IN PARLIAMENT

Pomp and Pageantry Lacking in Formal Opening British Parliament—Tory Majority Big. LONDON, Feb. 10 (United Press).—Devoid of the usual pomp and fanfare of a new year's assembly, Parliament quietly reconvened today after a "Christmas" recess of nearly two months. The lack of a state opening was conspicuous for London dearly loves pageantry and the ceremonial of such an occasion—the royal procession, the marching body guards of picturesque Beefeaters and Grenadiers the general display of regal trappings. Normally, hundreds of thousands of eager spectators would have waited for hours this forenoon, jammed, but patient, for a glimpse of the parade somewhere between Buckingham Palace and the House of Parliament. But today's is not a normal occasion. The 1925 session actually began last December. Resigning as a result of the October election, the labor government left a number of legislative odds and ends which had to be cleaned up before the end of the calendar year. The incoming administration had two alternatives—Prorogation immediately after the post-election re-assembly or formal commencement of the new session at once with all the trimmings of a state opening. It chose the latter because of the press of emergency legislation. Today, therefore, saw one of the rare occasions when a British parliament reassembled with the utmost modesty for the first session of a new year. The simplicity of the proceeding rather belied its significance. Today's resumed session is destined to show definitely for the first time what can or will be done by a British legislature in which the Tories have the strongest majority they have possessed for more than a hundred years.

RELIGION

"To bring hope to others," someone has said, "that is religion."

"Physicians aren't so much to make people well," a certain physician used to say, "as to make them comfortable and happy."

That is why he took so much interest in Dennis McCune upon whom he stumbled one day in his round of professional calls. Dennis was only seventeen, but a frail body and hard long hours in the close stifling factory in which he was employed had been too much for him, and tuberculosis got in its deadly work.

"What's the use of doing anything," Dennis' mother asked when the doctor, finding the boy in a hot, bare, insanitary tenement, essayed to take his case in hand. "He's goin' to die anyway, no matter what you do."

"I'm going to make him happy," the doctor said, "and comfortable."

And so the room in which the boy was lying was made attractive, flowers began to bloom in his window, nourishing food gave him a little strength, his cough was relieved, and hope began to spring in his breast. It was not that he was really getting well, or had any chance of getting well—the disease was too far advanced for that—but his attitude of mind was changed; he was happy and hopeful.

With the medicine that he gave that brought hope for this world, the doctor brought words also that suggested hope for a future one, so that as the boy looked death in the face, that grim messenger gradually lost his terrors, and even death seemed not hopeless.

"I believe I'm going to get well he said one day to the doctor.

"I hope so," was his reply, "but if you don't, death isn't a thing to fear."

He grew more sanguine as time went on and began worrying about his old job and whether or not he could get it back. It was the doctor who sent his former boss to him, and it was a very kind and understanding boss who came.

"I'm to have my old job back when I am strong enough to work," he said to the doctor one morning. "My old boss has been to see me, and he says I can come back whenever I'm better and it will make me very happy."

"I think you will be better very soon," the doctor answered, "and I'm sure you're going to be happy."

He was going fast, the doctor knew. Next morning he was gone. But during the weeks that he had seen him the physician had given him hope—hope for the present, hope and faith for the future, and he had made him happy, and this is religion.

RUMMAGE SALE SUCCESS

Library Board Clears $100 in Recent Activity—Thanks Patrons.

The Rummage Sale closed Saturday night after running a week and a half and clearing a little better than $100 of the enterprise. Only one ladies' suit was left over, which will be put into the spring sale. The remaining stock was "lumped off" Monday afternoon to a second hand clothing dealer.

The ladies of the Library Board wish to thank Tom Cowan for the use of the building, and every one who contributed in any way whatsoever to making the sale the success it was. The board plans to conduct another Rummage Sale in the spring.

Miss Janice Dulaney will leave Wednesday morning for Colorado to spend the remainder of the week visiting her cousin, Miss Elnora Dulaney.

THE GARDEN

There is nothing that quite takes the place of animal manure in preparing the soil for the garden, so it is a good plan to be on the lookout for a supply and store it, if necessary, or spread it upon the soil as soon as it can be procured, even if the ground is frozen, to spade in when spring comes. We are nearing a period of intensive culture. The same space of ground in a French or German garden, horticultural experts tell us, will yield often double more than the same space in the American garden, because of intensive culture and constant fertilization and tillage. Fertilizer and humus should be added to the ground for the vegetables each year.

