Man charged in hit-and-run fatal accident

A 25-year-old Big Spring man was arrested Sunday night on suspicion of involuntary manslaughter in connection with the hit-and-run death Sunday morning of a 32-year-old pedestrian on a Howard County road.

Timothy Donald Taylor, 25, of 1801 Choctaw was released on $15,000 bond after being charged with involuntary manslaughter in the death of Kenneth Don Clement of Midland, according to Howard County sheriff's records.

Taylor was arrested at 9:25 p.m. Sunday night after he made a statement to three law enforcement officials investigating the accident, Howard County Sheriff A.N. Standard said.

According to an accident report filed by Department of Public Safety trooper Jim Lasater, Clement was struck at 6 a.m. Sunday by an unknown vehicle traveling westbound on Jeffrey Road 3.7 miles south of Big Spring. Lasater said, "He (Taylor) topped a rise and ran over him (Clement)." According to Lasater, Taylor and Clement had been at the same party prior to the accident. He did not say where the party was.

Taylor made a statement to law enforcement officials, Lasater said. Alcohol was a factor in the accident, Lasater said.

Justice of the Peace Lewis Heflin pronounced Clement dead at the scene of the accident, and ordered his body taken to Malone-Hogan Hospital for an autopsy. The autopsy showed Taylor died from massive chest wounds.

The body was taken to Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home pending services.

Lasater, Chief sheriff's deputy Bill Shankles and reserve deputy Robert Stapp interviewed several persons before arresting Taylor, Standard said.

LULAC blasts Hance; says he is anti-Hispanic

LUBBOCK (AP) — Meeting in U.S. Senate candidate Kent Hance's home town, the League of United Latin American Citizens state convention chastised Hance for his claims that illegal aliens take jobs from U.S. citizens and abuse the welfare system.

KENT HANCE

Hance's late blitz of television commercials saying he opposed amnesty for undocumented workers was credited with propelling the Lubbock congressman into a surprising first-place finish in a close three-man race for the Democratic nomination.

Hance, a conservative, faces liberal state Sen. Lloyd Doggett of Austin in a June 2 runoff.

Both candidates appeared before the convention in a Saturday debate.

On Sunday, the league adopted a resolution calling for a statewide forum to determine "whether or not Kent Hance abused the U.S. Hispanic community by composing anti-Hispanic propaganda and creating an anti-Hispanic political atmosphere in Texas."

Mata said Hance campaign representatives met with LULAC officials Saturday night in an attempt to block adoption of the resolution.

Hance campaign spokesman Tom O'Donnell said Hance attended the meeting but was not informed that a resolution would be passed and was "surprised."

"The biggest surprise was that they didn't pass a similar resolution against Doggett for his stand on employer sanctions," O'Donnell said.

O'Donnell said Hance would not change his position on illegal aliens.

Commissioners nix jail pact with city

By KEELY COGHLAN Staff Writer

County commissioners today agreed not to enter into a contract with the city allowing the city jail to house county prisoners.

Commissioners based the decision on information from the State Jail Standards Commission stating that such a contract would violate state requirements.

"I have nothing against entering into a contract with the city if they become certified," County Judge Milton Kirby said. "But I don't want to do anything to put us in danger of losing certification for the jail upstairs."

Kirby said he was told by someone at the Jail Standards Commission that, "We would be flirting with real danger if we entered into a contract with (the city.) If you can show us a case where (the city) filed on someone and he was committed on a court order to county jail, then I say pay (the city.)"

City Councilman Russ McEwen, who was on hand at today's meeting to discuss the proposed contract, said, "The city's intention was to enter into a contract once they became certified. Our intent is not in any way to enter into a contract that would cause decertification of the county jail or to get you to enter into a contract that is illegal."

McEwen said the city only had to become certified if it entered into a contract with the county. The city is not now applying for certification, he said.

County commissioners contacted City Manager Don Davis to try to get him to attend the meeting. He was to attend later today.

Commissioners discussed another city-county contract. This one regards dispatching by the police department at night for the sheriff's office. Former police dispatcher Jeanette Meeks told commissioners the county should hire its own dispatcher because police dispatchers don't have time to handle the calls.

"I feel you'd get a lot better service if you had your own dispatcher at the county," Mrs. Meeks said.

Odd lodge

OUT OF THE WAY — Two youngsters play on the stairway at the Grande Lodge Motel, an odd little motel on the outskirts of downtown Dallas.

Room, but not bored

A motel's funny formula for success

DALLAS (AP) — The Grande Lodge Motel in Oak Cliff has a scheme for lodging that seems guaranteed to put it out of business.

Located at 1401 N. Zang Blvd., it is in the wrong place, bypassed by every major highway in town. It doesn't advertise, it has no restaurant or cocktail lounge, and no Godiva chocolates placed on the pillows each night.

Even its name — pronounced Gran-dee — is wrong.

But for more than 50 years, the little motel has thrived on a regional, word-of-mouth reputation that has produced a steady stream of guests from as far away as Europe and Australia.

The lodge has made oddness its formula for success.

By current standards, "it really shouldn't be there anymore," said G.W. Cage, the local businessman who owned the motel for 32 years and operated it until his retirement six months ago.

Cloistered in a grove of trees just across the Trinity River from downtown, the lodge resembles a little Mexican village or a low-budget theme park more than it does a motel.

Its winding lanes and clustered stucco bungalows contrast with the glittering skyline looming over it.

