Commissioners mull home loans

REFLECTIONS IN A JUNKYARD POOL — Even a scene as unlikely as a junkyard can assume a tranquility, a peaceful symmetry after fallen rain. The location is the Westexas Metals yard on North Birdwell, where people used to sell cars for junk, according to Garland Smith, Westexas manager.

"We're trying to sell that junk now," he said, adding that the yard is no longer buying junked autos. The storm which turned the yard in front of the cars into a small pond left about half an inch of rain in its wake.

Howard County commissioners learned yesterday a door could be opened for low interest loans for homebuyers if enough volume can be generated in Howard County and other markets. Larry Skiles of San Angelo spoke with the commissioners about the program.

Skiles, who represents investment advisors to political entities, asked the commissioners to form a non-binding political entity called a housing financial corporation.

"You have a lack of housing. We want to make money available at a lower interest rate than conventional rates," Skiles said. "If the volume in the communities is enough, they can get the bonds." The corporation is only a "conduit for money to become tax-exempt; (there are) no expenses or legal liability to the county or corporation," Skiles said.

He added he hopes Howard County and other counties such as Pecos County and Winkler County would demonstrate a need for $20 million to $30 million in combined mortgage bonds. He said surveys of lending institutions and the buyers' market in the areas would be made before any commitment.

"There's no guarantee funds will ever exist," Skiles said. He noted, however, that the mortgages possible through the program would be "the kind of people will be tickled to get."

The interest on the mortgage loans probably would run about five percent lower than the going rate, Skiles said.

Commissioners decided to discuss the matter further and contact local lending institutions for their response to such a program.

In other action, commissioners heard from Arnold Marshall of the U.S. Highway 87 Highway Improvement Association about a resolution to have Highway 87 designated as an interstate. Marshall said the economic value for the area would be tremendous. He urged the commissioners to attend the July 28 meeting of the Texas Highway Commission to promote interstate designation.

Commissioners also approved the attendance of newly-elected peace justice Willie Grant at a justice of the peace school in Odessa this week.

Poole appointed extension agent

Dennis Poole's appointment as an assistant Howard County extension agent was approved by Howard County commissioners yesterday.

Poole had been recommended for the job by Mrs. Roberta Johnson, district director for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Poole's appointment will be effective July 16.

"I'm looking forward to working out there," Poole said in a telephone interview from Baytown, Texas, yesterday. "It's too big and crowded here. I work for and with real good people, and I've gained a lot of experience, but I'm from a town of about 3,000 and a small school. I want to get a little closer to agriculture — there's a lot of agriculture here, but not the kind I grew up with. I'm looking forward to getting in and learning with good people (in Howard County)."

"He's young and enthusiastic," said Mrs. Johnson. "He has a good background in working with youth and adults, and has broad experience in all types of agriculture.

"He's a fine young man — we're fortunate to have him," she concluded.

Poole, a native of Wylie, received both B.S. and M.S. degrees from Tarleton State University, where he was a member of the Collegiate FFA and a member of the Block and Bridle Club. He completed his student teaching at Hico High School, and currently is teaching vocational agriculture at Baytown.

Poole also attended Grayson County Junior College, where he was a member of the livestock judging team and vice president of the rodeo club. He is a graduate of T.F. Birmingham High School in Wylie, where he was active in FFA for four years, serving in every office of the local chapter and winning high honors all four years.

He replaces Hank Willemsma, who resigned recently to go into private business in Las Cruces.

Showers continue to drench area

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

A severe thunderstorm passed over Dawson, Martin and Howard counties late last night bringing showers and a tornado threat.

The National Weather Service in Midland placed Martin and Dawson counties under a tornado warning at approximately 12:20 a.m. and urged residents to take cover. However, the only tornado report received in the area was an unconfirmed sighting called into the Lamesa police department.

Law enforcement officials in both counties said they had not received any reports of damage done by the turbulent weather.

Big Spring escaped most of the storm's wrath and only received gusty winds and approximately one-half inch of rain.

The U.S. Big Spring Field Station reported four-tenths of an inch, which brings the year's rainfall total to 5.98 inches.

Red Thomas measured five-tenths of an inch at his home at 107 E. 13th, while Chuck Benz of 2807 Apache reported he has received 1.6 inches since Sunday.

Boyce Hale, who lives south of Big Spring, received two-tenths of an inch at his home.

Radio station KPET in Lamesa reported that city had received 1.43 inches since last night.

The National Weather Service is calling for a 40 percent chance of showers today and tonight diminishing to 20 percent Wednesday.

Extended forecasts called for widely scattered thunderstorms and partly cloudy skies for Thursday and Friday.

Focalpoint

Action/reaction: Bothersome calls

Q. What can be done about persons making nuisance calls repeatedly after being asked to stop? Is there a law against this? What are the penalties?

The person also may contact the telephone company about installing a "trap" to discover the persons responsible. Page three of the telephone directory describes the penalties for annoyance calls as a fine not to exceed $1,000 or confinement up to 180 days.

Need grows for eye donations

Tommy Whatley: 'Those that give their eyes never really die'

By CAROL DANIEL
Staff Writer

So you think you're a humanitarian and always concerned with public welfare. But did you know you can continue to render public service, even after you are dead?

The need and demand for eye donors continues to grow each year, according to Dr. William Bartlett of the local Veteran's Administration hospital and Margie McCain, executive secretary of the Lion's Club District 2-A1 Eye Bank in Midland.

"It's a very valuable service you can perform even after you're dead," said Bartlett. "Often it is a very comforting thought that someone would live on by giving sight to another."

Yet the thought of having one's appearance altered by eye removal often prohibits people from donating their eyes after death, Ms. McCain said.

ACCORDING TO funeral home director Tommy Whatley, who has performed enucleation (eye removal) twice, the procedure is "simple" and "does not affect the appearance of the body at all."

In fact, enucleation is so simple that "any fool could pass the certifying test," Whatley said.

The main concern is to keep a sterile field around the entire area while removing the eye, Whatley added.

After removal, the eyes are suspended over a saline solution in a sterile bottle to keep them moist, packed in ice and "given top priority by airlines" to be shipped where needed, Whatley said.

The Lion's Club, which sponsors eye banks throughout the United States, is the only organization to offer free corneas in this area, Bartlett said. There are 81 Lion's Club banks in the Eye Bank Association of America.

The bank in Midland is "only a small operation with no lab facilities," said Ms. McCain, but they "handled" 22 eyes last year and 10 so far this year.

Bartlett said any dangers to the person receiving the eye are "minimal" but the "biggest risk is failure of the graft."

"Immediately after surgery or even years later the body may reject the tissue transplanted," Bartlett said. "Instead of the cornea remaining clear, it starts becoming cloudy."

Bartlett said there are extremely rare reportable cases of infectious diseases being transmitted to the donee. Patients with infectious diseases are rejected as donors because of any risk, no matter how small, he added.

THE SURGICAL success for eye transplants are "very high," McCain said. "Between 90 and 95 percent of the transplants are successful."

Whatley stressed the importance of notifying a close relative of one's desire to donate any organ for transplant. If someone is not aware of the intention, the potential donation may not be known "until it is too late," Whatley said. "Enucleation should be done within six hours of death."

Anyone is a potential donor, McCain said. Signing the back of one's driver's license or a special donor card qualifies one as a potential organ donor.

Dr. Bartlett pointed out that there are "two people waiting now at the VA for corneal transplant" and "donating two eyes has the potential of giving sight to two individuals."

Whatley suggested immortality as another reason for donating eyes.

"Donating your eyes is one of the greatest things," he said, "because those that give their eyes never really die."

Britain admits loss of warship

By the Associated Press

Britain claims it shot down eight more Argentine planes in the Falkland Islands war but admitted the loss of its third major warship, the frigate Antelope blown up by an Argentine bomb.

Despite the latest fighting reported Monday, Vatican officials said today Pope John Paul II was definitely traveling to Britain at week's end for his historic six-day visit. Unconfirmed reports also circulated he wanted to make a "balancing visit" to Argentina, where 95 percent of the people are Roman Catholic.

The pope has unsuccessfully pleaded for a cease-fire between the warring nations. It war earlier feared he would scrap the trip to Britain to avoid angering the Argentines.

At the United Nations, Ireland submitted a resolution to the Security Council calling for a 72-hour cease-fire while Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar made another attempt to negotiate a peaceful solution. But British Defense Minister John Nott said a truce would not be considered until Britain's troops retake the islands. Britain was expected to veto the resolution.

In Buenos Aires, the military junta warned that the war could expand and hinted it may seek help from its Latin allies and the Soviet Union. Defense Minister Amadeo Frugoli told the United States to stop supporting Britain in the seven-week conflict.

British war correspondents reported waves of Argentine Mirage and Skyhawk jets attacked Britain's invasion fleet Monday afternoon in Falkland Sound off the British beachhead. It was the third such attack in four days.

The British Defense Ministry said its Harrier jets and anti-aircraft fire from the ships and shore batteries brought down eight of the attackers.

This raised to 64 the total number of Argentine aircraft shot down or destroyed on the ground. Nott told the House of Commons more than a third of the Argentine air force has been destroyed, and more ships were arriving to strengthen the British task force.

The Argentine government admitted it lost two fighters Monday and claimed the raiders inflicted "serious damage" to a troopship and "damage" to a frigate. The Argentine Embassy in Washington said the troopship was the 44,000-ton cruiser liner Canberra, which the British government requisitioned to carry the invasion force to the South Atlantic, but this was not confirmed in London.

Instead, British Defense Ministry spokesman Ian McDonald said only that some ships may have been damaged.

WFAA returns

WFAA-Dallas has returned to Big Spring cable TV in the form of original WFAA news and movie programming, Big Spring Cable TV vice president Jim Lancaster said this morning.

WFAA programming began last night with the showing of the 10 p.m. newscast, he said. Today, a 3 p.m. movie will be shown as well as the 6 p.m. and 10 p.m. newscasts, Lancaster said.

Eventually, late-night movies from WFAA will be shown, Lancaster added.

WFAA can be seen on its old spot — channel 8. Current programming on that channel from the USA Network will be bumped to show WFAA.

"In talking to our customers, that's what they indicated they'd like to have," Lancaster explained. "We still have some bugs to work out, but it appears to be working all right."

Falklands

A spokesman for P and O Lines, owners of the Canberra, denied the ship had been hit in any attack.

"We have received a telex from the master, Capt. Denis Scott-Masson, sent after yesterday's air raids, saying the ship has not been damaged," the spokesman said today.

Argentina also claimed that its anti-aircraft guns shot down a Harrier jet during a British raid Monday on Stanley, the Falklands capital on the east coast of East Falkland and 42 miles east of the British beachhead. The British Defense Ministry confirmed that ships and planes of the task force bombarded the Stanley airfield, but said, "All our aircraft returned safely."

