

Wow! It's time for Powwow

Weekend activity to honor Native American culture

By THOMAS JENKINS
Staff Writer

A celebration of Native American culture will be on display Saturday and Sunday during the Big Spring Powwow at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum. The public is invited. "The Powwow is a social event and there is no Native American religion involved; there will be no medicine men and no ceremonies," said Randy McKinney, Powwow committee treasurer. "A Powwow is a wonderful experience; the drum alone will lift your heart and make your feet want to dance. "Dancing has always been a big part of the Native American culture, as it has in many cultures. Most people think of war dances or rain dances. However, Native Americans dance for many reasons — a good hunt or harvest, marriage or childbirth, or just for the fun of it. These dances would last for days." The event gets under way at 10 a.m. Saturday with gourd dancing, followed by the grand entry, where all the dancers enter. "The drum hosts are responsible for keeping the event flowing without interruptions, and the names indicate what type of music and songs the hosts perform," said Connie Lesser, secretary for the Powwow committee. "The Southern Drum host this year is Otter Trail from Oklahoma. The Northern Drum host is Eagle Point Singer from Austin. "The Southern Drum host plays music that is low in pitch and slow, while the Northern Drum host will provide music that is fast-paced with a high pitch." Arena director will be Fabian Galvan of Lubbock and the emcee will be Tim Harjo of Ada, Okla. The head female

Hannah Weber, a Big Spring High School freshman, has qualified to compete at the 2007 Intel International Science Fair and Engineering Fair. Weber is the first student from Big Spring to qualify for competition at the International Science Fair. Her project, "The Enzyme Effect on Anaerobic Decomposition," won the top prize at the Regional Science Fair, held at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin in Odessa. Her project studied the effect of commercially available enzymes on the efficiency of septic systems. Weber also won a $12,000 scholarship to UTPB and was awarded the United States Air Force

Tax Aide help continues at Senior Center

By THOMAS JENKINS
Staff Writer

Area residents who need assistance with filing their federal taxes will have four more chances to utilize the AARP sponsored Tax-Aide, as the tax season officially comes to a close on April 15. The annual AARP Tax-Aide program is in full swing now, according to program coordinator Gloria Hopkins, and while the deadline to file federal income tax returns may seem far in the future, she and her staff will be hard at it every Monday until then. "We are doing taxes at the Senior Center from 8 a.m. until noon on Monday, and will continue each Monday at those same times through April 9," said Hopkins. "For those that are homebound and can't get to the center with their tax information, if they will call us, we'll be happy to pick up the information and get the taxes ready." Hopkins said the volunteer-based program is designed to help people that might not otherwise be able to file a tax return. "The AARP program provides free federal tax

Rep. Heflin appointed to national committee

Special to the HERALD

AUSTIN — State Representative Joe Heflin was appointed to a two-year term on the Agriculture, Environment and Energy Committee of the National Conference of State Legislatures by Texas House Speaker Tom Craddick this week. The Agriculture, Environment and Energy

Heflin

Committee reviews state and federal agriculture and rural development legislation as well as natural resources, energy, and electric utilities legislation. Among other things, the Agriculture, Environment and Energy Committee seeks to ensure that Congress and federal agencies are sensitive to how proposed laws and regulations impact rural areas and their surrounding communities. Recent issues before the committee have included the farm bill, water allocation, rural health care, education and telecommunications, as well as energy efficiency and renewable energy. "My service on this committee will allow me to present the concerns of my constituents on a national level, helping to shape policy across the nation and in all 50 states," Heflin said. "The more information policy makers have when they make laws, the better those laws will be." He will be serving on one of only 11 NCSL standing committees, representing his constituents and Texas by helping to develop policy statements on federal-state issues currently facing all legislative bodies. NCSL is a bipartisan organization that serves the legislators and staffs of the nation's 50 states, providing research, technical assistance and opportunities for policymakers to exchange ideas on the most pressing state issues. Heflin represents Texas House District 85.

Al-Qaida No. 3 admits he planned 9/11

By KATHERINE SHRADER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Khalid Sheikh Mohammed cemented his position as al-Qaida's most ambitious operational planner when he confessed in a U.S. military tribunal to planning and supporting 31 terrorist attacks, topped by 9/11, that killed thousands of innocent victims since the early 1990s. The gruesome attacks range from the suicide hijackings of Sept. 11, 2001 — which killed nearly 3,000 — to a 2002 shooting on an island off Kuwait that killed a U.S. Marine. Many plots, including a previously undisclosed plan to kill several former U.S. presidents, were never carried out or were foiled by international counterterrorism authorities. "I was responsible for the 9/11 operation from A to Z," Mohammed said in a statement read Saturday during a Combatant Status Review Tribunal at the U.S. detention facility at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. Mohammed's confession was read by a member of the U.S. military who is serving as his personal representative.

