winning 'everything'

By The Associated Press It wasn't very stylish. In fact, it was very un-Pittsburghlike. But it was enough. "We got a win. It's been a month since the last one. This feels good," defensive tackle Joe Greene said after the Steelers, still in the uncomfortable position of a place elsewhere than first, ended a three-game tailspin — their worst in four seasons — by edging the Green Bay Packers 22-20 Sunday.

with and do our best to overcome." Bradshaw gave Pittsburgh its first touchdown with a second-period 7-yard pass to Lynn Swann, returning after missing three games with a cracked rib. And after Matt Bahr kicked two field goals to put the Steelers on top 15-

Bradshaw gave them a chance to tie the game with a 20-yard pass with less than five minutes to play. Lynn Dickey passed for all three Green Bay TDs. "When you get a chance to play, you do the best you can," said Bleier, who replaced hobbling Franco Harris and rushed four consecutive times for 38 yards before catching Bradshaw's TD toss. "Other backs are bigger, they're stronger, they're faster and they're younger. They should play," Bleier added. "But I have an opportunity to contribute and be a benefit to the team in situations like that." On Green Bay's first possession, Aydelette snapped the ball way over the head of punter David Beverly and through the end zone for a safety and a 2-0 Pittsburgh lead. And in the second period, Aydelette's snap was high, Beverly jumped up and caught it and, rather than try a punt, threw an incomplete pass. The Steelers took over in Green Bay territory and wound up with Swann's TD catch.

Oilers 20, Broncos 16 Houston's Earl Campbell was a mile high against Denver's superb rushing defense. He didn't become the first NFL player ever to gain 200 or more yards in three consecutive games, but he gained 157 yards and scored two touchdowns.

If Bama doesn't win 'I'll go back to plowing'

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Defending national champion Alabama's 6-3 loss to Mississippi State in Jackson Saturday was not your everyday loss — Bear Bryant had something to complain about. "I know it's going to be a lot tougher beating us the next time," Bryant said Sunday. "If not, I'll go back to plowing." The Bulldog victory, the first in 22 years versus the Crimson Tide — Halted the nation's longest winning streak at 28. — Kept "The Coach" from getting his 304th career victory. — Dampened the Tide's bid to become the first team in college football history to win three consecutive national championships. — Limited an awesome ground attack that had been averaging over 300 yards per game to just over 100 yards. — After 28 Saturday afternoon, including two national championships, Bryant has explained why his forces have won Saturday, there were new questions and answers. "Before the game, I didn't think we were serious enough," Bryant said. "They (the players) were carrying on Friday night on the bus like somebody had escaped from the idiot house." But Bryant wasn't the only one disturbed. "I just can't accept it," said freshman running back Lennie Patrick, who recalled his immediate postgame reaction: "I just wanted to cry. Towards the end of the game, I just wanted to throw up," Patrick said. "This game is something people will talk about for 50 years. I just can't believe it, I don't want to believe it. It's no fun to lose." There were others suffering from disbelief. "It's sad. It's very sad," said split end Jesse Bendross. "I really thought we could pull it out at the end." Bendross said the worst part of losing will be facing the students and fans of Alabama. "It's going to be rough. I'm going to be ashamed to face people after this," he said. "At the end I thought about all those people at home listening to it on the radio. "They're so used to us winning. I hope nobody tries to kill themselves." "I bit my lip as hard as I could," said Alabama freshman Cindy Fulton weeping. "But I couldn't stop crying." Another Alabama student, Pat Coleman, had the same feeling. "I just can't believe it's true. I just kept hoping it wasn't true." Last Saturday was one of those Saturdays that Bryant has referred to so often — "Somebody gets beat every Saturday that's not supposed to get beat." Alabama is now a "somebody."

Irish or Georgia will take over lead in poll

By The Associated Press The king of college football is dead. Long live the king. Does anyone know who that might be? Third-ranked Notre Dame and No. 4 Georgia, the only unbeaten-untied major teams left, are in line to jump to the top of the Associated Press ratings in the wake of a fanatical rash of upsets over the weekend that claimed top-rated Alabama and runner-up UCLA among the victims. Sixth-ranked North Carolina and No. 10 Baylor also had their perfect records come to an embarrassing halt while No. 12 Texas, 14th-rated South Carolina and No. 15 Missouri also went down the tubes, although South Carolina and Missouri at least had the decency to lose to other ranked teams. This was the tale of devastation that swept through the Top Twenty: Mississippi State 6, Alabama 3; Arizona 23, UCLA 17; 16th-ranked Oklahoma 41, North Carolina 7; San Jose State 30, Baylor 22; Georgia 13, South Carolina 10; eighth-ranked Nebraska 38, Missouri 16, and Texas Tech 24, Texas 20. Alabama Coach Bear Bryant and Baylor linebacker Mike Singletary summed it up for the losers.

