Market outdraws 'gunslingers'

By BILL ELDER
The year was 1969 and gunslingers had taken over the stock market. Gunslingers? Well, not exactly. "These were your Harvard graduates in their shiny new suits who would pick the fastest growing companies in the country and tell you to buy stock in them," recalled Dan Wilkins, a stockbroker with Edward D. Jones & Co. It was their overly aggressive, shoot-em-up style that earned them the title "gunslingers," and it was that same style that virtually shot the bottom out of the market. "Numerous stocks sold at 80 to 90 times their earnings," Wilkins said, "and the economy just wasn't growing that fast. They were looking way too far into the future." Investors abandoned the market, he explained, and the total number of investors dropped from about 32 million to 25 million. Good old

American faith in a brighter future prevailed, however, and eventually investors were lured back into the market — only to be thrown into a panic again by the Arab oil embargo in 1974. Today, buoyed by the optimistic rhetoric and pro-business image of Ronald Reagan, analysts report that investors are back in full force, trading shares in record numbers. "Most of the people you see walking and talking on the street are directly or indirectly involved with the stock market," Wilkins said. He talked about the stock market during a recent afternoon in his modern office in the Permian Building. The boyish-looking, 41-year-old broker leaned back from the television-like computer terminals that give him instant stock prices and thumbed through the 1980 annual report of the New York Stock Exchange. His eyes lit up as he underlined figures and read them aloud — figures that seemed almost too huge to comprehend in the self-contained world of small-town life. "Share volume has doubled from 1977 to 1980," he read. There were 5 billion shares on the New York exchange in 1977 and at the end of last year the figure stood at 11 billion, according to the report. He pulled another figure from the report which seemed to reveal a rising tide of faith in the capitalist system: 44 million was the average daily number of shares traded on the NYSE in 1980, which was 40 percent more than the average daily volume for the previous year. 1981 seems destined to continue the record-breaking trend. The day after Reagan was elected president, 84 million shares were traded on the New York exchange, the Associated Press reported. Never before had so much activity been recorded in a single day. But that record didn't stand long — See Who Is Pg. 2A

Nixon, two aides must pay for spying, court decides

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today upheld a ruling that will force former President Nixon and two of his top aides to pay money damages for illegally spying on American citizens.

Today's action sends the case back to a federal trial court, where former national security aide Morton Halperin will try to prove that he and his family are entitled to a substantial award.

A federal appeals court had ruled that a nominal money award was insufficient to make up for the constitutional violations caused by a 21-month wiretap on Halperin's home telephone.

Today's decision carries little or no impact on future cases because it was affirmed by an equally divided 4-4 vote.

The major resolution which had been expected in today's ruling — that is, when a president can be held personally liable for money damages for his misconduct in office — will have to wait for another day.

The court today agreed to review just such a case posing that question. The case was brought by government whistle-blower A. Ernest Fitzgerald, who claims that Nixon is liable for money damages because Fitzgerald was illegally fired from his civil service position.

Included in today's 4-4 affirmation are former Attorney General John Mitchell and former Nixon chief of staff H.R. Haldeman. Also to be decided when the case is sent back on the damage question is a similar allegation against former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

According to Halperin's lawyer, the basic question of liability, rather than the amount of money damages, still remains to be determined in Kissinger's case.

Abstaining from the 4-4 vote was Justice William H. Rehnquist, who was a Justice Department lawyer at the time of the alleged violations.

Rehnquist did not note that he was abstaining from the Fitzgerald case.

Strike by air controllers averted

Airports operating

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nationwide strike by air traffic controllers was averted today after all-night negotiations produced a tentative contract settlement just two hours before the threatened walkout.

The agreement was announced by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization and confirmed by the Federal Aviation Administration.

Although final details were still being ironed out, controllers around the country reported for work as usual as the 7 a.m. EDT strike deadline passed.

A strike would have grounded about half the nation's commercial flights, costing the airlines an estimated $80 million to $100 million a day and the economy in general two to three times that much.

Airport control towers around the country reported normal operations today with no major delays and airlines told passengers who had booked backup reservations to use regularly scheduled flights.

There were no immediate details on the settlement, which is subject to ratification by the 14,800 union controllers and approval by Congress. It was hammered out by Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis and union president Robert Poli in 15 hours of bargaining Sunday and through the night after the two sides had ignored a midnight negotiating deadline.

Black photographer charged with killing man in Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — A 23-year-old black free-lance photographer charged with the murder of one of his young black slain in Atlanta was arrested after laboratory tests linked fibers found on the victim with evidence taken from his home, sources said.

Wayne B. Williams, arrested Sunday, was questioned about the slayings and released three weeks ago. He is the first person charged with any of the killings of 23 juveniles and five young adults.

Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown told a hastily called news conference at the Fulton County Jail on Sunday that Williams had been charged with "one count of criminal homicide" in the death of Nathaniel Carter, 27, whose body was found May 24 in the Chattahoochee River. Williams was jailed.

Brown refused to say if Williams grand jury. By law, Williams must be given a hearing within 72 hours of his arrest unless he asks that his case be continued.

Meanwhile, the Atlanta Journal reported today that top law enforcement officials met last Friday for seven hours at the governor's mansion at the request of Vice President George Bush.

Bush telephoned Gov. George Busbee on Thursday after reviewing an FBI report and asked Busbee to meet with local FBI and Justice Department officials for a briefing, according to the Journal.

The newspaper quoted an unnamed official familiar with the meeting as saying Busbee told the group he would support whatever decision local prosecutors made, but added that Williams' status — under surveillance but not charged — should not continue indefinitely.