Inside the enclave, the guests relax on their front stoops, which are standard equipment with each bungalow, along with a small patch of yard. A litter of cats prowls the grounds for mice and table scraps; a battered refrigerator is provided in most rooms to keep the beer cold, and the maids sometimes can be persuaded to do laundry for a long-term visitor.

Regular out-of-town guests receive a card every Christmas.

A scrapbook in the office contains pictures of some of those guests, as well as old matchbooks, postcards, photographs of the motel after the 1949 ice storm and newspaper clippings detailing the 1951 robbery of the night manager.

The lodge, however, did not become an oddity by design.

Built in 1929 by two Texas businessmen, the motel was to be part of a statewide chain of tourist lodges, all with the same Spanish architecture and with "Grande" in their names. The entrepreneurs built three others in Texas and formed a trade association to promote the fledgling chain.

"And then something happened — I don't know what — and each went their separate ways," Cage said.

Cage has preserved the name and the rural atmosphere and nurtured a loyal clientele over the decades.

Rappaport said he intends to make some concessions to modern lodging tastes without obliterating the motel's special appeal.

"It's like a family here," said manager Heather Stimack, who left her job at the Marriott Hotel on Stemmons Freeway six months ago to live and work at the Grande Lodge.

"We feel like it's a little oasis," said Ralph Mortensen and his wife, Carol, Illinois residents who are living at the Grande while Mortensen, a carpenter, works on the telephone company building construction downtown. "We feel comfortable here."

Mortensen said he had a company truck with about $10,000 worth of company tools and wanted to park right outside his

Montford to speak at awards banquet

JOHN MONTFORD

State Sen. John T. Montford will be the featured speaker at the Youth Achievement Awards at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Big Spring County Club.

Sixteen area youths from four area schools have been nominated for the Youth Achievement Awards. Winners from each school will be announced at the banquet.

Nominated from Big Spring High School are Michelle E. Bowers, Kay Lynn Pollard, Brown Jaye Allen, and Wendy Lynn Walker.

From Coahoma High School are Carey Don Jones, Janna J. Griffin, Ronda Fowler, and Tibetha Ann (Tobie) Henry.

From Forsan are Catherine B. Thurman, William C. Melton Jr., Connie Fuller Eggleston, and David Lucas.

From Sands High School in Ackerly are Sabrina Kay Young, James Marshall Long, Johnny Christopher Wigginton and Daniel Franco.

The Youth Achievement Awards are sponsored by the Big Spring Herald, Zales Jewelers and the Big Spring Rotary Club.

Sen. Montford has made several trips to Big Spring during the past several months. Most recently, he visited with a crowd of more than 200 educators and school administrators in a town hall meeting at Big Spring High School to discuss the Governor's Select Committee on Education report.

The report, spearheaded by Dallas businessman H. Ross Perot, has come under fire. Montford said he wanted to get the opinions of people in his district before he voted on the program.

Montford is a former Lubbock District Attorney. He is running unopposed in the November elections for his state senatorial District 28 seat.

Montford offered support to Big Spring's SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf. The Senator joined a battle to gain an extra $1.9 million in funding for the school last spring when the facility was facing a shut-down if more funds were not made available through the state Legislature.

Weather

By The Associated Press

Summertime weather was the rule across Texas early today as a few light showers dampened the northeast portion of the Panhandle.

However, forecasters saw little possibility of relief to drought-parched farming and ranching areas of West Texas.

Highs clouds were scattered over most of Texas before dawn while some low clouds hovered over southern sections of the state. An isolated thunderstorm was detected by radar before dawn just south of the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Pre-dawn temperatures were generally in the 60s and 70s, although a few readings in the 50s were noted in the higher elevations of Southwest Texas. Temperatures at 4 a.m. ranged from 53 at Marfa to 74 at Brownsville.

Northeasterly winds around 10 mph were reported across the Panhandle, South Plains and the Trans Pecos. Light southerly breezes were noted across the rest of the state.

The forecast called for a slight chance of thunderstorms in the Panhandle, Lower Rio Grande Valley and along the Rio Grande. However, fair to partly cloudy skies, along with afternoon temperatures in the 80s and 90s, were expected to be the rule through Tuesday.

Cloudy skies brought rain to much of the Northeast today, as a cold front scattered showers and thunderstorms over portions of the Tennessee Valley to southeast Colorado.

Showers and thunderstorms lingered across parts of the northern Rockies and Great Basin, but skies were generally fair over the remainder of the nation.

Rising temperatures threatened to send more runoff from mountain snowpacks in western states already saturated and sandbagged.

In Utah, where a mudslide killed a 70-year-old man Sunday, the National Weather Service predicted temperatures in the upper 80s and 90s today, "further aggravating the situation," said forecaster Ed Carle.

Austin dormitory burns

AUSTIN — More than 200 students were evacuated when an early morning fire heavily damaged the 16th floor of a campus dormitory at the University of Texas, fire officials said.

The blaze broke out about 3:30 a.m. Sunday in a lounge at The Castilian, a privately operated facility, and rapidly spread across the floor, officials said.

The cause of the fire was under investigation.

One student was treated for minor smoke inhalation, authorities said.

Booby-trapped man dies

FORT WORTH (AP) — A 62-year-old man believed to be despondent over illness and marital problems was found dead, his house booby-trapped with explosives and gasoline, authorities said.