The British announced that the 3,250-ton Antelope, which had been reported afire after an Argentine air attack Sunday, was abandoned and sank Monday after the crew was unable to get control of the flames. Press Association, the domestic British news agency, said the fire was started by a 500-pound Argentine bomb that lodged unexploded in the ship's engine room and was set off by technicians trying to defuse it.

The Defense Ministry announced earlier Monday that one man was killed and five injured, apparently when the bomb exploded. The later announcement said "there were no further reports of casualties."

The Antelope was the second British frigate reported lost, a sister ship the Ardent having been sunk during the landing last Friday. The destroyer Sheffield also sank May 6 after being hit by an missile from an Argentine plane, but the British force has three other destroyers, at least six other frigates and three cruisers.

"There is no question of a truce," Nott told the House of Commons. He said the British still have a difficult fight ahead but "one thing is certain, the days of the occupying Argentine garrison are numbered."

"The task force commander has been told to repossess the Falkland Islands at the earliest possible opportunity," he said in an interview with the British Broadcasting Corp.

GRATEFUL — Kim Myo Yun, 60, of Los Angeles, carries her 1-year-old grandson, Henry Kim, as she says a prayer of thanks Monday night after escaping uninjured from her apartment after an explosion ripped through the building.

Seven people were injured in the blast, which according to authorities might have been caused by a natural gas leak, and at least 10 families were left homeless.

Commissioners

commissioners clarified their position on the attendance of Linda Arsiaga, secretary to Peace Justice Bobby West, at the JP school. Commissioner William Crooker told Mrs. Arsiaga and West that "historically the department head makes the decision" on whether schools are beneficial to employees of their offices.

The commissioners accept the decision of the department head on the matter, Crooker said. West then approved Mrs. Arsiaga's attendance of the school. Peace Justice Lewis Heflin had objected to her attendance at the school during the commissioners' May 10 meeting.

Heflin met with the commissioners briefly yesterday after Commissioner Louis Brown requested a meeting with West, Arsiaga and Heflin. Brown told Heflin of the commissioners' action and mentioned a remark of Heflin's during his previous objections, when Heflin implied Mrs. Arsiaga would "play" at the school. "I shouldn't have said it — it's my fault," Heflin said. "I'm sorry."

Bingo election set for Mitchell County

COLORADO CITY (SC) — Mitchell County commissioners met in a specially-called session yesterday to discuss several items, among them legalized bingo.

According to judge Bill Carter, "The petition as presented had been certified as having 195 names on it, and of course, under this type petition, the court had no alternative other than to accept it."

Carter concluded, "the election date to determine whether or not we will have legalized bingo in Mitchell County will be Saturday, Aug. 14, 1982."

"In other business, the commissioners voted to purchase hospitalization and other insurance for county employees through Blue Cross-Blue Shield, purchased property in Lorraine adjacent to other property previously bought by the county and deferred hiring a replacement employee for the library until the commissioners' June meeting."

YMCA swimming pool temporarily closed

Wallace Gill, director of the Big Spring YMCA, has announced the facility's pool will be closed until Thursday due to electrical repairs that must be made to the pool's motor. Gill said the motor apparently was burned up during a recent electrical storm.

Mall to host church bazaar

On Saturday, Big Spring Mall will host a church bazaar. The indoor event is open to all churches in Big Spring and the surrounding area.

Mall manager Mark Sheedy said entry rules are easy — simply be set up by business before 10 a.m. Saturday and bring your own tables and chairs.

Sheedy said participants will not be allowed to sell anything that is already being sold by a merchant of Big Spring Mall. This includes soft drinks, ice cream, candy, snow cones, carnal apples, popcorn, shoes, clothes and kitchenware. This will not rule out pies, cakes, cookies, arts and crafts, and other handmade goods, Sheedy said.

AWARD WINNERS — Winners of the American Legion Awards at Rannels Junior High were Sandra Martinez, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe A. Lopez Jr., and Sam Gladden, son of Mr. and Mrs. L.K. Gladden. The two eighth graders were presented the awards for courage, honor, leadership, patriotism, scholarship and service at a recent assembly by American Legion Post 506 members Bill Birrell and Ollie Branson.

Israeli war planes down 2 Syrian fighters

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli warplanes shot down two Syrian MIG fighters over Lebanon today, the military command said. It said the Israeli planes had been on patrol and returned safely to base.

The Syrian government in Damascus said two of its planes were "hit" in the clash. Lebanese government sources said one plane crashed north of Beirut, but the pilot bailed out and was hospitalized. The fate of the other pilot was not known.

Syria keeps a 22,000-man army in Lebanon to police the armistice that ended the 1975-76 civil war.

Israel frequently flies reconnaissance missions over Lebanon and has been massing troops on its northern border with Lebanon for weeks in preparation for a possible strike at Palestine

Nobel sperm bank announces first birth

ESCONDIDO, Calif. (AP) — The first baby has been born as a result of a sperm bank set up primarily for Nobel scientists, a spokesman says, and the donor has been identified as "an eminent mathematician."

A spokesman for the Repository for Germinal Choice said Monday the baby was "a healthy nine-pound daughter born in April in a rather small town in a sparsely populated state."

"The parents don't want to be identified publicly," said the spokesman, who declined also to give his full name but said he is the repository's medical geneticist and only full-time employee.

The sperm bank was founded in 1979 as a "means of breeding intelligence" by Robert Klark Graham, a one-time optometrist who made a fortune after pioneering the techniques that led to shatter-proof plastic spectacle lenses.

Graham, 76, was said to be at his home in Escondido, Calif. — a suburb 40 miles north of San Diego — but he was unavailable for comment. His aide said Monday they intended to keep it secret until a national medical magazine hits the newsstands.

C-City school stadium's seats to be replaced

COLORADO CITY (SC) — Colorado school trustees met Monday morning to discuss summer projects, one of which is the replacement of the seats in Wolfe Stadium.

Labor for the project will be supplied by teachers and coaches from the school district who have expressed an interest in summer employment.

Additionally, the trustees authorized Useton to contact architects for drawing up specifications for an air conditioning project for the Middle School library and cafeteria. If bids are favorable, the school district hopes to install the new air conditioning this summer.

Want special session called off

Senate Demos chide Clements

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Two Senate Democrats have chided Gov. Bill Clements for calling a $60,000-a-day special legislative session to repeal a tax that has not been collected in four years.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett suggested on the first day of the session Monday that Clements "uncall" it and let lawmakers go home.

Clements has advocated a $1 billion tax break for Texans, but Doggett said no one has seen "one red cent" of that money.

"This is his last desperate hope to provide the illusion of tax relief," Doggett said.

Remarks by Doggett and Sens. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, and Bill Meier, R-Eules, underscored political differences that could intensify as the special session continues in an election year.

Doggett, D-Austin, selected a routine motion as a forum for criticizing Clements.

At the beginning of each session, a committee is appointed to tell the governor that the Senate is organized and ready for business. On Monday, Doggett included in the motion an invitation for Clements to give the Senate Education Committee his "inexplicable reasons" for calling the special session.

"Many people cannot help but question the motives and reasons of the governor" for calling the session, Doggett said. He referred to the cost of the session as a "campaign subsidy" for Clements.

The governor said in scheduling the session that a lawsuit challenging the way the 1979 Legislature repealed the tax might cost Texans $1 billion in back taxes.

The lawsuit was scheduled for trial June 2, but Doggett said Clements knew before he called the session that the colleges who had sued had agreed to wait until after the 1983 Legislature to pursue the suit. Without the property tax, 17 colleges receive no construction money.

Because the colleges had agreed to delay their suit, Doggett said, there is no emergency.

"There is clearly no reason for lawmakers to gather here," Doggett said. He added that Clements "places a very low priority on higher education except at election time."

"The one true significant problem with higher education today is Bill Clements," Doggett said.

Parker indicated the Legislature's time might be better spent appropriating money for a new prison.

"If you're going to lock folks up and throw away the key, don't you need a place to lock them up and a key to throw away?" said Parker.

Meier zeroed in on Clements' opponent for governor, Attorney General Mark White.

Meier said Texas owe Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple, White's Democratic primary opponent, a "debt of gratitude" for tagging White as the "Pinocchio of Texas politics."

Dipping his hand into a large box of sawdust on his desk, Meier said White - like Pinocchio, a "creation from wood" - leaves a trail of sawdust wherever he goes.

Doggett finally withdrew his motion, and - to the laughter of other senators - was one of five appointed to tell Clements that the Senate was, indeed, ready to go to work.

Senate delays action on property tax repeal

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Quick House committee approval of a constitutional amendment abolishing the state property tax could put the proposal to the full House today, but the Senate delayed action on a similar measure.

The Senate Education Committee suspended action on various proposals to do away with the tax, which had funded construction at smaller state universities, after Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, invoked parliamentary procedures in a plan to embarrass Gov. Bill Clements.

Clements scheduled the special session of the Legislature, which began Monday, specifically to abolish the tax and make a one-time appropriation for current construction projects at colleges which do not have access to the Permanent University Fund.

The 10-cent state property tax is still on the books, but it has not been collected since the 1979 Legislature virtually killed it by setting a .0001 percent assessment ratio. However, it would take a constitutional amendment to repeal the tax because it was established in the Texas Constitution.

Clements called the special session after Midwestern State University sued for collection of the tax.

Senate Education Committee Chairman

Pete Snelson, D-Midland, rescheduled Monday's meeting for Wednesday afternoon after Mauzy "tagged" the four Senate bills, thereby requiring 48 hours public notice before their consideration.

"We wanted to orchestrate a point of view that this is nothing but a very skillful and cynical political move by a politician who is trying to put himself in a more favorable light between now and November," said Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, in a reference to Clements, who is up for re-election this year.

Earlier Monday, the House Constitutional Amendment Committee voted 7-1 for an amendment abolishing the tax.

Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, was the dissenter on the House committee. Mrs. Delco wants to keep the tax, but reduce it to three cents. She said the tax is still needed to pay for construction at the 17 campuses and vowed to offer floor amendments to provide some kind of permanent funding for the schools.

She said she decided not to fight the repeal in committee because, "This train is well-greased and on the tracks."

The measure passed by the House committee simply eliminates the tax and forgives taxes that accrued between 1979 and the current action.

Farabee pushes water bond bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Sen. Ray Farabee asked Gov. Bill Clements on Monday to open up the special legislative session to a proposal that would allow almost $220 million in state water development bonds to be sold at current market interest rates.

Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said the bonds were authorized several years ago, but have not been sold because the market rate for such bonds has been higher than the rate set by the Texas Constitution.

