

Midland 1st National reopens after failure

MIDLAND (AP) — A reincarnated First National Bank of Midland opened its doors today with a new name, three days after it became the United States' second largest bank in terms of assets to fail.

"We definitely are open. We have quite a few people in the lobby," said executive secretary Audrey Whitley.

First National, the state's largest independent bank, was declared insolvent Friday and ordered closed.

Officers of the new bank will have 30 days to decide which, if any, of the outstanding commercial loans they will accept.

Depositors won't lose any money in the takeover by the Dallas-based RepublicBank Corp., but it could result in one of the worst losses ever for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., FDIC spokesman Alan Whitney said.

"It could be a very large loss," Whitney told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. Payments on two-thirds of the bank's portfolio had stopped or were late when the FDIC took on its entire $1.2 billion commercial loan portfolio.

The FDIC is starting $764 million in the hole because it has assumed two loans used to provide operating money for the bank during its dying days. The loans include $664 million from the Federal Reserve Bank in Dallas and an unsecured $100 million emergency loan made by the FDIC.

The FDIC also will advance RepublicBank $302 million in cash.

After acting U.S. Comptroller of the Currency H. Joe Shelby declared the 93-year-old institution insolvent, the FDIC sold the bank for $61.1 million to RepublicBank, the nation's 21st largest bank holding company.

The new RepublicBank First National Midland, with $637 million in assets, will be the third largest in the holding company's group, said Chairman James D. Berry.

Berry told a Midland audience the new bank will "have more muscle and expertise and more windows open for capital."

He said he believed the depressed energy business had bottomed out and expressed confidence his corporation could turn First National into a "billion-dollar bank."

Thomas Wageman, who will retain his post as president of the bank, said he was pleased with RepublicBank's buyout of what was Texas' largest independent bank.

"A bank needs a lot of things to be successful. You can't be successful without a strong capital base. You See BANK, Page 2A

Polluted Pecos

ABUSED RIVER — The historic Pecos River, which courses 750 miles through the Southwest, runs dry and becomes saturated with pollution around Iraan, Texas. The river is the subject of disagreement between Texas and New Mexico.

By RANDALL HACKLEY
Associated Press Writer

Historic Pecos runs dry from overuse, pollution

IRAAN, Texas (AP) — The historic Pecos River that courses over 750 miles of the Southwest once was a feared settlers' crossing point, but the ravaged river today is a sad shadow of its former self.

The construction of federal reclamation projects and the drilling of irrigation wells by farmers in Eastern New Mexico and West Texas, plus a two-year drought in the region, have caused parts of the once-mighty Pecos to dry up year-round.

The Pecos now is so abused it almost is "a dead river," and only has about 1 percent of the water it carried a half-century ago, one mayor said.

Environmentalists also suspect portions of the Pecos could be one of the most heavily tainted areas in the nation because of toxic pesticide residues such as DDT that have been found in waterfowl and river plants near Carlsbad, N.M.

The Pecos had always been a lively but salty river with as much history and folklore surrounding it as the Mississippi.

In the 1500s, Spanish explorers trekked northward from Mexico City in search of gold. They followed the river nearly to its headwaters at Pecos, N.M. — about 40 miles from the river's origins in the Truchas Peaks in the northern part of the state.

A journal keeper in the expedition described the Pecos as so saline in parts that animals would stand in it to cool off, but wouldn't drink from it.

During the mid-to-late 1800s, "West of the Pecos" described the desolate area west to the Pacific. Several parts of the Pecos had tricky fording sites where livestock and families in wagon trains sometimes were swept to their death.

In 1865, 221 steer drowned after reaching the river during a long trail drive. Said historian Clayton Williams, "the Pecos was a dangerous stream, made so by quicksand, and when the famished steer came in sight of the water, the men lost control over them."

Indians occasionally attacked wagon trains on the trails that crossed the Pecos, and floods in 1900 and 1930 swept away the Texas town of Porterville and forced Pecos, Texas, to move two miles from the often unpredictable river.

Today, perhaps nowhere along the Pecos that once drained most of Eastern New Mexico and West Texas is the river in as dismal shape as it is around Iraan — named for Ira and Ann Yates, who discovered huge deposits of oil beneath their ranch that led to the great West Texas oil boom.

The Pecos is so fouled from oil seepage and natural salt contamination, and so shrunken by upstream irrigation, that when it reaches this town of 1,400, "it's really not much of a river," Iraan Mayor Rick Rylander said. "It trickles from little pool to little pool."

At Iraan, the river smells of dead fish and fecal matter. Dragonflies and discarded soft drink cans that bob in the ankle-deep water are the only moving objects.

Oil from large petroleum fields ringing the area occasionally bubble up, splashing the river with goopy residue. An oil pipeline also crosses the shallow river, which is barely 10 feet wide on the town's outskirts.

Autry case due ruling, Mattox says

JIM MATTOX
...fighting stay

Harte-Hanks Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox said Monday that the U.S. Supreme Court could decide as early as next week on whether to grant his motion to vacate the stay of execution granted on Oct. 5 to James Autry.

Speaking on the steps of the Supreme Court building, with protesters holding signs nearby that read "D.C. Coalition Against the Death Penalty," Mattox said the state "would like some better direction" in the case of Autry and 40 other pending capital murder cases in Texas.

"Does the (stay of execution) mean that our other pending capital murder cases are being put on hold for months and months?" said Mattox. "That is the question we are asking."

Supreme Court Justice Byron R. White granted the stay of execution at the last minute on the issue of proportionality — based on the question of whether the punishment in the particular case is proportional to punishments for similar crimes.

Mattox pointed out that the court would not hear arguments on the proportionality issue, based on the circumstances of another case, until November. A ruling on that separate case is not expected until several months later.

The motion filed Monday asks the court to determine whether sentences in the Autry case and other capital murder cases will be set aside until the ruling on proportionality.

"The Supreme Court rejected a proportionality argument last year in Brooks vs. Estelle, and Mr. Brooks was executed," said Mattox in the motion.

The court's calendar could be open for the first time on Oct. 27 to consider the motion filed by Mattox Monday, he said. He said he did not know if the court would consider the motion at that time.

Mattox would not speculate whether a decision in his favor would speed the executions of other convicted criminals on death row in Huntsville. "It would help bring about a timely consideration of each of those cases," he said.

"This new issue is one that does not have substance from our perspective," he said. "We'd like to know what we have to do to carry out that (capital punishment) statute," said Mattox.

2 found shot in car today

An Ira woman and a Big Spring man today remained in Malone-Hogan Hospital recovering from gunshot wounds received early today.

Elián Gutierrez Luna, 31, of Ira remained in surgery Monday after suffering gunshot wounds in both hands and the chest. Faustino Ramirez Rios, 33, of 307 N.W. Ninth, was in stable condition in the intensive care unit at Malone-Hogan Hospital, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

Police found Luna and Rios at 12:33 a.m. Monday in the back seat of a Lincoln Continental parked in the Town and Country Food Store parking lot at 1101 Lamesa Drive after receiving a report of injuries from an employee at the store, according to police reports.

Police arrested a man found near the car in connection with a charge of public intoxication. No other charges have been filed against him or anyone else, Lt. Alvis Jeffcoat said.

Police are continuing to investigate the shootings but are waiting until the victims are able to give statements to have a better idea of what happened, Jeffcoat said.

So far, police are not sure if the shooting took place at the convenience store parking lot or somewhere else or to whom the car belongs, Jeffcoat said.

Amendment would allow wage garnishment

AUSTIN (AP) — Since 1876, the Texas Constitution has prohibited the garnishment of wages — seizure of a person's pay to satisfy the claims of creditors.

The intention of the constitution writers was to protect struggling wage-earners from predatory bill collectors.

Over the years, this provision has been interpreted by the courts as a bar to any Texas law attempting to force payment of court-ordered child support obligations.

Now, voters are being asked to ease the restriction so that up to one-third of a wayward father's paycheck can be seized by the government and used for overdue child support payments.

The proposal is No. 6 on a list of 11 constitutional amendments that will be decided by voters Nov. 8.

State welfare officials hope approval of the amendment will result in at least a $10 million annual saving to the state in Aid to Families of Dependent Children payments.

"Parents, rather than taxpayers, will be responsible for supporting their children," said Nina Rivkin, coordinator Texans for Child Support.

The Texas Department of Human Resources reports that more than 70 percent of the parents legally obligated to provide support fail to pay.

Under present law, a judge has the choice of sending a defaulting parent to jail or putting the person on probation.

"It seemed to me there was a sad state of collection in Texas," said Rep. Rene Oliveira, D-Brownsville, who was successful in passing the garnishment amendment through the 1983 Legislature. Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, was the Senate sponsor.

At present, Oliveira said, "The only remedy is to throw people in jail, and that is no remedy. If you put a father in jail, everybody loses. The mother gets no money, and taxpayers have to pay for his keep in jail as well as upkeep of the child."

"As an attorney, I got tired of women telling me these horror stories of not having enough money to buy milk for their babies when there was a healthy working father out there somewhere," Oliveira said. "That was one of multiple reasons I introduced the bill."

He said similar measures introduced in the past had been opposed both by business and organized labor.

"This time we were able to get business, including the Texas Association of Business, to support the bill, and labor did not oppose it. Some labor leaders are for it. See Amendments, Page 2A

Bids fly at plane auction

ROCKDALE (AP) — They sold H.H. Coffield's corroding air force over the weekend to vintage airplane fans whose eyes were able to see flight in the rotting and disfigured planes.

"Anything will fly," said Gerald Beck, a 34-year-old North Dakota crop duster who paid $10,000 for a World War II B-25 that is, putting it kindly, beyond its prime.

"You've got to have a good banker," Beck said of his costly hobby.