The Pentagon released a 26-page transcript of the closed-door proceedings on Wednesday night. Some material was omitted. Mohammed, known as KSM among government officials, was last seen haggard after his capture in March 2003, when he was photographed in a dingy white T-shirt with an over-stretched neck. He disappeared for more than three years into a secret detention system run by the CIA. In his first public statements since his

2 volunteer police, 2 others die in Greenwich Village shootouts

NEW YORK (AP) — A gunman rampaged through a strip of restaurants and bars in a trendy Manhattan neighborhood, killing a pizzeria employee and two unarmed volunteer police officers before other officers shot him to death, the mayor said.

Gunman David Gavin had a fake beard, two guns and 100 rounds of ammunition, Mayor Michael Bloomberg said early Thursday.

"Tonight was a horrible night for the New York Police Department and for our city," he said. "Two men who volunteered their time to make our city the safest big city in America lost their lives helping to keep it exactly that way."

The shooting began around 9 p.m. Wednesday, the mayor said. Gavin, 32, went into a Greenwich Village pizzeria, asked for a menu and then shot an employee 15 times in the back before fleeing, Bloomberg said. Police identified the employee as Alfredo Romaro, 35.

Nicholas Todd Pekearo and Eugene Marshall, two of the city's nearly 4,500 auxiliary police officers, responded to the shooting and approached Gavin, who crossed the street and fired at them.

Jury votes for death penalty for killer of Jessica Lunsford in Fla.

MIAMI (AP) — A jury decided Wednesday that a convicted sex offender should get the death penalty for the kidnapping, rape and murder of 9-year-old Jessica Lunsford, who was buried alive in trash bags just yards from her home.

The jury, on a 10-2 vote, brushed aside pleas for mercy and a life sentence from defense lawyers based on claims that John Evander Couey, 48, is mentally retarded and suffers from chronic mental illness. Jurors deliberated for about one hour.

The final decision on Couey's fate will be made by Circuit Judge Richard Howard, who is not bound by the jury's recommendation but is required to give it "great weight."

dancer is Nicole Shultz of Norman, Okla.

According to committee members, the public is encouraged to attend the Powwow. Newcomers, however, are asked to follow a few simple do's and don'ts.

Standard Powwow etiquette includes:

- Don't call a dancer's regalia a "costume" — Much thought and effort goes into the making of dancer's outfits. Often, pieces of the regalia are family heirlooms. Feathers, in particular, are considered sacred and highly valued items.
- Don't touch a dancer's outfit without permission
- Many of the items worn may be very fragile or valuable, and many outfits may cost in excess of $4,000.

- Pointing with the fingers is considered bad manners by some Native American tribes.
- Use courtesy when photographing — The master of ceremonies will let you know when it is unacceptable to take photographs, but taking pictures during dance competition is usually OK.
- Do not enter the dance area after it has been blessed — At the beginning of the Powwow festivities, the dance area, or arbor, is blessed. Walking or running into the arbor after that time is prohibited.
- Stand during the grand entry — The MC will announce the beginning of the grand entry and ask everyone to stand. Visitors should remain standing through the flag song and invocation.

Vendors offering many different wares will be at the Powwow and a food drive is scheduled with all donated canned goods given to local food banks.

Sunday, the event begins with a special Christian worship service at 9:30 a.m. in the arena, followed by gourd dancing and the grand entry.

Admission to the Powwow is $2. Children under 12 are admitted free.

Certificate of Achievement for an outstanding science fair project.

The 58th Annual International Science will be held in Albuquerque, N.M. in May. The International Science and Engineering Fair was founded in 1950 and is the world's largest student science competition. The International Science Fair brings together nearly 1,500 students from more than 40 nations to compete for scholarships, tuition grants, internships, scientific field trips and the grand prize — a $50,000 college scholarship.

More than $1 million in awards will be granted at the International Science Fair.

In addition to the competition, students will have the opportunity to network with each other, attend cultural activities such as a symphony performance and meet with professional scientists. Some of the highlights are a business card and hat pin exchange, where Weber will exchange pins representing Big Spring and Howard County with students from around the world. The students will also have the opportunity to visit with at least 10 Nobel Science Laureates.

Weber has participated in the local, regional and state science fairs for the last four years. She has advanced to the ExxonMobil Texas Science and Engineering Fair every year she has participated. She is involved in 4H, BSA Venturing, BSHS journalism assistant business manager and is on the high school swimming team.