If the Legislature approved the proposed constitutional amendment, it would be submitted to the voters on Nov. 2.

"This will be of immediate help to small- and medium-size communities of the state," said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

Educator offers recommendations for Texas teachers

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Teachers must receive classroom training just as a physician gets medical training, says Dean Corrigan, dean of education at Texas A&M University.

Corrigan offered 11 recommendations to a subcommittee Monday to cope with a "looming disaster" which threatens the intellectual future of the state of Texas.

He said the Legislature should resist efforts to give college graduates in math and science "on the job" training to make up for teacher shortages in those specialties in public schools.

Corrigan also said emergency teaching certificates "as they now exist" should be eliminated and, if necessary, the state should tap the $3 billion public school fund to double the teacher pay hike received in the current biennium.

President Sally Wiedemann of the Association of Texas Professional Educators said "perennial financial neglect" of teachers is the major reason those with experience leave the classroom.

Corrigan and Mrs. Wiedemann testified before a subcommittee on educational personnel, which is considering how to persuade qualified people to become teachers.

Reagan: housing aid bill a 'bailout'

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan says a $5 billion mortgage-subsidy program is a budget-busting "bailout" for the housing industry, but a key Republican senator who normally sides with the president disagrees.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., called his bill a "jobs measure aimed at helping the entire economy."

Reagan, in a letter to Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., said, "A bailout for any one sector is likely to lead to bailouts for others. Taken together, these bailouts could exceed our budget by tens of billions of dollars."

The president said he is "unequivocally opposed to them for reasons that I hope your colleagues will find persuasive."

Despite that appeal and the implied threat of a veto, Lugar said, "I plan to proceed and try to pass the bill, and then discuss its merits with the administration."

"I remain a strong supporter of the president's economic program," he said in a written statement. "I simply believe that it needs a strong anti-recessionary supplement to accelerate its positive impact. I think a majority of the Senate agree with me."

The Senate had been scheduled to take up a supplemental appropriation bill containing the housing program Monday, but action was postponed while Baker maneuvered to avert an effort by Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., to stall action on the bill.

The Senate bill would provide $1 billion to help low- and moderate-income families buy some 400,000 new homes this year through a mortgage-subsidy program. It authorizes $5 billion over five years, with the remainder subject to annual appropriation action.

The House has passed a similar housing aid bill, but it differs from the Senate measure on technical points.

Armstrong said in a Senate speech that the housing provision would set "a horrible precedent" and "seriously undermine the credibility of congressional intentions to restrain federal spending."

Under the measure, the mortgage interest subsidy would be 4 percentage points the first year and decrease by three-quarters of a point each year after that.

'Candy Man' killer wins execution stay

HOUSTON (AP) - A Death Row inmate, who had been sentenced to die today for fatally poisoning his 8-year-old son with Halloween candy, has won another stay of execution.

The execution of Ronald O'Bryan was postponed indefinitely May 17 by State District Judge Michael T. McSpaden on a motion by defense attorneys.

The motion challenged the way some prospective jurors were disqualified during O'Bryan's 1975 trial, defense lawyer Stanley Schneider said Monday.

O'Bryan, 37, previously appealed his case through the courts to the U.S. Supreme Court, but was rejected at every level. His only previous execution date since then, Aug. 8, 1980, was also stayed after attorneys asked for more time to file a new appeal.

O'Bryan was convicted of feeding a "Giant Pixie Styx" candy-filled straw impregnated with cyanide to his son, Timothy, who died within an hour Oct. 31, 1974. Prosecutors said O'Bryan killed Timothy and conspired to kill his 6-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, in a plot to collect more than $60,000

Positive thinking

New York City has the positive attitude we like to see. Not long ago New York was down in the dumps — financially and psychologically. But now they're getting tourists down in the dumps — literally. Yes, the New York Sanitation Department is giving free guided tours of a dump in Staten Island which collects 10,000 tons of garbage a day. It all goes to show that the power of positive thinking can do. Got a problem? Turn your problem into an asset. Who knows, if the garbage tour catches on, the city may soon be able to charge for it.

Go fly a kite

"I want string."
"Yes sir!" bubbled the store clerk. "We have heavy twine, tightly wound climbing rope and nylon rope."
"It's for a kite," I said. "We want to fly a kite."
The clerk looked at me. I could tell she was desperately trying to hold back laughter. "Yes sir," she said. "You can find that in Toys."
"Thank you," I said. I went to Toys. I could hear her giggling behind my back.
She must have noticed something that suggested kite-flying was beyond my grasp. Nevertheless, I took my spool of string and went out to the car where my girlfriend was waiting. We drove off for a quiet afternoon of kite-flying, barbecue and guitar-playing.
It was a nice day. A wide open field would have suited our purposes. But I was after the total kite-flying experience. Flying kites was, after all, a child's activity. I was in my mid-twenties. I didn't want to be bored.

SO WE WENT to the top of Scenic Mountain at the State Park. Nice breeze up there.
"DON'T YOU THINK IT'S TOO WINDY UP HERE?" my girlfriend shouted above the gale.
"NONSENSE!" I shouted back. "WAIT TILL YOU SEE THAT KITE SOAR."
I was hungry, so we pulled the steaks out of the ice chest and took the charcoal and charcoal lighter over to the barbecue pit. I poured the charcoal into the pit. A couple of the briquets blew away. I replaced them. I aimed the charcoal lighter at the briquets and squeezed the can. The wind blew the fluid all over me.
"YOU LIGHT THE MATCH," I yelled.
"OK," she yelled back.
She took out a match, lit it and set the match box down. The match box blew away.
"I'M NOT HUNGRY," I said. "LET'S GET THE KITE OUT."
We had one of those bat kites that everybody uses these days. You hardly ever see the basic design anymore. Ours was quite attractive, with a black body and a white rudder, or whatever you call it. Maybe it's a tail. I don't know much about kites.
The instructions were easy to follow. You spread it out and insert a little wooden stick in the material. Then you tie the string onto the rudder or tail and you're ready.

The only trick is keeping the kite from blowing away before the string is attached. We sat on it.
But finally we were ready for the maiden voyage. I stood up and gave the kite to my girlfriend and instructed her to walk off a ways with it.
"ARE YOU SURE YOU KNOW HOW TO FLY THIS THING?" she yelled.
"YES!" I yelled back.
"ARE YOU SURE?" she yelled again. The wind was blowing harder.
"I DON'T THINK YOU'VE EVER FLOWN ONE BEFORE. BE CAREFUL!"
"ANN, THERE'S NO ONE ABOARD. NO ONE IS GOING TO GET HURT!" I yelled. I made sure the string was ready to go. It was wound around a hollow cardboard tube. I inserted my two index fingers into the tube. I was ready to go.
"LET IT GO!"
She did, and the kite took off like it had someplace to go. The cardboard tube spun wildly as the kite took out more and more string.
IT WAS magnificent. The kite kept climbing and climbing. It soared and swooped and soared and swooped, like an eagle, proud to be flying and looking down on creation. It was beautiful. It was majestic.
It was out of control.
"ANN! GET A STICK! THIS CARDBOARD IS CUTTING MY HANDS!" I screamed.
"WHAT?" she yelled.
"FIND A STICK! MY HANDS ARE BLEEDING!" I looked down. The kite was pulling out so much string so fast that the tube was spinning and cutting my hands.
"FIND A STICK!" I yelled, in genuine pain.
"THERE ARE NO STICKS," she yelled back. "THIS IS WEST TEXAS!"
The kite was beating wildly in the wind. It was still climbing, totally beyond the control of a mere mortal. Suddenly, its stick broke. The kite seemed to fold inward. And it dropped. It dropped with the grace and glory of an Argentine jet fighter. It slammed against a rock and ended up in at least three pieces.
I looked at Ann. She had her hands covering her mouth, her eyes wide with horror. I looked at my hands. They looked like pain.
And the prairie dogs howled with laughter.

Mailbag

Dear Editor,
Five times in the twentieth century, that portion of our news media controlled by the Rockefeller Controlled Council on Foreign Relations, has told us that we are running out of petroleum. In every case the real problem was a surplus of oil which threatened the monopoly of Rockefeller's Standard Oil.

On the southern coast of Alaska near the Puerto del Valdez you will find the town of Katella, where in 1910, there were 32 producing wells and a refinery. This town would have easily become a major petroleum producing city of the west coast but it was covered promptly by a forest preserve and thus taken out of production. It could be opened up today by a simple act of Congress and the profits from the oil field could build a pipeline into the interior of Alaska.

In 1968 the known oil reserves on the remote North Slope was opened up for leasing rather than being sold to the people of Alaska. Many middle-class business men took up the lease but the pipe line was delayed by environmentalists whose activities were financed by the Rockefeller foundation. In this way Rockefeller-Exxon was able to buy their leases at 10c on the dollar. The theme song of the environmentalists, so the rumor goes is Rockefeller-Exxon uber Alles.

If you can imagine the whole state of Texas on big producing oil field you have some idea of some of the energy potential of Alaska. Alaska's problems are political not climatic. Norway, Sweden and Denmark have the same latitude and climate as Alaska and even with their destructive socialist governments support 17,000,000 people. If there was some way of persuading Mr. Stenholm and Mr. Jim Wright to sell Alaska to the people of Alaska this great job producing potential could be implemented. Instead Mr. Jim Wright vote on August 19, 1980 to lock up the resources of Alaska thereby depriving 17,000,000 people of employment.

In addition to petroleum, Alaska has an abundance of coal, as much as Pennsylvania and West Virginia put together. If the Rampart dam could ever be built Alaska would have a wealth of electric power that would make of Alaska an independent industrial country that condescends to be a state. In addition Alaska has still an abundance of that great antidote to high interest rates, gold.

After much delay and wrangling the oil pipe line was built. Then it was decided to build a gas pipe line, even though ships could pull up to Valdez and condense the methane and ship it to the smaller states, the gas pipe line was to run through Canada a country that shows its friendship for the United States by letting Russian bombers take off from Montreal and over fly the east coast. The current White House better known as Bus Bunker has decided to spend $35,000,000 of your tax money to build this gas pipe-line at a time when the U.S. is running a deficit of one hundred billion dollars per year. These extra government bonds can then be bought by Mr. Rockefeller's Chase Manhattan Bank and monetized thanks to the Federal Reserve system, thereby giving the Rockefeller family an even greater financial and political monopoly.

Rumor has it that Mr. Bush, a member of Rockefeller's Trilateral Commission, gets up each morning and with his hat over his heart looks out the window to a service station and makes the following pledge of allegiance,

"I pledge allegiance to Exxon
And to the profits for which it stands,
One company, indivisible,
With monopoly and high prices for all."