The compost heap is becoming a regular institution. Grass clippings, weeds that have been hoed or pulled up, autumn leaves, tops of vegetables, old pea and bean vines; in short, all of the vegetable waste of the premises should be stacked up and wet down from time to time during the summer to form humus, which is merely decayed vegetable matter, but the finest fertilizer we have. In addition to the plant food it contains, it is especially valuable in adding to the quality of the soil and because it holds moisture like a sponge.

Humus is now sold by the barrel or by the hundredweight, and gardens of clay or sandy soil, which need it, can be furnished very readily. But spading in decayed and half decayed leaves each each is much better method and will soon bring the soil to a tilth and fertility that will be surprising.

The annual spading does much for the quality of the soil, admitting the air and sweetening it. It should be spaded in the spring and fall. With the application annually of fertilizer, preferably stable manure or home-made compost, with some commercial fertilizers during the growing season, it will be on ya short time before the yield will show the results of the work and the growth of the vegetables will be so luxuriant that the owner will feel well rewarded for his toil. Autumn leaves in many garden club communities last fall were at a premium, the members cleaning up the neighborhood for their compost heaps and taking the supply from neighbors who did not have gardens.

Mulch for the garden should be staked up this spring to start a compost heap. It is best to make the pile flat-topped, with a depression in the center to catch the rain and cause it to seep into the center of the pile to hasten rotting. Sods and table slops may also be thrown upon the pile with good advantage, as moisture is necessary to produce compost.

Don't plant too many seeds of one thing. Draw your plan and stick to it. If you start out and sow all the seeds in every packet and first thing you know you will find you haven't room left to plant some things you really want to plant. Keep an eye on your plan.

HUNTER KILLED BY ANT EATER

Usually Harmless Animal Turns On Hunter and Kills Him

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina.—A report received from Avia Terai, a village in the Argentine Chaco, relates an extremely rare incident which occurred there which ended in the death of a Chaco hunter after struggling for over an hour with an ant eater.

Two residents of the locality, Canito Martinez, 56, and Isidoro Cantero, 23, started out together on a hunt in the woods each taking a different direction after agreeing to meet at a certain point.

Not long after separating Cantero heard his friend's dogs barking and a couple of shots fired. Following the direction of the shots, Cantero discovered Martinez lying on the ground, dying. He had been attacked by an ant bear and a body-to-body fight had taken place. Martinez died a few moments after having told his friend his story.

The ant-bear has the reputation both in the Argentine Chaco and Brazil, of being an inoffensive animal. Its principal object in life is the destruction of ant hills and the consumption of their contents.

The Gleaners to Meet

Mrs. Ted Hall was hostess Monday afternoon at a meeting of the Gleaners for their regular Bible study, led by Mrs. P. G. Dabney. Mrs. Earl Preece presided over the business part of the meeting during which it was decided to send Mrs. G. E. Ramsey a Valentine Shower, to Carlsbad, N. M., at the Palace Hotel, where she is spending a month. She was the organizer of the "Card Party" from her friends.

Mrs. Roy Scudday was named by the president as chairman of the program committee to arrange for the entertainment of the Calendar Club meeting for next Monday afternoon, when the Gleaners and the Woman's Missionary Society held their joint social meeting.

Mrs. Tom Crutcher and Mrs. Colquhoun were special guests and enjoyed the lovely plate-luncheon which Mrs. Hall served, when the society adjourned.

SNAKE KILLERS

The champion snake killers of Brown county, Sack Martin and Tom Byrd, met in Brownwood Saturday. For several years Martin has held the enviable position of champion snake killer of this section but it seems that this record was given a severe jolt one day last week when it was reported that Tom Byrd has killed 19 big rattlers, six coach whips, two black snakes, and two frogs, and Martin says after he got to town that Byrd had worked a centipede in on him besides two tarantulas. Martin says there were probably many other things in his snake den that he overlooked.—Brownwood Bulletin.

COMMERCE WITH JAPAN GROWING

Remarkable Growth of Foreign Trade Of That Country Shown in Recent Report.