Local oil security firm scrutinized by state board

By BILL ELDER
A local oilfield security company's license to operate is being withheld by the state pending an investigation into whether the company began offering its services before receiving the license. Howard Kloss, head of Oil Safe — the company under investigation by the Texas Board of Private Investigators and Private Security Agencies — termed the inquiry "more or less a misunderstanding" and said the board's investigator recently came to Big Spring only to learn that the allegation of operating without a license was "unfounded."

Kloss, however, admitted he has been offering security services to about 20 West Texas clients since April while he waits to take an examination for his license. He said he has done so under the provision that a security company may operate without a license for 90 days "if you are qualified."

A source close to the board's investigation said no such provision exists and the qualification of the applicant is not determined until after the examination is taken.

The source declined to divulge details of the investigation beyond confirming that Oil Safe was being investigated in connection with possible violation of licensing law.

The investigation apparently was sparked by an inquiry from a source which neither Kloss nor the board will reveal. Kloss said the matter began when a competitor from the Midland area felt Oil Safe was cutting in on his territory and made a complaint to authorities about Oil Safe's lack of a license.

The source close to the investigation said all companies that "furnish private security officers to protect property" in Texas must be licensed as a guard company by the board. If a company failed or refused to obtain a license, then "we would go to the district attorney and present our evidence. It would be up to him to decide whether to prosecute," the source said.

The maximum penalty upon conviction of violating the licensing laws is a $500 fine and — or a one-year sentence to county jail, the source explained.

He noted that Oil Safe's application had been received by the board during the first week of June and added that "it is complete and in order. The applicant is waiting for us to schedule an appointment to take an examination for the license."

The examination will not be scheduled, however, until the investigation is finished, the source said.

Kloss is applying for a Class C license, one of three types of license available. It combines the powers granted with A and B licenses, enabling a Class C licensee both to carry out private investigations and to offer an unarmed guard service.

As a former Big Spring police officer and current certified peace officer, Kloss says he is the only individual within his organization carrying a handgun. In order for his guards to carry handguns on the job, they would have to be commissioned law enforcement officer or else receive a private security officer's commission from the state board. Kloss says he won't go that far, and will let his guards carry shotguns under their right as citizens.

The license does not confer the authority to make arrests, according to a board member. Kloss says he had aided in six arrests so far, detaining the suspects until sheriff's deputies could reach the scene and make arrests.

One client of Oil Safe, who asked not to be identified because it might suggest the nature of operations protecting his business, said he was not aware that Oil Safe was unlicensed until an investigator from the board confirmed that the license hadn't been issued yet.

The client said he signed a three-month trial contract with Oil Safe after he was solicited by the company.

He declined to reveal the terms of the contract but added that it seemed to be "a good bargain."

"We had tried lighting, we had tried alarm systems, we had tried personnel of our own" and all to no avail, the client told the Herald.

"We don't come cheap," Kloss said.

Kloss appears to be baffled by the scrutiny his lack of a license has caused. He says he'll probably take the exam — and pass it — within the next few weeks. The only problem left then will be the bothersome tactics resorted to by the competition.

"I don't understand why they're complaining, when they can undercut us to easy. All they have to do is say, 'We'll do it for much cheaper.' There's a lot more territory out there than I can cover."

Kloss has expanded his service to protect schools and construction sites as well as oilfields, but the oilfields, plagued by theft and vandalism, remain his primary source of business.

As to whether they will continue to be his primary source of business, that depends on the outcome of the investigation and, if he is cleared of any violation, on the outcome of the examination.

"He has the qualifications as far as experience is concerned." The source involved with the investigation noted. "Now we have to determine if he's qualified as far as knowledge of the law."

Action/reaction: Only a rose

Q. I have been wanting to find an old poem, "Only a Rose Will Do." I do not know the author. This means a great deal to me. I hope you can locate it.

A. We failed to locate a poem. We did locate a song titled "Only Rose." It was written by Brian Hooker and Rudolph Frimi for a Jeanette McDonald movie in 1925, "The Vagabond King."

The verse goes:
Only a rose I give you,
Only a song dying away.
Only a smile to keep in memory
Until we meet another day.
Only a rose to whisper,
Blushing as roses do,
I'll bring along a smile or a song for anyone
But only a rose for you.

THEY'RE OFF AND RUNNING — Residents of this area can consider themselves forewarned. The annual hike of the tarantulas may have begun. This ample fellow, obviously wondering whether a good offense would be the best defense in stopping a human being that has come too close, was spotted tippy-toeing along the road between Big Spring and the Tubb community. Some people have been known to use the hairy creatures as "watch dogs." Others, more wary, keep dogs to watch for them. The best advice one can avail himself of if he meets one of the beauties: If the tarantula is headed east, go west.

Girl drowns at C-City

COLORADO CITY (SC) — A five-year-old Midland girl drowned Sunday at Lake Colorado City.

Diana Brovo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Boyo Brovo, was swimming among a group of other children when the parents noticed she was missing.

According to Game Warden Ronnie Aston, "when we reached the scene, the father and an unidentified man had retrieved the youngster from the lake. That particularly swimming area tapers down to a depth of eight to ten feet deep. However, the child was discovered in water four feet deep. All resuscitation efforts failed."

It's forecast to be sunny and hot through Tuesday, with highs right about the century mark. Lows tonight should fall into the lower 70s. Winds will be south to southeasterly at 10 to 15 mph today and Tuesday, decreasing to 5 to 10 mph tonight.