Sincerely,
PAUL L. STUCK M.D.

Plugging the leaks

WASHINGTON — The White House will be a much more difficult source of national security leaks when Draconian new security measures are put into effect — the second major security clampdown since January.

Worried by persistent military, diplomatic and intelligence leaks that regularly follow National Security Council (NSC) meetings, President Reagan instructed his NSC assistant, William P. Clark, to plug the bottle. Departmental proposals to Clark on how to do it were due in his office late last week, mainly from the State, Defense and Justice Departments.

So extensive is the new machinery needed to police the anti-leak order that budget director David Stockman fears a new drain on the budget. That machinery includes more polygraph (lie detector) machines, new electronic devices — and much more manpower to conduct more probes and investigations into future leaks.

FENWICK'S FLIP
Rep. Millicent Fenwick may have hurt herself badly when she switched her long-held position on the hot issue of capital punishment, moving from "never" (except for killers of prison guards) to support for sweeping provisions of a stiff death-penalty bill now moving through the New Jersey Legislature.

Fenwick's opponent in the June 8 New Jersey Republican senatorial primary is conservative Jeff Bell, who has long supported the death penalty as an essential deterrent to murder and other violent crime. Bell upset the late Sen. Clifford Case in the 1978 Republican primary but has been pegged far behind Fenwick in polls up to early this month.
Bell has recently surged, however, and may have narrowed the gap to around 12 points — with a large bloc of Republicans still undecided.

BAD FOR CAP
Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger got a hard blow to his pride when President Reagan ordered the Pentagon to ditch Weinberger's plan to put the new MX missile in long-duration aircraft as the best way to protect the U.S. strategic nuclear deterrent.

After 16 months of searching for a home for the 10-warhead MX intercontinental-range missile, Weinberger was convinced that the long-duration aircraft — if one could be developed — remained the best way to give the missile an invulnerable basing system.

But Reagan, alarmed at congressional anger over Pentagon procrastination on the MX basing question, instructed national security assistant William P. Clark to cancel "big bird" altogether. The president's preferred system, which he wants Pentagon approval on in time to kill anti-MX sentiment rising in Congress, is the so-called "closely-packed" system: land basing of the missiles close together and deep in the earth.

GOP BUDGET WORRY
The latest attempt to penetrate the inner sanctum of Ronald Reagan's White House from the great outside came when mostly conservative first- and second-term Republican congressmen sent the president an urgent request for a meeting on the budget, with the emphasis on defense spending.

Rep. Jack Kemp, chairman of the House Republican Conference, was asked to make their bid in a telephone call to Reagan. On May 18 Kemp did so and was promised an early meeting. Since then, however, the White House staff has failed to set a date for the meeting.

That is about par for the course, as top Reagan aides, headed by chief of staff James Baker III, worry that outsiders, particularly conservatives, might upset their delicate budget manipulations. What disturbs the House Republicans are repeated retreats by White House advisers on the defense budget, all in the name of "compromise." The compromises are dangerously whittling down Reagan's promised military buildup.

SOVIET-ARGENTINE LINK
Top Pentagon Air Force and Navy officers are closely watching the South Atlantic Ocean around the Falklands to see how much help the Argentine military is getting from pictures taken by Soviet satellites and beamed first to Moscow, then to Buenos Aires.

Secretary of the Navy John Lehman says privately there is "absolutely no doubt" that coordinates showing the exact locations of British surface vessels are routinely being sent to Buenos Aires after Soviet specialists have analyzed them.

That means the Argentine air force and what is left of the Argentine navy has a fast leg up on naval maneuvers by her majesty's British ships. What the military brass wants to know is how easy — or how difficult — it is for the Argentines to capitalize on this information. Naval officers here believe the sinking of the British destroyer H.M.S. Sheffield would never have happened without Soviet satellite help.

Disability pensioners threatened

WASHINGTON — Determined to make good on Ronald Reagan's campaign promise to cut chiselers and undeserving malingers off federal benefit rolls, the Social Security Administration's bureaucrats have been treating disability pensioners with all the compassion of a Dickensian workhouse administrator.

New and tougher standards of disability have been set up, and those who don't qualify find themselves abruptly thrown off the benefit rolls and told to go to work. Many of them are in their 50s and 60s and haven't held a job in years because of their disabilities, yet they're expected to compete with younger, able-bodied workers in a time of widespread unemployment.

CONSIDER ONE shocking example that was uncovered by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio:

Russell Beard, 46, had been drawing disability benefits for eight years when he was notified last October that his status was being reviewed.

One month later, Beard was notified that he was no longer entitled to benefits. More than that, he was told that the bureaucrats had somehow decided he hadn't been properly qualified since August 1981. The ruling had been made retroactive by two months.

Beard's wife, Sue, called Social Security's Columbus, Ohio, office and offered to submit evidence from her husband's doctor. She told my associate Vicki Warren that Social Security officers said the agency doctors' finding that Beard was no longer disabled would not be changed by evidence to the contrary. The Beards appealed the decision, but on Jan. 13 they were notified that Beard, a former press operator whose heart condition prevented him from lifting more than 10 pounds, was able to do sedentary work that didn't require standing or walking more than four hours at a stretch.

Beard was in the hospital when the rejection of his appeal arrived. Five days later he was dead.

The insensitivity of SSA bureaucrats didn't end with Beard's death. Incredibly, they demanded that his widow repay the government for the two months' disability checks he had been sent between November and December. Only the action of a Social Security administrative law judge kept the agency from hounding Mrs. Beard further in her bereavement.

The robot-like reviews now being conducted of hundreds of thousands of disability pensioners are hardest, of course, on those who are judged to be no longer disabled under the new criteria. But even those who manage to survive the review process with their benefits intact have been robbed of their dignity, pushed around by officious bureaucrats and even subjected to physical hardship in some cases.

The General Accounting Office, asked to investigate disabled pensioners, found, for example, that in many states, the disabled were ordered to report at 9 a.m. on a given day for a physical exam to see if they were still disabled. They were told not to eat anything for several hours before their appointment.

Billy Graham

I feel worthless

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: My husband is always cutting me down. He does the same with the children. No matter what we do, it seems like it is always wrong in his eyes. I feel like I am so worthless. What can I do about this? — Mrs. S.T.

DEAR MRS. S.T.: What your husband is doing is wrong and I know this has a very harmful effect on you and your children. There may be several reasons why he acts this way, but they do not excuse what he is doing. Sometimes, for example, a person may act like this in order to feel superior — and that may mask a deep insecurity in his heart.

First of all, be sure you do not act toward your husband the way he acts toward you. It is easy in a situation like this to reply in kind — to cut him down when he cuts you down. But that does not solve the problem — it only makes it worse. The Bible tells us, "A soft answer turneth away wrath: but grievous words stir up anger" (Proverbs 15:1). It also says, "A wholesome tongue is a tree of life" (Proverbs 15:4). In fact, if you act lovingly and kindly to your husband even when he is abusive, I believe it will eventually have an effect on him and make him see what he is doing.

Then remember that God loves you, and you are not worthless in his sight. He loves you so much that he takes care of you every day. If you really begin to understand that God loves you and considers you important, it will make a real difference in your life.

Also, I am concerned about your children, because I know that this can make them feel unloved and scar them for the rest of their lives. You must do all you can to prevent it, and incidentally, one of the signs that God considers you important is that he has entrusted you with the responsibility to be mother to your children. If they do not get the encouragement they should from their father, then it at least means you should give them a double measure of love and encouragement to help make up for it.

Pray for your husband, and learn to express your love to him in the little ways that will make him know he counts in your eyes. Then seek to be faithful in the responsibilities God has given you, and learn more each day about his love for you.

Thoughts

Life does not consist mainly — or even largely — of facts and happenings. It consists mainly of the storm of thoughts that is forever blowing through one's head.

TDC head wants $85 million from Texas special session

'You are going to have to build more prisons'

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The director of the Texas Department of Corrections says he needs $630.5 million over the next three years to add prison space to hold 21,690 more inmates.

W. J. Estelle told legislators Monday that an $85 million appropriation from the special session now underway would be a big help in TDC's battle to stay in compliance with a federal judge's order against overcrowding.

Rep. Billy Hall, D-Laredo and chairman of the House Securities and Sanctions Committee, told Estelle on Monday that Gov. Bill Clements was expected to add prisons to the agenda, perhaps today.

Texas prisons now house almost 34,000 inmates, including 4,200 in tents. Prison officials, concerned about violating U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's order against overcrowding, closed the gates to new inmates on May 10.

The prisons have been reopened under a limited acceptance policy. The special appropriation would be a small part of $630.5 million long-range plan proposed by Estelle, who runs the nation's largest prison system. If approved, the plan could mean 8,960 new beds by September 1983. All 21,960 new beds could be ready by February 1985, according to Estelle.

The director said the $630.5 million request is based on current growth rate of 500 inmates per month. Previous budget requests, he said, were based on what might happen in other branches of law enforcement.

"We are throwing out all the previous assumptions we made in trying to make our projections," Estelle said. "We no longer are going to concern ourselves with what might happen with probation, what might happen with parole, what might happen with the court system and the law enforcement system."

"We have missed the mark too far, too many times. Obviously we missed grossly in our last projections," Estelle said.

The inmates in tents pose a constant threat to security, he said.

"Every day we go through right now without collective violence is cause for a grateful prayer of mine. In the last nine months — since you adjourned, we have three times gone to combat with inmates," he said.

The special session appropriation also would speed up construction at a Walker County prison site purchased last year.

Estelle told committee members that his plan includes the construction of 13 prison units, each holding 1,000 inmates. The new units would be built at existing prison sites.

The $85-million plan also includes hiring more guards and buying equipment for the new units, said Estelle.

"Even without the court order, the simple fact of Texas' growth alone predicts you are going to have to build more prisons," he said.

"We've got a very, very difficult crisis right now," said Estelle. "Delayed six months, it is six months worse and compounded. If you want to delay it six months, ask your local sheriff."

Rep. Joe Hernandez, D-San Antonio, expressed concern about the citizens' willingness to pay for ever-increasing prison space.

"I'm not willing to pay for that type of warehousing," he said after espousing the "Hernandez formula."

A HELPING HAND — An illegal alien helps a youngster cross into El Paso from Mexico while another boy waits his turn. Many Mexicans cross the river to work in the El Paso area and employment of illegal aliens often is considered an accepted part of doing business along the border.

Employment of aliens common along border

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Federal agents recently swept through businesses in several cities, arresting illegal aliens. But in El Paso, alien employment remains a part of doing business on the border.

"It's an integral part of the economy here," said El Paso Chamber of Commerce manager Mark T. Miles. "It always has been and it always will be. It's like talking about the weather. We know it's there, but there's not anything you can really do about it."

