

U. S. To Protest In China Murder

America Will Demand Responsibility of Chinese Government Following Murder of American Rancher by Chinese Bandits

SECOND AMERICAN CAPTURED

Head of Rockefeller Institute In Peking Is Thrown In Prison; This Nation to Also Demand Responsibility for Seizure.

By United Press.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 23.—America's demand for responsibility of the central Chinese government, strong enough to protect foreigners' lives and property, will be made more severe following the killing of the American, Morgan Palmer and the seizure of Dr. Harvey Howard.

Official confirmation of the United Press reports of the killing by a band of Chinese bandits of Morgan Palmer and the capture of Dr. Howard, Americans, in the Sun Gari river district of Manchuria.

By United Press.

PEKIN, July 23.—While working on his experimental ranch on the Sun Gari river, near Harbin, Morgan Palmer, American organizer of the Manchurian Development Co., was killed by bandits, as was also his servant.

Dr. Harvey Howard, departmental head of the Rockefeller Institute of Peking, has been imprisoned by Chinese.

The American consul at Harbin is making a representation to Marshal Chang Lin, war lord of Manchuria, in the Palmer case.

The Peking legation is presenting preliminary statements to the foreign office.

Officials are inclined to absolve the Peking government from any responsibility since it has only nominal control over the Sun Gari region.

That area has long been a kind of "no man's land," infested with desperadoes.

Officials see in the Palmer case added necessity to bring about a strong Peking government. This demand will be included in the answer which the United States and the powers are about to make to recent Chinese notices asking abolition of extra-territoriality and satisfaction for the Shanghai killings.

MANY BEGGERS

Millions of People in London Unemployed—Former Soldiers Penniless—Sells Matches

By United Press.

LONDON, July 23.—Millions of people in Britain are living part of the time on one meal a day.

At one time or another during the year four million men and women stretch out their idle hands for the dole to keep themselves and their dependents alive.

Hundreds of millions of pounds of sterling have been poured since the war into the gaping pockets of the unemployed.

Officially at the last Pitting there were more than 1,300,000 unemployed but the ministry of labor revealed that the "turn over" in unemployed meant that four million during the year seek state aid. Unemployment has become a ravaging epidemic sweeping the country and the situation has now reached a point of being the nation's "crying conundrum."

Many a war veteran is among the hundreds of soloists, who stand begging at doors nightly singing or playing for pennies. Tears swell to their eyes if some benevolent American tourist tosses them as much as a shilling.

At least one street corner in South London is not familiar without the tall dignified figure of a former major, now reduced to selling matches. His once imperious "battalion attention!" is now no more than a humble "matches, penny a box."

The dole is 18 shillings a week (about $4.37) for every unemployed man officially registered, 15 shillings apiece for women, seven shillings and six pence for boys between the ages of 16 and 18, and six shillings for girls of these ages. Then there are some allowances for children or aged dependents.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Campbell of Hylton were visiting and shopping here Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Tige Herndon and two sons of Ada, Oklahoma, are the guests of Mrs. Herndon's sister, Mrs. Harry Bondies.

Jack in Charity Bout

During his recent sojourn across the pond, Champion Jack Dempsey took part in a bout for charity at Brighton, England. Here he's shown in the ring just before the opening contest. His opponent was a chap by the name of Phil Scott. The match attracted quite a bit of attention. The third man in the arena is Harry Preston, the promoter.

OPEN ICE PLANT

Downtown Drive-In Ice Station Opens For Business Thursday—Convenience for Patrons

The new downtown ice plant of the Sweetwater Ice Co. opened for business Thursday following completion of the plant recently. It is located on N. W. 4th street, and is directly back of the site where the two story office building of the West Texas Electric Co. is to be constructed.

The plant is modern in every way, and is a superior type of the new drive-in ice stations now becoming numerous in the larger cities.

Ice customers may drive into the plant and purchase ice without getting out of cars. Tickets are purchased from the cashier, presented to the store room keeper and the ice is loaded.

The main storage room of the plant has a capacity of 500 tons. Temperature in this room is 25 degrees, below freezing, and the ice is kept there with no melting or waste resulting.