Smuggling of cheap Mexican fuel into Texas sparks headache

HIDALGO, Texas (AP) — The smuggling of cheap Mexican diesel fuel for high resale profits in the United States has become a growing headache for U.S. Customs officials and state revenue collectors.

"It's driving us up the wall," said Henry Posio, chief Customs Service investigator in Brownsville.

Occasional batches of poorly refined Mexican diesel have driven motorists off the road after buying it at the pump in Mexico or from unscrupulous dealers here.

Diesel costs $1.20 a gallon at American pumps but sells for a mere 17 cents a gallon across the Rio Grande. The Mexican government keeps the price low by subsidizing production costs of its oil monopoly, Pemex.

It doesn't take much arithmetic to figure a smuggler can turn a hefty profit on 100 gallons of diesel by selling it for 90 cents a gallon.

Enterprising smugglers use almost every method imaginable, Posio said, to sneak the fuel past both Mexican and American customs agents.

"You get shrimp boats going into Mexican waters, buying it and off-loading it to other boats," he said. "Mexican trucks come in, declare their diesel is for road use but then sell it from their trucks."

One man was arrested last year for smuggling 7,000 gallons of diesel in a waterbed loading on his pickup truck. Customs inspectors got suspicious when they saw him make 37 trips across the Brownsville-Matamoros bridge with the waterbed.

The state of Texas is losing $5 million to $6 million annually in unpaid state diesel taxes, said Tony Proffitt of the state comptroller's office in Austin.

Texas taxes diesel at 6 cents a gallon and requires individuals with fuel tanks over 42 gallons to get a permit.

The federal government requires licenses for diesel sellers and taxes the fuel at 4 cents a gallon. Customs agents said they generally don't worry about people bringing in large quantities for their own use, such as businessmen with diesel-powered fleets.

Many individuals caught with undeclared diesel settle with state and federal governments. But tracking the large-scale operations is harder.

"The paper trail on white collar crime is hard to put together," Proffitt said.

Border residents have taken advantage of the cheap diesel by purchasing diesel-powered cars and trucks.

"The demand for diesel vehicles here is much greater than further north and it's because of the 17-cent price," Posio said.

Mexican diesel has its drawbacks, as many car owners have discovered.

"It's a lower quality fuel and they don't put an additive in," said Don Cunningham, customers investigator in McAllen. "You can get a paraffin build up."

Dozens of cars, trucks and buses on both sides of the border stalled in February 1980 when paraffin from a bad batch of Mexican diesel clogged fuel systems. Repairs to clean out fuel lines ran up to $100.

The wax normally is removed or neutralized in the refining process.

The hazard has not deterred diesel sales to Americans. They run across the border led the Mexican government, anxious to preserve supplies for its citizens, to limit sales to cars with American plates to 100 pesos ($4) or about 28 gallons.

The result, Proffitt said, is that more smugglers are using Mexican nationals as haulers to fill up tanks and drive to storage facilities in the United States.

Diesel, unlike gasoline, is relatively safe to handle and has been found stored in old barns and garages, as well as storage tanks.

The organized diesel smuggling rings, Proffitt said, involve the haulers, a middle man who stores the fuel, and the ultimate boss who profits on its sale.

"Sometimes they go directly to dealers, saying 'I got some diesel I can pass off real cheap.' The stations are not aware of where it is coming from," he said.

Others will visit truck stops, offering 90-cent a gallon diesel to truckers and then pumping it on he parking lot.

The operations range from rings with storage facilities hidden along the border to the hobby smuggler.

"The hobby smuggler does it periodically when he needs a few bucks. They'll take the back seat out of a car and put in a tank and sell the stuff to a contractor who will pay for it at 70 cents a gallon," he said.

State investigators recently spent a week along the border trying to crack a ring they believe is operating at El Paso, Laredo and here. Diesel was being brought across from Mexico in pickup trucks and taken to a small tank farm near here.

Proffitt said no one has been charged although several Mexican nationals were warned against hauling the fuel for resale.

"Some of them have been very cooperative in explaining their role," he said.

State prosecutors in Austin and El Paso will handle criminal cases expected to arise from the investigation.

Cunningham handled another case in which five persons were indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of smuggling at least 100,000 gallons of diesel over an eight-month period ending in June 1980.

The ring sold the diesel to ranchers and at least one heavy equipment dealer, who did not its origin, Cunningham said.

Haulers brought the fuel into the United States at Rio Grande City, across from Ciudad Camargo, Mexico, and at this city across from Reynosa. The fuel was stored on a ranch near Mission.

The defendants pleaded guilty to reduced charges received suspended sentences and one was fined $500.

Customs officials say they expect the problem will last as long as diesel remains ridiculously cheap in Mexico. The same thing happened when coffee and sugar shortages worldwide drove up prices in America, they said.

"Whenever you get an item with such a difference in price, this will happen," Posio said.

ANITA BRYANT
Anita Bryant says she will stay in Selma

SELMA, Ala. (AP) — Anita Bryant has told her new neighbors in Selma that she's here to stay.

"I'm not looking back, I'm looking forward," she said at a reception. She formerly resided in Tulsa, Okla.

Miss Bryant visited an old friend, Bobbie Ames, here in May 1980 shortly after she began divorce proceedings against Bob Green. She has since left Green and the Anita Bryant Ministries in Florida.

During her earlier visit, Miss Bryant spoke to the three member graduating class of Dallas Christian School. Now, she gives the school a lot of credit for bringing her to Selma.

She said she strongly believes in the "principle approach" to teaching, in which Bible teachings are applied to every area of study.