Immigration and Naturalization Service agents have arrested thousands of illegal aliens in cities like Dallas, Houston and Los Angeles in "Operation Jobs," a sweeping investigation aimed at halting employment of illegal aliens.

INS officials said the aliens were taking high-paying jobs in the interior of the United States, jobs that could be held by unemployed Americans.

But in El Paso and along most of the U.S.-Mexico border, arresting illegal aliens working in the United States is a never-ending attempt to halt something that has been accepted, tacitly, for decades.

While the raids were gathering headlines with their thousands of arrests, Border Patrol officers in the El Paso area routinely apprehended 794 working illegal aliens in April. Arrests for the first four months of the year totaled 3,539, according to Border Patrol intelligence agent Joe Aubin.

"Along the Mexican border, the enforcement effort on a continuing basis is stronger," said assistant chief agent Dale Cozart. "There is a constant pressure along the border because that's where the concentrations of border officers are."

But even with the stiffer enforcement, Cozart and Aubin admit there is no stopping the flow of aliens looking for jobs as long as there is work available.

"Every illegal alien that comes into the United States is coming for one reason — employment," Cozart said. "If you can remove the incentive for that person to enter, it's a real deterrent."

Legislation pending in Congress would allow sanctions against employers who hire illegal aliens, including a fine. Now, it isn't against the law to hire an illegal alien.

"People tell me that if it were a violation of the law to employ an illegal alien, then they wouldn't do it," Cozart said.

Tom F. Lee, a marketing analyst and pollster, says most major manufacturers in the El Paso area already are careful to make sure new employees are in the country legally.

"The bigger manufacturers know the INS is going to be looking at them," Lee said. "It's not worth the risk."

But as many as 10,000 illegal aliens still can find work in the area as yard workers, domestics, construction workers and laborers in smaller factories, Lee estimated.

Local businessmen say they don't think the illegal aliens are displacing American workers in El Paso, even though the city's unemployment rate has hovered around 9 percent since the first of the year.

Miles thinks unemployment figures are misleading and that there are jobs that simply are not being taken by Americans.

"If a person is motivated to get a job, he will get one," he said. "The people coming from Mexico are really motivated. If a person can come here from a foreign country with no knowledge of the language and get a job, then there are obviously jobs available."

The problem is that the jobs are not ones that most U.S. citizens would want — "rough work" like erecting fences, cleaning yards and stables, roofing and renovation work, he said.

Lee, who agrees with Miles' view, said most of the work is done on a cash basis and the illegal aliens often bounce from job to job in what he calls an "underground economy."

Cozart said most of the illegal aliens caught by the Border Patrol are in temporary jobs or have not been working at their current job very long.

"There are some who attempt to work here for just a few days to get some money to go into the interior where they can get better-paying jobs," he said.

Catching illegal aliens before they make it to the interior is important because it costs less to deport them from a point near the border, Cozart said.

An obstacle to catching them is that employing illegal aliens is institutionalized into the border society, Lee said.

"We're schizophrenic on this," he said. "On one level, we'll complain that this is a terrible thing to be taking jobs from U.S. citizens and giving them to illegal aliens. On the other hand, it's a status symbol to talk about your maid or your yardman."

Having a maid who is an illegal alien is an accepted practice in many parts of the city and probably represents the largest number of aliens who are employed in the city, said Aubin, the Border Patrol intelligence agent.

The problem with stopping that, he said, is that a search warrant would be required to go into someone's home and arrest the maid.

"To get a search warrant takes time and we're better off sending our men down to the river to catch the aliens as they come across," he said. "Sheer numbers dictate that we go where the masses are."

Australia's hot stuff

BUDERIM, Australia (AP) — The Australian ginger cooperative claims it is the world's largest single producer of the spice, despite the fact it didn't enter the world market until 1960.

Unlike the traditionally hot ginger produced in the Orient, the Australian version is considered mild. It is used in such products as ginger wine, ginger ice cream and ginger yogurt, along with the traditional ginger ale, ginger beer, gingerbread and other items.

SANDBAGGING THE TOWN — Rodney Munsell, left, and Earnest Onderdonk put out sandbags in front of a drug store in Falfurrias, Texas

Canadian artist still awaiting trial

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — Canadian artist Richard Rasmusel remains jailed without bond in this border city while his attorney battles to free him from a 12-year-old marijuana conviction that Rasmusel alleges was unjust.

Rasmusel, 33, fled to Canada in 1970 after being sentenced to five years in federal prison for conspiring to smuggle nine pounds of marijuana across the Rio Grande from Mexico.

Federal officials said Rasmusel could have lived in Ottawa the rest of his life if a ceramics truck had not broken down in Watertown, N.Y., last December.

Rasmusel decided to cross the Canadian border at Alexandria, N.Y. last Dec. 5 to aid an employee driving a ceramics truck. But a computer check revealed the 1970 Laredo conviction and Rasmusel has been held since Dec. 21 in the Webb County Jail here, despite contentions by him and Canadian television reporters that he was framed 12 years ago.

Defense attorney James Moriarty of Houston last Saturday won a new trial of the case from U.S. District Judge George Kazen, but Rasmusel faces additional court action to gain freedom.

Moriarty said he would ask Kazen to set a bond in the case so that Rasmusel can be free pending the scheduled July 5 trial. But the federal judge was not expected to act on the request until late this week, prosecutor David Almaraz said Monday.

U.S. Attorney Dan Hedges said the government may appeal Kazen's ruling which found that Rasmusel was afforded insufficient counsel 12 years ago.

"We're discussing it. We have to run all appeals in criminal cases through the Solicitor General's office in Washington, and it'll be some time before we heard something back from them, I suspect," Hedges said by telephone from Houston. "One never knows how fast you can move the great behemoth of the bureaucracy."

Hedges said if the government decides to appeal, he hopes to file the motion before a June 11 deadline Kazen set for pre-trial motions for the retrial of the case. Kazen also has scheduled a June 28 pre-trial hearing.

The retrial would be delayed until the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rules on the government's appeal, the government attorney said.

Rasmusel also is set for a June 1 trial on a bond-jumping charge, but Almaraz said that trial may be delayed "depending on what the defense lawyer and we work out."

Rasmusel was granted landed immigrant status in Canada in 1975. Reporters for "W-5", a CTV Network news program, said the government's two main witnesses lied in Rasmusel's trial because of pressure brought by government prosecutors.

Ottawa Mayor Marion Dewar and Canada's ambassador to the United States both have expressed interest in the case, Almaraz said.

Rasmusel alleges that he was wrongfully convicted in Laredo on the testimony of a former friend from Dallas, Felix H. Tucker Jr. Tucker was arrested as he attempted to cross the Texas-Mexico border with nine pounds of marijuana hidden in a truck.

Tucker initially told authorities he had acted alone, but later implicated Rasmusel and Milto Lasily, a member of a Eureka, Ark. commune. "W-5" reporters have quoted Tucker as saying "if I did not cooperate... my probation would be revoked."

Lasily and Rasmusel, were convicted of conspiracy and sentenced to five years in prison, while Tucker pleaded guilty to a tax violation and received probation.

Lasily served his sentence, but Rasmusel jumped bond and fled to Canada.

Texas man's death sentence reinstated

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — A state official says it could be six months to one year before condemned killer John Louis Evans III can be executed in the Alabama electric chair.

The U.S. Supreme Court restored Evans' death sentence Monday saying a lower court misread an earlier order dealing with Alabama's 1975 death penalty law. Evans, a native of Beaumont, Texas, has openly admitted to the 1977 murder of a Mobile, Ala. pawnshop owner.

After the ruling was issued, Alabama Attorney General Charles Graddick said Evans' execution could be scheduled "within six to 12 months."

Graddick said he was uncertain how the ruling would affect other death row cases that are being reconsidered because of the high court's 1975 ruling that found Alabama's death penalty law flawed.

The court said the death penalty law did not permit capital murder juries to find a defendant guilty of a lesser crime not punishable by death.

There was no immediate word from Evans' attorneys on the possibility of further appeals or when a new death date might be set.

Evans, 32, said he and cohort Wayne Ritter shot pawnshop owner Edward Nassar to death on Jan. 5, 1977 while roaming from state to state on a crime spree.

Evans and Ritter, who had served prison sentences together in Indiana, each asked their trial jury for the death penalty.

Within six hours of execution in 1979, Evans appealed his conviction and death sentence, saved only by a last minute stay that he had not sought.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans set aside Evans' death sentence and ordered a new trial.

But the U.S. Supreme Court Monday overturned the appeals judges, voting 9-0 to reinstate Evans' capital murder conviction. And the justices voted 7-2 to reinstate his death sentence, with capital punishment opponents William J. Brennan and Thurgood Marshall dissenting.

The action sets the stage for Alabama's first execution since 1965.

In 1980, the Supreme Court overturned the death sentences of more than 30 inmates in a ruling on a case known as Beck v. Alabama.

In a separate proceeding the 5th Circuit invalidated Evans conviction.

But Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, speaking for the Supreme Court in its opinion Monday, said, "The court of appeals misread our opinion in Beck."

The court said the jury need only be instructed of a possible lesser charge when "the evidence warrants such an instruction," Burger said. "The jury's discretion is thus channeled so that it may convict a defendant of any crime fairly supported by the evidence."

Burger said that in the Evans case, there is no question that the evidence points to first-degree murder and no lesser crime.

Farm Screwworm infestation in S. Texas

By PHILLIP SWANN
States News Service
WASHINGTON — The screwworm, a cattle killing pest whose previous infestations cost Texas ranchers thousands of dollars, has been rediscovered in the Rio Grande Valley of South Texas, the Agriculture Department has announced.
The USDA said the larvae were collected last week about 15 miles northwest of McCook in Starr County by a Texas Animal Health Commission inspector. It was the first detection of the screwworm in the United States in a year, and follows a sighting last month about 200 miles south in Tamaulipas, Mexico.
Screwworms, the larval stage of the screwworm fly, deposits its eggs on the edges of cuts and wounds in warm-blooded animals. As the eggs hatch, the tiny larvae enter the wound to feed on living flesh.

The United States and Mexico have been conducting a joint eradication program to eliminate the pest from Mexico and the Texas border. Millions of artificially reared sexually sterile screwworm flies were released last year in both countries to mate with native screwworm flies.
USDA officials believed the screwworm was under control at the time.
Following last week's discovery, however, USDA officials have started releasing more sterile screwworm flies, inspecting animals, and using an insecticide lure to trap the pest.