WORLD WAR HELPS

Imports and Exports Jump During War—Biggest Customer is United States.

By United Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—A steady and remarkable growth in the foreign commerce of Japan during the 57 years that country has been open to the trade of the world is shown in statistics recently compiled by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

In the year 1868, which marked the restoration of the Empire and the beginning of present-day commercial Japan, the combined total of both imports and exports amounted to only 26,246,000 yen. Trade during the year 1924, according to the Bureau, will aggregate not less than 4,265,000,000 yen or approximately 150 times the figure of 1868.

During the decades following 1868, the combined total of annual exports and imports never exceeded 80,000,000 yen and it was only in 1888 that the 1,000,000,000 yen mark was reached. At the beginning of the present century the 500,000,000 yen mark was attained, but it was not until after the Russo-Japanese war of 1904-5 that total trade reached the 1,000,000,000 yen mark. Statistics have proven that the World War gave a remarkable impetus to Japan's foreign trade, the aggregate of imports and exports arising from 1,362,000,000 yen in 1913 to 3,360,000,000 yen in 1918 and reaching a peak of 4,272,000,000 yen. Owing to the general depression following restoration of peace, there was a considerable decline during the years 1920 to 1923. In 1923, however, imports of 1,987,000,000 yen and exports of 1,448,000,000 yen were recorded, the total of 3,435,000,000 having been exceeded only during the war boom years.

In spite of the abnormal conditions following the great earthquake disaster of September 1923, the 1924 trade is expected to equal all previous records. Returns for the first eleven months showed exports of 1,635,318,000 yen and imports of 2,264,022,000. Estimating the December export trade at 175,000,000 and the import at 199,000,000, a 1924 exportation of 1,810,318,000 and importation of 2,454,022,000 would be reached, or a total trade of 4,264,340,000—only 8,000,000 less than the record attained in 1919. Then the Rain

Man draws his ideas from Nature. So, when God sent the rain He suggested a fine way of bathing. From rain we got the idea of the shower. For the first shower ever made for a bath room was called "Rain Bathing."

"Bathe in running water." That was a Mosale law. But in the time of Moses there were no showers, for there was no plumbing. What he meant was to bathe in the running water of rivers.

Finishing brings a river—running water—into the home. And with plumbing and a shower it is easy to bathe in running water.

What a joy—what a tonic—is the shower. It fits the bath-tub for the day. The shower is full of cleanliness, vigor, and the kind of cheer that cheers.

A bathroom without a shower is only half a bathroom.

year's exports have been exceeded three times during the last six years, but the imports are the largest ever recorded.

Although the United States has always been Japan's largest customer, only within recent years has it become the most important source of that country's imports. From 1868 to 1887, Japan's receipts from the United States amounted to approximately 3,050,000 yen annually, reaching a total level of 5,000,000 yen for the first time in 1888. During this period, imports from Great Britain, America's most important rival, ranged from 12,000,000 to 18,000,000 yen annually, or from four to six times the total for the United States.

Shortly after the outbreak of the World War Japan's trade with the United States took a great jump, the imports from America from 96,000,000 yen in 1914 to 626,000,000 in 1918. This condition existed for some time after the Armistice, the highest point being reached in 1920, when receipts from the United States reached a total of 873,000,000 yen. Since that time, however, the tendency has been downward, 1923 recording only 511,000,000 yen.

MARY JANE'S MERRY JOURNEYS IN THE ENCHANTED FOREST What the Chim-pan-zee Said to Mary Jane This nice rich gingerbread, and this goodie-goodie fudge— Before Mary Jane could say "Boo" Jimmy the Chim-pan-zee gobbled up all the gingerbread and goodies and, grabbing up the can of MARY JANE SYRUP, started to run off with it. Mary Jane called him back and told him right out that he had eaten all her lunch and hadn't even said "Thank you." Jimmy was ashamed and said, "Oh! Mary Jane, please excuse me. I was hurrying back to our tree to see if my mother could get me some too." "That's all right, Jimmy, tell your mother to keep MARY JANE SYRUP always on hand, because it is good for you. She knows where to buy it, and she will like it as much as you do." WATCH FOR the next story about "What Mary Jane learned from the Mijangan Banjos." FREE For all children. The complete set of 20 NEW Mary Jane Fairy Tales, beautifully illustrated, sent free on receipt of one Mary Jane label taken from a can of Mary Jane Syrup. "I was hurrying back to our tree to see if my mother could get me some too."