"I think if there's anything left that I would give my children, it would be to have them taught by the principle approach," she said. "I'd rather have them taught the truth under a palm tree than falsehood in the finest facility available."

Tony Bonilla succeeds brother as LULAC national president

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The new leader of the 100,000-member League of United Latin American Citizens predicts Hispanics will play an increasingly larger role in the American political system, becoming, "just as active, just as vocal as the Moral Majority."

Tony Bonilla, the Corpus Christi, Texas attorney, who was elected national LULAC president Sunday at the concluding session of the organization's national convention, pledged to work for the expansion of the Hispanic community's political base. He said the organization would step up voter registration drives and begin grading candidates.

"We're going to be just as active, just as vocal as the Moral Majority," Bonilla said. "We're going to prepare our own hit list for the Hispanic community of those congressmen who don't support our needs."

Bonilla said the role of Hispanics in national politics will continue to grow, noting that more than 40 percent of the Hispanic population in the United States is younger than 18 years of age.

"We have the numbers within our young people to make a difference from a political standpoint," Bonilla said. "Time is on our side."

In taking over the leadership of the nation's largest Hispanic organization, Tony Bonilla succeeded his brother Ruben, also an attorney, who served as president of LULAC for the past two years.

Bonilla said his election was a strong endorsement of his younger brother's liberal stands on national issues and the organization's efforts to expand LULAC beyond its traditional base in the Southwest.

Bonilla stressed development of LULAC chapters among Hispanics of the East, Midwest and Northwest.

"We are committed to march to the same tune, but perhaps with a little different rhythm," he said.

Bonilla, 45, told the delegates after his election that the goals of LULAC would remain the same, but said the future of Hispanics in the United States will be influenced greatly by the events in Washington, D.C. And like his brother, Tony Bonilla criticized the Reagan administration's policies in regard to the poor.

"We are willing to sacrifice for the good of the country, but we don't want to be sacrificed in the process," said Bonilla. "You have a millionaire mentality rampant in the administration that can't relate to the truly poor the president speaks of."

Bonilla said he would seek a meeting with Vice President George Bush to stress LULAC's opposition to several Reagan administration policies. The vice president addressed the convention, urging support for the administration's proposed spending cuts and economic game plan.

"We think it's going to be a new ball game and we're going to be ready when the game starts," said Bonilla.

Dear Abby

Adulterer Gets Out Of Bed and onto Wagon

DEAR ABBY: Your reply to the bed-hopping wife, WEAK IN ILLINOIS, missed the mark. She said, "I've gone from one adulterous affair to another until now I can't even count them. I'm not oversexed; in fact, I'm just the opposite. I get nothing out of these affairs, and can't for the life of me understand why I deliberately get myself into such miserable situations that offer no sexual fulfillment, knowing if I'm caught I'll lose my husband and children. Can't something on the order of Alcoholics Anonymous be organized for compulsive adulterers?"

You replied, "I can't imagine a compulsive adulterer phoning another compulsive adulterer and being talked out of it."

Abby, I am a recovering compulsive adulterer who tried two psychiatrists, one psychoanalyst, three group therapies, various religious approaches and finally exorcism! Understanding what motivated me did not give me the power to control my actions. I lost my wife and children, and I was about to lose my second family when I found a program based on the principles of Alcoholics Anonymous to help compulsive adulterers control their lust in the same way compulsive alcoholics control their drinking.

It is "Sexaholics Anonymous," a fellowship of men and women who share their experiences and help each other conquer their common problem.

I am now free from the obsession of sex, and have not had sex with either myself or anyone other than my wife for the last five years. That is a miracle for which I thank God and Sexaholics Anonymous.

In 1979 we received authorization from Alcoholics Anonymous to adopt its 12 steps, but there is no organizational affiliation between S.A. and A.A. There are no dues or fees. Like A.A., S.A. is entirely self-supporting and accepts no outside contributions. The only requirement for membership is a sincere desire to stop lusting and help other sexaholics to achieve sexual sobriety.

SET FREE IN L.A.

DEAR FREE: Until I received your letter, I had never heard of "Sexaholics Anonymous," and after checking it out, I am convinced that yours is a serious, legitimate program. If there are others out there whose lives have become unmanageable because of compulsive lusting, information about this newly formed organization can be obtained by writing to: P.O. Box 300, Simi Valley, Calif. 93062.

DEAR ABBY: My son is a newspaper carrier. He just came home terribly disappointed after attempting to collect his paper route bills. Apparently many people do not realize that newspaper carriers are in business for themselves. They must pay for the newspapers out of their own pockets, and collect the money in order to stay even. If the carrier fails to collect from the customer, the carrier is out of luck! My son's enthusiasm for his paper route has dropped to the point where he is thinking of quitting. I would hate to see that happen, Abby, because his paper route was his first step toward financial independence and maturity.

Abby, please say something in your column about the importance of paying the newsboy. You wouldn't believe the number of people who move away without paying. Also, there are those who keep asking the carrier to "come back another time." Some of these poor kids have had to get back four or five times to get their money and they take a lot of verbal abuse to boot.

Canning methods outlined

Have you wondered about the difference in water-bath and pressure cooker processing of foods in home canning?

The water-bath method is used for processing fruits, rhubarb, and tomatoes and is done using a pan with a lid and rack. The rack is used to hold the jars off the bottom of the cooker. The pan is large enough to cover the jars with one to two inches of water, so that the jars are surrounded with boiling water. The lid is used to help retain the heat. The acid in some fruits and vegetables helps prevent the growth of some bacteria which is the reason the water-bath process can be used.