"It's extremely important for all livestock and pet owners to watch their animals carefully for signs of screwworm infestation," said John K. Atwell, deputy administrator of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.
Atwell said ranchers should submit worms found in a wound to the nearest USDA office for laboratory identification. Postage paid sample collection kits are available from county agents, animal health officials, veterinarians and feed stores.
South Texas was hit by a widespread screwworm infestation in the mid 1970s. Local officials estimated that ranchers lost thousands of dollars in livestock deaths.

It's time to apply casebearer insecticide

By DAVID FOSTER
County Extension Agent
Insecticide application for control of the pecan nut casebearer in Howard County should be made today through Saturday.
Control measures should be applied to control the small casebearer larva just after the larvae hatch from the eggs and before they begin to tunnel into the nutlets (two days after hatch).

There will be some difference in the time that casebearer hatch between pecan varieties within orchards and in home yards. To determine the best time to control casebearer, the nutlets should be inspected daily for eggs and the first casebearer damage nutlet.

When the first damaged nutlet is observed, control measures should be applied. A thorough job of inspection must be done or casebearer will cause considerable damage before the damage is detected.

Grandmother indicted
HOUSTON (AP) — Grand jurors have indicted an 82-year-old grandmother who says she grew marijuana in her backyard to treat her arthritis.
A Harris County grand jury Monday charged Laura Clark with possession of marijuana. Mrs. Clark, who is free on $1,000 bond, will be arraigned June 4 in state court.
"I'm sure there are a lot of (elderly people) with arthritis. I would think it was unusual if many of them used marijuana to treat it. Usually they go to doctors," said prosecutor Alan McAgahan.
Prosecutors offered to settle the case with a plea bargain. Mrs. Clark would have been given two-year probation sentence, prosecutors said.

Reagan not complimentary about big money tax shelters

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — When President Reagan denounced tax evaders in the cash-and-carry underground economy, he threw in a disparaging reference to big money operators using tax shelters.

He didn't say they were wrong, but he certainly wasn't complimentary. That was before the disclosure that Attorney General William French Smith had invested in oil and gas ventures that offer $176,400 in tax deductions over three years based on a cash investment of $58,800 and liability for potential losses beyond the investment. The administration hasn't said much about tax shelters since. Nor has anything been said in Congress, which has faced a controversy of its own over the tax breaks members get for their Washington living expenses. The Internal Revenue Service has been trying to clamp down on tax shelters like the ones in which Smith invested, but lawyers for the firms involved said they were confident the deductions would stand up if the IRS challenged them in court. Were that to happen, the Justice Department might wind up defending the IRS position in court.

Budget battle heats up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House waded into a budget free-for-all Monday, with President Reagan stepping up his lobbying for a Republican-drafted spending plan that House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. condemned for its "massive and devastating cuts" in Medicare. No fewer than seven alternative spending plans were lined up side-by-side on the House floor, including one that offered a balanced budget immediately and three more that promised an end to the red ink by 1985. But Reagan and O'Neill, D-Mass., backed big-deficit proposals drafted by the leadership of their respective parties — $101.6 billion in red ink for the 1983 fiscal year in the case of Republicans and $103.8 billion for the Democratic plan.

No final vote was expected before Wednesday or Thursday. At the White House, spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan would continue his telephone-lobbying campaign in favor of the "bipartisan recovery budget" drafted by the House GOP leadership and endorsed by some conservative Democrats.

It calls for $95 billion in tax increases over three years and cuts of $76 billion in domestic and benefit programs, as well as a reduction of $28 billion in the administration's defense buildup. The deficit falls to about $77 billion in 1984 and $49 billion in 1985.

"Several people he talked to indicated they would support" the budget plan the president prefers," Speakes said. He refused to divulge any names.

He predicted that the vote in the House would be "close, very close." He added, "There are a lot undecided." O'Neill agreed with the White House on that score, but stepped up his attack on the proposed $23.3 billion reduction in Medicare over three years in the GOP budget.

"This massive and devastating cut will increase the out-of-pocket medical costs of 29 million Americans," said O'Neill, one of Reagan's harshest critics in Congress.

"It is now obvious that his (Reagan's) promises on Medicare are no more reliable than his promises not to cut Social Security."

In fact, neither the Republican or Democratic plan envisions cuts in Social Security.

The plan O'Neill is endorsing calls for $147 billion in higher taxes over three years; a reduction of more than $47 billion in the defense buildup and $38.5 billion in cuts in domestic and benefit programs.

The deficits decline to nearly $73 billion in 1984 and $34.7 billion in 1985.

Yet a third proposal given a chance of passage was drafted by a bipartisan coalition of moderates.

It calls for nearly $135 billion in tax increases over three years; a defense cutback of $45.7 billion and reductions in domestic and benefit programs of $48 billion. The deficits are estimated at $95.1 billion in 1983, declining to $72.2 billion in 1984 and $37.5 billion in 1985.

It's 20th anniversary of the first limb reattachment

SOMERVILLE, Mass. (AP) — Everett Knowles' right arm is a living piece of medical history.

Twenty years ago Sunday, doctors reattached the arm after it was severed just above the shoulder in a train accident. It was the first successful replantation of a human limb.

Although the arm never regained its full dexterity, it is agile and strong.

"My arm never really has stopped me from doing anything I ever wanted to do," Knowles says. "I believe a person can do almost anything if he sets his mind to it."

Knowles was a 12-year-old Little Leaguer on May 23, 1962, when he lost his arm in the accident in this Boston suburb, where he still lives.

Ninety minutes after the accident, a surgical team led by Dr. Ronald A. Malt at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston began the slow process of reattaching the limb.

"Sometimes I think that there is a lucky star shining over me," said Knowles, now 32. "If it had not been for Dr. Malt and his having the guts and the know-how, I'd be in a lot of trouble today... I wouldn't be able to do the things that I love."

Knowles is currently unemployed, but he once worked as a meat truck driver and thought nothing of lifting 200-pound sides of beef. He restores old racing cars, plays basketball and bowls.

Since that day 20 years ago, doctors around the world have reattached thousands of severed limbs and fingers. According to the hospital, doctors are successful in 93 percent of their attempts to reattach fingers and the success rate in rejoining arms is between 65 percent and 85 percent, depending on where the limbs were severed.

Malt says he was not thinking about medical history when he undertook the operation.

"All I was interested in was trying to help the boy and not harm him by anything we were doing," he said.

Dr. Donohue

Virus hides in cells

Dear Dr. Donohue: My husband and I were visiting our son who lives near Chicago. Just before we started back home my husband got sick and I had to drive our van about 500 miles. I hate driving, but managed. The next day I noticed small red bumps on the back of my hips and thighs. I felt well, but the next day there was a whole crop of bumps that hurt terribly. My sister-in-law, who is a nurse, says they looked like shingles. I couldn't believe that. I'm only 50. Isn't shingles an old-age illness? I couldn't have gotten them from my husband. He was not sick with shingles. I still have the pains in the area. — Mrs. D.N.

First of all, I cannot tell you whether what you had was the shingles or not. What I'd really like to do is to settle a few issues you raise with regard to herpes zoster (the medical name for shingles).

First, you are not too young for shingles. You can get them at any age. True, they are more common after 50. And they are even more common after 80. But you can break out in the shingles rash at just about any time in life.

Second, you don't have to be exposed to someone with the shingles to get it. You and most of us have carried the virus that causes shingles most of our lives. If you had chickenpox as a child you carry the potential for shingles thereafter. In fact, the very same virus that caused the chickenpox causes the shingles. Like any other virus, this one is only a tiny speck of DNA or RNA. It lives in the core of our cells, where it hides after having caused the chicken pox. It is so tiny that it can live there and not be noticed.

What makes the virus come out of its shell, travel down the nerve to the skin and multiply there is not understood. Something has held it in check all those years. Something occurs to disturb this protective "whatever-it-is." Perhaps the stress of a drive might be enough.

When it happens, the whole episode is usually over in a week or two. Some people are left with severe pain that can linger for long periods. If you are still having problems, you should be seen by a doctor to determine if something besides shingles is present. I am sending you the booklet "The Facts About Shingles," which discusses the subject in greater detail. Other readers can order by writing me in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a stamped, self-address envelope and 50 cents for printing and handling.

(And speaking of shingles): Dear Dr. Donohue: My first shingles blisters appeared in 1975 at age 29. I am now 35. As I sit here writing I have blisters on my left forehead and two on the right side of my forehead. I have given up trying to get help. Are there any answers for this exasperating virus? — K.W.

I hope you read my earlier discussion of shingles (above). Your description does not fit the shingles picture. The rash is almost always on one side of the body. Second, it is possible to get shingles at 29, but it certainly is not the most common time for it. Third, the symptoms do not last as long as you indicate, not for seven years, anyway. I have never heard of that.

Dear Abby

Will asserts the right to die

DEAR ABBY: Last year you had something in your column about the Living Will. I'm sorry to say I didn't pay much attention to it then, but I am interested in it now. Exactly what is it? And how can I get one?

I am Jewish. Is it against my religion? Is it "euthanasia" or mercy killing?

DAVID G. IN BOSTON
DEAR DAVID: The Living Will is a document stating that should you fall victim to a terminal illness from which there is no hope for your recovery, you instruct your physician not to prolong your life by artificial means, such as machines, tubes, pumps and so forth.

Copies of this document may be given to your physician, clergyman, lawyer and to as many family members and/or friends as you desire. To sign such a document, you must be 18 years or older and of sound mind. (If at any time you wish to revoke the document, you are free to do so.) The Jewish view of the Living Will is as follows: It is not "euthanasia" — or mercy killing! There is a clear distinction between actively killing a person and "allowing him to die."

According to Jewish Law, when a person suffers irreversible brain damage and can no longer recite a "bracha" — a blessing to praise God — or perform a "mitzvah" — an act to help his fellow man — he is considered a "vegetable" and there is nothing to "save." It is thus an act of compassion to spare the family the suffering, anguish and expense of artificially prolonging the breathing and heartbeat when death is inevitable.

The Living Will does not give anyone permission to end the life of another in a "mercy-killing" manner. It is simply a document that one signs, stating that he (or she) does not want to have his (or her) life prolonged artificially after his physician decides that there is no hope for recovery.

I have signed such a document. You may get one by writing to the Society for the Right to Die, 250 W. 57th St., New York, N.Y. 10019. The document is free, but please send a few dollars (it's tax-deductible) for the cost of printing and mailing the document to you. I sent $10 for five documents and have given one to my physician, clergyman, lawyer and two members of my family.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

The library would also like to set up a calendar of events for a year at a time.

They need the dates for any kind of event, including school, church, and civic events. If the event effects only a small group of people, the date should still be turned in. By gathering the needed information the library can make the calendar as comprehensive as possible.