A second store room contains the ice ready for sales. All blocks of ice are scored by machinery, and various weights are plainly marked on the blocks, removing all guess work in estimating the weight and doing away with necessity to weigh the ice. It is impossible for chunks of ice under weight to be sold to a customer.

An electrically driven ammonia compressor supplies the cold vapor pipes that keep the storage rooms at a low temperature at all times.

The walls of the storage room are of cork, finished with insulating paint. The plant is of brick that will conform with the new building to be erected on the corner of Oak and Fourth.

Mrs. Sam Parker is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. White of Shreveport, Louisiana. She has been quite ill since her arrival here. Word received Thursday stated that she was much better.

DRIVE STILL ON TO SELL SHARES

Committees Still Working in Campaign to Place Remaining Shares of County Fair Stock

MEET SUCCESS WEDNESDAY

Afternoon Campaign of Two Committees Nets Favorable Results—Opportunity for All

Fair committees working from 2 to 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon met with fair success in the campaign to sell the remaining 200,000 shares of stock in the Nolan County Fair Association, it was reported Thursday morning.

The committees, under the direction of chairman Will Wade and M. C. Manroe partially completed a canvass of the town, in the drive to place at least one share of stock with every business man and citizen. Only a portion of the citizenship was seen during the two hours however, and the campaign will continue until every person in the city has had an opportunity to subscribe for one or more shares.

A total of 400 shares must be sold in all, and about half that amount has been disposed of to date. The fair association has set the $10,000 mark as its objective, and plans to become incorporated with that capital stock.

Fair directors are of the opinion that the stock must be sold and the money raised as once if the fair is to be staged successfully this fall. Every effort will be made to complete the selling campaign as quickly as possible.

PLAN TAX CUT

President Coolidge Prepares to Submit Plan to Congress—To Cut 5 Million on Income Taxes

By United Press.

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., July 23.—A proposal for tax reductions which will lop 500 million dollars from the return of income tax payments will probably be announced informally by President Coolidge before he leaves the summer white house early in September for Washington.

Conferences now going on with Senator Curtis Republican whip, and later ones with Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and others will enable the president to set an approximate figure for the tax commission of congress to aim at when the draft of a new tax bill in September or October, it was learned today.

Shakespeare wrote some naughty stuff, too, but he wasn't 40 degrees less decent than his times.

Wade Brothers In New Plant

Wholesale Meat Dealers of Sweetwater Open Recently Completed Plant Near City; Combination Dressing and Storage.

NEW AND MODERN EQUIPMENT

Business Will Rank High With Large Packing Houses Over State; Facilities of Firm Are Great; Manufacture Meat Products.

With its arrangement, equipment and facilities ranking in quality with the large packing houses in the largest cities of the state, with every known device for dressing and storage of meats of every description, and with the entire business handled on a scale of economy of time and labor made possible through employment of mechanical, electrical and steam equipment of many types and natures, the new home of Wade Brothers, wholesale meat dealers and pioneer market men of Sweetwater, presents to Sweetwater a more modern and complete meat dressing, meat manufacturing, and storage business than can probably be found in a city of this size throughout the South-west.

The new home of Wade Brothers has just been completed. The two story building with basement is located just a mile west of the city and within the tile and concrete walls of the modern structure is housed equipment, machinery and capacity beyond the highest expectancy of those who have visited the plant; and the plant is a revelation to all who have visited it.

The new home of Wade Brothers has just been completed. The two story building with basement is located just a mile west of the city, and within the tile and concrete walls of the modern structure is housed equipment, machinery and capacity beyond the highest expectancy of those who have visited the plant; and the plant is a revelation to all who have visited it.

Plant Recently Completed

The building, only recently completed, is located on the Bankhead Highway and on the Texas and Pacific. Construction work started some time ago, and the installing of machinery and equipment required a considerable length of time. The plant was open for business and was operating before the American Legion Picnic and barbecue here, and all the meat that fed the estimated 10,000 people here was handled through Wade Bros. plant.

Chiefly, the plant is a combination stock yards, slaughter house and storage house, and the equipment is so proportioned as to successfully give the meat wholesalers ample and first class facilities in each of these departments.