She is the daughter of Franklin and Molly Weber.

preparation assistance to people who cannot afford professional tax help, such as seniors, people with disabilities, those that don't speak English and people with low-to-moderate income," said Hopkins. "People need to be sure to bring all of the pertinent information with them, including a tax booklet if one was received through the mail, W-2 forms and 1099 forms. They also need to bring any forms that show their 2006 earnings and their 2005 tax returns. We also need a social security card for every person named on the return and a photo ID for the person filing.

"AARP has decided not to file any returns if the taxpayer is listed as married but filing separately," she added. "We also have to physically see the social security cards for everyone listed in the tax return. In the past, the taxpayer could just provide us the number, but we're being required to actually see the card this year."

Hopkins said the program is a necessity for many area residents who can't afford to have their taxes prepared by a professional, and the heart and soul of the operation is its volunteers.

"AARP volunteers explain many special tax credits and deductions and how people may claim them on their tax returns," she said. "These volunteers help people complete their returns, right down to any refunds that may be due them."

The Senior Center is located at 1901 Simler Drive on the McMahan-Wrinkle Airpark. For more information on the program, contact Hopkins at 267-6733.

capture, his radical ideology and self-confidence came through. He expressed regret for taking the lives of children and said Islam doesn't give a "green light" to killing.

Yet he finds room for exceptions. "The language of the war is victims," he said.

In laying out his role in 31 attacks, his words drew al-Qaida closer to plots of the early 1990s than the group has previously been linked, including the 1993 World Trade Center truck bombing in which six people died.

Six people with links to global terror networks were convicted in federal court and sentenced to life in prison for that attack.

Mohammed made clear that al-Qaida wanted to down a second trans-Atlantic aircraft during would-be shoe bomber Richard Reid's operation.

And he confessed to the beheading of Wall Street Journal reporter Daniel Pearl in a section of the statement that was excised from the public document.

The Associated Press has learned. Pearl was abducted in January 2002 in Pakistan while researching a story on Islamic militancy. Mohammed has long been a suspect in the slaying, which was captured on video.

President Bush announced that Mohammed and 13 other alleged terror operatives had been moved from secret CIA prisons to the U.S. Naval Base at Guantanamo Bay last year. They are considered the 14 most significant captures since 9/11.

The military began the hearings last Friday to determine whether the 14 should be declared "enemy combatants" who can be held indefinitely and prosecuted by military tribunals.

If the 14 are declared enemy combatants, as expected, the military would then draft and file charges against them. The detainees would be tried under the new military commissions law signed by Bush in October.

The military barred reporters or other independent observers from the sessions for the 14 operatives and is limiting the information it provides about them, arguing that it wants to prevent the disclosure of sensitive information.

Legal experts have criticized the U.S. decision, and The Associated Press filed a letter of protest, arguing that it would be "an unconstitutional mistake to close the proceedings in their entirety."

The transcripts refer to a claim by Mohammed that he was tortured by the CIA, although he said he was not under duress at Guantanamo when he confessed to his role in the attacks. The CIA has said its interrogation practices are legal, and it does not use torture.

Kenneth Roth, executive director of Human Rights Watch, questioned the legality of the closed-door sessions and whether the confession was actually the result of torture.

"We won't know that unless there is an independent hearing," he said. "We need to know if this purported confession would be enough to convict him at a fair trial or would it have to be suppressed as the fruit of torture?"

In listing the 28 attacks he planned and another three he supported, Mohammed said he tried to kill international leaders including Pope John Paul II, President Clinton and Pakistani President Pervez Musharraf.

He said he planned the 2002 bombing of a Kenya beach resort frequented by Israelis and the failed missile attack on an Israeli passenger jet after it took off from Mombasa, Kenya.

He also said he was responsible for the bombing of a nightclub in Bali, Indonesia. In 2002, 202 were killed when two nightclubs there were bombed.

Other plots he said he was responsible for included planned attacks against the Sears Tower in Chicago, the Empire State Building and New York Stock Exchange in New York City, the Panama Canal, and Big Ben and Heathrow Airport in London — none of which happened.

The Pentagon also released transcripts of the hearings of Abu Faraj al-Libi and Ramzi Binalshibh. Both refused to attend the hearings, although al-Libi submitted a statement claiming that the hearings are unfair and that he will not attend unless it is corrected.

"The detainee is in a lose-lose situation," he said.

Al-Libi, whose name means he is a Libyan, reportedly masterminded two bombings 11 days apart in Pakistan in December 2003 that targeted Musharraf for his support of the U.S.-led war on terror.