Coffield, longtime chairman of the state prison board, died in 1979. He left no family to continue the military surplus business he ran for decades. Dallas auctioneer Irv Rosen was brought in to get rid of the stockpile. Coffield's will specifies the charities that will share the proceeds.

About 600 bidders registered for the Saturday auction that started in Coffield's hangar. Rosen knew the condition of the goods.

"We make no guarantees or warranties on anything offered," he told bidders.

Buyers have until Wednesday to get their purchases out of here. Airplane buyers have two months. That probably won't be long enough. None of the planes fly. The few that might be made airworthy will need months, maybe years, of work.

Some would-be buyers decided early that they wouldn't be. Bob Collins came in from Boston.

"I'm interested in B-25s. I'm not really interested in these. They're in rough shape," Collins said, adding that a B-25 in good shape could bring up to $100,000.

"These are worth whatever somebody is going to bid. You find a crazy and they're worth $10,000-$20,000," said Collins.

Beck, who did not look crazy, said he's made no arrangements for getting his B-25 back to North Dakota.

River

"It's sad, but the river serves no purpose whatsoever for us," Rylander said.

The Pecos still is a beauty of a river between Roswell, N.M., and Red Bluff, Texas, and when it mixes into the Rio Grande near Langtry, Texas. River-runners and rafters can use the Pecos as a waterway its final 50 miles.

North of Roswell, long stretches of the Pecos now qualify only as a creek — and some of that is dry creekbed.

The flow of the Pecos in New Mexico is regulated by reservoirs at Fort Sumner, Lake McMillan near Lakewood, Lake Avalon and in Carlsbad. In Texas near the New Mexico border, Red Bluff Lake was formed almost 50 years ago by damming the Pecos.

Passing over the Pecos near its Texas namesake on Interstate 20, the river is about 20 feet wide and clogged with a pesky shrub called salt cedar. The shrub flourishes in the saline waters caused by Texas salt flats.

But by the time the Pecos mixes into the muddy Rio Grande near Amistad Reservoir, the river has healed itself. The brine and oil residue have been removed naturally as the Pecos flowed over rocks and through the red canyons between Sheffield and the Rio Grande.

"It's nature's way of cleaning itself," Rylander said, blaming man's presence for causing much of the damage to the river.

Fishing nearly has disappeared on the Pecos between Red Bluff and Sheffield, he said. Occasionally, a 10-pound gar is caught, but not until the river is fed by freshwater springs near Sheffield are many palatable fish such as bass or perch hooked.

"There are no fish around Iraan, that's for sure. They couldn't survive here," 18-year-old gas station attendant John Horne said.

Oldtimers recall when the Pecos was full of water and good fishing was as close as the riverbank. Now, the best fishing is found in New Mexico.

Texas sued New Mexico in 1947 over upstream use of Pecos River water. The suit is pending in the U.S. Supreme Court, although in 1949, the Pecos River Commission was created to monitor Pecos water use in both states in hopes of resolving the long-standing dispute.

Also pending is a federal investigation of pesticide and herbicide damage to the Pecos from Fort Sumner to Balmorhea, Texas.

Amendments

individually," Oliveira said. The proposed amendment on the ballot would "allow the Legislature to provide for additional remedies to enforce court-ordered child support payments."

If voters approve the amendment, district court judges could immediately order a person's income seized by the state and used to make overdue child support payments to the family taking care of the child.

The change would not affect fathers who remain current with their child support payments.

Employers would make deductions from the payment similar to payroll deductions for taxes, and would receive a $5-a-month administrative fee.

Self-employed people with past-due child support payments could be placed under bond by the court.

Each court order would specify that no employer may discharge or take any disciplinary action against an employee because of the child custody assignment.

The Brownsville legislator said he did not know of any organized group opposing passage of the amendment.

Linda Gale White, the wife of the governor, is honorary chairman of Texans for Child Support.

Other groups publicly supporting Proposition No. 6 include Christian Life Commission (Southern Baptist), Mexican American Organization for Women, Black Democrats of Texas, Texas Association of Taxpayers, Texas District and County Attorneys Association, Texas Fathers for Equal Rights, and Texas State Bar, Family Law Section.

During legislative debate, opponents stressed Texas' long tradition of legally protecting a wage-earner's paycheck from creditors.

Texas and South Carolina are the only states without a garnishment law for child support.

"Garnishment is used chiefly against the poor and uneducated," Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, said in one Senate session. "Regardless of the promises made by legislators who may or may not determine future legislation there is a real and understandable danger that allowing this first break in the constitutional prohibition against garnishment will open the door to whichever coalitions can nurse their own garnishment exceptions into law."

Another point made by opponents was that the new law would not guarantee that the money received would be used to support children. There is no accounting for how the money is spent.

can't be successful without the confidence of depositors. Without customer confidence and belief, a bank simply cannot be successful," said Wageman.

Presidents of Midland's smaller banks and local banking customers expressed both sadness that the bank had failed and relief that it would be reopened without loss to depositors.

"First was a great help to the city, and whatever helps the city helps all the banks," said Charles Priddy, a board member at Texas American Bank.

"We're glad it was Republic. They're our kind of folks," said Jerome M. Fullinwider, chief executive officer of Midland-based V-F Petroleum, Inc. "They have the best track record in oil and gas lending worldwide, and best of all they're Texans."

Ed Thompson, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, said "a lot of people have been walking on eggshells. Now we can all get down and look for gas and oil."

Out of a total loan portfolio of $1.3 billion, First National reported non-performing assets of $328.2 million. Losses due to energy loans reduced First National's reserves to $862,000 at the close of September from $122 million at the end of 1982. Delinquent loans doubled in 1983 from $15.4 million to $31.4 million.

Bank officials reported earlier this month to shareholders that the financial institution was on the brink of collapse and was seeking either a merger or a sale of additional stock.

But First National's customers, many of them tied to the Permian Basin oil economy, rallied around the bank and pledged to keep their funds there in hopes that local ownership could be preserved.

The largest bank to fail in Texas was the National Bank of New York, which was closed in October 1974 with $3.6 billion in assets, $2.2 billion more than First National.

The Midland bank is the third largest failure in terms of deposits behind Franklin National, which had $1.4 billion in deposits, and the U.S. National Bank of San Diego, which had $932 million in deposits when it failed in October 1973.

Critics bury coroner book

LOS ANGELES — Former Los Angeles County Coroner Thomas T. Noguchi already is finding criticism along the trail leading from his as-yet-unpublished book, "Coroner," including a charge that he's just trying to make "a fast buck."

That charge comes from county Board of Supervisors Chairman Mike Antonovich, who calls the book detailing investigations of the deaths of prominent people "ghoulish."

And Antonovich has requested a review of Noguchi's work patterns during the 1 1/2 years he was writing "Coroner" to determine whether any county time, personnel or unauthorized materials were used to prepare the manuscript.

Noguchi, demoted to autopsy physician in April 1982, declines to comment on the probe, but his agent, Arthur Pine, says he's certain that the book, co-authored with New York writer Joseph DiMona, was done strictly on Noguchi's own time.

The book deals with the deaths of prominent people, including actresses Natalie Wood, Marilyn Monroe and Sharon Tate, actor William Holden, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, rock star Janis Joplin and comedian John Belushi, won't be published until next month, but excerpts already have been made public.

BB back on St. Tropez

NEW YORK — Actress Brigitte Bardot has resumed her normal activities in St. Tropez after trying to take her own life on her 49th birthday Sept. 28, but her friends still express concern about her, the latest issue of People magazine reports.

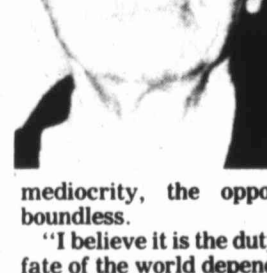

Miss Bardot, billed as a "sex kitten" in the mid 1950s and '60s, recently broke off a relationship with Alain Bougrain-Dubouche, 35, a French TV producer. She wanted "more than anything" for her relationship with him to be a success, a friend said.

"Lately she has not been in good shape," her sister, Mijanou Bardot, a former actress, told the magazine. "I sense that she is disturbed, tormented and unhappy. I know that she was going through a bad period — that of age and an unhappy love."

Admiral blasts mediocrity

FORT WAYNE — Admiral Hyman G. Rickover, who retired last year after 64 years of U.S. Navy service, warns that if America is to survive, it must fight against mediocrity.

"A free society can survive only through men and women of integrity," the 83-year-old retiree told the Fort Wayne Jewish Federation's community dinner Saturday night.

"Mediocrity can destroy us, just as surely as perils far more famous," Rickover warned. "In a society that is willing to accept mediocrity, the opportunities for failure are boundless."

"I believe it is the duty of each of us to act as if the fate of the world depended on him," said Rickover, the recipient of 15 military honors, 16 honorary college degrees and 61 citations from various groups, including the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian honor.

Country singer in hospital

WHEELING — Country music singer Dick Curless, whose hits include "Hard Time Travelin' Man," was in stable condition after being rushed to the hospital for treatment of an abdominal problem.

A spokeswoman at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Pittsburgh on Sunday declined to disclose the exact nature of his illness.

The 51-year-old Curless, whose other hits include "Drag 'Em Off the Interstate and Sock It to 'Em" and "A Tombstone Every Mile," was taken to Wheeling Hospital on Friday night, and from there to Pittsburgh.

1 Marine killed, 3 wounded

BEIRUT — Lebanese army troops shelled hideouts of Syrian-backed gunmen today in south Beirut near the international airport where snipers killed one U.S. Marine and wounded three wounded on Sunday.

An army spokesman said the soldiers fired to silence Shiite Moslem militia snipers shooting at positions near the airport, where the 1,600 Marines serving with the multinational peace-keeping force are based.

Residents of the area said the 20-minute artillery barrage at daybreak followed nightlong sniping and bazooka attacks on army positions from the Shiite neighborhood of Sfeir.