"Maybe the Good Lord intended it that way," Bryant said. "There is a purpose for everything," echoed Singletary, "and maybe this will be good for us." It certainly will benefit the winners, as follows: —Mississippi State remained in the running for the Southeastern Conference crown and a Sugar Bowl berth and almost surely will get a bowl bid of some sort. —Arizona proved it belongs in the Pacific-10 Conference, even though the Wildcats are on probation and ineligible for the Rose Bowl this year. —Oklahoma showed it can still run the football as well as anybody, churning out 495 yards against North Carolina's supposedly rugged defense. —San Jose State struck another blow for the lesser-known conferences and put the Pacific Coast Athletic Association on the map. —Texas Tech may have helped dispel the rumors that Coach Rex Dockery's job is in jeopardy. —Georgia moved squarely into the national championship picture, with Florida, Auburn and Georgia Tech standing between the Bulldogs and their first perfect regular season since 1946. —And Nebraska took a half-game lead over Oklahoma in the Big Eight race while knocking Missouri out of a share of the lead. Meanwhile, Notre Dame torpedoed Navy 33-0 as Jim Stone, replacing the injured Phil Carter for the fourth game in a row, carried 33 times for 211 yards and became the first Notre Dame player to rush for 100 yards in four consecutive outings. Stone ran 12 yards for one touchdown and set up another with a 73-yard sweep. "This is the youngest team I've coached since high school," said Dan Devine. "But it's probably also the closest-knit team I've ever coached."

One-year transfer rule on way out?

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas school administrators will be given a chance early next year to decide whether to do away with a controversial rule governing athletic eligibility among transfer students, the state rule-making body decided. The legislative council for the University Interscholastic League voted unanimously Sunday to recommend abolition of the one-year transfer rule, which says an athlete must give up one year of eligibility if he transfers from one school to another during his high school years, a UIL spokesman said. Members of the council voted unanimously to put the question on a referendum ballot that will be mailed to Texas school administrators in February and recommended approval of the change, said UIL public relations officer Bobby Hawthorne.

The UIL is the official organization that governs interscholastic competitions, both athletic and scholastic, in the state. If approved, athletic transfers would carry no penalty as long as bona fide residence can be proven and the district into which the athlete moves is satisfied there was no recruitment involved, Hawthorne said. The new rule would go into effect for the 1981-82 school year, on a two-year trial basis, he said. Hawthorne said the council members also agreed to let school officials vote on a proposal demanded by the Texas High School Coaches Association that would expand post-season playoffs in football, basketball, volleyball and baseball.

Chris Lloyd spurs U.S. LONDON (AP) — It's part of the education of a young tennis player to go out in front of a partisan British crowd and keep playing against a background of screaming and cheering. It was too much for 15-year-old Andrea Jaeger when she played Sue Barker in the Wightman Cup at London's Royal Albert Hall Saturday. She was a set up but then let the match drift away from her. It all came right for the United States in the end as Chris Evert Lloyd, after trailing 1-5, 15-40 in the final set, beat Virginia Wade 7-5, 3-6, 7-5 and gave the Americans an unbeatable 4-2 lead. The United States won the Cup 5-2 for the 42nd time in 52 years as Anne Smith and Kathy Jordan defeated Wade and Barker 6-4, 7-5 in doubles in the final match of the series. Afterwards Lloyd talked mostly about Jaeger's ordeal. "I was worried when I saw her upset out there against Sue Barker," she said. "Andrea has never had to face a crowd like that before. We get nothing like it in America. "Some girls can block it out more than others, but for Andrea it was most unnerveing."