His body was found Sunday evening by his brother with a gunshot wound in the mouth. A .44-caliber handgun was found beside the body, authorities said.

Gift triggers shooting

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman's displeasure with her Mother's Day gift triggered an argument that resulted in the shooting death of a 22-year-old Galena Park man, police said.

Cal Andre Franklin, 22, was shot at 4:30 p.m. Sunday at a residence in northeast Houston and died about 45 minutes later at Ben Taub Hospital, investigators said.

The shooting took place after Franklin and his girlfriend went to the woman's house to spend Mother's Day with her mother and several sisters, police said.

One daughter gave the mother a plague with Psalm 23 inscribed on it, with the woman expressed displeasure with that and her other gifts and threw the plaque into the trash, police said.

The 48-year-old woman grabbed a pistol from her purse and shot Franklin in the jaw after he remarked that his mother would have shown appreciation for the gift, according to a police report.

The victim grabbed a cane and tried to deflect the woman's aim as one of her daughters urged her to fire, police said.

Police took the woman into custody.

WALL TOWNSHIP — And you thought '34 Fords and bobby socks were passe.

For while last week, they were the rage again among the nostalgic types who gathered at the Circus Drive-In on Route 35 in New Jersey to mark its 30th anniversary.

"My wife and I met here in 1962," recalled Rich Bartley, who in those days greased his hair with Vaseline.

"I was in a car with a bunch of girls and he was in his car with a bunch of guys," recalled wife Eileen. "He had a '56 Mercury named 'Creme de Menthe.'"

The Bartleys and thousands like them turned out to help the drive-in mark the event.

The eatery, known for its red and white circus-tent design and clown-faced road sign, was packed all day. And for good reason: The prices also reflected earlier times.

Owner Dick Friedel advertised the restaurant's original menu at 1954 rates — 30 cents for a hamburger, 20 cents for a hot dog, 10 cents for a Coke and 50 cents for a banana split.

"It's a once in a lifetime thing," said Friedel.

WATER BOYS — Volunteers Sunday help erect a sandbag dike to contain flood waters in Salt Lake City.

Snow melt unleashes floods

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Rising temperatures today threatened to accelerate mountain runoff that sent a mudslide smashing through three homes in central Utah, burying a 70-year-old man and washing another man out of one building and into another.

The mudslide in the Carbon County town of Clear Creek came as temperatures soared Sunday into the mid 80s, melting mountain snow in northern, western and central Utah.

Temperatures in the state were expected to climb into the upper 80s and 90s today, "further aggravating the situation," said National Weather Service forecaster Ed Carle.

Hundreds of volunteers piled sandbags in Salt Lake's Liberty Park on Sunday to contain the runoff, and more workers were being sought today.

A sandbag channel has been built through the park to divert some of the runoff that normally flows under South Street to storm drains.

In Colorado, authorities in Routt County warned residents in downtown Oak Creek that a temporary dam strained by spring runoff was "seeping and about to break" and that the situation was "potentially dangerous."

Sheriff Tim Walsh said no evacuation was ordered as of Sunday night. The dam, believed to hold about 5,000 acre-feet of water, is on Oak Creek just north of the town.

Police in Hazard, Ky., meanwhile were keeping a watchful eye on a 250,000-gallon water tank that could be forced over a mountaintop by a mud slide. "The foundation under the water tank isn't very good," Hazard Mayor Bill Gorman said Sunday, adding that the tank rests on the back of a "massive" slide about 150 feet wide.

In Clear Creek, Utah, Iver Joel Koski, 70, was killed and his brother-in-law, Richard Sutton, 53, was in good condition with broken ribs after they were caught by a slide in the town of about 50 people 100 miles southwest of Salt Lake City.

Slides had occurred last week, but "they never notified us they had a problem" said Sheriff A. Ross Horsley.

Koski and Frank Helsten were talking outside a home and Sutton was inside. They had been removing belongings from that and other homes.

"They heard a loud noise, looked up and saw a tree shaking," Helsten said.

"I've never seen anything like. I ran and when I looked back it was all over with," Helsten said. "I've worked in the mines 35 years and I've seen lots of cave-ins, but this has got them all beat."

News in brief

Explosion rocks Athens

ATHENS — A powerful explosion tore through a downtown office building today, seriously injuring at least six people and trapping several others under debris, police said.

Police initially said the blast was caused by a bomb, but later said a gas heater might have exploded.

The blast, which shook buildings several blocks away, went off near the National Bank of Greece's central building at the corner of Stadium Avenue and Georgau Stavrou, police said.

Eyewitnesses said the blast, which occurred at 2:30 p.m. (7:30 a.m. EDT), knocked over more than 15 people who were waiting at a nearby bus stop.

S. African refinery hit

DURBAN — Four guerrillas rocketed an oil refinery, then led police on a car chase through a waterfront industrial area before police killed all four early today in a shootout at a construction yard, police said.

Police spokesmen said three other persons died inside a paint storage shed that caught fire during the 20-minute shootout. Their bodies were burned beyond recognition but paint shop owner Mahomed Joosub said two were male employees who often slept in the shed, and the third was a woman. Four policemen were wounded during the chase.

Filipinos go to polls

MANILA — Despite a boycott and a series of bloody shootouts, Filipinos crowded polling places today to elect a National Assembly in the first major test of President Ferdinand E. Marcos' strength since the Benigno Aquino assassination.