However, low acid fruits and vegetables must be canned using the pressure cooker. The spores ("seeds") of some bacteria are highly resistant to heat, which makes it necessary for them to be destroyed by the high heat. This is accomplished with the pressure cooker.

What are foods processed by these methods? The water-bath is used for such foods as peaches, plums, and tomatoes. The pressure cooker is used for such foods as beets, peas, corn, beans, greens and okra.

Consumers are cautioned to report experience with Challenge, Inc.

Challenge, Inc. also known as Challenge to America, had a civil suit filed against it by the Texas Attorney General's Consumer Protection Division on May 20. In general, the suit alleges the company has violated portions of the Deceptive Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Act and the Texas Home Solicitations Act.

Specifically, the suit alleges the company obtains the participation of consumers in their sales program by means of calculated deception. Potential customers are instructed they must attend seminars to learn about the company's operations. At the meeting the emotional pitch is kept at a high level in order to prevent these individuals from evaluating the sales presentation on its merits and making their decisions accordingly.

The suit also alleges the company is operating a pyramid sales operation by primarily promoting the recruitment of individuals to invest money rather than the sale of any product. The company is also charged with failure to disclose information that if known would affect the decision of the consumer to participate. An example would be the fact that the company has court orders or consent decrees entered against it in at least six states because of its business activities.

The company has been temporarily restrained from keeping vital information from prospective customers and using certain tactics at the seminars intended to isolate the customer from outside contact during the sales presentation.

The Better Business Bureau knows Challenge, Inc. is operating in this area from the many inquiries we have had concerning the company in the last few weeks. If you have had any experience with Challenge, Inc. we would encourage you to call us at (915) 563-1880.

Selecting melons is a challenge

What a sweet treat melons can be if you know how to pick a good one! Selecting melons for quality and flavor is difficult enough to challenge the most experienced buyer, says the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

You will probably never find an absolute formula — not even thumping — but you can increase your chances of success using several factors, says USDA's Food Safety and Quality Service.

First, recognize the difference in maturity and ripeness. Melons harvested at maturity are the ultimate in sweetness since melons cannot increase sugar content after removal from the vine. Ripening brings melons to the height of color, softness, flavor and aroma.

You probably will find the signs of maturity in cantaloupes easier to detect than in other melons. The stem will be gone, leaving a smooth, symmetrical, shallow basin or scar called a "full slip." The netting or veining will stand out in bold relief over some part of the surface — thick, coarse and corky. The skin coloring between the netting will have changed from a green to a yellowish-buff, yellowish gray or pale yellow.

A cantaloup may be mature but not ripe. You probably remember the distinct, sweet aroma of cantaloup, but you can look for other signs of ripeness also. A yellowish cast to the rind and a slight yielding to light thumb pressure on the blossom end of the melon also indicate ripeness.

Hold mature, unripe melons at room temperature for two to four days to allow completion of ripening. Then put the melons in the refrigerator a few hours before serving.

Honeydew is similar in weight and shape to cantaloup, but honeydew has smooth skin with only occasional traces of surface netting. Maturity is shown by a soft, velvety feel. When the blossom end begins to soften and the melon produces a faint pleasant aroma, the ripening process has begun. You can watch the melon ripen as its skin changes from a yellowish white to a creamy rind color.

Judging the quality of a watermelon is very difficult unless it is cut in half or quartered. But if you want to buy a whole, uncut melon, make sure the watermelon surface is relatively smooth.

Since all melons are mostly water they provide nutrients with a minimum of calories. They are excellent sources of vitamins A and C.

Stores aren't obligated

It may not seem fair, but... a store owner can legally refuse to accept cents-off coupons, says refund specialist Susan Samtur in her current Family Circle magazine money management report.

"If I encountered a store that refused my coupons, I would shop elsewhere." It's your option to do the same, she concludes, "especially when you consider the savings that coupons represent."

In her 8-times-a-year reports for Family Circle, Ms. Samtur gives time-and-money saving tips on refunding and lists the latest cash, coupon and merchandise refunds.

Even though manufacturers pay the store the face value of a coupon, plus a 7c handling fee, food stores don't have to participate, says Samtur. "However," she notes in the magazine,

'The statistics should shame us all'

Booming Texas becoming deadly place to work

By ALLEN K. SHORT
Associated Press Writer

Texas, booming darling of the Sunbelt and home of several of the nation's fastest growing cities, is rapidly becoming a deadly place to work.

From the cotton gins of the Texas Panhandle to the oil refineries and skyscrapers of Houston, to the towering grain elevators along the state's gulf coast, Texas workers are dying on the job at a rate nearly three times the national average, state officials say.

"The statistics should shame us all," said Walter G. Martin, director of the state health department's Division of Occupational Safety. In 1980 alone, according to state records, 1,090 Texas workers were killed on the job or died of occupational diseases.

In contrast, California reported 541 on-the-job fatalities last year and New York recorded 813. Both states have larger work forces than Texas, which leads the nation in occupational deaths.

State labor leaders believe part of the problem is lax enforcement of federal worker safety laws by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. OSHA officials deny that, but concede that budget cuts and manpower reductions have left the agency hardpressed to keep up with Texas' booming economy.

Three Texas cities — Dallas, Fort Worth and Houston — were among the nation's top ten construction markets last year, according to the Wall Street financial analyst, Dun & Bradstreet. Moreover, nearly half of all the OSHA safety inspections conducted in the Dallas area are at construction sites, said OSHA's Lloyd Warren.