Intangibles favor Bears but Rutigliano says 'no'

CLEVELAND (AP) — Two intangible aspects of tonight's nationally televised National Football League game would seem to favor the Chicago Bears over the Cleveland Browns, but Browns Coach Sam Rutigliano disdains both. First, the Browns are coming off an emotional 27-26 victory over the archrival Pittsburgh Steelers, and an emotional letdown against the Bears has been discussed since the moment the game with the Steelers ended. Second, Cleveland edged the Bears 33-31 during the preseason, largely because starting Cleveland quarterback Brian Sipe played the entire game and pulled out the victory by picking apart some second-string Chicago defenders. Revenge could be a high Chicago priority this evening.

"I don't think of the possibility of an emotional letdown as a problem," Rutigliano said. "Preparation is the key word, not the will to win. An emotional letdown is a danger if you're not prepared, and we will be. Beating the Steelers was a great achievement, but achievements come from continuous efforts." His club has shown emotional toughness several times this season, the coach said. "We fought back from those two disappointing losses at the start of the season (to New England and Houston) and from a game (against Denver) we should have won more than any other," Rutigliano said.

Georgia freshman Herschel Walker won his nationally televised rushing duel with South Carolina George Rogers, 219 yards to 168, thanks to a 76-yard touchdown burst in the opening minute of the third period. "It was no battle — Georgia won the game," said Rogers. "I don't know my capabilities yet," said Walker, who became the 13th freshman in NCAA history to rush for 1,000 yards. Baylor's loss to San Jose State came on the heels of the Bears' best start (7-0) in 81 years. They led 22-16 but lost when San Jose's Gerald Willhite ran for touchdowns of 2 and 6 yards in the final period. "This is my greatest win in 28 years of coaching," said San Jose's Jack Elway.

Vote for Greater Banking Convenience

Passage of Proposition 1 on the November 4th ballot will open the door to even greater banking convenience. This simple change in the law will allow Texas banks to place unmanned teller machines at convenient locations for faster service, night or day. These teller machines are becoming a convenient option for handling routine banking business.

Round the clock banking at unmanned tellers is convenient, safe and a positive step toward avoiding unnecessary credit card use... more over, it is an energy saver — instead of traveling across town to a bank, an unmanned teller can be built in your neighborhood. — San Angelo Standard-Times. Proposition 1 will make life easier for bank customers... (it) will eliminate many, if not all, of the tortuous lines seen clogging drive in bank lanes. — Houston Chronicle. Proposition 1 has gained widespread support as the amendment faces voters Nov. 4. — Orange Leader. "Off-premises unmanned teller machines should be approved by Texas voters." — San Antonio Light

People in forty other states already have this convenient banking choice. It's time Texans did, too. Vote for Proposition 1 November 4th. Includes a portrait of a man and text: "Vote for Proposition 1 November 4th. Political advertising paid for by Convenience Banking Committee, Box 1451, Austin, D. E. Benham, Treasurer."

Service station man may cash in

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Jurors didn't believe service-station operator Melvin Dummar when he told them why billionaire Howard Hughes would name him in a will, but Dummar may cash in on his story yet.

Dummar's tale of picking up a disheveled Hughes in the desert in 1968 and giving him a lift to Las Vegas has been made into a movie, "Melvin and Howard," and Dummar is hoping that his share of the proceeds will finance a venture into country-and-western singing.

"They've made it kind of a comedy," Dummar said. "It has me laughing, it has me crying, it has things that really happened."

What really happened is a matter of some dispute. Dummar says he dropped Hughes off at a hotel where he was known to stay and gave him a quarter, thinking he was destitute.

Hughes, a pioneering aviator and movie mogul, died on April 5, 1976, after being put aboard a plane in Acapulco, Mexico. Hughes, a lanky six-footer, weighed barely 90 pounds at the time. On April 27, 1976, a document mysteriously arrived at Mormon Church headquarters in Salt Lake City and it appeared to be Hughes's will. Dummar first said that he did not know where the will had come from, but later said he dropped the will off at the church after receiving a copy of it from a Hughes' courier, LeVane Forsyth.

In June 1978, a Las Vegas jury threw out the three-page, hand-scrawled will, under which Dummar was to receive a one-sixteenth share of the Hughes estate. A valid will has never been certified.

Dummar, 36, of Willard, Utah, admits he didn't tell the truth about the "Mormon Will" at first, but still believes it is genuine. He said he has given up any hopes of sharing in Hughes' estate.

"I wish I'd handled it differently," he said. "I was so darned scared that they were going to accuse me of writing the will, and that's what they did anyway."