About a dozen people were killed today in incidents linked to the balloting and 26 people were reported killed on election eve, according to police and news reports.

Polls closed an hour earlier than usual so counting could begin before dark, when violence was considered more likely. Official results were not expected for many hours, possibly days.

Police with truncheons broke up a boycott rally by several hundred urban workers.

Actress Theresa Saldana says she'll recreate in a movie a stabbing attack that almost killed her.

Rose Kennedy got to go home on Mother's Day from the hospital, where she was treated for a chronic illness.

Crime impact declines, federal study shows

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robbery, aggravated assault and burglary were dramatically less widespread in 1983 as 7 percent fewer U.S. households were touched by crime than the year before, the Justice Department says.

The department's Bureau of Justice Statistics reported Sunday that 27 percent of U.S. households, or 23.6 million of the total 86.1 million households, suffered one or more crimes during the year.

In 1982, nearly 25 million households out of a total of 85.2 million, or 29 percent, were touched by crime. The bureau said the decline in 1983 was the largest in the nine years the figures have been gathered.

While the percentage of households hit by crime in 1983 was 2 points lower than the comparable figure for the previous year, that 2-point decrease represents 7 percent of the households victimized in 1982.

For the first time, virtually every type affected fewer households.

And, the pervasiveness declined in urban, suburban and rural areas, although black and urban households continued to be more vulnerable to crime than white or suburban or rural households.

The number of households experiencing at least one robbery dropped by 19 percent, while the figures for aggravated and burglary dropped by 9 percent and 11 percent, respectively.

Only 6.1 percent of the nation's households experienced one or more burglaries, the lowest percentage ever recorded in the nine years. Some 5.3 million households were burglarized.

Opinion

What's the worth of performance?

The first impulse on learning of hefty pay hikes for many top U.S. executives, including those in the still shaky auto industry, is to condemn these increases as crass, greedy and unwarranted.

When one hears that General Motors Corp. Chairman Roger B. Smith became the first official in GM history to earn more than $1 million a year, it appears he is grossly overpaid. But, reading on, you discover that Smith's salary of $1,058,000 actually is worth far less than the $925,000 that GM Chairman Frederic Doiner received in 1965.

On the other hand, there is the case of Ford Chairman Philip Caldwell, who reportedly took in $1.4 million in salary and bonuses in 1983, compared to $445,833 in 1982. That seems a little steep.

Nor are the big executive pay increases limited to just the top executives. At GM, the company paid 5,087 executives bonuses that averaged $31,289.

These large executive pay and bonus hikes could cause both Ford and GM a big headache when talks begin in July with the United Auto Workers union on a new wage contract.

UAW President Owen Bieber made this clear when he told Time magazine, "If these executives who are providing so well for themselves think for one minute that they can convince workers to do without an upfront raise this summer, they better think again."

What really makes employees and stockholders sizzle is when their top officers pay themselves handsomely even when the company is losing money or profits are dropping. In 1982, for example, Time reports that the salary of Mobil Oil Corp. Chairman Rawleigh Warner Jr. increased nearly 36 percent, to $1.4 million, even though Mobil's earnings fell.

But if a chief executive is a star performer for a large company, shouldn't he be worth as much as a TV anchorman, or a professional baseball, football or basketball player?

For example, Apple Computer directors are happy to have paid John Sculley $1.8 million last year in his first seven months as president because he reorganized the company's product line and successfully directed the marketing of two new computers. The chairman of Apple, Steven Jobs, says of Sculley, "He's a bargain at the price."

People generally are paid what they're worth. Although it does seem a little strange that NBC anchorman Tom Brokaw, who makes a reported $2.2 million a year, is paid almost three times as much as his boss, RCA Chairman Thornton Bradshaw.

So goes France

PARIS — A large bullet head combines with shrewd, narrowly spaced eyes to make him look like Lavrenty Beria, Stalin's dreaded police chief. Some say that Henri Krasucki, the Communist boss of the French trade unions, is equally sinister.

But a long talk with Krasucki here the other day deals a different impression. It is the impression of Eurocommunism on the wane in France and in other countries of Southern Europe where Socialist leaders have come to power.

The talk drifted round to labor troubles in France. Krasucki listed, and analyzed one by one, areas of difficulty and unrest. Machine tool manufacturing, once a French specialty, was in terrible trouble. Hundreds of workers had been laid off at shipyards on the Atlantic coast. Renault and Peugeot were firing auto workers in large numbers. Steel plants in Lorraine were shutting down, with the loss of thousands of jobs. Several hundred steel workers had marched on Paris the other day to protest against the government of Francois Mitterrand.

Georges Marchais, the leader of the French Communist Party, joined that protest march. But officially the Party supports the Mitterrand government, and there are four Communist officials sitting in the Cabinet.

As I started to explore that contradiction, Krasucki turned wary. He asserted again and again that he had some views that were personal, others which derived from his function as head of the labor unions, and still others that went with membership in the Communist Party.

The Mitterrand government, he thought, was to blame for two things. First, after gunning the economy, the government established a wage freeze in late 1982 as part of a general austerity program designed to lick inflation. Inflation had come down to 6 percent in 1983, and it would drop further this year. But since wages were frozen, most workers had suffered a loss in real income.