Other army positions on the "green line" that divides Beirut into predominantly Christian and Moslem sectors came under sniper fire from Shiite strongholds at midmorning, Christian-controlled radio stations reported.

On Sunday, one Marine was killed and three were wounded in seven hours of sniping and rocket-propelled grenade attacks on the airport, spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan said. He said the Marines fired back with anti-tank rockets and small arms.

McFarlane picked for post

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, bucking a strong lobbying campaign by conservative supporters, has decided to bring his special Middle East envoy, Robert C. McFarlane, back to the White House full time as the chief national security adviser, White House officials say.

McFarlane would move into the post of assistant to the president for national security affairs, which will be vacated when William P. Clark becomes secretary of the interior.

The officials, who spoke on the condition that they not be identified by name, said Reagan notified the top members of his national security and foreign policy team of his decision over the weekend.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan had not made "a final, final decision" about the post.

He also declined to comment on reports that U.N. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, who had been one of the candidates for the job, had been angered by the decision.

Israel taps finance minister

TEL AVIV — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir today named Yigal Cohen-Orgad, leader of his Herut Party faction in Parliament, as his candidate for finance minister, Israel Radio said.

It said Parliament was expected to approve Shamir's choice to replace Yoram Aridor, who resigned Thursday after his proposal to base Israel's economy on the U.S. dollar was rejected.

Earlier today, the opposition Labor Party introduced the first no-confidence motion over the way Shamir's week-old government has handled an economic crisis that has closed the stock market for more than a week and doubled food prices.

It is the first no-confidence measure Shamir has faced as prime minister and will probably be debated Tuesday or Wednesday, Parliament spokeswoman Dalia Asraf said.

Germans protest missiles

BONN — Six hundred anti-nuclear activists formed a human blockade in front of a West German army barracks today, and police said they dragged protesters away from the entrance six times and arrested 30 people.

The human blockade in the northern city of Muenster was one of several demonstrations held nationwide in the second day of the "Action Week" campaign to protest deployment of new U.S. nuclear missiles in Europe.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization plans to deploy 572 Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Western Europe starting in December to counter a buildup of Soviet SS-20 rockets already in place. West Germany is to house 204 of the missiles, the largest share.

In Bonn, 100 women marched from the Defense Ministry to the marketplace, toting fake plastic missiles and distributing flyers that called the weapons "phallic symbols of men's power."

The protest was peaceful, said Bonn police spokesman Helmut Engelke.

Berkeley prof wins Nobel

STOCKHOLM — Gerard Debreu of the University of California at Berkeley won the 1983 Nobel Memorial Prize in Economics today, the sixth consecutive year Americans have received the prize.

The Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences said the 62-year-old professor was honored for his work on mathematical models that prove the theory of supply and demand, the basis of capitalist economy.

Americans have won the prize outright since 1978, except for the 1979 prize, which was shared by Briton Sir Arthur Lewis and American Theodore W. Schultz of the University of Chicago.

Professor Assar Lindbeck, chairman of the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences committee that chooses winners of the economics prize, said Debreu dealt in basic research on equilibrium in a market economy.

He said Debreu's mathematical models led to the findings of both James Tobin of Yale University and George Stigler of the University of Chicago, winners of the 1981 and 1982 economics prizes.

Born in Calais, France, on July 4, 1921, Debreu became an American citizen in 1975, the same year he became a professor of mathematics at Berkeley. He had taught economics at the California institution since 1962.

S. Africans raid Maputo

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — South African commandos raided the Mozambican capital Maputo today and bombed a downtown office of the African National Congress, and Mozambique said five people were wounded.

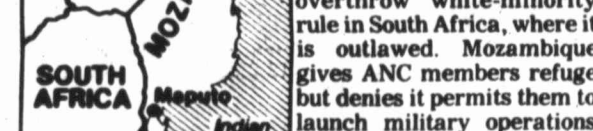

The ANC is the main black nationalist group seeking to overthrow white-minority rule in South Africa, where it is outlawed. Mozambique gives ANC members refuge but denies it permits them to launch military operations into neighboring South Africa.

The South African Defense Ministry said a task force of South African soldiers raided Maputo in the early morning hours and blew up what it called an ANC planning office. It made no mention of casualties.

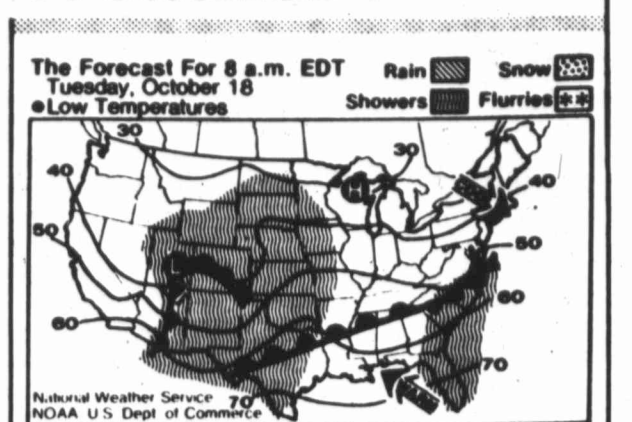

Mozambique's state-run news agency AIM said three members of the black nationalist group sleeping in the office were hospitalized after the explosion, along with two Mozambican women sleeping in an apartment next door.

AIM said the explosion severely damaged the apartment house, shattering windows and much of the wall near the roof.

Earlier, a Western diplomat in Maputo, telephoned from Johannesburg, said he had been advised unofficially that Mozambican authorities had reported unidentified agents planted a bomb, but no South African soldiers were involved.

Storms rumble over state

Thunderstorms rumbled across Texas early today along a slow-moving cold front stretching from Wichita Falls in North Texas to Marfa in far West Texas, and very heavy thunderstorms extended from Victoria to Galveston along the upper coast.

Light rain and a few heavy thunderstorms were reported in Northwest Texas. The heaviest activity was in the eastern Panhandle and Big Country areas.

A light fog enveloped parts of Southeast Texas. The rest of the state had a blanket of low-level clouds, except for mostly clear skies in extreme West Texas and sections of Central and East Texas.

Temperatures dropped into the 50s northwest of the front. Readings in the 60s and 70s were the norm elsewhere. The state's 4 a.m. extremes ranged from a 53 at El Paso to a 77-degree reading at both Brownsville and Galveston.

Winds were light and southeasterly ahead of the cold front, but shifted to a more northerly direction with speeds ranging from 5 to 10 miles an hour over the plains and Trans Pecos regions of the state.

Forecasters predicted partly cloudy skies with scattered thunderstorms statewide today. The most numerous thunderstorms were expected to be over the western and northern sections of North Central Texas, along the coastal plains of South Texas and east of the Pecos River in West Texas.

Tropical Storm Raymond, stalled about 680 miles east of Honolulu, is still strong enough to pose a threat to the Hawaiian Islands but weather forecasters say they expect it to "die a natural death."

"There always is the possibility it could move this way, but I don't think we'll get much out of it except maybe some strong winds and rain," said Dick Sasaki, a lead forecaster for the National Weather Service here.

"It's stalled, it's weakening and it could just die a natural death where it is," Sasaki said.

By Sunday night, the strongest sustained winds near the center of the storm were estimated at 60 mph with gusts to 75 mph. Gale force winds, of at least 39 mph, extended out from the center about 115 miles to the southwest towards Hawaii and 230 miles to the northeast, away from the islands.

Raymond was downgraded to a tropical storm Saturday after losing much of its punch Friday night. Earlier Friday, the storm was packing sustained winds of 135 mph with gusts to 165 mph.

"There is only a very, very remote possibility it could intensify at this point," Sasaki said. "The trend is for it to get weaker because as it moves into the higher latitudes, several things happen."

The islands are in an area with upper level westerly winds which have sheared the top off the storm and carrying it east while the lower levels of the storm are trying to go west, "tearing it apart," he said.

The only effect the storm has had on the islands has been high surf along the southeast coast of Hawaii island, where waves pushed rocks and debris into the roadway forcing a small section of the coastal highway to be closed.

Getting it right

What would happen if a presidential candidate began his address to a women's group with this statement: "I'm not going to talk to you as women, but as a group of human beings with heads and hearts. I hope my ideas will convince you to support my candidacy."

Probably no one will ever know. Candidates just don't talk that way. They say what they believe an audience wishes to hear. In short, promises, promises.

In Washington, D.C., six Democratic contenders for the White House each promised 2,000 delegates of the National Organization for Women that he would consider choosing a woman as a vice-presidential nominee.

Former Sen. George McGovern went beyond that to say it was a "very likely prospect" he'd choose such a nominee.

Walter Mondale made his pitch by saying he'd solicit NOW's recommendations on a vice-presidential choice and take them "very, very seriously," which is, we take it, twice as serious as just plain "very seriously."

Trying to top Mondale on the running mate issue, Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado suggested a woman for president. "I would be proud to run with a woman at either end of the ticket," he proclaimed. Nice counterpunching, Sen. Hart!

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, after starting with a quote from 19th century suffragette Elizabeth Cady Stanton, drew hisses and catcalls for saying the Equal Rights Amendment was defeated because "we all loafed on the ERA too much" and "the opposition, those on the other side, they outworked us, they out-hustled us in many respects."

Later, Betty Friedan said "the women in that hall worked blood, sweat and tears" for the ERA, and NOW president Judy Goldsmith said Glenn may not have understood how many people in the audience "gave up times from their lives for the ERA."

Glenn, properly rebuked and believing that truce is stronger than friction, later tried to clarify his remarks in a hasty meeting with NOW leaders.

California Sen., Alan Cranston echoed the other candidates' support of NOW viewpoints. When it comes to ultraliberal views, it's hard to outflank Cranston.