Dummar was operating a service station at the time and then moved on to work with a beer distributor. He is now employed by a wholesale fish company and said he is slated to become its Pacific Northwest marketing representative. He has been on a nationwide tour to promote the film.

But the one thing Dummar says he really wants is a chance to make it big in country and western music.

"That will take money, he says, and so far he hasn't gotten much money out of the picture, which stars Jason Robards as Hughes and Paul Le Mat as Dummar.

Dummar says singing has always been one of his hobbies and maintains that he even sang with Hughes.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGNER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, NOV. 4, 1980

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day is fine for making plans to expand your activities and gain added benefits in the future. Be careful where money matters are concerned and avoid trouble.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Morning is best time to handle financial matters since later the aspects are not good. Use reason and good sense.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A good day to concentrate on getting ahead in your line of endeavor. Take extra steps to please the one you love.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Plan your workday well so that you don't waste energy and get the most out of your efforts. Sidestep a troublemaker.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Go after your personal aims vigorously and you can surely gain them. Avoid tendency to talk too much.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Make a point to see higher-ups who can assist you in career activities. Don't waste time with one who is a pain in the neck.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Put a new course of action in operation now and get excellent results. Good organizational work is the key to success now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Morning is the best time to handle important business matters. Strive to be happier and more prosperous in the days ahead.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Come to a better agreement with a dynamic associate and make the future much brighter for both of you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) If you are more enthused about the work ahead of you, you can easily gain your aims. Relax at home tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Make certain an important business plan is set up nicely so that you can have added income in the future.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Ideal day to spend more time on home affairs so that everything there is more harmonious. Be careful of outsiders.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Having informative talks with associates can result in mutual benefits. Avoid one who has an eye on your assets.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one with much organizational ability and should be given an opportunity to express this quality early in life. Teach to use reason when dealing with others. Be sure to give good religious training.

Burglar keeps police guessing after death

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) - A bragging young burglar who delighted in breaking into homes while the owners slept and may have been responsible for 2,000 thefts is keeping police guessing even after his death. Paul Hass, 22, who had been arrested several times, told authorities with pride that he was the North Shore Burglar of Long Island, N.Y., the Gunbarrel Burglar of Colorado and the Malibu Burglar of California. "He was a premier burglar," said Boulder County sheriff's detective Carroll Allison, who tracked Hass for weeks in 1979 during a rash of break-ins at expensive homes. "That was his profession. Just as some kids grow up to be a doctor, Paul Hass grew up to be a burglar." Hass was slain Oct. 21, when Westport, Conn., homeowner Irving Kaye shot him once in the back of the head during a break-in, officials say. Now police are trying to figure out where all the loot from his burglaries is stashed.

Lt. Bruce Goodman of the Boulder sheriff's department says he's convinced Hass rented safe deposit boxes throughout the country. Some of them may never be found since Hass often changed identities, using stolen driver's licenses and other identification cards, Goodman says. "If we could put all our cases together, I'm sure we could solve 1,000 to 2,000 burglaries," said Sgt. Ronald Rafferty of the Suffolk County, N.Y., police department.

Hass, who violated probation in New York, was arrested in Boulder in 1979. He was being held in connection with the Colorado break-ins, but had not been convicted of them. Authorities said he told them about his exploits before escaping from jail shortly before Christmas of 1979. He remained at large until his death. In Connecticut, Westport Police Lt. Ron Malone said Hass was suspected in a rash of burglaries during the nine days before he was killed.

Authorities said Kaye, a wealthy manufacturer of pool tables, was awakened by noise and noticed his television set missing. Hass was shot near an indoor swimming pool in the home. Authorities said they found $2,700 in his pocket. Officers who had been assigned the job of tracking Hass said he operated on the theory that when people are home, the money is there. Hass would break in while the owners slept, picking up purses and wallets. He had told friends in Boulder that he would go into bedrooms and take money while people slept. Hass struck 60 times in 60 days in the Boulder area, police say, with many of the break-ins taking place in the expensive Gunbarrel neighborhood. Allison, who spent several sleepless nights waiting in a car for Hass to strike, said it was tough to catch him. "If you can be impressed by a criminal, I was impressed by Paul Hass," said Allison. "It was a challenge to catch him."

Thousands of Americans have found a way to take rent-free vacations by swapping their homes with families in far-away places. But a successful trade takes careful planning, well in advance.