Secondly, the Socialists under Mitterrand had not defended French industry with vigor against unfair foreign competition. The shipyards of France had lost out to the shipyards of Korea. German steel and machine tools had driven French goods from the market. As to the auto companies, Renault and Peugeot were moving operations out of France to take advantage of cheaper labor.

No doubt if economic conditions in France get much worse the Communists will leave the government and try to benefit from stringency at the expense of the Socialists. Unemployment is now around 7 percent and rising. So a break could occur. But the Communists are obviously not keen to fight the government and put themselves even more in a minority.

A chat with the president himself suggests to me that Mitterrand intends to tough it out with the Communists. While the results are not certain, there is a good chance that the 70-year-old war between the Socialists and the Communists might be ending in a Communist defeat. And, in this matter, as France goes, so goes Europe.

Jack Anderson

On the front lines in Nicaragua

WASHINGTON — The most ferocious assault by the guerrilla campaign against the Sandinista regime in Nicaragua was led by one of its former heroes, the legendary Edén Pastora. He was known as "Commander Zero" in the civil war that drove out Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza in 1979. The charismatic Pastora captured the Caribbean port of San Juan del Norte and held it for three days last month. It was the first time any anti-Sandinista guerrilla force had driven government troops out of a town of any size in the two-year-old battle against the Marxist government.

My roving reporter, Jon Lee Anderson, accompanied Pastora's young guerrillas during the three-day siege. He was the only reporter in the front lines. Here is his cabled account of the fighting:

The first thing Anderson noticed was that Pastora's little force had acquired some formidable U.S. weapons since the last time he traveled with them a few months ago. Gleaming new anti-aircraft guns were deployed at Pastora's jungle bases on the San Juan River. Most of the guerrillas carried American-made M14 automatic rifles. His lieutenants acknowledged that the rebel group had received a "huge shipment" of weapons and ammunition from "the Americans" a month earlier.

Pastora's men sneaked into position and opened fire on the garrison at 4:30 p.m. on April 10. My reporter joined them early the next morning and spent seven long hours hugging the ground with a small squad of guerrillas. They were pinned down behind two large trees about 200 yards from the defenders' trenches.

The only way to reach the protective cover of the trees was across an open meadow exposed to enemy fire. One young guerrilla, killed by a shot through the throat, was being carried out for burial as my reporter arrived.

After several hours of stalemate, the squad's fierce-looking Panamanian leader, Mayo, led a patrol out to silence the sniper who had killed their comrade. About an hour later, they came scrambling back, out of breath and drenched with sweat.

One young guerrilla had just been shot through the cheek, throat and chest and was covered with blood. With buddies on each side, he was dashed across the deadly clearing into the forest to a dugout canoe on the river some 10 minutes away. He would be taken to the medical center for treatment by five volunteer doctors.

One rebel in his 20s, holding a heavy machine gun, smoked marijuana and cracked jokes as bullets whizzed over his head. A less sanguine rookie, sick with fear, retched into the jungle foliage.

Mayo, the squad leader, enraged at being unable to locate the sniper, marched out nearly a dozen times into the open and fired his 80mm recoilless rifle, then ducked back as bullets flew around him.

A few feet from my reporter, Manuel, a favorite of Pastora and one of his elite guards, took a bullet in the belly and collapsed in the lap of a boy no more than 16. He squirmed in agony, stared into the boy's face and said, "Little brother, I die."

As he was carried back, Manuel asked one of his buddies to put him out of his misery with a bullet in the head. The friend refused, and Manuel suffered through another 40 minutes before reaching the medical unit.

He died early the next morning from internal bleeding — one of nine Pastora guerrillas killed in the fight for San Juan del Norte.

The Sandinista defenders paid a heavier price. Anderson counted the rotting bodies of 14 government soldiers in the trenches where they had died. Nearby lay the half-burned body of the presumed sniper, whom the rebels refused to bury.

Strangely, there was little outward hostility between winners and losers after the town was taken on Friday the 13th, even though about 40 government militiamen defiantly wore their red-and-black Sandinista bandanas. Disarmed, they were allowed to wander the streets of the wrecked town.

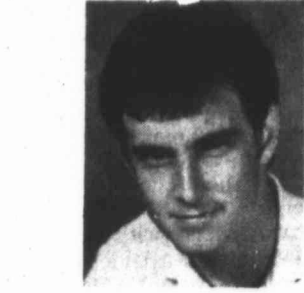

The Sandinista prisoners expressed wonder that they hadn't had their ears cut off and their throats slit, as their senior officers had warned them would happen if they were captured. Instead, Pastora tried to persuade the young soldiers that the Sandinistas had betrayed the revolution, and that their best bet would be to join his army.

After trying in vain to arrange a prisoner exchange by means of a field radio, Pastora packed up his 26 wounded and his 57 prisoners and evacuated San Juan del Norte. Though his anti-aircraft batteries had driven off Sandinista planes throughout the weekend, a steadily growing flotilla of government boats stood offshore and traded machine gun and mortar fire with the guerrillas.

When word arrived on Monday that a large contingent of government troops had landed in Soviet-made helicopters on the coast north of town, Pastora realized it was time to pull out.

He vowed he would be back. DEFERRING TO NO. 1: Since Al Haig left town, there's no doubt who's in charge at the White House. According to Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler, the single telephone in the Cabinet room rang one day before President Reagan had arrived to start the meeting. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger told the waiter to pick it up and say the president wasn't there. None of the other Cabinet members felt they had the right to field a call meant for the boss.