But where was the missing seventh Democratic contender, Florida Gov. Reubin Askew? Did he miss his plane? Have another engagement? Was he lost in Washington traffic?

No, he wasn't invited to address the conference because he's not considered a supporter of pro-abortion laws. Apparently NOW won't even listen to a candidate who deviates from one of its enshrined dogmas.

Taking note of the support of NOW's positions by the six candidates present, Friedan said, "They all got it right."

Face to face

Hitting the wall.

Now and then we come face to face with our limitations. We realize that we aren't the best and brightest and will never hold claim to that title. And it doesn't help that there is always someone gaining on us who's younger, smarter and richer.

It's not an uplifting experience to be shown our shortcomings and weaknesses; in fact, it is frightening to face the fact we are limited in many ways.

Frequently, this awakening is brought on by failure — failure to measure up to standards set by other persons and institutions. For instance, we botch a test in school, miss a deadline, fail to land an important job or marry the right person.

Often one person's opinion brings into sight our limitations and with it, our subsequent failure. And, even with today's progressive thinking, our race, heritage and beliefs may limit us in the eyes of others.

Faced with these cold and sometimes unnatural boundaries, what do we then do?

Unfortunately, most of us quit. We accept whatever judgments have been passed on our abilities and talents and we strive no further. The eyes glaze over, the heart stops feeling, and we resign ourselves to a neatly carved niche without so much as a whimper. In too many cases, we remain in that place until death.

We aren't very brave or willing to make a leap of faith for ourselves.

Sure, we all have limitations, but often those confines are dictated by someone else's values and mentality. We shouldn't have to fail because of opinions and arbitrary rules that dictate the status quo without our individuality in mind.

At the same time, we shouldn't let failure come from the inside. Yes, there are limits, but we settle for so much less than we could have had. Held back by the restraints of our hearts and minds, we play it safe, or don't play at all, forgetting the fragility of life and its shortness.

Yes, it's scary to combat those obstacles holding us back. To bend the rules, to discount a long-standing precept, to decide our own route in life are all intimidating but worth the effort if any satisfaction is to be gained from life.

Use the weapons of your heart and intellect. Until one does that, limitations will remain a specter of sadness.

Live for those moments when doubters and scoffers have to admit defeat and mutter, "I didn't think he could do it."

Misbegotten cease-fire

WASHINGTON — The latest cease-fire in Lebanon accurately reflects the relative strengths of forces on the ground. But it leads inevitably to weakening the government of President Amin Gemayel.

There is no need for President Reagan's personal emissary, Robert McFarlane, to preside over the unraveling. On the contrary, the need is to drive for an early withdrawal of the American Marines.

Israel and Syria have supplied the main forces in Lebanon since June of last year. The Israeli invasion, and the advance to Beirut, dealt power to the Maronite Christians who formed a government under President Gemayel. With the Israelis holding everybody else at bay, the U.S., France and Italy could make available a token multinational force to cover a projected withdrawal of all foreign armies from Lebanon.

All that was changed by an event whose watershed character seems not yet to have been fully grasped. The redeployment of Israeli forces inside Lebanon constituted a kind of historic flinch. For the first time, the Israelis, on their own motion as distinct from under U.S. pressure, gave up territory they had seized from the Arabs.

The redeployment, accordingly, not only weakened Gemayel and the Maronite Christians, it also devalued the best U.S. card for dealing with the Arabs, mainly the capacity to make Israel withdraw. So the initiative passed to the one Arab leader who had long dispensed with U.S. friendship on the theory that the Israelis were bound to crack on their own — Hafez Assad of Syria.

Syria has deep designs on Lebanon which it does not recognize as an independent state. Assad has been extremely tenacious in asserting these designs. He began putting troops into Lebanon in 1975, and he now has some 40,000 soldiers in the Bekaa Valley of eastern Lebanon and in the northern part of the country.

Despite the loss of more than a hundred jet planes in the Israeli invasion, Assad kept his forces in Lebanon. He re-equipped them with Soviet weapons. He evaded American diplomatic efforts, backed by Saudi money, to coordinate evacuation of Syrian troops with evacuation of the Israeli forces.

When the Gemayel government was formed, and especially as it edged toward a security agreement with Israel, Assad forged close ties with dissident Lebanese factions — notably the Shi'ite Moslems, south of Beirut; and the Druze Moslems, in the Shouf Mountains east of the capital. Working through them, Assad mounted pressure on Gemayel, the Israelis and the U.S. The bombing of the American Embassy in Beirut, on April 18, came in that context.

The pressure was redoubled when the Israelis flinched with the redeployment last month. First the Druze militia, and then the Shi'ite militia, took on Lebanese government forces. American Marines, and the French and Italian troops, were caught in the crossfire and suffered casualties. In those conditions, Assad negotiated the present cease-fire with Ambassador McFarlane and the Saudi Ambassador to the U.S., Prince Bandar ibn Sultan.

The terms of the cease-fire accord are perilous to the U.S. Marines and humiliating to Gemayel. The agreement does not stipulate for an outside force to supervise the cease-fire. Assad has refused an American proposal for a United Nations observer team. So the fighting can resume any time, with the Marines in exposed positions.

Theoretically, a political compromise is to be worked out by a National Reconciliation Commission. But Gemayel commands a majority of three within the 10-member commission, so there is bound to be more pulling and hauling. And even if an accord is reached, it will be on the basis of concessions from Gemayel.

For an American presidential emissary to be deeply engaged in such higgumygum is at best undignified. Ambassador McFarlane should not become an active party to the negotiations again. While the Marines are stuck for the moment, every effort should be made to provide a framework for cease-fire observers. A promising possibility, explored by Ambassador McFarlane with National Security Adviser William Clark and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger in Rome last weekend, points toward a force of European countries. That would let the Marines out.

The central fact is that very little can now be won in Lebanon. Even a reconciliation among warring clans can only apply to the area around Beirut. The Saudis, and some State Department officials, seem to believe they can cut a deal with Assad. But that approach overlooks his tenacious drive for Lebanon and the failure of the previous withdrawal negotiations, not to mention the destruction of the embassy.

No doubt American prestige will drop when the Marines leave. The scheme of the Reagan administration for building a general peace in the Middle East on a settlement in Lebanon will be shown up as near myth. But with the Marines out, the U.S. will recover the freedom of action appropriate to a superpower. As for Assad, if he keeps it up, he will run into the Israelis, who will give him what is now a prerequisite of balance in the Middle East, another bloody nose.

College doubting is basic course

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I have been in college now for a few weeks, and it seems like I am questioning everything I have ever believed. I even am beginning to wonder if God is real, or if he is just a product of our imagination or wishes. Can you help me? — J.S.

DEAR J.S.: It is not uncommon for someone like yourself to go away to college and suddenly find that things you have believed are questioned by others who appear smarter or more experienced than you. Then doubt begins to creep in and can easily overtake you if you do not take steps to combat it.

There are three things I would like to tell you. First, there are answers to the questions you may be having — good, solid answers. You are not the first person in history to wonder about whatever questions are bothering you right now. There have been (and are) faithful followers of Christ. Perhaps your pastor or a Christian worker on your campus can direct you to books that deal with these questions.

Then you need to seek the encouragement and strength of other Christians. On your campus there are undoubtedly many sincere Christians, and you should pray that God will guide you to them. (There are several inter-denominational groups, for example, that work especially on college campuses, such as Inter-Varsity, Navigators, or Campus Crusade.) Not only will you find others who have worked through the same questions you are facing, but you will be strengthened by the regular fellowship of other believers.

In addition, you need to spend time alone with God each day. There is no substitute for a personal walk with God through systematic Bible reading and prayer. In this way you can get to know God better and be able to face the temptations and doubts Satan wants to throw at you. You also will be able to help others who are struggling with questions about God. "Always be prepared to give an answer to everyone who asks you to give the reason for the hope that you have" (1 Peter 3:15). And if you have never really given your life to Jesus Christ, this is a time to learn more about him and his claim on your life.

WASHINGTON — Out of the fathomless mix of trade-offs and pressures that move the Senate, a bill emerged last summer that would enrich the big oil companies. A heroic attempt was made inside the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee to block the bill from reaching the Senate floor. The vote was close, but the oil lobby won a narrow 11 to 9 victory.

Four of the senators who voted to send the bill to the Senate floor have financial interests in oil companies that would benefit from its passage. The skids are now oiled for enacting legislation that would gradually lift price controls on "old" natural gas — discovered before 1977.

What would this cost the consumers? The oil companies have engaged in some purposeful obfuscations to keep this vague. But according to preliminary Energy Department figures, the deregulation would transfer billions from the pockets of the consumers to the coffers of the oil companies. The nation's 16 largest oil companies would rake in $1 billion to $4 billion the first year. By 1990, the estimated cost to consumers would be $30 billion or more.

After months of testimony, in which consumer groups and oil interests traded blows, the energy committee approved the bill. A change of two votes would have deflated this multibillion-dollar balloon.

Oil tycoons habitually are quiet contributors and distant financiers of friendly politicians. So I assigned my reporters Jock Hatfield and Laurie Siegel to check into the finances of the committee members. At least four had financial reasons to vote the bill out of committee.

The existence of these financial ties doesn't necessarily mean the four senators have been bought by Big Oil. But it raises serious questions about possible conflicts of interest. Here are the financial connections of the gang of four:

— Chairman James McClure, R-Idaho, the principal architect and advocate of the deregulation bill, received $17,000 in speaking fees last year from oil-related organizations. These included Aminoll, Ashland Oil and the American Petroleum Institute, all staunch champions of deregulation.

Since the first of the year, McClure's campaign committee has also accepted more than $30,000 from oil and gas interests to help finance his re-election race next year. The senator denies that the speaking fees and campaign contributions have had any influence on his Senate actions.

— Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., owns $30,000 to $100,000 worth of stock in Mobil Oil, which should make anywhere from $250 million to $462 million during the first year of deregulation, according to the preliminary Energy Department figures. As trustee for his family, Weicker oversees an additional $540,000 to $1,320,000 in oil stocks. The senator sees no conflict.

— Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., owns $35,000 to $115,000 worth of stock in Exxon, Chevron and Amoco — three of the biggest potential beneficiaries from deregulation. He has also received almost $100,000 in royalties from Getty Oil since 1978. Getty stands to make $54 million to $170 million if deregulation is passed.

Wallop also was given more than $25,000 in contributions by independent oil producers last year for his successful re-election campaign. Coincidentally, he was the author of an amendment benefiting independent producers. Wallop declined comment.

— Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, said his support for gas deregulation stems from a "deep-rooted free-market inclination." But it also coincides happily with the best interests of his stock portfolio, which includes $15,000 in Standard Oil and Gulf.

The hare is larger, heavier and longer in the ear than the rabbit.

Dr. Donohue

Facial hair

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have heard of a new drug, spironolactone, as an aid for women with unwanted facial hair. Is it effective for that? Any side effects? — M.S.

Spironolactone is another diuretic (water pill) used for high blood pressure or other conditions involving fluid accumulation in the body. The drug is being investigated as a treatment for unwanted facial hair. It seems to lower testosterone levels in the blood. Yes, women do make that male hormone in their bodies and it is one factor in facial hair growth.

I should add that spironolactone is not now approved officially for this purpose. All drugs have side effects. Spironolactone may cause blood potassium levels to rise and it may cause unwanted blood pressure drops.

Do you have problem hair? Dr. Donohue's booklet, "Good Health for Your Hair," shows how proper treatment can result in healthier, more attractive hair. To get a copy, write Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Dear Abby

Daughter keeps mother's discard

DEAR ABBY: I'm in love with a wonderful man. I'm nearly 20 and Irving (not his real name) is 46. He happens to be my mother's ex-boyfriend and I've known him since I was 14. Our relationship wasn't planned. It just happened. We are very much in love and plan to get married soon.

My mother and her side of the family aren't speaking to me. I don't understand why. I didn't start seeing Irving until two years after he and my mother broke up. He has three teen-age children who approve of me and we get along great.

My problem is that people make me feel guilty even though I haven't done anything wrong. The age difference isn't such a big deal nowadays. I'm happy and Irving is happy, so why am I bothered so much by these guilt feelings?

LUCKY IN LOVE
DEAR LUCKY: You feel "guilty" even though you haven't done anything wrong because that's the feeling you had as a child whenever your mother disapproved of your actions. The "child" in you still yearns for your mother's approval, and when she withholds it, your happiness is flawed.

The feelings you have are not so much "guilt" as a sadness for having been unjustly judged.

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote in complaining because her boyfriend's ex-wife does his laundry. She thought it was "weird" and considered the ex-wife a threat.

I see nothing weird about it. I've been doing my ex-husband's laundry for five years. Not only that, I prepare good meals for him several nights a week. He still pays me alimony, and it's to my benefit that he dresses neat on his job and eats well so he stays healthy.

In exchange for the laundry and meals, he maintains my car and house when repairs are needed, which saves me a bundle of money. His fast repairs and service calls can't be beat.

So you see, it's sort of a trade-off. We still love and care for each other, but there are some things we just can't agree on, so we divorced.

NOT WASHED UP IN ORLANDO

DEAR NOT: Sounds like you both have a good thing going for you. Pity more divorced couples aren't that practical.

Arlo Guthrie: same song, 2nd verse

WASHINGTON, Mass. (AP) — Arlo Guthrie, 36 and graying, dabbles at housework these days and worries about his children's schools. Like his listeners from the 1960s, the balladeer is gently aging.

But the establishment can't rest easy just yet — he's started singing "Alice's Restaurant" again.

The wry 1969 hit, an 18½-minute marathon of song and humor, told of Guthrie being arrested for littering in Stockbridge, and subsequently being deemed unsuitable for military service because of his crime.

It caught the fancy of a generation protesting the Vietnam War and established Guthrie as a performer independent of his famed folksinging father, Woody Guthrie.

"Some of my old man's music was like talking and plucking to tell a story in rhyme," he said. "One of the great things for me was to adapt that to 'Alice's Restaurant.'

"Once I did that, and it was accepted, I walked out of my father's footsteps right away," Guthrie said.

For several years, Guthrie pretty much stopped singing "Alice's" — he says people quit asking for it as Vietnam War protests faded — but lately he's revived it in a version that deals with compulsory draft registration.

"The fourth of the audience that is young wants to hear 'Alice's.' I've revised it with draft registration. It seems to have some value. It creates bridges between the generation of my peers and younger people," he said.

"I like creating bridges. That's what I was brought up to believe folk music could do."

Guthrie says he'd probably have reservations about registering if he were of draft age, but warns his new listeners that those who want to evade registration should consider the consequences.

"You ought not to not register unless you're willing to pay the price. Freedom has its price," he says.

Guthrie, who helps out with household chores when he is home in the Berkshire Hills of western Massachusetts, left last week for the Pacific Northwest to join a Public Broadcasting Service crew filming a documentary on his father, who died in 1967. It is scheduled for broadcast next year.

"It's interesting to see the effect he had in different places," he said. "In Oklahoma, there seems to be more appreciation of my father as an artist than the political nature of his work."

He has spent this year divided between filming and concert tours. His next tour begins next month in the Southeast.

"The question most people seem to ask me is 'What have you been doing for the last 10 years?'" Guthrie said. "I'm living a lot less visible life. A lot of people don't know I'm still working."

GUTHRIE AT 36 — Entertainer Arlo Guthrie surveys his Washington, Mass., home. The singer is bringing back his hit of the 1960s, "Alice's Restaurant."

He occasionally breaks away from his band Shenandoah to sing with Pete Seeger, 64, a contemporary of Woody.

"That's a two-way bridge. It's not just a link between an old guy and someone who once was a young guy, but it shows a direction to the future in folk music," Guthrie said.

"This kind of music goes a little deeper in the soul of people than other things that they do in a day. We've built a 'medium flavored society' which makes food not too spicy and not too dull, and it does that to everything else to not offend anyone. I like my songs to be spicy, to have a cutting bite."

An album he recorded in January included such songs as "Europe and Missiles" and "Russian Girls Could Save the World," a song about the women's movement that he said requires a sense of humor. He said he moved to this town 15 years ago because his instincts told him the community of 500 people would be a good place for a family.

He lives with his wife, Jackie, three daughters, a son and four dogs in an airy hilltop home near tall pines and maples.

His son, Abraham, 13, plays the keyboard in a band with other teen-agers. Guthrie's daughters, Cathy, 11, Annie, 7, and Sarah Lee, 4, run around the house singing.

"No one thought I would become a musician when I was a kid," he recalled. "I was singing, but they called it noise, and some people still would. It was nice to find out I could make a living making noise."

Murder, suicide may mark deaths

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — A man who heard groans from his basement went downstairs and found his wife wounded as her two children stabbed to death Sunday in what police say may have been a murder-suicide attempt.

The girls, ages 3 and 6, and their 27-year-old mother were found in the basement shortly after midnight, said police Capt. Terry Burnett.

The children were pronounced dead at the scene, and the mother, suffering from stab wounds, was listed in serious condition at Osteopathic Hospital, Burnett said.

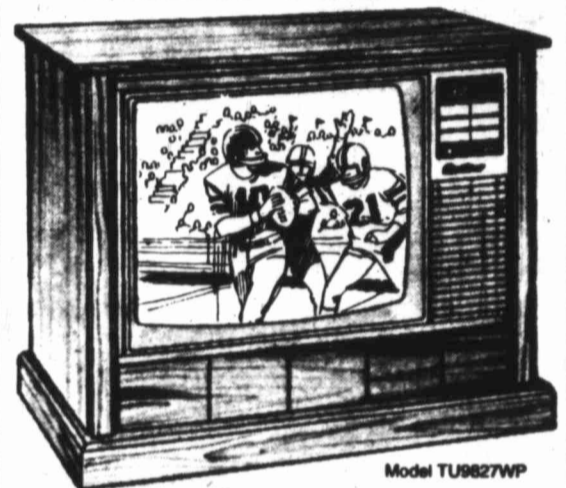

The officer said the woman's 54-year-old husband was hospitalized for observation Sunday at Wesley Medical Center after he suffered chest pains while being questioned at police headquarters.

The husband told police that he was upstairs in the house when he heard groans coming from the basement. Burnett said the man called police after discovering the bodies.

A knife believed to be the murder weapon was discovered in the basement, Burnett said.

Burnett said police were investigating the case as a possible murder and suicide attempt.

Friends recall Pat O'Brien's career

PAT O'BRIEN

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Pat O'Brien, one of the last of the "Irish Mafia" actors who played tough guys and priests, was remembered Sunday by his fellow entertainers as a raconteur who loved jokes.

O'Brien died Saturday at St. John's Hospital in Santa Monica of a heart attack, three days after undergoing prostate surgery. He would have been 84 next month.

"It's so sad," said comedian Bob Hope. "I called Pat about 2½ weeks ago" to make arrangements for an upcoming tour.

"We told jokes and we were laughing and he sounded great. I've worked with him a lot of times. He was a raconteur. He loved jokes. He was a hell of a guy."

A funeral Mass will be celebrated at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at St. Martin of Tours Catholic Church in Brentwood.

O'Brien appeared in 110 movies over six decades, most notably the title role as the famed Notre Dame football coach in "Knute Rockne — All American," a film that costarred Ronald Reagan as the "Gipper."

"I think it's obvious how Notre Dame felt about Pat O'Brien when we conferred an honorary degree on him and President Reagan in 1981 at our graduation ceremonies," said Notre Dame President Theodore M. Hesburgh.