"I think right now construction and related trades are where we're seeing most of the injuries and deaths," said William Treacy, executive director of the Texas Industrial Accident Board. "There are also a lot of job-related deaths we never hear about, such as in agriculture."

"There are people being shredded in cotton gins all the time."

And — at a time when on-the-job deaths are declining elsewhere in America — they're on the increase in Texas, said Martin.

Hard statistics that would pinpoint industries with bad safety records have been difficult to come by since the Texas Legislature, in a cost-cutting move, deleted money from the state budget in 1975 that had been used to provide statistical analyses of the state's occupational injury and deaths totals.

But officials with the U.S. Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics in Dallas agree that Texas has a problem — "a major one," according to BLS statistician Gunnar Engen.

Engen points to the state's bulging file of worker compensation claims as evidence of the problem.

Nearly 400,000 Texans submitted workers' compensation claims last year after being injured on the job. Out of a total workforce of about four million, that means that one of every 10 Texas workers sustains a debilitating job-related injury every year.

"That's way too high," said Martin. Most of the injuries are suffered by workers at companies that employ between 50 and 500 workers, he said — companies that consider themselves too small to hire professional safety engineers.

Many of the state's 400,000 employers are paying a price for their safety records, says the Industrial Accident Board. Nearly half of the 160,000 companies whose accident histories are on file with the board must pay special workers' compensation premiums because their safety records are worse than the national norms for their respective industries.

Texas employers paid $1.2 billion in workers' compensation premiums in 1979, an amount second only to that paid by California employers, said Treacy.

Three killed in plane crash

SMITH POINT, Texas (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration sent investigators to the site where a plane crash claimed three lives after plummeting into an alligator-infested reservoir near this Southeast Texas town, authorities said.

The pilot, 19-year-old Alvin Joshua Harmon III of Anahuac, and his passengers, 17-year-old Kim Harrington and 20-year-old Allen Ray Pierce, both of Winnie, were killed instantly when the plane crashed about 4 p.m. Sunday, authorities said.

The plane was flying low and its passengers had just waved to a group of visitors at the H&G Ranch when it suddenly lost altitude, said Chambers County Sheriff Chuck Morris.

Rescue workers secured the Bellanca Citabria aircraft with rope and pulled it from the water with bulldozers, he said.

Although the accident still was under investigation by the Federal Aviation Administration, Morris said the pilot failed to make a turn.

"We had to get to the plane by airboat," Morris said. "The water was full of alligators and the plane was under water."

Don Born, owner of the Golden T Air Flight Service at Beaumont Municipal Airport, added that the plane contained only two seats.

"To get hurt in a Bellanca, you have to mess up real bad," he said. "It's like the old Piper Cub."

Peace Justice Quinten Jackson also ordered an inquest.

Mexico hints it will cut oil exports

By the Associated Press

A large French petroleum company today said it is slashing its oil imports from Mexico, which intends to raise prices despite a worldwide glut. Mexico said it will accept reduced exports.

Cie. Francaise des Petroles said it will cut its Mexican imports in half, to 50,000 barrels a day, beginning July 1. A spokesman in Paris cited the "marked" decline in world oil prices in recent weeks.

The slumping world oil prices have dropped prices in the spot market below the official prices in every country, including Saudi Arabia. A Japanese government official said today Saudi oil was offered to a Japanese company at a price of $31.60 a barrel on the spot market.

The official Saudi price of $32 a barrel is the lowest of the world's official oil prices, but companies that buy it are evidently now willing to resell it at a loss due to the oil glut.

Mexico charges up to $34.50 a barrel and says it wants to raise the price in July. The country wants to recover all or most of a $4 per barrel cut made this month and has ousted the official who decided on the cut.

In a telex sent to a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries last week and made available to the Associated Press today, Mexico said it "is appraising the possibility of reducing planned export volumes rather than accepting recent reductions in the price of oil."

Grand jury to investigate three Juneteenth drownings

MEXIA, Texas (AP) — A special Limestone County grand jury will be empaneled to investigate the drownings of three youths who were in the custody of sheriff's deputies when a small boat carrying them overturned in Lake Mexia late Friday, authorities said.

Meanwhile, one of the three officers who had been transporting the trio across the lake after their arrest on drug charges has been suspended pending the outcome of the investigation.

The body of the third drowning victim, a 19-year-old Dallas youth, was recovered from Lake Mexia Sunday.

Limestone County Sheriff Dennis Walker had called off the dragging of the lake Sunday morning amid speculation that Steve Booker may have escaped after he jumped from the boat and began swimming toward shore.

Booker and the two other youths had been arrested for drug possession. His body floated to the surface about 9:25 a.m. Sunday, a sheriff's department spokesman said.

Chief county deputy Bill Fletcher said deputy Kenney Elliot, the senior officer involved in the incident, was suspended.

Another sheriff's deputy who was in the boat said Sunday that Booker leaped off the gunwale of the small aluminum craft when it began to swamp. He said Booker's leap was not an escape attempt.

Reserve deputy Kenneth Archie said the boat began taking on water over the bow after traveling about 40 yards. Booker jumped off the craft first, then was followed by three deputies who were in the boat, Archie said.

On Saturday the bodies of Carl Baker, 19, and Anthony Freeman, 18, both of Mexia, were recovered from the lake, just east of Waco in North Central Texas.

Several witnesses said the youths were handcuffed when their bodies were pulled from the water and searchers removed the handcuffs before bringing the bodies to shore.

But Waco pathologist Dr. K.P. Whittstruck, who performed autopsies on the youths Saturday evening, said there were no cuts, bruises or handcuff marks on either body. He said the two youths died from drowning.