Oscar's place

Something touched me deep inside, the day the music died. — Don MacLean

I won't say I knew Oscar Glickman, because I didn't really. I mean I knew that he was the owner of the Record Shop and all, but I didn't know the man. Still I feel he deserves some words from a fan.

Oscar was one of those characters who made something special in an out-of-the-way place where things aren't unique. Almost everyone knew of the Record Shop. It was Big Spring's status symbol. It was as good as, or even better than, Amarillo's Cadillac Ranch, Balmorhea's rustic restaurant owned by Chicken Charlie, or Archer City's crumbling "last" picture show.

Oscar's place in music history was secured when he failed to send back his slow-moving records. He didn't know it then, but all those old Crystals, Mitch Ryder and Hank Williams discs were destined to be classics. And because of this bad marketing technique, Oscar would become famous.

Oscar's shop was a place where one could behold recorded music with one glance. It was an important place for serious musicologists because the place was faithful to history. Sure Oscar sold today's Top 40 stuff, but he hadn't abandoned the singers and songs that are the roots of rock 'n' roll, country, blues, gospel, etc.

So much of today's music world is geared to sales and No. 1 smashes, that preservation is not a tenet. If one is off the charts, he or she is forgotten quickly. At Oscar's place that didn't happen. It was a never-never land for fans and performers.

I don't know if he intended his store to become a music chronicle — probably not — but after it did he stayed with it to the end. He was loyal to those of us who need music to live. I think he understood us.

I have to feel that Oscar won't fade away either, at least his memory won't leave his fans. Oscar didn't forget his responsibility to the music, and we won't forget him. Wherever you are, Oscar, keep rockin'.

Honor parents

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: My parents are getting older, and I am concerned about what is happening to my father. He is getting very forgetful, and at times, his personality seems so much different than it used to be. He is the kind who has never been sick and doesn't like to see a doctor. What sort of responsibility do you think I have to help him somehow? — B.N.

DEAR B.N.: For the sake of your father you need to do everything you possibly can to get him the medical evaluation and treatment he needs. Some people just assume that nothing can be done in such a situation, but only a doctor can really decide what the problem may be and what can be done to help your father.

The Bible teaches that just as parents have a responsibility to their children, so children have a responsibility to their parents. One of the Ten Commandments declares, "Honor your father and your mother, so that you may live long in the land the Lord is giving you" (Exodus 20:12).

KICKING IT UP — Carl Lewis kicks up the sand as he lands in the pit after long jumping at the Pepsi Invitational Track Meet Sunday at Drake Stadium in Los Angeles. Lewis won the event with a jump of 28-7, the fourth best long jump ever outdoors.

Knicks like Celtics odds against Bucks

BOSTON (AP) — If at first you don't succeed, you can try, try again. The New York Knicks, however, won't get another chance to beat the Celtics in Boston.

The Celtics jumped on top quickly and, like the early leader in the other six games of the National Basketball Association playoff series, went on to win Sunday for the fourth straight time at home.

By routing the Knicks 121-104 in the seventh and decisive game, the Celtics earned the right to play host to Milwaukee Tuesday night in the opener of the best-of-seven Eastern Conference final.

"It'll be difficult for the Bucks to beat the Celtics. The Celtics are playing very well," said Bernard King, who has first-hand knowledge of Boston's ability.

The Knicks' brilliant forward averaged 35.7 points per game, including six over the 40 mark, in his first 11 playoff contests but was held to seven in the first half Sunday.

By the time he got his first field goal, nearly three minutes into the second period, Boston already had a 44-30 lead. The edge never dipped below nine points after that.

"I told the players the Knicks were going to go to King from the start and we had to do all we could to stop that," said Boston Coach K.C. Jones.

Offensively, the Celtics wanted to give the ball to Larry Bird, who ended up with a career playoff-high of 39 points.

"The game plan was to go to Larry and get him started quick," Jones said. "He was going well and we kept going there."

"I was concerned about getting off to a good start because the team that led early had won each game," said Bird. In five of the seven games, including Sunday's, the winning team never trailed.

Bird had 15 points in the first quarter, which ended with Boston ahead 36-26. In the first six games, the team leading after the opening

Stadler comes up with 'deserved' Nelson win

DALLAS (AP) — Craig Stadler was very straightforward about his first victory in 21 months.

"I felt I deserved to win this week," Stadler said after holding off the challenge of David Edwards for a one-shot victory Sunday in the Byron Nelson Classic.

"I played very, very well — except for about three shots. All in all, it was a very solid week," Stadler said.

Armed with a four-stroke lead going into the final round, Stadler needed only a par round of 71 over the last 18 holes to acquire his eighth career triumph and the first since the 1982 World Series of Golf.

The victory, secured on a 72-hole total of 276, eight under par on the long, tough Las Colinas Sports Club course, was worth $90,000 from the total purse of $500,000 and boosted Stadler's earnings for the season to $204,247. It marked the fifth consecutive year the slimmed-down Stadler has won more than $200,000.

While he won by only one stroke, it really wasn't that close. He led throughout the final round and received a challenge only over the last few holes.

"I never felt threatened," Stadler said. "I felt pretty comfortable all day."

And Edwards, the only man able to get close, agreed.

"I was a long way behind (seven shots) when I started out," said Edwards, who won the Los Angeles Open earlier this season.

