SCHOOL IN JAIL

More than 120 youths between 17 and 21 years of age, inmates of the Cook County jail, Illinois, which includes Chicago, are now receiving an education at the expense of the public, most of them for the first time. The curriculum offered by this jail varies from the elements of reading and writing to the more advanced subjects, and many an illiterate prisoner may well consider his imprisonment a blessing, for his time was well spent. Many of the boys who went to jail unable to read and write have within a few weeks acquired those first principles of learning.

But the State has also received its reward from the investment, for since the opening of the school improvement in discipline has taken unusual strides. Breaches in the rules of conduct have greatly decreased and reports to punishment have slowed down accordingly. The prisoners have obtained those rudiments of education essential to good citizenship.

In the establishment of this school a long standing duty is being met, and benefits are being received by both parties; yet would it have not been better to have rendered these benefits at an earlier date? By not instilling within those boys of Cook County the principles of citizenship in previous years it has become necessary for the public to erect the school, in jail. The boys have been allowed to become enemies both to themselves and to the people. Jail schools may greatly remedy an old fault yet the grim scar of neglect will ever remain in those blighted lives of the jail.

Always a Man

Under the above heading a recent issue of Collier's gives a statement by the late President Harding, never before published, made to a newspaper correspondent, when he was candidate for the presidency. The statement was made entirely as an "aside" and pointed out the seemingly superhuman way in which along with great responsibilities goes the power to carry it through. "How often have you not seen," said Mr. Harding, "an enterprise suddenly bereft of its leader gain a new and unexpected strength from the advent of a new leader, dwelling theretofore in obscurity?" And the illustration he used to bring out his point will be of interest to all readers. He said:

"We have in Marion as one of our chief enterprises, a steam-shovel works. It was founded years ago by a very able, energetic and gifted man. When he died the community was desolate. Practically everyone believed the steam-shovel works must inevitably decline. Yet, mark the miracle. One of the obscure men in the plant, one of the hundreds, one who but a short time before had been a farmer boy, was chosen to command. In a few years this man made the steam-shovel works a more valuable and more important property than it had been under its founder, and today the finest home in our city is occupied by his widow.

"When this man died there was a repetition of the experience following the founder's death. Many felt that naturally the steam-shovel works would now go into an inevitable slump. Forgetting the initial work of the founder, most of our people thought only of the constructive genius who had just gone to his reward. We all felt practically certain there would not be another man like him.

"Yet today the steam-shovel works is more prosperous than ever, but under still another leadership, and I have no doubt there could be found those in our community today who would tell you that to him and chiefly to him, is due that prosperity and that if anything ever happened to him there must come an end to the enterprise.

"So it goes in enterprises big and little, even unto the sailing of the Ship of State. There is always somewhere either in the steering of the vessel or in the obscurity of the works a man who, once clothed with the magical mantle of responsibility, will rise on the wings of vision to heights of power unknown before."

OPEN MIND

One Place Where Women Have Successfully Run a School

In a county in the Panhandle without a postoffice, school building, railroad or church house (The Titanic disaster was two weeks old before it was heard there) eight years ago this month an election was held to vote on a tax for school purposes. The two voters (the five men were present) represented a district 15 by 30 miles; there was one child in the county of scholastic age. The necessary red tape measures were duly observed, trustees appointed, a contract let for a school house in the yard of the ranch home of this one child and then and there the question was turned over to the women of the family, the men being too busy making money to have time for more than signing the necessary papers. One trustee lived two miles from the school, one twenty, neither ever visited it; the third one, father of the child, was at home only 50 days out of the 365 in the year. The first teacher taught the school four years and deprived as she was of all social life and religious privileges was paid and earned a liberal salary.

Two years later death invaded the home leaving the little ones motherless; and more than ever causing the other members of the family to realize their responsibilities in educating these children. And here comes in one place where women have successfully run a school.

Since last September $125 per month has been paid a teacher for two children in this family. Consequently the boy was given a trip to the recent Fat Stock Show in Fort Worth for making the best grade in the seventh grade work. He will be 13 years old this summer, and expects to enter high school next year. A younger sister, 9 years old, is in the fourth grade. The child, for whom the school was built, at the age of 14, entered an affiliated school in the eighth grade.

These children were not above the average child in natural endowments, nor were the women of unusual executive ability. If they have such results to show for their responsibilities out on the frontier where the piano tuner had to come fifty miles to repair the piano, is not "petticoat government" much more creditable than the Tea Pot Dome speculation.

If at any time the school question becomes involved in your community turn the matter along with your votes over to the mothers, and there will be no lack of the very best material from these, who "always and always" rise to their every responsibility and privilege.

The CALL OF THE TAME

He's just a scroot that wandered up and parked right at our door. This hapened, say, about three months ago. Perhaps a tramp for many days but not one an more. He's found a home—a fact he seems to know.

Dad calls him Pete; I don't know why, but Pete's the name he's picked, while mother always calls him Flip, for short. The baby just says "bla bla" when her tiny hand is licked and brother Bill refers to him as Sport.

The kids around our neighborhood, who feed him scraps and such, will summon him with names of any kind. The milkman calls him Fuzzy and the mailman calls him Dutch. He takes them all and doesn't seem to mind.

It's "Pete, come here," and "Flip, lie down." This tramp dog does as told. There's nothing in a name to him, it seems. Whenever people call him with a title, new or old, he answers as he wags his tail and beams.

Which makes a person wonder—is this canine really dumb, or is he rather human after all? He gets his bits of pleasure when the looks of kindness come and he answers when there's friendship in the call.