The three teen-agers were being taken to a temporary sheriff's headquarters across the lake late Friday after deputies found them with "marijuana, pills and a syringe" at an annual Juneteenth celebration, Walker said.

The Juneteenth celebration commemorates June 19, 1863, the day Texas blacks received word of the Emancipation Proclamation 2 1/2 years after it was issued by President Abraham Lincoln.

"Everybody jumped out and I heard the Freeman boy yelling, 'I can't swim,'" Archie said. "I climbed onto the boat and straddled it and pulled (Freeman) up onto it. But he must have gotten paranoid or something and fell back off."

All three sheriff's deputies who were in the craft swam safely to shore.

Archie and Peace Justice Lester Been said none of the boat's occupants was wearing a life jacket.

Dallas NAACP officials arrived in Mexia to discuss the incident with the victims' families, who were incensed that deputies did not notify them of the drownings.

Chapman admits slaying Lennon

NEW YORK (AP) — Mark David Chapman pleaded guilty today to the murder last December of ex-Beatle John Lennon.

Chapman changed his plea to guilty during a session with Acting Justice Dennis Edwards in Manhattan Supreme Court.

Afters scores of spectators and reporters were shepherded into the room, Edwards made the announcement.

"The defendant, Mark David Chapman, has exercised his right to withdraw his not guilty plea, to plead guilty to the charge of murder in the second degree. That plea has been accepted by the court," Edwards said.

The judge set sentencing for Aug. 24. Chapman faces a maximum of 25 years to life in prison and a minimum of 15 years to life.

Assistant District Attorney Allen Sullivan told the court that Chapman "in withdrawing his plea of not guilty or not responsible has ... in some detail expressed a knowing, intelligent and voluntary waiver of his right to trial."

Chapman's lawyer Jonathan Marks, said that Chapman had pleaded guilty against his advice. Marks, while acknowledging his client had shot and killed Lennon, had said he would seek to prove he was not sane when the act occurred.

Chapman was accused of shooting Lennon at point-blank range Dec. 8 as the musician and his wife, Yoko Ono, returned to their flat at the luxury Dakota apartment after a late-night recording session.

Chapman allegedly had stalked Lennon for several days, hanging around the building and, at one point, getting an autograph from the man he soon would kill.

Jury selection was scheduled to begin today, but for several weeks there had been hints Chapman planned to thwart a trial.

There had been much speculation that Chapman would insist on pleading guilty, thereby closing inquiry into his reasons for killing a man to told friends he long had idolized.

Thirteen witnesses had been slated to testify for the defense, Marks said. Sullivan had planned to call about 35.

Rental scheme dupes at least six families

SPRING, Texas (AP) — Things are a bit crowded at the three-bedroom home at 6026 Knotty Pine Lane in Spring's Postwood subdivision.

Sheriff's investigators say at least six families are victims of a rather well-planned leasing scheme.

Three families — from Colorado, Minnesota, and Ohio — are sharing the home while trying to find the couple investigators say received $4,700 or more as deposits and first and last month rents from six different families.

"It sounds like somebody did a good con job," said sheriff's Lt. Marvin Hopkins.

June Mills, president of the subdivision, said Sunday the house had been vacant only a week and the real owner, who could not be reached, had nothing to do with the scam.

Ms. Mills said the man posing as the owner "must be really smart."

"He must have known someone in this neighborhood because he knew too much," she said. Each family, she said, received copies of newsletters delivered only to residents of the subdivision.

Jay Reese, 31, his wife, Linda, and their three sons were the first family to arrive at the house Saturday. He said five other families showed up later in the day, each telling the same story on how they had answered a newspaper ad and paid money to a couple described as the "friendly-looking kind that could talk you into anything."

The Reeses shared the house over the week end with two other families, the John LaTourneaus from Nisswa, Minn., and the Don Cooks from Cincinnati.

"God, was I fooled," said Cook, 28, a mechanic and father of three.

He said the couple was very informative.

"They told us a church was to be built around here soon,

A Corpus Christi, Texas, couple — Steven and Marjorie Avery — were treated and released from a Tulsa hospital for smoke inhalation. No other injuries were reported.

Americans ready to kick OPEC habit

HOUSTON (AP) — William C. Douce says American people are ready to kick the OPEC habit if current signs are any indication.

The president and chief executive officer of Phillips Petroleum Co. says a fundamental shift is occurring in the energy use patterns of consuming nations, particularly in the United States.

"The full impact of this shift on world oil economics has not yet been fully realized, although the OPEC ministers meeting in Geneva last month began to come to grips with this new reality," he said.

Douce said U.S. imports of crude oil and refined oil products in April fell to their lowest level since 1973.

The nation imported 5.4 million barrels of oil a day in April, a decline of more than 22 percent from April last year.

"This is a continuation of a trend which began to take hold last year when our country experienced the largest year-to-year decline in oil use in history," Douce said.

"As a result, we were able to cut our oil imports by nearly 20 percent compared to 1979."

Douce said the reduced consumption stems from several factors:

- A steady switch from oil to coal in electrical generation.
- More efficient use of energy in both the industrial and public sectors.
- Reduced driving and the increased use of smaller cars in the United States, with domestic gasoline consumption in March declining to 6 million barrels daily, the lowest point since 1971.
- Generally depressed economic conditions which have limited energy use.

Douce said that although some of the factors, such as sluggish economic conditions, may be viewed as short term, there is evidence the general trend toward reduced energy consumption will become more pronounced in the years ahead.

