PROGRAM HONOR NOLAN PIONEERS

Group of Early Day Residents Guests of Luncheon Club at Meeting Thursday Noon

ADDRESSES DELIVERED

Talks on Early Days and Suggestions Included on Program—Plan Trip To Camp Rudd

More than 20 of the pioneer citizens of this section were guests at a crowded meeting of the Sweetwater Club Thursday at noon at the Hotel Wright who honored those who were responsible for the inception and growth of the city. W. T. Hightower, Judge R. A. Ragland, Rev. J. G. Moore, Judge J. H. Cochran and Judge J. H. Beall were among the speakers.

Arrangements were made for as many business men as possible to leave for Camp Rudd at 5 o'clock where they will be guests of the Boy Scouts at supper.

County Judge A. S. Mauzey, who presided as toastmaster, paid high tribute to the pioneers present and also to those who were unable to come. Included among the guests were four men who attended the first banquet of the Commercial Club at Sweetwater February 10, 1903. Those were Dr. P. R. Hamilton, R. A. Ragland, R. C. Crane and J. H. Beall.

Captain Hightower was the first speaker and he delivered a brief address on early days.

Rev. J. C. Moore, old time circuit rider, who came to Sweetwater 22 years ago, said a ragged village of some 600 people was here at that time. Now it is a city known far and near.

Judge Ragland advocated a landing field for airplanes, saying that aviation was the coming thing with mail and baggage to be handled by air and that the city without proper landing facilities would be out of luck. The judge advocated a good race track also.

Judge J. H. Cochran, former legislator, speaker of the house as well as gubernatorial timber, spoke on the "Making of Sweetwater a Great City".

High tribute was paid to the memory of Thomas Trammell by Judge Beall, who advocated the erection of a suitable memorial to him on the Court House lawn.

John Simmons was named toastmaster for the next meeting.

TO HEAR WRIT

Court Criminal Appeals Overrules Judge Bryant in Habeas Corpus for Jones Polk

The second hearing on application for a writ of habeas corpus in the case of the State of Texas versus Jones Polk, charged with murder, has been scheduled for Monday at 10 a. m. at Roby by the Court of Criminal Appeals before Judge Bruce W. Bryant, who had previously denied a hearing on the application. Following Judge Bryant's denial of the second hearing the application was carried before the Court of Criminal Appeals in vacation at Austin by B. M. Neblett, defense attorney. The higher court is in vacation but Judge Morrow, Chief Justice, rendered the opinion in chambers.

Polk was indicted for murder following the shooting of Jim Bob Largent at McCaulley in November, 1924, Largent dying in a Stamford sanitarium. Bail was refused prior to the indictment, and a writ of habeas corpus denied by Judge Bryant whose opinion was confirmed by the Court of Criminal Appeals. Defendant attempted to sue out another writ following the indictment. Hearing was denied on the second writ by Judge Bryant, who was overruled by the Court of Criminal Appeals in Judge Morrow's decision this week.

The case is set for trial at Roby the week of September 16. Polk is in jail at Anson, Jones county, where the indictment was returned, later being changed to Fisher County.

ALLIES PLANNED FIXING OF PRICE

Herbert Hoover, After 8 Years of Silence, Tells Inside Story of Wheat During War

WAS NOT RESPONSIBLE

Had No Part in Fixing $2.20 Price—Allies Formed Combine—Farmers Were Saved

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—After eight years of silence, Herbert Hoover has at last come forward with the inside story of the fixing of the price of wheat at $2.20 per bushel during the war.

The tale, which was unfolded in a foreword to a final report on the activities of the United States Grain Corporation prepared by Dr. Frank M. Surface, economist, is amazing in that it discloses:

1. That the allies had combined in 1917 to buy wheat from American farmers at not more than $1.50 per bushel.

2. That instead of being deprived of huge war time profits by the government's intervention as the farmers have believed ever since they actually were saved from "complete disaster" which menaced them, unsuspecting in the Allies' Agreement.

3. That Hoover himself had no part in fixing the $2.20 price.

Most significant perhaps, is the last disclosure. In all eight years since the war Hoover has borne the burden of the almost unanimous hostility of American farmers for his supposed predominant part in fixing the price.

They held him personally responsible for being cut off from the profits which they believed they would have made if the price had not been arbitrarily set. More than anything else, this belief among farmers has kept Hoover from being in the front rank of presidential contenders. Party leaders have felt that so long as he bore the farmers' dislike he could not be regarded seriously as a candidate.

If Hoover's story is now accepted by his former enemies, the Commerce Secretary must take on new stature as a political figure.

After explaining that "because misunderstanding and misrepresentation which has grown up over the action of the Committee appointed by President Wilson in August 1917 to determine a fair price for wheat," several members of the committee had asked him to make a complete review of the episode, Hoover said:

"The time has now come when certain factors in our war relations, relative to wheat, can be disclosed because they have so far passed into history as to be of domestic interest only. Furthermore sufficient time has now elapsed so that a broad perspective can be given of the wheat operations during the war.

"Dr. Frank M. Surface, whose reputation as an agricultural economist needs no reference, has made a thorough study of the records of these war organizations and, for the first time, a report has been prepared based on a full examination of these records.

"Dr. Surface's objective review easily demonstrates that the American farmer was saved from what otherwise would have been a complete disaster, due to certain conditions created by the war and effectively dissipates the myth that price guarantees were entered into for any other purpose or any other result than to protect the farmers' interests.