Plant Is Clean

It is practically fireproof throughout and the entire plant is operated on rigid rules of cleanliness and sanitation. The waste, scraps, refuse and odor, generally associated with packing houses, are lacking. The entire building is spotless from top to bottom. Plenty of steam and hot water, and the system of handling the carcasses result in a clean and sanitary plant, and subsequently clean meat products. Even the slaughtering department where the animals are first killed and dressed, has a fresh and clean appearance. The floor of the slaughter room is as spotless as the average kitchen floor.

Meat and meat products that come from the plant are ice cold, as pure as is possibly human to make them, and absolutely free from germs, foreign matter, dust and dirt.

Route of Products

The route which the meat and meat products travel is as interesting to those who have never visited such a place, as any great packing house or manufacturing plant might be expected to be. From the time the cattle and hogs are "clubbed" as they walk up the chutes, to the time fine sausages, minced hams, fine juicy cuts of choice beef and pork are ready for local consumption or shipment. The system of handling the carcasses is of great interest and reveals a perfect co-ordination of brain, skill of hand and the work of perfect machinery.

From the many pens that surround the plant, the animals, cattle of hogs, are driven up a chute to the second floor to be killed. A separate chute was built for cattle and for hogs.

When the calf or steer reaches the end of the chute, it is even with a large door. At the end of the chute the animal is killed—knocked in the head with a sledge hammer.

If the animal killed is a calf or steer, a door even with the chute is opened from the inside, and, without being touched by hand, the animal falls into the dressing room, landing on a concrete floor. Here it is cleaned, skinned and made ready for the chill room.

The entrails, blood, water used in cleaning, and other waste, immediately wash along the sloping floor, draining into a huge steel tank that extends from the basement to the second floor. Here the waste or "inedibles" are cooked by a slow fire and the waste drained off.

The animal is cleaned as it hangs from the ceiling from large hooks. The hooks are attached to "tracks" that form a net work over the ceiling, and from which the animals are guided to various portions of the room and into the chill rooms.

Hogs Are Killed

If the animal killed is a hog, it falls from the hog chute through a door into a huge concrete vat. Here it is scalded by water heated from steam. All the water in the building is heated by steam which arises through a system of pipes from a furnace in the basement.

When the hog is scalded a large set of prongs lift it over to the scraping table. After it is scraped and cleaned the waste being disposed of similar to that of the slaughtered cattle, the carcass is also mounted on hooks attached to the overhead tracks.

In Freezing Temperature

At this stage, both cattle and hogs are ready for their first chilling. Into an air tight chill room they go, being pushed along the overhead tracks. The tracks go over the top of the door of the chill room, which when closed, automatically close the entrance of the tracks.

A net work of tracks is also overhead in the chill room. Stepping into this room is like taking a plunge into ice water on a hot day. Pipes that lead into the room, carrying the cold vapor from the refrigerating system, are coated with frost. No matter how hot the weather is outside, clusters of snow and ice coat everything inside the chill room. The temperature stands almost at the freezing mark—34 degrees. The body heat from the carcasses, when they are first pushed into the room, causes smoke to arise, and even the breath of persons in the rooms forms a puff of "steam" as it does on the coldest winter days.

The chill room is of concrete, and the animals hang from the tracks on the ceiling. In the chill room the body heat and moisture are taken from the carcasses.

Large Storage Room

The network of overhead tracks go from the chill room to the storage room which also has a low temperature, an average of 35 degrees. Here the carcasses are stored for delivery and shipment. This huge room has a capacity of 50 carcasses. The meat in the room is ice cold clear through, and all the moisture is taken from the meat. It is clean and white and dry, and the meat, after being in this room for a period, furnishes the most choice cuts of beef and pork that is possible to obtain.

In the second storage room, which is as large as the first, and which is the third cold storage room of the plant, is kept cured and cooked meats for delivery, shipment, and commercial sales. The temperature of this storage room is also 35 degrees, and a person begins to feel the need of an overcoat by the time this room is reached—even though the mercury is flirting with the century mark outside.