FRONT VIEW ADMINISTRATION BUILDING, TEXAS TECHNOLOGICAL COLLEGE

Architects' drawing of the Administration Building of the Texas Technological College at Lubbock, Texas. Plans for the structure have been adopted by the Board of Regents and work of construction is expected to begin immediately with the school ready for the students by September, 1925. The State appropriated $1,000,000 for the initial expenditures in getting the college started and most of it will be spent. Plans were completed following an extensive tour of the north and east by President P. W. Horn and others, when many different colleges were inspected and ideas gleaned for use in the construction of this newest college.

The Chautauqua committee received notice that the Redpath-Horner Chautauqua program would open in Lubbock Sunday afternoon, May 25, with a special Sunday program and continue through the entire week.

Season tickets will not be put on sale for several weeks yet but the best program in the history of the chautauqua circuit through Texas has been promised by Mr. Horner. Word was received from headquarters office that Mr. Horner himself would possibly come to Lubbock within the next few weeks, and outline definitely, the various numbers of the program and shape things up for the most successful program Lubbock has ever enjoyed.—Lubbock Avalanche.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the West Ward school will hold their regular meeting Wednesday afternoon when the annual election of officers will be held. Every member is urged to be present.

Mr. and Mrs. P. T. Quast were Sunday visitors of her sister, Mrs. W. T. Davidson at Lubbock, and Dr. and Mrs. H. G. Towle at Snyder.

AMUSEMENTS

"Anna Christie," adapted by Thomas H. Ince, from Eugene O'Neill's stage drama, which was a sensation on two continents and won the 1922 Pulitzer prize for the best American drama of the year, stands out boldly as the most unconventional heroine ever brought to the silver sheet. This First National release will be shown at the R and R Palace Theater Wednesday and Thursday.

The picture is an undoubted artistic triumph. It tells one of the most gripping stories conceived by genius and screen by a veteran master of showmanship. It is one of these pictures that is talked about in every feminine gathering and discussed in the candle glow of formal dinners. One simply is out of the running who hasn't seen it.

But imagine if you can an "Anna Christie" being presented for the eyes of mixed screen audiences a decade ago. All the fire and police departments would have been out in half an hour on a riot call. And half a dozen doctors would have had polite "gentlewomen" in fainting spells on their hands.

The twentieth century public studies life fearlessly and can watch with appreciative eyes the unfolding of a powerful drama such as has been pictured by Ince in "Anna Christie." It is the story of a girl who is the daughter of an old sea captain, a Swedish sentimentalist who blames everything, even an unquenchable thirst, on the sea. He has seen his father and brothers sacrificed to it. He decides to outwit it and save his daughter from the fate of other women of his family who have married sailors and shed bitter tears when they waited in vain for their return. So he sends her inland to cousins in Minnesota, where she will never hear of the oceans or know a sailor.

Anna, forced into farm work far beyond her strength, sends many pleas to her father to let her return to him, but he is deaf. The girl is betrayed by a brutal cousin; runs away from the farm in terror and is forced by circumstances into the life of the streets. With her last dollars she makes her way to her father, the captain of an old coal barge. And on the barge the past fades and she feels herself clean again, almost the Madonna her father believes her to be. In a wreck, an Irish stoker is picked up and nursed back to health by Anna. When they fall in love with each other there comes a tragic denouement and an unexpected ending.

Prediction by the Concordia, Kas., Blade Empire: "Some day there'll be a national law authorizing the shooting in self defense of any son of a sea cook who goes about repenting 'oer and 'oer that 'it's a great life if you don't weaken.'"

O Wind, if baseball comes, can bring be far behind?—Kansas City Star.

The McPherson, Kas., Republic's definition of a real orator is one who sits down fifteen minutes after he has started talking.

The Atchinson Globe calls attention to the fact that no man is graceful while he is holding a baby.

There is one advantage of being old, sighs the Americus, Kas., Greeting. The life insurance agents don't pester one to death.

The girl on South Main didn't vote last week because she was afraid of her newly bobbed hair, she might be challenged for being too young.

Charles Dublin has been losing quite a few chickens lately and early Wednesday morning he detected the thief. He saw the culprit sneak under his home, so he grabbed his shotgun and followed the thief. While Mrs. Dublin went to a neighbor to borrow a searchlight. Mr. Dublin followed the trail and was finally able to detect two shining eyeballs. Taking aim at these as a target he made the old shot gun talk and when he brought the game to light he found he had killed a full grown bob cat.—Big Spring Herald.

Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Crosthwaite and little daughter spent Sunday at Abilene guests of her sister, Mrs. D. E. Hambien and family.

Mrs. Leroy Johnson had a message from her son, W. T. Johnson at St. Louis, this morning, informing her that he was the father of an eight-pound daughter, born Sunday.

Miss Bernie Nolan came home from school at Abilene for a week-end visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Nolan of the Orient addition.

CONFINED TO BED

Birmingham Lady Took Cardui for Relief of Change of Life Troubles and Says It Helped Her "So Much."

Birmingham, Ala.—"I first took Cardui for that tired, worn-out feeling that comes from being dreadfully run-down," says Mrs. Catherine E. Smith, of 2106 Stout Street. "Twenty-five years ago, I was suffering from womanly weakness.

I read of Cardui in an almanac, and thought I would try it. I got a bottle and it helped me from the first. After that, during the whole of my married life, I took Cardui when I needed it. "About four years ago, change of life came on me. . . I grew weaker and weaker, and was confined to my bed, where I lay on my back for days. I was told that only a severe operation could do me any good, and this depressed me very much, for I dreaded such an ordeal.

"I remembered how Cardui had helped me for female trouble in the past and I had read of how it had helped other women during change of life, so one night I told my husband to go to the drug store and get me a bottle. I began taking it at once. From the first dose I could feel myself getting stronger. . . I continued to take Cardui until I was entirely through this very trying period of a woman's life."