He said Phillips, in 1980, cut its energy usage by the equivalent of 1.6 million barrels of oil.

"New energy conserving capital projects costing $19 million were approved last year, bringing our total investment in energy conservation to more than $200 million," he said.

The American Petroleum Institute reported this month that the refining sector of the industry achieved energy savings of 19.4 percent in 1980 compared with a 1972 base period. It said its survey required by the Department of Energy involved energy utilization by 61 companies that account for 93 percent of the operable refining capacity in the United States and Puerto Rico.

Douce said there is no question that reducing the present level of petroleum consumption is in the nation's best interests.

"One major effect will be reduced inflationary pressures since the price of energy is one of the root sources of the increased costs of goods and services throughout our society," he said in his monthly "Philnews" report to active and retired Phillips employees.

"A period of stable oil prices would materially benefit the U.S. economy which is now struggling to get back on its feet after suffering through double digit inflation, lagging production and the energy stocks of the past decade. To the average consumer, stable oil prices through the next 12 months would mean an increase in purchasing power in the range of $4 billion to $5 billion."

Douce said consumers will be the long-term winners even though reduced consumption will cause short-term problems for oil companies such as high inventories, reduced refinery capacity, and lower profit margins.

"Ultimately, the free marketplace will give the best buy to the customer in the form of adequate supplies at competitive prices," he said.

Redistricting veto may cost Clements

By JIM DAVIS
Harris-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The redistricting circus may turn into a two-ring variety this summer, thanks to Gov. Bill Clements.

Last Thursday the governor, with his usual unpredictability, vetoed the redistricting plan that the Texas Senate had crafted for itself for the 1980s.

That means a special redistricting board will attempt to redraw the boundaries this summer, possibly at the same time that the legislature is in special session in a second attempt to create new congressional districts.

Clements' veto was unexpected by most state officials and capitol reporters because 17 seems to make little sense.

The governor has little to gain from it and much to lose.

Twenty-four of the 31 senators voted for the plan. The veto won't make them want to cooperate with Clements in the July 13 special session.

Beyond a veto the governor has no real control over redistricting of either the Texas Senate or House.

The Texas Constitution says a special redistricting board will redraw the boundaries of either state house if the legislature fails to do so in regular session following each 10-year census, or if a plan is vetoed after the session.

That board consists of the lieutenant governor, House speaker, attorney general, comptroller and land commissioner.

Currently, all five of these positions are held by Democrats.

Clements is a Republican. He obviously didn't like the Senate plan because it protected most Democratic incumbents and paired two of the Senate's seven Republican senators in one district and put a third in a district with a Democratic incumbent.

In order to protect those Democratic incumbents, the plan cut up Dallas County among several rural senators who weeded additional population to meet 1981 redistricting totals.

But there appeared to be little that Clements could do except complain and let it become law without his signature.

We should have known that that type of argument wouldn't sit well with a can-do, macho type like Clements, who vetoed the Senate plan and immediately issued a challenge to the five Democrats on the special board.

Four of the five plan to seek re-election or another elected job in 1982, he pointed out, and they should be aware of the political dangers involved in creating an unpopular plan.

Clements clearly hopes to influence the board's actions indirectly, through either threats or good-'ol-boy politics.

Because of the complex personalities and political ambitions among the board members, the governor may have a chance to exert such influence.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby is expected to defend the vetoed plan of the Senate, over which he presides. He was vacationing in Mexico when the veto was announced and immediately called an early board meeting.

Hobby caved in to pressure in the regular session and forced through the Senate one of the governor's pet bills — wiretapping for drug cases. Some senators say Hobby had been warned by the highly organized anti-draw team that he would draw a well-financed opponent in 1982 if he didn't go along with wiretapping.

In redistricting, however, Hobby must remember that, if re-elected, he must live with the senators, and a majority of them favor their vetoed plan.

House Speaker Bill Clayton is a question mark in the process. Traditionally, each house honors the redistricting wishes of the other.

But Clayton, a conservative Democrat, is very close to Clements politically.

He directed the House redistricting with the aim of helping conservatives, no matter which party they are in, and Clements enthusiastically signed that plan.

Attorney General Mark White will support the Senate plan. His office already has issued an opinion defending its major points. White also opposes Clements on just about everything and is a possible candidate for governor in 1982.

Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong wants to start with the vetoed Senate plan, but he has reservations about the way it ties rural areas to some areas of Dallas County.

Armstrong won't seek public office in 1982 and isn't a likely target for political pressure. He's currently getting a divorce and isn't enthusiastic about adding redistricting to his summer chores.

Comptroller Bob Bullock, on the other hand, is over-

Early warnings indicate economy is not growing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government early warning signal is confirming what private analysts and the Reagan administration have been predicting for some time: The national economy has stopped growing.

Not eased off or slackened or any of the other words economists use. In real terms — after adjustment for inflation, that is — the growth has stopped.

That's the verdict in the Commerce Department's new "flash GNP" projection — an attempt to measure second-quarter gross national product before the quarter is even over.

The flash estimate, kept officially secret but leaked by several sources Thursday, projects a growth rate of zero for the April-June quarter, with an accompanying cooling of inflation to an annual rate of 6.1 percent as measured by a GNP-connected indicator.

Word of the new estimate came shortly after Commerce released newly revised figures showing that real GNP rose at an annual rate of 8.6 percent in the first quarter — the biggest gain since early 1978.

Officials have suggested that a good showing by U.S. exporters contributed to the GNP burst and a separate Commerce report Thursday showed just how strong America's trade position