"In July, 1917, as United States Food Administrator, I presented to the president certain facts which resulted in the appointment of a committee to consider the situation. Briefly these facts were: that in the spring of 1917, the Allies, by bidding against each other, had forced the price of wheat from $1.50 to over $3.00 per bushel.

"In order to abolish this competition between themselves, the Allies governments before we came into the war had consolidated their purchasing of world wheat into one buying agency. Through control of world shipping and the blockage against the enemy, this agency was the sole buyer of our wheat."

STATIONS READY TO TEST LIGHTS

Four Official Headlight Testing Stations in City Prepared for Focusing Lights

FIRST TESTS ARE MADE

Two Stations Do First Work Late Wednesday—Regulation Headlights and Lens Necessary

Sweetwater automobile owners are swiftly complying with the headlight test regulations which will not become actually effective until September 1, by having their headlights tested in advance of the law becoming effective. The four official test stations here, designated as such some time ago by the highway department, have their supplies and equipment in readiness now for the testing of lights.

The official test stations here are Buck and Henry, C. S. Boyles Motor Co., Dabney Motor Co. and The Sweetwater Battery Co.

Buck and Henry and the Sweetwater Battery Co. were first to erect their equipment and get in readiness for focusing headlights. An engineer from the highway department was in Sweetwater Wednesday and Thursday aiding stations in erecting equipment used in focusing lights.

Buck and Henry focused several lights Wednesday afternoon, as did the Sweetwater Battery Co. Judge A. S. Mauzey and John A. McCurdy have the distinction of being the first drivers in the county to have the headlights of their cars tested. Mauzey's work was done by Buck and Henry and McCurdy's by the Sweetwater Battery Co. Wednesday afternoon.

A charge of 25c each is made for each focusing, a portion of the money going to the county. This is the actual charge for focusing. The driver must buy regulation equipment, however, if his car is not so equipped. The blue, red and other "fancy" bulbs used on some cars, "fancy" shades over the headlights, etc., are not accepted as regulation equipment, and the driver must change the equipment before he is given a certificate, showing his lights are up to specifications, it was stated.

Beginning September 1, all new cars sold must be tested for properly focused headlights before they are registered with the tax collector. All old cars must have the certificate of tested lights before registering the first of the year.

THE GUILTY ONES

Sweetwater residents whose homes, yards and alleys present a neat and sanitary appearance, set off by grass, flowers, trees and shrubs, will welcome the announcement of the city commission and health authorities that a clean up campaign will be urged and demanded to the extent that all traces of trash, dirt disease and filth will be removed. Such residents are justly entitled to the feeling of pride that goes with the knowledge that their premises are not only clean, but are beautified as well.

It is the resident whose premises have long been an eye sore to the city whose alley is a breeding place for flies, whose garbage can stands uncleaned by a tree or whose yard is grown up in weeds that harbor flies and mosquitoes and the very appearance of whose place brands it as a starting point for germs, sickness and disease. Fortunately, such places are few in the city. There are those that exist, however, and it is such as these that the campaign inaugurated this week is aimed. Should an epidemic of disease, sweep the city, leaving a trail of sick and dead, officials say that such a disease might be traceable directly to the unsanitary conditions and trash upon and around premises of some residents of this city, premises of those who call them selves citizens of Sweetwater. If such should be the case, these residents would be little more than criminals.

We believe that a sense of personal pride first, and civic duty second, should be sufficient to make Sweetwater a city of spotless premises, fresh, clean yards and alleys. This feeling, public sentiment, and pressure brought to bear by the neighborhood in which such conditions exist, should help to right matters.

Man Who Lives on a Railroad Train Is Equally at Home on the Sea

To Reinald Werrenrath, America's great baritone, a Pullman drawing room is home. He spends a third of his life in one. And he thrives on it. Like the Viking sagemen of his ancestry, the American born artist, each season, sings his way from city to city. Slightly different from them, however, the gifted young Norseman gets a thousand dollars a night for his songs.

The secret of how the tall, handsome Dane keeps in perfect condition when the thousands of miles he roves off in a year would kill an ordinary man, is found, Werrenrath says, in three things—exercise in the fresh air, careful eating and the sea when one can live on it. These things, the famous singer observes almost religiously. No matter what the weather may be, "Weary," as his friends know him, takes his daily turn in the open air, and in the summer he invariably goes to the sea or, if he must keep in touch with affairs, he goes to his camp in the Adirondacks, far from any railroad, or even a post office, and makes a full hand in chopping trees, road building and carpentering.

Werrenrath's forefathers used to make the Norseland's mead halls echo with their ballads of victory. Apparently he inherited their enjoyment of singing songs the people love. His concert ranges from grand opera, in which he sang for years with the Metropolitan, of New York, to Kipling ballads, and songs of fighting and of ships, yet he turns to "the songs that women like" with apparent ease.

As though he sang for the pure love of singing, "Weary" responds to encore after encore and more than once at concerts he continues to sing to groups of enthusiastic admirers that throng about him after the house management has turned off the lights except those by his piano. One of his fads is to organize "scrub" quartets from among his friends and sing "barber shop" chords with them.

Some of Werrenrath's closest buddies are the old tars off Miami, with whom he spends his brief holiday vacations. They await his coming eagerly and hail him as one of their own, as, in his old sailor togs, he swings the tiller, breaks out the tops' or, as the prow turns homeward in the evening, lolls back among the ropes and canvas and sings his old favorite, "On the Road to Mandalay."

It's so much nicer isn't it, now that the tariff has been taken out of politics.

Discretion by any other name would not change the temperature of the feet.