"He immortalized a movie role as perhaps no other actor in the history of filmmaking when he portrayed our legendary Knute Rockne. We will always consider him a part of the Notre Dame family."

After that 1941 movie, the friendship between O'Brien and Reagan remained steadfast. They talked by phone almost weekly, said O'Brien's publicist, Jewel Smith.

Commission probes N-plant records

MADISON, Ind. (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission is looking into allegations that hundreds of records documenting concrete repairs at the Marble Hill nuclear power plant were falsified.

NRC spokesman Jan Strasma said an investigator and two inspectors have been at Marble Hill four times — most recently last week — to look into "allegations from an individual dealing with records irregularities."

Details of the investigation were outlined Sunday in a copyright story in The Louisville Courier-Journal. Raymond D. Clements, a former employee of Gust K. Newberg Construction Co., said he has met or talked by telephone to NRC investigators four times to explain plain how he was ordered to change records in early 1982 so that the documents wouldn't be questioned during routine NRC inspections.

Clements, 60, of Jeffersonville, Ind., told the newspaper that, depending on his orders, he sometimes made small changes and at other times rewrote documents. In the latter case, the original documents usually were destroyed, he said.

The records deal with the patching of defects in the concrete of safety-related buildings, including the containment buildings that will house the two nuclear reactors.

Orioles soar to world championship

LEAPING FOR JOY — Baltimore Orioles' pitcher Scott McGregor and catcher Rick Dempsey celebrate after the Orioles won the World Series in Philadelphia Sunday night. McGregor gave up five hits and shutout the Phillies in the final game, while Dempsey collected a double and a home run in the 5-0 win.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — They are a team of whole players, a baseball club assembled like an army that comes at you in waves, row after row of fresh troops.

And the Baltimore Orioles are the world champions today because they have mastered platoon baseball, a game that depends on moving players like chess pieces to suit situations.

This is not a team of greats, but it's a great team.

The general in charge of this battalion of spare parts is Joe Altobelli, a soft-spoken man whose club met the enemy at Philadelphia and wiped them out in five games.

"Now," he said, "I can go home and see my grand-kids."

The last time Baltimore was in a World Series was 1979, when the manager was Earl Weaver, a fiery Napoleon type. The Birds led that Series 3-1 — just like they did against Philadelphia. But they let Pittsburgh off the hook that year, losing in seven games, only the fifth time in history a team has blown that kind of edge. This time, with Gen. Altobelli calling the shots and 15 troops from that team still in Baltimore's army, the story had a different ending.

"He's the smartest guy I know," observed Eddie Murray, who battled his way out of a 2-for-16 Series slump with a pair of mammoth home runs and a single in Sunday's 5-0 wrapup victory. "He put the right nine out there every day."

Not the same nine, but the right nine. The difference between Weaver and Altobelli is mainly in style. One was a screamer and the other is not.

"They were both outstanding managers," said Rick Dempsey, the Series Most Valuable Player, who had Baltimore's other two hits Sunday — a double and homer — and batted .385 for the Series with five hits, all for extra bases. "When Joe came in, there was no yelling and screaming."

Gen. Altobelli preferred a low-key approach.

"Obviously, it's quieter in the dugout," said Scott McGregor, whose five-hit shutout finished the Phillies and helped soothe the memories of '79, when he was the seventh-game loser. "I think Joe is just as good a manager as Earl, and maybe it proved we didn't have to be fussed at all the time. But Earl couldn't have done it any other way."

McGregor's shutout gave Baltimore a 1.60 earned run average for the five-game Series, the best in 40 years.

The closest Philadelphia came to a run Sunday was in the eighth inning when Joe Morgan tripled and Pete Rose followed with a long fly to left field. Morgan tagged up but tripped leaving the base, falling to the ground and scrambling back. It was symbolic of the stumbling Phillie offense throughout the Series.

Baltimore lost the opener but swept the next four games, becoming the fourth team to accomplish that. The Orioles were the victims the last time it happened, in 1969 when the New York Mets won the world championship.

Without the designated hitter in this Series, Baltimore lost the use of Ken Singleton, one of its important offensive parts. It hardly disturbed Altobelli, who set a Series record by sending four consecutive pinch hitters to the plate in Saturday's fourth game and made nine lineup changes in one inning.

"I thought that was tremendous," said McGregor. "Watching him, you got the feeling he was bored by the DH."

Not bored, perhaps. But he certainly knew how to survive without it, using Baltimore's interchangeable parts.

"We did quite a few things like this during the course of the season," the general said. "It was just magnified here. This club won 94 games last year. I just wanted to keep us going in the same direction."

His approach was to use all his players. The left field job, for example, was shared by lefty-swinger John Lowenstein and righty Gary Roenicke. The result was a combined 34 home runs and 124 runs batted in, numbers neither was likely to approach playing fulltime.

"The major hurdle is the acceptance on the part of the players," said Lowenstein, who was 5-for-13 in the Series but never was allowed to see a left-handed pitcher.

"It takes maturity and it is a psychological adjustment as well as a mechanical one."

Remember Tito Landrum? He hit the home run that clinched the American League pennant. He never came to the plate in the World Series.

The Orioles' playoff victory, like the one that clinched the division title and the one that nailed down the world championship, all came on the road. The Orioles, in fact, assembled baseball's best record away from home, another measure of the team's maturity.

Of course, not all the parts were interchangeable. The switch-hitting Murray bats fourth and plays first base against all pitchers, slumps notwithstanding.

Murray was struggling, with just two singles in the first four Series games. But he made up for that with a pair of huge home runs, helping Baltimore to a 4-0 lead in Game Five. The second one smashed into the right field scoreboard, hitting just above his own name on a list of American League runs batted in leaders which was being displayed at the time.

Murray's slump-snapping homers were in sharp contrast to the problems that Philadelphia slugger Mike Schmidt went through. Schmidt managed just one broken bat single in 20 at-bats and was a major contributor to the Phillies' .195 Series batting average, lowest for any team since Baltimore batted .146 against the New York Mets in 1969.

Cowboys plaster Eagles

By GREG JAKLEWICZ
Sports Editor

DALLAS — Perhaps the most criticized winning team in the NFL, the Dallas Cowboys shucked the comeback Cowboys image in favor of the "Dallas destroyers," crushing the Philadelphia Eagles 37-7 here Sunday afternoon.

After having kept fans in their seats until the last second for at least four of their first six games, the Cowboys strung together four quarters of solid football: no 20-point deficits to wipe out, no game-winning safeties or overtime magic this weekend.

The job was thorough, swift and complete. The offense rolled up 522 yards, piled up a team record-tying 32 first downs and turned the ball over just once. The defense allowed 209 yards and made only one mistake.

The end of the game actually came with 11:28 to go in the third quarter. Tony Dorsett twisted through the left side of the Eagles' defense for a 7-yard touchdown run and Rafael Septien followed with the extra point that made it 30-7.

If Philadelphia had any prior hopes of doing to Dallas what Dallas had done to Washington in the season opener, Dorsett's run dashed those plans into the turf of Texas Stadium.

The first half Dallas stats were awesome. The Cowboys had 317 yards; the Eagles had 104 yards and just three first downs. Nothing had gone right since quarterback Ron Jaworski had unloaded an 83-yard scoring bomb to Mike Quick on the Eagles' first play from scrimmage.

The most impressive stat was the time of possession. Dallas ran 54 offensive plays and used 23:39 of the half. The Eagles had the ball for just 16 downs and 6:21. For a team that had floundered in the first half all season, the Cowboys took an about face before over 63,000 approving fans.

"We went out in the third quarter like it was 0-0," said Quarterback Danny White, who threw for 266 yards and 2 touchdowns. "The feeling in the lockerroom at halftime was that the one thing this team has had a hard time showing in the past is the killer instinct, an ability to put a team away when you have them on the ropes. That's what we really went after in the second half."

That start-to-finish effort locked up Dallas' seventh win against no defeats. The start is the best since 1977 when the Cowboys advanced and won Superbowl XII against Denver. The loss was the Eagles' worst since 1975.

"It was our best game," Cowboys coach Landry understated. "The players deserve a lot of credit. We've enjoyed wins, but we needed to start playing better football."

Utilizing a ground game that ran behind Phil Pozderac, Herbert Scott and Howard Richards — supposedly the weak side of the offensive line — Dallas drove from its 17 to the Eagle 14 on its first possession where two White passes went incomplete. Septien entered the game for a 31-yard field goal attempt and, like everything else he tried Sunday, the kick sailed through the uprights to give Dallas a 3-0 lead with 9:56 to go.

The only doubts Cowboys fans had Sunday came moments later when Quick got behind cornerback Dennis Thurman, and Jaworski floated an 83-yard scoring pass to the team's leading receiver. In just 18 seconds, the Eagles had gained their first... and last lead of the day.

On Philadelphia's next possession Jaworski called the same pass play, this time his throw was long and signaled the start of a long afternoon for the Eagles.

Dallas got the ball back and White drove the Cowboys into the lead. Mixing up the run and short pass, White moved Dallas to the Eagle 16. There, he hit tight end

Baltimore hurlers get respect

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — After 171 games and a 1.11 postseason earned run average, Baltimore pitching coach Ray Miller thinks the Orioles' staff may finally get the recognition it deserves.

"I couldn't have sat down before the start of the season and planned a better ending than the one we had," Miller said after Scott McGregor pitched a five-hitter and blanked the Philadelphia Phillies 5-0 Sunday to clinch the World Series for the Orioles.

The Baltimore staff allowed just 10 earned runs in nine post season games — two in the American League playoffs to the Chicago White Sox and eight to the Phillies.

It was a fitting windup for a staff that was in danger of collapsing during the season.