Garvey: 'Share the wealth'

NFL players want part of the action

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

The owners call it "ridiculous," others have labeled it "socialistic," some of the top echelon players demur on the grounds it is "too radical," but glib Ed Garvey pushes forward on his "share the wealth" drive for players in the National Football League.

Increased salaries are not enough. What Garvey and what he says is 95 per cent of the players want is part of the action. They want to take over the store. They are demanding that 55 per cent of the gross revenues of the 28 clubs be allocated for salaries.

This is strong stuff, a revolutionary concept which, if successful, could change the whole face of bigtime professional sports.

Athletes would fall into the category of movie matinee idols and rock music stars, grabbing the major portion of the receipts and leaving the promoters — in the case of football and baseball, the club owners — to pay the incidentals and grub for a small profit.

"Why a percentage of the gross?"

Garvey, the executive director of the National Football League Players Association asks in a slick 64-page brochure, detailing the players' demands. "Because we are the game."

If he is able to hold firm on that idea in current negotiations with management, you can be sure of a long, bitter strike about the time the 1982 training camps open in July.

It could be more bitter than the major league baseball strike last summer.

"A fixed percentage of the revenues for the players isn't the main issue of our talks," insists Jack Dolan, executive director of the NFL Management Council, which bargains for the 28 club owners.

"The real issue is who controls the game — the players or the owners. The owners are unitedly and unalterably opposed to Garvey's concept. We refuse even to discuss it. At first, we couldn't believe they were serious. Now it appears they are."

They are, indeed.

Garvey insists the percentage-of-the-profit demands are non-negotiable and warns that if the owners stick to their unbending attitude, "there is a 100 per cent chance of a strike — or, more likely a lockout. That's what we are hearing these days."

Pro football players, as a whole, have trailed their counterparts in other major sports at the pay window, although the NFL reports that the average salary in 1981 was $90,102, almost double that of five years ago.

The average in baseball, where multi-million-dollar contracts abound, is $193,000. In pro basketball, it's $214,000, hockey lower but still more than in football.

Garvey argues that the pro athlete in today's highly commercialized market is not dissimilar from actors Robert Redford and Paul Newman, pop singer Barry Manilow and boxer Sugar Ray Leonard, who take as much as 75 to 90 per cent of the gross for their performances.

BARGAINING TO SHARE THE WEALTH — Ed Garvey, president of the National Football League Players Association, shown in file photo, says that 95 percent of the players want 55 percent of the gross revenues from the ball clubs to be allocated for salaries.

Houston zeroed

HOUSTON (AP) — The Montreal Expos can see a little of themselves in the Houston Astros.

"In our last homestand we were the ones doing things like popping into double plays," Montreal Manager Jim Fanning said Monday night after the Expos shut out the Astros 2-0 for the second straight night.

Fanning was delighted to sit back and watch the other team making the mistakes. The Expos, after a dismal 4-10 homestand, have now won four straight.

"It was good for us to get out on the road," Expos catcher Gary Carter said. "This is our longest winning streak of the season. Now other teams are making the mistakes we were making at home."

The Astros final mistakes came in the ninth inning when Expos reliever Woodie Fryman caught a popped up bunt attempt and turned it into a double play and then got Terry Puhl to fly to center field for the final out.

Houston had started the inning against Expos starter Bill Gullickson, who walked leadoff batter Alan Ashby before retiring Fryman allowed a single by pinchhitter Dickie Thon before Scott Loucks popped up a bunt to Fryman, who fired to second to double up pinchrunner Joe Pittman.

The Expos got both of their runs in the sixth inning off loser Bob Knepper, 2-5, on a single by Al Oliver and an error by first baseman Denny Walling.

Terry Francone doubled with two out and scored the first run when Andre Dawson hit a dribbler to Walling, who threw wildly to first base for an error. Dawson scored the second run on Oliver's line single to center field.

Gullickson, 3-3, yielded seven hits, including two in the third inning when he loaded the bases.

The game was as frustrating for Astros loser Bob Knepper, 2-5, as it was rewarding for Gullickson.

Knepper denied any personal frustration. "The only frustration is just losing which is somewhat offset because I felt good pitching and I did the best I could," Knepper said. "We're definitely not taking advantage of our chances in these games or in the standings."

Phillies 9, Reds 1

Tom Seaver, for years one of the best pitchers in baseball, is baffled. Things have never gone so wrong for so long.

"I've been pitching poorly for almost two months," Seaver said Monday night after being bombed by the Philadelphia Phillies.

National League

"I don't think I've ever pitched this badly for this long of a time."

Seaver gave up seven runs on nine hits in five innings, absorbing his sixth loss in seven decisions as the Phillies beat the Cincinnati Reds 9-1. The victory was Philadelphia's third in a row, while the Reds lost for the sixth straight time.

Bo Diaz drove in three runs and homered to back Steve Carlton in his first victory over Cincinnati since May 19, 1980.

Padres 8, Cubs 2

Tim Lollar won his fifth game without a loss, working seven innings and getting offensive support from Ruppert Jones, who extended his hitting streak to 13 games with a 3-for-3 performance.

Jones drove in three runs, and San Diego took advantage of some sloppy Chicago fielding and wildness by Cubs pitchers Dickie Noles and Dick Tidrow to score five runs in the third inning. The Padres had just three hits in the inning, but Chicago committed two errors and yielded three walks.

Mets 5, Braves 3

Ellis Valentine drove in his first two runs of the season with a two-run homer, and New York extended its winning streak to three games behind the pitching of Pat Zachry and Neil Allen.

Cardinals 6, Giants 0

Joaquin Andujar pitched a six-hit shutout, his second of the season, to lead St. Louis over San Francisco. Willie McGee led the St. Louis attack with a three-run triple in a five-run fourth inning.

Andujar did not allow an extra-base hit while striking out five and walking none. The shutout was the fifth pitched against the Giants this season.

Pirates 9, Dodgers 3

Pittsburgh snapped a 2-2 tie with six runs after two were out in the seventh inning, and the Pirates won their second straight after losing three in a row.

Lee Lacy got the rally started with a two-run double, and Tony Pena also drove in two runs in the inning.

Hoyt throws win No. 9

Being the winningest pitcher in the major leagues with the league's best earned run average doesn't keep a pitcher immune to criticism. Just ask Chicago's LaMarr Hoyt.

The rap against Hoyt is that his teammates have been overly generous in run production. In his last five starts before Monday night the White Sox had scored 52 runs.

That changed Monday night when Chicago eked out a 3-1 victory over the Kansas City Royals. The 27-year-old right-hander scattered eight hits and struck out eight to register his ninth straight victory of the season.

Hoyt said he felt he needed to win a tight game to prove something to his detractors. "To a point, yes," said Hoyt, who boasts a 1.45 ERA. "(Paul) Splittorff threw well and I thought it was going to be a 1-0 game."

good idea of what he's doing." Hoyt's shutout bid ended with two outs in the ninth when Hal McRae and Cesar Geronimo hit back-to-back doubles.

Kansas City Manager Dick Howser didn't have to be impressed by the White Sox pitcher who now has a 27-6 career record, including a 16-0 slate in Comiskey Park.

"I really like the way he goes after the hitters," he said. "He attacks the hitters. You have to give him credit. He really has a

American League

Indians 9, Twins 2

Cleveland pitcher Len Barker allowed only four hits and took advantage of the Indians' 11-hit attack that included a three-run homer in the first inning by Andre Thornton.

Barker, 5-2, struck out six and gave up two walks in recording the fifth complete game by a Cleveland pitcher this season.

The Indians drove Minnesota starter Pete Redfern, 2-6, off the mound in the second with three more runs, one those being Rick Manning's second homer of the year.

Orioles 7, Blue Jays 5

Gary Roenicke stroked three hits and drove in two runs to lead the Orioles over Toronto.

Roenicke's first hit, a home run in the first inning, gave Baltimore a 1-0 lead. It was his 10th homer of the season.

Meetings to awaken Texas?

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A new conference scheduled today by Texas Rangers officials followed lengthy meetings called by owner Eddie Chiles with team management, coaches and players Monday in the wake of heavy losses.

Rangers executive vice president Eddie Robinson announced the press conference for 1:30 p.m. CST at Arlington Stadium. More team meetings were also planned, he said.

"The team has lost 21 of its last 25 games, with the latest defeat on Sunday."

"The meetings were fruitful, and I am not at liberty to say what went on at them," Robinson said in a telephone interview Monday night from his Fort Worth home. "There will be (more) meetings tomorrow."

Asked whether personnel changes were decided at the meetings, Robinson said, "I really can't say what went on."

Manager Don Zimmer had speculated that he or Robinson might be fired as a result of the team's poor performance.

"I'm going to three meetings, but I couldn't begin to tell you what they're about," Zimmer said before Monday's meetings. "But we know something has to be done."

Zimmer said he thought about the possibility of being fired.

What's ahead for Rangers?

"But who hasn't thought about it?" he said.

Chiles had imposed a strict news blackout around meetings with Zimmer, his staff and players. The owner alerted Arlington Stadium security to keep the media away from the Ranger offices. The first talks were with Zimmer and Robinson.

That talk preceded separate conferences with the Rangers coaching staff and team Monday afternoon.

"I've put a news blackout on the whole situation," Chiles said earlier from his home in Fort Worth. "I don't want any reporters or media anywhere around the meetings."

The first meeting was at Robinson's office and the others followed at Zimmer's office and the players' lounge adjacent to the club house.

The Rangers suffered a painful 5-3 loss to the Kansas City Royals. Chiles had earlier expressed his displeasure at the team's losses.

But Chiles described the meeting as a "work session."

"I'm not firing anybody," he said. "I've said some things I wish I hadn't said. The more I've thought about it, the more I've analyzed it this weekend, the more I realize we have a lot to do to get things straightened out."

Zimmer said some type of a trade might result from the meetings.

"I'm not mad at anybody," Chiles said, adding that the news blackout is not "to spite anybody. I just feel like I've got a job to do and I don't need any help."

Save energy with high-efficiency a/c and get a bonus from Texas Electric

The amount shown is for a 3-ton central electric air conditioner with an SEER of 8.5.

If you replace your central electric air conditioner with one that's more efficient, Texas Electric will pay you a bonus of $80 per ton.

Not only that, you'll save on your electric bill as well. For example, a high-efficiency 3-ton unit will save you about $160 a year.

This equipment costs more initially, but the bonus from Texas Electric plus the savings on your electric bill will make up the difference in just a few years.

If enough people buy high-efficiency equipment, summer peak load growth will be slowed — and so will the need to build new generating plants. In the long run, this will help hold down everyone's electric bill.

Before you replace your old air conditioner, ask your dealer about central air conditioners, heat pumps, and window units that qualify for this program.