"I was just hoping to play a good round and finish second or third. I didn't even think about catching Craig until I played the 18th," said Edwards, who closed up with a brilliant, seven-birdie 65 for a 277 total.

Playing well in front of Stadler, Edwards knew he had to make a birdie on the 18th to have a chance. But he missed a 25-foot putt from the fringe.

Moments later Stadler, playing the 17th, made a bogey from a difficult lie in a bunker. That cut the margin to one with one hole — the 466-yard, uphill, par-4 18th — to play.

Stadler needed a par to win. And he made it with a drive down the middle, a mid-iron to the fat part of the green and two putts.

"He's a good player," Edwards said of Stadler. "I figured when he needed something, he'd be there."

Tom Watson, who has had such remarkable success in this tournament that carries the name of his friend and mentor, concurred.

"Craig's an awfully nice guy and a tremendously good player," Watson said. "I played a good, solid, no-bogey round. But it would have taken a very, very good round to catch him."

Watson, who has won four titles here and lost another in a playoff, added a third-place finish to his record with a closing 68 and a 279 total. He won $34,000 and advanced his leading money-winning total to $314,468.

Canadian Dave Barr, with a 67 that included 3s on the last three holes, and Andy Bean, with a 68, tied at 280.

They were followed by career struggler Mike Smith, Dan Pohl and Masters champion and defending Nelson title-holder Ben Crenshaw. Pohl and Crenshaw each had a closing 66, while Smith's 72 included a double bogey on the final hole.

Stanley heat is on Gretzky

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — The spotlight burns brightly on Wayne Gretzky — all the time.

Whether he is the main attraction, a member of the supporting cast or practically invisible on the ice, everyone is concerned about what Gretzky does. Against the New York Islanders in the Stanley Cup finals, Gretzky has done virtually nothing.

"I know there is no in between for Wayne Gretzky," said the record-setting center who has been held scoreless by the four-time National Hockey League champions in this year's finals, which are tied one victory each. "I know I'll either be one of the heroes or the goat. I've had it for five years and I've never complained. I can take the heat when we're losing and the roses when we're winning."

The Oilers, who will host Game 3 Tuesday night, really can't expect to win without a major contribution from Gretzky.

When he was held to only four assists in last year's finals, the Oilers were swept. If he doesn't get started soon this spring, the Oilers figure to fall to the Islanders' drive to a record-tying fifth successive title.

"I'm getting frustrated," he admitted. "I'm not getting the good scoring chances."

The Islanders don't defend Gretzky like most other teams do. They don't shadow him or get overly physical with him.

But they use their five-man units — two defensemen and three forwards — to choke off the Oilers by denying them access to the slot. Gretzky doesn't get a chance to weave his magic in the offensive zone because he rarely has the puck in the attacking end.

"We wanted to go to the net," said Gretzky. "We didn't want to give up the puck. But they forced us and we didn't sacrifice the way we did in the first game."

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, MAY 15, 1984

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Until noon, don't give the appearance of trying to find out from companions just what they are trying to do or they will resent it very much. You feel like getting out of promises, but wait. ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Morning is the best time to handle practical obligations and then tonight you can plan to make changes. Plan to add to your bank account. TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Try to understand that stubborn person better and come to a fine understanding. Keep any promises you have made. GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get busy at work in the morning, then talk over plans with an associate, but don't make deals yet. Be sensible. MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Some entertainment matter may go awry, so get busy and accomplish a good deal in some worthwhile endeavor. LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Don't let a situation at home bother you too much and then get into new interests that can bring you greater abundance. VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get those difficult problems handled wisely in morning; then be sure to go along with some family plan. LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study your monetary position in the morning and figure out how to improve it; then confide in those who can be of assistance to you. SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Find the best way of adding to your prosperity, since your present aims are not very good. Take care of that physical matter. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Early get rid of that private anxiety so that later you can keep the promises you have made calmly. Think logically. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Work every angle possible to gain your aims today, then sit back and feel satisfied. Avoid one who is jealous of you. AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Begin the day properly by meeting the expectations of those in public office and then assist friends in some way. PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Some new activity needs further study before you get into it. Handle that outside duty that is important. Drive carefully. IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be one who will automatically understand what the score is in any situation but will need to study all the ramifications before any problem can be solved wisely. One who will be fascinated by difficult problems.

Lifestyle

Dr. Donohue

Intestine transplant

Dear Dr. Donohue: My chief concern is my husband. He has a duodenal ulcer. As far as we know, there is no cure. We understand that the duodenum is a muscle that pulls the food out of the stomach. So we were wondering if it is possible to have a transplant done. They transplant livers and hearts, etc., which seems to us to be more important organs. So why not these muscles? We do not know who else to ask, so we decided to ask you. My husband suffers a lot and he is losing weight because he can't eat a lot of times. — Mrs. R.

I have never heard of a duodenum transplant and if it were being done, I doubt your husband would need it. The duodenum (DOO-oh-DEE-umb) is the first part of the small intestine, just below the stomach. It's more than a muscle. It's wall is muscle, but its inner lining is filled with important glands and cells that aid in digestion. But as important as it is, we can live without one.

Your husband doesn't need a new duodenum; he needs some medicine, like antacids or one of the drugs that stop stomach acid production, like cimetidine or ranitidine. And he needs to stop smoking if he has that bad habit. He will also need a doctor to chart his progress.