Jim Palmer, a three-time Cy Young Award winner, was on the disabled list twice during the season and Mike Flanagan, the 1979 winner, once. Dennis Martinez slumped to a 7-16 record, and reliever Tippy Martinez was sidelined with an emergency appendectomy.

RICK DEMPSEY
...Series MVP

But rookie Mike Boddicker, given a chance when Palmer and Flanagan went down, won 16 games and second-year starter Storm Davis won 13. In addition, Alan Ramirez and Bill Swaggerty were called from the minors to make significant contributions in starting roles.

Catcher Rick Dempsey, who was named the Most Valuable Player in the Series, said he was worried about the pitching as late as the final week of the regular season.

"After clinching the division in Milwaukee," Dempsey said, "our pitchers went into a lull. They had no velocity, no breaking balls and I was beginning to become concerned."

But Dempsey added, "We seemed to come alive against the White Sox and in the World Series, everything came together."

The only two games lost in postseason play, the opener of the playoffs and the opener of the Series, were by 2-1 scores with McGregor on the mound.

"That's the way it was late in the season for Scotty," said Miller. "He was knocked out a few times, but I can't remember when he pitched a bad game."

Redskins test porous Packers

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — The Green Bay Packer defense has been breached so often by National Football League opponents that a state legislator, during a speech on the floor of the Legislature, cited it while dramatizing the horrors of loopholes in the law.

The statistically worst defense in the NFL plays host tonight at Lambeau Field to one of the league's finest offenses, that of the Washington Redskins who have won 21 of their last 23 games.

"This is the best that our league has to offer," Packer Coach Bart Starr said in analyzing the Redskins, adding: "We'll be ready to play" despite the injuries that have sidelined many of his starters.

Typical of the substitutes he has to use is nose tackle Charles Johnson, a 1980 starter who was cut and replaced by Terry Jones. An injury put Jones aside in the first defensive play of the current season, and Johnson was re-acquired.

"What goes around, comes around," Johnson said. "It's funny the way things work out."

It may not be funny when the Redskins' offense assaults the Packer defense. But Johnson said he is ready.

"It's definitely a challenge for me and everyone on the team," he said. "It is going to be on national television, and against the Super Bowl champions. That's enough incentive for anyone to be ready to play."

Steelers stomp Browns

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

It's no longer the Steel Curtain, and Mike Merriweather, Dwayne Woodruff and Greg Best don't roll off the tongue like Mean Joe Greene. But the Pittsburgh Steeler defense is beginning to conjure up memories of the team that won four Super Bowls during the 1970s.

The Steelers ran their record to 5-2 Sunday by routing the Cleveland Browns 44-17 with the defense forcing seven turnovers and scoring two touchdowns to continue to fill the offensive gap left by an injury to Terry Bradshaw. The two scores followed three by the defense in last Monday night's 24-14 victory over Cincinnati.

"We always had one foot in the grave and one on a banana peel," muttered Browns Coach Sam Rutigliano, who watched quarterback Brian Sipe throw the ball to Pittsburgh on his first three possessions. "I don't know what it is, but I want to keep it going," said Steeler Coach Chuck Noll.

Sunday was a day for defensive offense all over the NFL.

There were nine touchdowns scored by the defense in 13 games, seven by interceptions and two by fumbles. Several other turnovers set up important touchdowns.

Seattle forced eight Raider turnovers and beat Los Angeles 38-36 despite Seahawk quarterback Jim Zorn being four for 13 for two net yards. The Miami Dolphins intercepted six passes en route to a 32-14 victory over the New York Jets.

Dwight Hicks' 62-yard interception return for a touchdown capped a 16-point third period spurt to give the San Francisco 49ers a 32-13 triumph over New Orleans in a game in which Ray Wersching kicked six field goals.

Minnesota forced six fumbles to beat Houston 34-14. Rick Sanford raced 26 yards with a fumble to set up the go-ahead touchdown in New England's 37-21 victory over San Diego and Durwood Roquemore's 46-yard interception return was the go-ahead score as Kansas City beat the New York Giants 38-17.

Dallas, meanwhile, continued as the league's only unbeaten team, rolling to a 37-7 rout over Philadelphia to run its record to 7-0.

Elsewhere, it was St. Louis 34, Tampa Bay 27; Detroit 31, Chicago 17; Buffalo 30, Baltimore 7; Denver 24, Cincinnati 17, and the Los Angeles Rams 27, Atlanta 21.

Washington plays at Green Bay tonight.

In Pittsburgh, Merriweather's interception return made the score 17-0 after only six minutes and the rout was on as Cleveland lost for the 14th time in as many visits to Three Rivers Stadium.

Cliff Stoudt completed 14 of 18 passes for 194 yards for Pittsburgh, but it was still the defense that won the day.

"Everyone is playing more aggressively," Woodruff, who had two interceptions, said of the Steeler defense. "We're not waiting for things to happen, we're making them happen."

Seahawks 38, Raiders 36
In Seattle, the Seahawks, 4-3, forced five turnovers from Jim Plunkett and eight overall and Paul Johns returned a punt 75 yards for a touchdown to hand the Raiders their second loss in seven games. Linebacker Shelton Robinson picked up a Plunkett fumble and returned it 9 yards for a score.

Cardinals 34, Buccaneers 27
Tampa Bay lost to 2-5 St. Louis as Neil Lomax passed for 166 yards and three touchdowns. The Bucs, however, got another of those defensive touchdowns when Hugh Green returned an interception 33 yards.

Dolphins 32, Jets 14
Rookie quarterback Dan Marino threw three touchdown passes for Miami, 4-3, and burned the 3-4 Jets with a defensive score when Doug Betters deflected a Richard Todd pass to Kim Bokamper, who ran it in from 24 yards out.

Rams 27, Falcons 21
Vince Ferragamo's 2-yard touchdown pass to Mike Guman with 17 seconds left ran the Rams' record to 5-2 and left the Falcons at 2-5. The Rams were helped by a 16-yard pass interference call against Atlanta's Ken Johnson that put the ball at the 2.

Chiefs 38, Giants 17
Kansas City, 3-4, trailed the Giants, 2-5, 17-10 late in the third quarter. But Bill Kenney, who passed for a career-high 342 yards, threw a 46-yard touchdown pass for one score and Roquemore picked off a Scott Brunner pass and took it in for the tiebreaker on the next series.

Patriots 37, Chargers 21
San Diego, 3-4, led New England 21-10 at the half and 21-16 late in the third quarter. But James Brooks fumbled, Sanford took the ball 26 yards to the 1 and Mark van Eeghen took it in from there to put the Patriots, 3-4, ahead for good.

Lions 31, Bears 17
Billy Sims, out five weeks with an injury, scored his first touchdown of the year for Detroit, 3-4 against the 2-5 Bears. Eric Hipple ran in one score on a fake field goal, threw for another touchdown and Gary Danielson also tossed a touchdown pass while Hipple was temporarily sidelined with an injury.

Houston crumbles again

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — To Houston fullback Earl Campbell, the Oilers' 14th straight loss, a 34-14 romp by Minnesota, sounded like the latest verse in a depressing country music song.

"It's like that old country western tune, 'The hangovers hurt more than they used to.' These losses hurt more than they used to," said Campbell, who chalked up 130 yards in 29 carries in Sunday's losing effort.

To the swarming Minnesota defense, which forced eight Houston turnovers, the game sounded more like comic Rodney Dangerfield's "I don't get no respect" routine.

"We've been aware of rumors going around that we're not too good against the run and so we came in at a high-intensity level," said Minnesota defensive end Neil Elshire.

Elshire, making his first pro start in his 3-year career, earned some respect. He had four solo tackles, seven assists, a blocked pass, a fumble recovery and he sacked Houston quarterback Gifford Nielsen three times — including a blind-side jolt that forced the ball to squirm loose into the waiting hands of nose guard Charlie Johnson, who dashed 50 yards for a touchdown.

"I was lying on the ground and I thought it was just a sack," Elshire said. "But I looked up and saw Charlie cookin' downfield — I really enjoyed watching that." Johnson's touchdown gave Minnesota a 10-0 lead midway through the first quarter. But Campbell, who has now run for 100 yards 36 times in his career and four times this season, made it 10-7 when he carried a pair of Minnesota defenders into the end zone on a 13-yard run. That was the closest Houston ever came. A third quarter, 35-yard Nielsen to Chris Dreschel touchdown pass was Houston's only other score.

Minnesota's offense, led by quarterback Steve Dils and running back Darrin Nelson, opened up a 20-7 halftime lead and added a pair of touchdowns rushes from running back Teddy Brown in the fourth quarter to blow the game open.

"I'm more relaxed now and I'm having fun out there and that's what football is all about," said Nelson, who ran 13 times for 74 yards and grabbed four passes for 57 yards.

Dils, Nelson's former quarterback at Stanford, "had by far my best day of the season," connecting on 20 of 34 passes for 227 yards and a 23-yard scoring strike to tight end Steve Jordan.

"I getting more confident and I'm a more comfortable back there than I've been in a long time," said Dils, who took over for an injured Tommy Kramer five games ago.

Minnesota Coach Bud Grant said the key to the victory was that Dils didn't throw any interceptions and the Vikings didn't fumble once while Houston lost five fumbles, two interceptions and had a punt blocked by rookie linebacker Walker Lee Ashley.

Cowboys

Doug Cosbie over the middle for a first down at the 1, and fullback Ron Springs dove over for the TD on the next play.

With 1:54 to go in the quarter, Dallas led 10-7.

By the end of the period, the Cowboys had 12 first downs to 1 for the Eagles.

Philadelphia had 88 total yards, 83 on one play. Things wouldn't get much better.