'Spider Dan' cleared for New Orleans climb

CHICAGO (AP) — Human Fly Dan Goodwin, who was once arrested after scaling one of the world's tallest buildings, is planning another big climb — but this time he's got permission from a judge.

On Monday, Cook County Circuit Judge Harold A. Siegan said Goodwin, 26, would be allowed to scale a 27-story building in New Orleans on June 2.

Last year, Siegan placed Goodwin on probation after the climber was cited for contempt of court when he scaled the 100-story John Hancock Center here Nov. 11 in violation of a temporary restraining order.

The restraining order, which was issued after Goodwin's unsuccessful first attempt to ascend the Hancock Center on Nov. 1, barred him from any more building-climbing in Chicago.

Last week, a hearing on the proposed New Orleans climb focused on Goodwin's failure to appear in court in Dallas, Texas, on a trespassing charge for his climb of a 70-story building there.

Siegan said at the time he would have to consider whether Goodwin's failure to appear on the Texas charge was a violation of his Cook County probation.

At Monday's hearing, Goodwin's attorney, Stephen W. Zucker, said his client has agreed to appear in court in Dallas on June 7.

"ROCKY" STAR, STATUE, RETURN — Sylvester Stallone, star of a series of "Rocky" movies, signs autographs after unveiling an 8-foot-6-inch bronze statues of himself at the steps of the Philadelphia Art Museum Monday evening.

Stallone unveils 'Rocky' statue

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — After a long struggle, Rocky Balboa, alias Sylvester Stallone, returned in triumph for the unveiling of an 8½-foot bronze likeness of himself at the top of the Art Museum steps, with all the city seemingly at his feet.

It looked just like a scene from the film "Rocky III," which premiered here Monday night, but the dedication ceremony Monday was part of the real-life story of Stallone, star of three "Rocky" movies, and something of a hero in his hometown of Philadelphia.

In the movie, Balboa is honored on the Art Museum steps for bringing the world heavyweight crown to the City of Brotherly Love.

boxer, whose arms are raised in victory.

"Each one has a sense of striving, of getting ahead, of winning," he said at the ceremony, which was part of the celebration of Philadelphia's 300th year.

Arthur Gorman, a 33-year-old taxi driver who helped lead the fight to get the statue back, said he was thrilled by the outcome.

"The people now have a statue that reflects their views of how important it is to be inspired to succeed," Gorman said. "And it ain't a bad piece of art, either."

Book brings FDR to life

"A Centenary Remembrance" by Joseph Alsop, Viking Press, $25.

1982 marks both the 100th birthday of Franklin Delano Roosevelt and the 50th year since his election to the presidency in 1932. Though he has become a remote and almost-legendary figure, few people today deny that he was one of the great U.S. presidents in the classic American mold. Like George Washington, twice he was needed and twice he met the challenge — to deal with the Depression and then the Second World War until he died on the eve of victory.

Nye, a Republican from North Dakota) an unappetizing man who later became Hitler's strongest defender in the Senate — the Atlantic Charter — Japan — the Yalta Conference.

The many photographs outdistance the prose, showing an aged, ailing president, appearing increasingly shockingly frail — until, at the last, the great heart succumbs to the pressures and a cerebral hemorrhage kills him April 12, 1942. At his death, a nation wept and so did half the world; but in life he was passionately hated by Americans of his own kind.

At any rate, the living Roosevelt emerges. And to sharpen his image, 200 photographs have been added, many of them previously unpublished. We see the mother-dominated child and man — the unhappy Groton and Harvard student — his marriage to Eleanor and their unusual but workable relationship — the brilliant politician — the man undaunted by the crippling disease of polio — the prophet of the New Deal — the wartime leader nonpareil — and finally, the worn-out man who dies at Warm Springs, Ga., in the arms of the woman he has loved for a quarter of a century.

If we are among those who knew Roosevelt, we can go back in time with "A Centenary Remembrance." Franklin Roosevelt's life, deeds, and utterances are a part of the American fabric of life, and many phrases of his will throb on for generations.

But if we are not old enough to remember Franklin Delano Roosevelt, his biographer and kinsman, Joseph Alsop, has the magic to take us to the dramatic first Roosevelt Inaugural Day in 1933 where we hear him say: "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself."

When Roosevelt died, he had been in the public spotlight for 35 years and in the White House for 12 years. Yet his central achievements remain incompletely understood, and Roosevelt the man also remains more than a little mysterious.

"Centenary" came from the pen of Joseph Alsop, one of the most eloquent and celebrated journalists and columnists of our time. Alsop has another qualification for doing this book — he is from an outlying branch of the extensive Roosevelt tribe. His grandmother was a cousin of Franklin Delano.

In readable, conversational style, Alsop chronicles Roosevelt's great friendship with Winston Churchill — the controversial Lend-Lease bill — the packing of the Supreme Court — the Nye hearings (named for Sen. Gerald P.

Copenhagen shedding image as Europe's porno capital

By OLE DUUS
Associated Press Writer

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Copenhagen is slowly shedding its image as the porno capital of Europe. Sex and pornography have been done in by the Tivoli Gardens and the statue of Hans Christian Andersen's "Little Mermaid," a new survey of prominent foreigners says.

"Just a few years ago porno loomed near the top in a similar poll," said Professor Ejler Alkjaer of the Copenhagen School of Economics. "But now it seems that the risk that our city's reputation might be permanently spoiled by the 1969 liberation of pornography has receded."

Alkjaer, who conducted the study over several years, said that on a list of attractions that prominent foreigners spontaneously associate with the city, pornography and sex now rank 15th. Tivoli Gardens, the venerable amusement park, and the mermaid statue took the top two spots.

Alkjaer gathered his data for "The Global Image of Copenhagen" from a poll of more than 2,000 "key personalities" around the world.

He mailed questionnaires to people in more than 100 countries. They were selected from the International Who's Who and similar handbooks covering such specific categories as business executives and university professors.

The analysis presents a VIP's image of Copenhagen, but, according to Alkjaer, this concentration of upper income and higher education visitors adds more credibility to the survey.

"These are much-traveled and observant people capable of relaying their impressions. As opinion leaders they are crucial in creating the very image of a city," said Alkjaer, who promised his respondents anonymity.

The study was published at a time when many residents criticized the city's glass-and-concrete urban renewal, the dwindling of the population of the city proper (down by 100,000 over 10 years to 500,000) and increasing noise and air pollution.

No one, he said, is less suited to evaluate the image of a city than those who live in it.

Copenhagen's international reputation is far better than its own citizens tend to believe — and those citizens remain one of the capital's chief assets, the professor said.

"From across the world there are kudos for the people of Copenhagen, not least the girls, for being easy to communicate with, humorous, helpful, good at foreign languages and not given to cold-shouldering any particular race or nationality," Alkjaer said.

The survey said that what first comes to mind among foreigners when they think of Copenhagen are the Tivoli amusement gardens, the Little Mermaid statue and the population — in that order.

"If Copenhagen lost any of its friendliness, things appear to be even worse in the other cities of the world," Alkjaer said.

He also noted that once a city gets a bad name, as Copenhagen did after the 1969 lifting of pornography restrictions, it takes a long time to erase the image.

"The image of a city does change, but most frequently not in step with actual developments," he added.

The change can be seen today on the mile-long walking street, "Stroegat," which 10 years ago boasted a dozen sex shops. Now it is down to one.

Grab those coattails, Barry Jr.

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — There's nothing wrong with Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr. profiting from his father's political prominence, says — who else? — the candidate's father.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., on Saturday defended his son, a California congressman who is seeking the GOP Senate nomination.

"I just want to point out to you that (parental) coattails are nothing new," said the senior Goldwater, citing California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., former California Democratic Senator John V. Tunney, and

"the Kennedy boys."

He said he is proud of his son's record. "I think he has demonstrated as well as anybody with similar names has demonstrated in my political life that he can stand on his own two feet and fight his own battles," he said.

The elder Goldwater said it doesn't bother him that critics have implied his son can't hold his own in debating skills or in political smarts. And it doesn't upset him that his son's literature fails to distinguish which Goldwater is on the June 8 ballot, he said.

A return to Egypt for Sam Brown

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — A 15-year-old boy who attended the funeral of President Anwar Sadat in Egypt may return there, this time with a businessman who paid him $1,000 for an autographed photo of the slain leader.

Sam Brown, Liberty, S.C., sold the picture last week to Ernest Reedy, who owns a plumbing business in Columbus, Ohio. Reedy said in a telephone interview Saturday he had written to Sadat's successor, Hosni Mubarak, requesting a meeting to discuss the Middle East. He said a response might take up to two months.

"I also want to see the tomb of Sadat," Reedy said. Sam Brown's father, Dan Brown, said Reedy called him Saturday to ask if Sam could come along. "I said yes."

Sam Brown was invited to Egypt in 1979 when he wrote Sadat an admiring letter. While he never met Sadat, he attended his funeral last year as a member of the official American delegation.

The secret plans of Walter Mondale

CANTON, N.Y. (AP) — When former Vice President Walter Mondale spoke to graduates of St. Lawrence University, he crossed two items out of his speech — both references to a bid for the presidency.

Mondale's daughter, Eleanor, was among the 600 graduates of the college Sunday.

The Minnesota Democrat congratulated W. Lawrence Gulick on his first commencement as president of St. Lawrence University, but failed to read a section from his prepared speech that added, "Although you are a known Republican, I trust I can count on you to return the compliment in a few years."

Further down in the text Mondale omitted a reference to his daughter: "If Eleanor is looking for a job in two years, I just may have something of a proven winner who can manage a fall campaign."

Mondale is widely regarded as a likely candidate for president in 1984.

Reagan to visit California

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is beginning his six-day California trip by visiting the assembly plant of the space shuttle's chief contractor where company officials say employment has been steady.

The president is making a quick stop at the Rockwell International plant in Downey, Calif., later today. He will address a Republican Party fund-raising dinner, expected by White House aides to gross about $1 million, in Los Angeles in the evening.

The Rockwell plant provides an ideal setting for the president to discuss growth in the aerospace industry and national defense issues, the two topics he is likely to highlight, according to deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes.

Before leaving Washington, Reagan planned to meet with Republican congressional leadership at the White House.

And Speakes said the president also planned to spend time aboard Air Force One on his flight West telephoning Democrats and "wavering Republicans" to encourage them to support the Republican-sponsored budget resolution in the House during key votes on Wednesday.

Dick Barton, the manager of media relations at the Rockwell plant in Downey, said the facility has been through the periods of boom and bust in the aerospace industry.

Between 14,000 to 15,000 workers have found steady jobs at the plant for the last five years, he said.