Farm Carter may seek co-op

WASHINGTON (AP) - In a program modeled on New Deal legislation, the Carter administration is seeking to opening the way for transportation cooperatives in rural America.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland announced approval last week of a pilot program to determine if farmers can be helped by forming cooperative ventures for transporting their goods. The emphasis will be on adding truck and rail service in rural communities that are suffering logjams. "We'd like to improve the transportation in rural areas adversely affected by recent closings of railroad branch lines," said Bergland. "The administration will encourage state governments to propose experimental transportation cooperatives by providing low-interest loans and loan guarantees to get the pilot projects underway. The experiment will be modeled after the 45-year-old Rural Electrification Administration, which was instrumental in providing the capital to bring electricity to the American hinterlands. Bergland hopes that the transportation pilot project will lead to a new government agency that would provide permanent financing for the rural cooperatives. That proposal would require the approval of Congress. The cooperative concept would permit small, individual rail lines to be operated by shippers or groups of users. It is aimed primarily at the Midwest. The Agriculture Department feels that many midwestern farmers have encountered nightmarish conditions in recent years in trying to move their grain to market. Officials say the problems range from rail car shortages, rail abandonments, deteriorating roadbeds and bridges and outdated waterway facilities to a general trend toward higher rates for poorer service. Some cooperative efforts have already begun, particularly in Nebraska, where three separate groups of cooperatives have organized transportation companies to buy and lease railroad cars. Grain from Nebraska had been moving to the Gulf of Mexico in single cars, a practice that the cooperative groups say was wasteful because of the long turnaround time. The Agriculture Department says the idea is also gaining favor among lending institutions.

family in a city you'd like to visit and exchange houses or apartments. You move into their home; they move into yours. The advantages are plain. You have no hotel bills. Food costs are flexible, since you can do your own cooking as often or as seldom as you want. You have more space than you would in a hotel. And you learn what life is really like in the area you are visiting. The disadvantages are a little less obvious. You usually won't get the kind of fringe benefits you would at a hotel. Most homes don't come with maid service, for example. You will have to trust your home and possessions to a stranger - just as the stranger is trusting his or hers to you. There is no guarantee of satisfaction. There are several ways to arrange a swap. Check the classified ads in local newspapers and magazines in the places you want to visit. Many of them include exchange offers. If you want a more formal arrangement, consider an exchange service. These services will, for a fee, put potential swappers in touch with each other. The exchange services publish directories of would-be traders. You pay a fee to list your house. In exchange, you get the directory. In some cases, you can subscribe to the directory alone, without listing your house. Many of the services include houses overseas as well as in the United States. Some also offer rentals for families who prefer not to swap, but still want an alternative to a hotel. The Vacation Exchange Club Inc. of New York City, which is celebrating its 20th anniversary this year, is one of the oldest services and its operation is typical. The club publishes two directories - one in February, the other in April. The deadline for listing in the February directory is Dec. 17; the deadline for the April edition is Feb. 15. It costs $18 to list your house; a subscription to the directories alone is $12. Most of the exchange services do not actually arrange swaps. Once you have the directory you are on your own. There are several things you can do to avoid trouble and increase your chances of a successful swap. Among them: -Be as specific as possible in your initial negotiations. Are you willing to let someone else use your car? Are there plants to be watered? Animals which have to be fed? Do you want a non-smoker?

—Agree ahead of time who will pay for what. —Describe yourself and your neighborhood. Leave names of people to call in emergencies. —Check your insurance policy to see if you need extra coverage. The address of the Vacation Exchange Club is 350 Broadway, New York, N.Y., 10013.

Thirteen-ounce baby still beating odds in Amarillo
AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - A prematurely born 13-ounce baby girl continued to defy odds for her survival and was "holding her own" late Sunday, a hospital nursing supervisor said. The girl, born at 9:10 a.m. Friday at Northwest Texas Hospital here, was so small doctors said her chances for survival were zero. She is normal physically and mentally, however, and can breathe without a respirator. "She cries, she moves around and is active for her age," a hospital spokesman said. "Her chances for survival are better each day. The critical period is the first week of life." Dr. Mubariq Naqvi, head of the intensive care unit, said the baby is the smallest he's seen survive 24 hours. The girl was born to an Amarillo couple who asked not to be identified. She has two sisters, ages 6 and 4. The birth was not Cesarean, as are many premature births.