Binalshibh, a Yemeni, is suspected of helping Mohammed with the 9/11 attack plan on New York City and Washington and is also linked to a foiled plot to crash aircraft into London's Heathrow Airport. His hearing was conducted in his absence.

AN ENCOURAGING WORD

By Eddy Pitchford

Hands can tell a life story. The presence of callouses testifies of hard work. Scars speak of hurt and pain. Ring fingers can proclaim a message of commitment.
Hands are used to hold a crying baby. They stay busy cleaning a house or working on a keyboard. They express love to a sweetheart or compassion to a hurting friend. They can be folded in prayer.
The hands of Jesus and Thomas communicate a message of love and faith that has been handed down to us today. "Then He said to Thomas, "Put your finger here; see my hands. Reach out your hand and put it into my side. Stop doubting and believe." (John 20:27)

OUR VIEWS

Tuesday vote:
Girls in Texas deserve better

Sometimes one has to wonder just what our state legislators are thinking. That's particularly true in the case of Tuesday's vote in the Texas House of Representatives in which that body approved a bill — by a 119-21 margin — that would keep the human papillomavirus vaccine off the list of required shots for school attendance, tentatively circumventing Gov. Rick Perry's executive order.

Let us all remember that this vaccine protects girls against strains of HPV, a sexually transmitted virus that causes most cases of cervical cancer.

The measure still needs final approval in the House and approval in the Senate. And while it's also possible that Perry will veto the legislation, the 119 voters that approved the bill are way more than enough to override a veto.

Perry's order asked Health and Human Services Executive Commissioner Albert Hawkins to adopt rules to vaccinate all girls entering the sixth-grade as of September 2008. Parents could refuse the shots for their daughters.

A spokeswoman for Perry estimated only 25 percent of young women in Texas would get the vaccine if it is not required.

"Governor Perry's executive order on HPV would help to protect 95 percent of young women in Texas against the strains of HPV that cause cervical cancer," said spokeswoman Krista Moody. "The governor believes we should protect as many young women as possible — rich and poor, insured and uninsured — while maintaining parents' rights to opt their daughter out of receiving the vaccine."

While we have rarely found agreement with Perry during his tenure in office, this time we believe he's making perfect sense.

The same cannot be said for the House.

Republican Rep. Dennis Bonnen of Angleton, lead author of the bill said it "will not take away the option for a single girl or a single family in this state to choose to vaccinate a child. It simply says a family must make that choice, not a state government."

Where, we wonder, would we be today if lawmakers had said the same thing about smallpox or polio vaccinations?

Perry has for some time acknowledged weeks the Legislature has the authority to supersede his mandate, while insisting a requirement for the vaccine is good public policy that will save young women's lives.

His critics argue the vaccine, called Gardasil, which was approved by the Food and Drug Administration last year, is too new and its effects need to be further studied before mandating it for Texas schoolgirls.

Cervical cancer can usually be prevented if precancerous cervical lesions are found by a Pap test and removed. Doctors recommend women get Pap tests once a year, but about half of the women in the U.S. who develop cervical cancer have never had a Pap test.

So, while the New Mexico legislature passes progressive legislation for require the HPV vaccine for girls in our neighboring state, lawmakers in Austin seem willing to stick their heads in the sand.

Texas' girls deserve better.

A SMALL PRAYER

by K. Rae Anderson

Our troubles will be less, Lord, if we let You handle them.
Amen

Libby: Whose fall guy is he?

The whole Scooter Libby case, from start to finish, has been based on the left's depraved obsession with substantiating the lie that President Bush and Vice President Cheney lied us into war.

Though I won't presume to substitute myself as a juror and will never downplay the actual commission of perjury, I have serious doubts that Mr. Libby lied — as opposed to having an imperfect memory over matters not that critically important — because he had no motive to lie. He had no motive because the administration had nothing to hide concerning its decision to attack Iraq and particularly the yellow cake uranium flap, despite the left's endless cacophony to the contrary.

The relevant facts in this unfortunate saga are not that complicated. Most Democrats, because of overwhelming public support for the war, were politically compelled to support the Iraq war resolution. But when the war became less popular and the Democrats' antiwar base demanded accountability for the Democrats' heresy, they manufactured the fiction that the administration lied about WMD.

Enter Joseph Wilson, who was willing to put some teeth into their false claims. Wilson corroborated the Democrats' claim that Bush lied in his 2003 State of the Union address in saying, "The British government has learned that Saddam Hussein recently sought significant quantities of uranium from Africa." (Note that the Brits still stand by their statement.)