In this storage room, is shipments of bacon, salt port, hams and similar meats.

In the room Wednesday were lines after lines of bacon stacked high, salt pork and breakfast bacon, sausages

WHY THEY WEREN'T EXCITED

It is to be hoped that war department officials will put the right face upon the reason for the rather discouraging interest the American public had in their defense day maneuvers. "Beginning at daylight today," they announced in confidence on the morning of the Fourth of July, "America once more will be mustered for war."

Throughout the country a few thousand citizens obeyed the summons but their limited number was far from redeeming the hope of the war department officials. The latter try to make no show of disappointment, but they must be surprised by the failure of the second defense day test. It is not difficult to account for this want of popular interest in the program put forward by the warriors. In the first place, this nation is "fed up" on war and with the sacrifices it is daily called to make to pay the debts of the past war. It is patriotic, and believes in the national defense, but does not feel obliged to prove this devotion wherever the generals and their staffs sound the bugle for a test, as their one-day mobilization is called. Citizens who were given 15 days' notice of indignation prior to the first "defense day" last September because the republic was being "militarized," and likely to fall under the dominion of imperialists and warriors, must now feel as cheap as their foes, the generals, who made the strategic error of expecting too much from the country. In the general results the conclusion is clear that the people themselves have taken the right attitude toward this matter. They are willing to be mobilized when it is needed but cannot be induced to go through the motions of it when to do this has all the appearance of being nationwide foolery. And one who is not a professional warrior or an habitual viewer-with-alarm will manage to derive much misery from such a state of public mind.

OUT OF BOUNDS

Imagine a colonel trying to lead a battle charge without a regiment of foot soldiers at his command. A colonel so circumstanced would be under no greater handicap than would be true of H. L. Mencken if he were to try to win a battle of words without his never-failing support of adjectives and descriptive terms. As long as Commander Mencken remained on his home base and directed a long distance fire at the enemy head that have into sight he never failed to get the range.

But last week he made an error in his usually unerring strategy. He packed his typewriter and his arsenal of words into a suit case and departed for Dayton, Tenn. Then he proceeded to march his verbal army up and down the streets on dress parade, and to send daily dispatches to the country that were gall and wormwood to the people of the village. They bristled with such familiar terms as "blather-skites," "morons," "yokels," "hillbillies," "babbitts," and "peasants." They poked fun at the "nonsense" which country preachers are hammering and ramming into yokel skulls. They sought even to set the Baptists and Methodists of the community by the ears by assuming that the Baptists regarded the Methodists as infidels because they did not cause their converts in a tank of water in baptismal ceremonies. When the out of town papers began coming back to Dayton the ire of its literal and loyal believers was switched from pagan science to Mencken.

The Rev. A. C. Strubling, pastor of the Cumberland Presbyterian church of Dayton, speeded into print with an answer in which he presented the imputation that confused the natives of that town with the contents of Sas: Tennessee. He pointed out that the town contains many educated persons, the sons and daughters of most of the merchants and professional men having been sent to art schools and colleges. Many of this latter generation have also been graduated from colleges. One Dayton boy, he said, had recently won a Rhodes scholarship at college, while another is commissioner of education at Chattanooga. Then the parson wound up with the broadside:

"I am sorry that Mr. Mencken has been so ignored by the people of Dayton that he has not met any of our best citizens. It is true that we have some of the kind he refers to in some of the back alleys, but what in Sam Hill was he nosing around these alleys for? We are accustomed to sending the police to investigate when a strange is seen sneaking around like this. I hereby invite him to come out and get acquainted with some real American gentlemen. One of them will be a Baptist preacher."

General Mencken is not helping the evolution of better understanding in the Tennessee village by harrying it with his old guard. He should retreat with his forces to the barracks up north and let Bryan and Darrow do the rest of the building. They are used to fighting at close quarters over nothing, and he isn't.

PROFIT AND LOSS

Sweetwater Reporter: Barney Baruch, chief of the nation's dollar-a-year men and former chairman of the War Industries Board has donated $250,000 to John Hopkins University with which to finance a three-year study into profiteering as a cause of the war and the possibility of preventing it. "No one will quarrel with this war," he said. "No one will quarrel with this war." No one will quarrel with this mission. Any plan that will make war less likely is a wholesome thing.