The second quarter began nicely for the Cowboys. Jaworski tried to find Quick again, but cornerback Everson Walls stepped in front of the pass at his own 40 and returned the interception to the Philadelphia 46. A 19-yard pass from White to Cosbie put the ball at the 15 and White again went to his big tight end, this time for the touchdown. Septien's second PAT upped the score to 17-7 with 11:05 left in the half.

Dallas scored on its next possession with Septein capping an 86-yard drive with a 46-yard field goal.

That came with 56 seconds left in the half before the team's yielded the field to the U.S. Marine Corps band. But when Harvey Martin tipped a Jaworski pass incomplete and the Eagle quarterback was sacked by Ed "Too Tall" Jones and Don Smerek, the Cowboys had one more shot at scoring.

Taking over at his 49, White passed 26 yard to Cosbie for a first down at the Eagle 25. His next pass was tipped at the line of scrimmage by Jerry Robinson but the possible interception was presented when Timmy Newsome tipped the ball out of his hands. Instead of falling to the ground the ball went into the hands of center Tom Rafferty who rumbled eight yards before being tackled. With two seconds to go, Septein kicked a 34-yard field to give Dallas a 23-7 lead. The team left the field to a standing ovation.

The closest Eagles came to scoring in the second half was in the third quarter when Jaworski directed the Eagles from their 22 to the Dallas 18. A second down pass, however, was intercepted by Thurman in the end zone.

The final scoring in the game came with 13:14 left in the game when White passed to Newsome. Septein's final kick put the score at 37-7.

"Everything worked for us. Even our busted plays worked," said Coach Tom Landry, "Danny worked hard all week and he had good recognition. They were giving Cosbie a lot of room and when he gets in that situation you like to work to him."

Cosbie hauled in 6 passes for 83 yards, while Butch Johnson, making the most of increased playing time since Tony Hill's foot injury, caught 4 passes for 48 yards.

Jaworski replaced by Joe Pisarcik in the fourth quarter left the game with 7 completion in 20 attempts. He was sacked twice.

"They just did a great job on us," the Eagles starter said. "They had really good constant pressure. They had Harvey Martin and Too Tall (Jones) coming in and they made me step up a lot."

"I don't think they even got untracked" said the Cowboy's Johnson. "We're 7-0 and I don't think anybody else in the league can claim that. We're going from 16-0 — why not?"

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTEA INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1983

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to consider the best ways and means by which you will be able to take your imaginative and idealistic ideas and plans and put them into some form of successful detailed action.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Plan time for riding yourself of small details that should be handled before you can make progress in new outlets, or regular ones.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Ideal day to get your ambitions clear in your mind so that you can later go after them in a very efficient manner.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Be analytical of your career and know how best to improve it and you can take big strides forward today and tonight.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Be sure you know all the facts, factors and figures of any new arrangements you are endeavoring to make.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Study your many responsibilities and find ways to cut down on them so that you do not overwork. Handle the most important.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Situations arise that will show you how best you can please those you are allied with, and remove tensions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be more concerned with getting everything around you in more harmonious condition and put aside weighty matters for a while.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) More preparation is needed before you can make those new ideas work successfully, so get busy on such now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Do whatever it is that kin expect of you early and come to a better accord with them. Be tactful today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get all that correspondences handled about which you have been procrastinating and do it wisely.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get at the business of collections and then pay your most pressing bills so that you can keep out of hot water.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Concentrate on self and know what you truly want out of life and plan just how to attain your aims.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... He or she will be one of those delightful young persons who will early concentrate on how to realize his, or her fondest wishes and will formulate a very detailed plan for so doing. Provide fine spiritual guidance and a good education.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Saturday Night Massacre

Archibald Cox was victim, hero of purge

WASHINGTON (AP) — A decade after he became the victim and hero of Watergate's "Saturday Night Massacre," Archibald Cox says the business of cleaning up government is far from over.

Cox says the influence of money on politicians, secrecy in government and a lack of visible concern by the country's leaders for public morality linger on as national problems.

"The chief unfinished business of Watergate is securing our democratic political process against corruption by large sums of special interest money," Cox said in an interview.

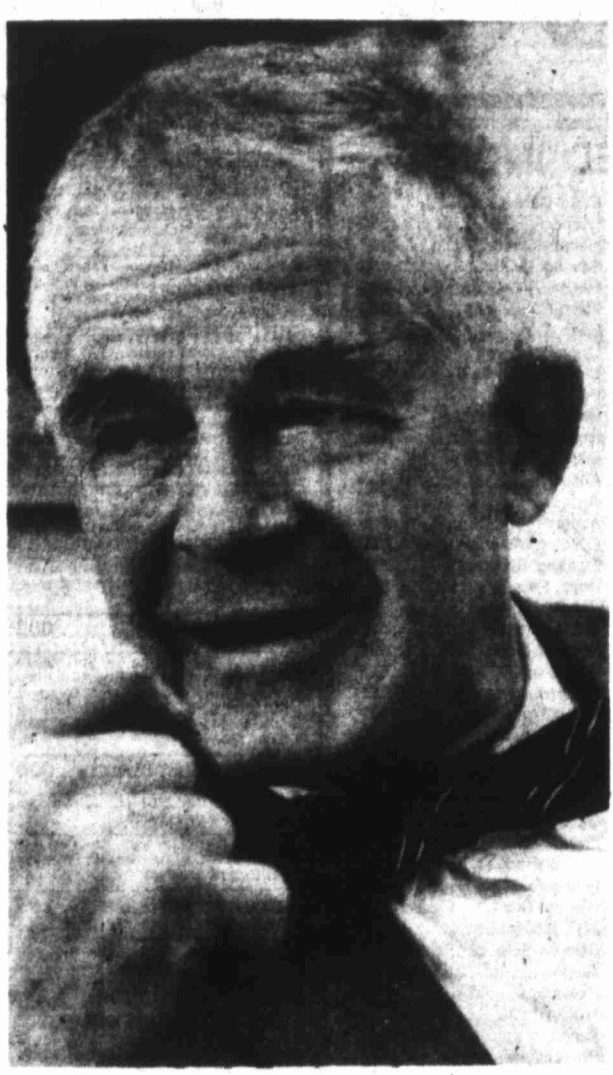

Cox was the special prosecutor who was fired because of his efforts to get White House tape recordings for use by a federal grand jury. Attorney General Elliott Richardson and his deputy, William French Smith, resigned in the same incident rather than obey President Nixon's orders to fire Cox. The incident, which became known as the Saturday Night Massacre, occurred Oct. 20, 1973, 10 years ago Thursday.

Now chairman of Common Cause, Cox departed his brief term as Watergate prosecutor with the remark: "I have sort of a naive belief... that right will prevail in the end."

Despite his ouster of Cox, Nixon became the first U.S. president to resign and numbers of his lieutenants, campaign officials, contributors and others were prosecuted. Some, including a former attorney general, went to jail. Others, including some major corporations, paid fines.

But has right prevailed? "Not totally," Cox replied. "Important ground has been gained in a number of respects. It was gained in terms of large sums of special interest money by putting a ceiling on the size of individual contributions, by requiring more reporting and especially by providing for partial, and then in the general election, complete, public funding of presidential elections.

"But the right hasn't yet prevailed," Cox added. "The danger to it is getting greater in terms of the money flowing through in MASSACRE REMEMBERED — Archibald Cox gestures during an interview in Washington recently to discuss the events of Oct. 20, 1973, otherwise known as the "Saturday Night Massacre." the form of political action committee contributions and their effect on the Congress.

Nixon raised an unprecedented $60 million for his 1972 presidential reelection campaign, and federal investigators said some of that money went for such illicit purposes as the burglary of Democratic Party headquarters in the Watergate office building here.

Subsequent reform laws have limited private contributions in presidential campaigns, but money from special interest groups, through their political action committees, or PACs, has been diverted to congressional races. Common Cause, a citizens group that specializes in monitoring campaign activity, estimates PACs contributed more than $80 million to last year's congressional campaigns.

"I think the Watergate experience, no doubt, is one of the principal reasons I am now here as chairman of Common Cause, both in terms of my wanting to do it and the members wanting me to be chairman."

Cox said PACs have become the country's "single greatest domestic problem today, because it appears to bias in favor of contributors, PAC contributors, the entire process on Capitol Hill."

PACs invest heavily in the campaigns of congressmen who sit on committees with jurisdiction over their particular interests. Cox said this leaves a dangerous impression that such concentrated campaign contributions affect legislation before the committees.

"I'm not suggesting there's any direct quid pro quo," Cox said. But he said anyone testifying before such a committee on a bill backed or opposed by big campaign contributors "would feel that he or she didn't get a fair shot at it."

"And I'm not only suggesting but asserting it's all too likely, as many members of Congress have said, that members of the committee, in casting their votes, are bound to worry about (contributions) when it comes to the next campaign," Cox said.

"And, of course, the appearance of bias is bound to bring loss of confidence, is bound to bring cynicism and acceptance that government is a rigoff," Cox said.

"And I suppose if there is one single thing that representative government can't survive, it's a really major loss of people's confidence," Cox said. "They stop voting. They stop caring."

The public interest that forced the Watergate prosecution to continue after Cox was fired is not as strong today in the face of less obvious dangers, Cox said. And he said the Reagan administration is not providing the leadership to nurture it.

"I worry at times that in this administration particularly there's a lack of enthusiasm for high standards of integrity," Cox said. "I think the emphasis is lacking, the leadership is lacking, and there is really a tolerance (among administration officials) for things which do not appear to be illegal but what I would call shabby."

"And you couple with that the attorney general's talk about repealing the Special Prosecutor Act, (White House Counsel) Fred Fielding's talk about narrowing financial disclosure by not making their financial statements public, talk about repeal of the law penalizing foreign bribery," Cox added.

Cox also said one of the things that made Watergate possible and kept it covered up for so long "was the tremendous secrecy around the White House, and I find the present pressures to increase secrecy... a very worrisome thing."