I don't know where you are getting your notions about the "incubability" of ulcers, but they don't square with the facts. Most ulcers are readily cured. They may recur, but they can be "re-cured" if that happens.

Rarely does surgery enter the picture, and then only when there is massive bleeding, when an ulcer obstructs passage of food down into the rest of the digestive tract, or when it erodes through the entire duodenal wall. If surgery is needed, the ulcerated part is removed and the ends put back together.

Your question reflects an apparently widespread impression about transplants of organs. There's more to it than replacing a part. You have to suppress the body's immune system, for example, so that it doesn't reject the new organ. So transplantation is reserved for vital organs, the ones we cannot survive without.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have been advised to have surgery to correct bad leg circulation caused by a bad artery. Couldn't I improve my circulation through exercise, like running? I have heard of this. — F.L.

True, exercise does improve circulation in general, but there is no evidence that it will correct any occlusion of arteries. So exercise is not an alternative to required surgical correction of poor artery flow.

What are ulcers? How can you help yourself get rid of ulcers and stay rid of them? Read the booklet, "Peptic Ulcers: The Modern View and Treatment." For a copy write to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and $1.00.

Malone-Hogan Volunteers has awards luncheon

Bingham paints image of health care trends

John Bingham spoke on what is happening in health care trends at the Malone-Hogan Hospital Volunteer's Annual Awards Luncheon, Thursday. The luncheon was held at Big Spring Country Club. Volunteers were honored and new officers installed.

Bingham said there are six major trends in health care today.

In-patient health care services are eroding and moving out into the community, he said. Emergency Centers, Surgicenters, Birthing Rooms, Wellness Clinics, Fitness Clinics, Home Health Care, and Rehabilitation Centers are examples of health care services moving into the community and away from the hospital building.

Physicians are receiving a threat to their livelihood, he said. Net income is less in 1982 than in 1972 due to the inflation and economy. Physicians are receiving pressure from the government about their payment systems.

Hospitals will be changing their payment system to pay by the diagnosis instead of how many days are spent in the hospital. This will affect insurance coverage as well.

JOLIPSCOMBE ...most hours

Consumer involvement in health care is another trend, Bingham said. Consumers have more knowledge of health care today. There will be a change in employer involvement in benefits, he said. Patients will pay more out of their pockets for health care.

Small hospitals will be bought by big businesses, Bingham said. Also there will be more replacement parts for the human body and an increasing trend in organs of all kinds being replaced and transplanted. One million people had transplants last year. "It's very expensive," Bingham said. Barney Clark spent $200,000 for four months of extended life, he said.

"If we take the humanness out of health care, we are on the wrong track," he said. He recognized the Volunteers as keeping the humanness in health care.

A total of more than 8,000 volunteer hours were recorded in the past year. Of those, more than 6,000 were Malone-Hogan Volunteer hours, and more than 2,000 were Junior Volunteer hours.

A local Girl Scout troop wanted to earn merit badges by doing volunteer work at the hospital. A Junior Volunteer organization was formed for them. The organization consisted of 27 girls and three boys.

Madeline Schwarz was recognized for her work in putting together all the receptions the Volunteers hosted throughout the year. Flowers at the head table were in memory of Aurora Ethridge.

Helen Ebling, outgoing president, presented a brief recount of the year's activities. The Volunteers plan to change the meditation room at the hospital into a chapel. Another project in the planning stages is a hospice project. The Volunteers also will present two $200 scholarships to the LVN program at Howard College, two $200 scholarships to the ADN program at Howard College, and two $200 scholarships to the Radiology School at Malone-Hogan Hospital. They also plan to reserve some funds for community education projects as well.

Volunteers were individually recognized with the number of volunteer hours they put in this year and were given a jar representing those hours. Jo Lipscombe had 2,300 hours, the highest amount of volunteer hours.

New officers were installed. They are: Myrl Soles, president; Ada Chandler, vice president; Laura McEwen, secretary; and Sheila Schielke, treasurer. "It's never easy being a volunteer and being an officer on top of that is something," said Dan Wise, former director of volunteers at Malone-Hogan Hospital.

Dear Abby

Wife's sunbathing provokes heated discussion

DEAR ABBY: I am a 45-year-old professional man. My wife, who is 42, recently had breast implants because after bearing children her breasts were not as full and firm as they once were.

We recently attended a convention in a city where the daytime temperature was in the low 50s with brisk winds. I wore a light topcoat. After attending meetings alone one day, I returned to my hotel early in the afternoon and stopped at the bar to have a drink with a colleague. I was surprised to see my wife in a bikini — "sunbathing" with occasional walks around the outdoor pool, which was in clear view of the bar. She and a well-endowed teenage girl were the only two people at the pool during the 30 to 45 minutes I was in the bar. The two of them attracted a large crowd of spectators from the bar.

Later I asked her if it wasn't a bit chilly to be sunbathing. She became very defensive and accused me of going through a "midlife crisis!" Abby, after reflecting on the incident, I honestly believe I would have had the same feeling had I been 25. I haven't mentioned it to her again, but do you think it's possible that she is the one going through the midlife crisis?

MIDLIFE CRISIS

DEAR CRISIS: There may be a "crisis," but it has nothing to do with her age or yours. Your wife was proud of her new body and couldn't wait for more appropriate weather to show it off. (She should have.) Her feelings are understandable, but her timing was bad.

(Problems? What's bugging you? Unload on Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)