Mr. Baruch's sincerity should not be questioned, however much one may doubt the practical effect of his endeavor. Profiteering in war is incidental to the developments which the war induces, and with each war the incidence of profit changes to conform to changed conditions. The idea that profits, or losses, can be eliminated from war is as arguable as that they can be eliminated from peace. One hears so much about the profiteers who were developed by the World War one may forget that there were lossiteers in equal or larger number. Profits in war, aside from the ordinary merchandising and contracting phases of army supply, are made by speculators. Losses are similarly made. Speculation rises to greater volume under war excitement and profits to larger figures. But losses take the same course. If profits can be taken out of war, very well. If losses can be taken out, still better. What Mr. Baruch's investigators likely will find is that some speculative contracts were vastly profitable during war times, others tragically unprofitable. In no cases does it seem possible that the committee can make recommendations which will hold good in such emergencies as world war brings, or devise means to keep business calm, speculate serene, statesmen profound when the guns are booming and hysteria sweeps over whole populations.—State Press in Dallas News.

By Phone

David D. Leahy of Wichita, Kas. is probably the only judge in the world who holds his court by telephone. He presides over the small debtors court: handling only cases where litigants are too poor to pay attorneys' fees, and when the rival parties can't get to his house he hears the case by phone.

and other meats. The value of the bacon alone in the storage room Wednesday was $6,000. And $6,000 worth of bacon is quite a bit of bacon.
 All raw carcasses are loaded from the first storage room, however, from the tracks that extend from the room into the weighing room where they are weighed by a specially designed set of scales. The meat is loaded on a truck from a wide door for delivery to various markets in this and other cities.

Make Sausage

The Wade Brothers plant manufacturing department has the facilities for making minced ham, and various styles of sausages. A huge sausage grinder makes the sausage. From here it goes into a large mixer where it is thoroughly mixed. It is then forced into skins, packed tight, and is ready to be smoked.
 The sausages also hang from tracks in a smoking room on the second floor. The fire is in the basement, and the smoke rises two floors to smoke the sausage. Only hard wood is used on the fire. The sausage next goes into the coloring vat where it is warmed in a mixture that gives it a dark brown color.

Keeny Is Sausage Maker

The sausage completed then goes to one of the storage rooms where it is quickly chilled.

J. I. Keeny is head sausage maker at the plant. With 40 years experience to back him up, Mr. Keeny is competent to turn out the finest and most delicious sausage that it is possible to make. And he keeps the rooms and equipment of the sausage department as clean and sanitary as the average home.

A large supply of "casing" in which the sausage is stuffed is in the storage rooms. The "casing" from both hogs and sheep is very valuable. In the storage room Wednesday containers of sheep, hog and beef "casings" used to stuff various kinds of sausage amounted to several hundred dollars.

Lard Is Made

On the top floor is the machinery and equipment for making lard. The lard is first cooked here by water heated by steam, making it impossible

Operate Ice Plant

The cold vapors for the chill room and the storage rooms comes from a model ice plant that is operated at the slaughter house.
 On the south side of the building is located the sprinkler system, and a network of ammonia pipes. In the basement, a 6x6 York compressor pumps the ammonia for the icing system.

Another cold storage room is located in the basement that is to be used for commercial storage.

In the basement is also the furnace equipment which furnishes the steam heat throughout the building. An elevator carries the meat and equipment from floor to floor, extending

Tom Wade Buyer

Surrounding the plant are the pens, corrals, pastures and barns for the great amount of stock used by Wade Brothers. All the buying of cattle and hogs is done by Tom Wade. He is supervisor of purchases, and is also in charge of the horse and mule buying and selling. Will Wade is in charge of the plant proper, and also the retail branch which is the uptown market.

The plant keeper's cottage is also adjacent to the plant.

The entire plant and stockyards go to make up one of the most unusual businesses in this section of the country, and the business is an institution, an asset, modern and substantial, to this city.