MARY JANE had not gotten very far into the Enchanted Forest when she saw Jimmy, the Chim-pan-zee climbing down out of his favorite cocoon tree. He looked like a little withered old man as he came running toward her. "Hello, Mary Jane," he called. "I have just got here from Gambia, on the coast of Africa; have you something good to eat?" Then Jimmy the Chim-pan-zee spied Mary Jane's basket near the tree where she dropped it when they met, and ran to see what was inside. He did not know all the good things Mary Jane had with her and asked her what they were. "This," said Mary Jane, holding up a can with her name and picture on it, "is the very best thing I've ever tasted. It's MARY JANE SYRUP, and yum! it's just as good as good. Everything here is made with it—

NEW FASHIONS AT NEW YORK SHOW

Spring Style Show Given by Garment Retailers Develops Latest Creations.

FELT HATS POPULAR

Latest Have Flower Decorations—Frocks Are of Many Colors—Have Long Sleeves.

By HEDDA HOYT

NEW YORK, N. Y. Feb. 10.—The spring style show staged by the National Garment Retailers' Association at the Commodore Hotel recently offered us a pot pourri of the flower colors, pleats, jabots, full skirts, long sleeves and headfitting bonnets. There are many new styles to be brought out this spring. First one gets the idea that the straight line silhouette is doomed. Except in actual tailored and sports styles, all frock shown introduced skirts, fullness. While the casual observer might have overlooked this evidence of fullness in skirts, it was there nevertheless.

Lines were supple rather than severe, pleats were generously used in sheer materials posed over straight-lined slips. Sometimes the pleating fell at the sides in panel effect, again it was concentrated at the front. The backs of all frocks remained plain and straight lined. Some of the dandier frocks were extremely full, measuring four or five yards around. Again circular, cut skirts, which were slender over the hips, expressed the full hem line.

Even many of the tailored models got away from the sheath line by using the slashed skirt. The flounce flare which has been in style this winter is not shown in spring models since the fullness appears to begin from a low waist-line rather than from the knees.

Printed Materials Printed chiffons were numerous. Sometimes the background was white with flower colored designs and some times black was the background for the same colors. The most interesting thing about the printed frocks is the fact that so many of them are made on tailored lines, with long sleeves and close-fitting necklines. Their only trimming or decorations being gilets, or jabots in solid color. Many gowns for the coming season have long sleeves and short, set in sleeves are used only on resort models. Sleeves have slender-fitting lines, although occasionally there is a model with pleated puffs just about the cuff. Most of the multi-colored frocks were worn with felt hats which matched one of the colors of the material. Red and yellow hats seemed to predominate.

Hydrangea, cyclamen, amber, golden tans, grays with pinkish cast, biscuit and pinkish blonde shades were those sponsored for semi-formal frocks. Yellows, reds, white and flowered prints formed the sports collection. For evening wear lovely pastel shades, blue, pink, blond and orchid were favored.

Coats of ensemble suits invariably were trimmed about the hems with fur borders, but their collars were entirely unrelieved by fur. Sometimes the cuffs also had a fur band, but the ensemble must be minus a fur collar to be smart, it would seem.

Sleeves Come Back We will dress a bit more severe this season than last since most necklines are rather high-fitting and tailored and sleeves long. The half-baked look we had a season or so ago due to the wearing of sleeveless frocks for street wear is past.

Hats will be more ornate. Plain felts have been killed off by their popularity. Of course there is no attempt to draw us back to those over-trimmed bonnets of past seasons but the spring hat must have some individual trim to bring it out of the ordinary.

It is predicted that felts will be worn clear through the summer season as they were last year. Women have grown so accustomed to these little soft shapes that stiff straws do not

If Back Hurts Begin on Salts

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally by Drinking Quarts of Good Water

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Too much rich food creates acids which clog the kidney pores so that they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood. Then you get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders often come from sluggish kidneys. The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin to drink soft water in quantities; also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders. Jad Salts is inexpensive and can not injure; makes a delightful effervescent drink, which everyone can take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby often preventing serious kidney complications. If all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.