Wilson feigned outrage, saying he had investigated the claim himself in Niger and determined it was baseless. But the Senate Intelligence Committee and the British Butler Report both concluded that Wilson's findings did more to substantiate, than debunk, the Saddam-Niger connection. The Senate Intelligence committee also found that Wilson lied in saying he had discredited certain forged documents, since those very documents weren't discovered until eight months after his trip to Niger. Finally, the Committee contradicted Wilson's claim that Cheney, rather than his wife, recommended him for the trip.

Since the administration had not lied about Iraqi WMD — as opposed to having properly relied on the best intelligence available to it (and Democrats) — it had nothing to cover up, but it did have the right — and duty — to protect its reputation, especially since the Democrats' false characterizations were damaging America's image in the world, something they profess to exalt above all else.

If Cheney instructed Libby to disclose that Valerie Plame was Wilson's spouse, his motive wasn't to punish Wilson by exposing his wife's highly disputed covert status. It was to impeach Wilson's credibility.

But none of this mattered to Democrats, because it didn't fit their template that "Bush lied, people died."

From the beginning, Democrats have been trying to make this case into something they knew it was not: a smoking gun against the administration. At the outset of the prosecution, Sen. Harry Reid shamelessly said, "The Libby indictment provides a window into what this is really about: how the administration manufactured and manipulated intelligence in order to sell the war in Iraq and attempted to destroy those who dared to challenge its actions. As a result of its improper conduct, a cloud now hangs over this administration." (Reid and others said virtually the same thing after the verdict.)

Special Prosecutor Patrick Fitzgerald also pushed the Democrats' conspiratorial lunacy, as evidenced by his bizarre and outrageously inflammatory statement to a D.C. jury in closing argument, "There is a cloud over the vice president." Sound familiar?

How could Fitzgerald possibly say that in good conscience, knowing and having known from the very beginning of the case, that Richard Armitage, not Libby, was the leaker and Armitage was no friend of the administration and even less supportive of the Iraq war?

Predictably, the liberal media has also made its best efforts to turn this trial into Bush's Watergate. Early on they were praying for and predicting that Rove would be indicted. And despite the unconscionably belated revelation that Libby was not the leaker, MSNBC reporter David Shuster stuck with the Democrat template, asking Libby, after the verdict, "Are you willing to go to jail to protect Vice President Cheney?"

Protect him from what? How many times can we repeat that Libby was neither charged nor convicted of leaking — because he didn't do it? No matter. They just continue to push the theme that "the wrong guy was convicted."

Scooter Libby is the wrong guy, all right, but there is no right guy, because there was no administration misconduct here. Libby is also the fall guy, but not for Cheney, Rove or Bush. He's the left's sacrificial lamb, an expendable human being whose criminalization is necessary to perpetuate their abominable and politically self-serving myth that Bush, Cheney and Rove lied us into war.

Japan on a (California) roll

Japan. It's already trounced our auto industry, now it's aiming for our hearts and minds.

Well, not really. It's aiming for our stomachs. But still — it just may win. Remember when the idea of eating raw fish sounded like eating raw liver?

Now look at you, with your eel this, and wasabi that. Japan knows how to change American culture and what do we have to parry with?

Edible balloons. Trust me: I just ate my way through the International Restaurant Show and, according to a seminar on "Food Trends," the latest American invention is the mozzarella balloon.

These eerie orbs are made by warming the cheese and then somehow blowing it up, like those amazing bubbles kids used to make with special (vaguely toxic) Wham-O fluid. Drizzled with a balsamic reduction, the bladder-like balls are then deflated by the diner with a prick of the fork. Provided that the diner has not fled the restaurant, screaming.

It's hard to say who's really eager to eat an appetizer that looks straight out of "Grey's Anatomy," but, in any event, those balls just show how desperate we are. We're scraping the bottom of the cheese barrel. Most of the real breakthroughs were to be found in the Japanese pavilion.

For starters, there's GoGo Curry, the top curry chain in Japan, aiming to open in the States next month. The only food GoGo sells is a bowl of rice smothered in thick, lumpy, dark brown sauce. It looks so revolting you'd think we could rest easy, but my God — it tastes like a cross between curry, teriyaki and Julia Child's pan drippings. It's spectacular! And then it's topped with a helping of meat, chicken, shrimp or egg. How can the Colonel possibly compete with THAT?

So much for America's fast food advantage. But extremely slow food from Japan is coming, too. "In Japan, you're either trained as a sushi chef, a tempura chef or a kaiseki chef," according to food publicist Steven Hall. Kaiseki, he believes, is the next big thing: a meal consisting of many tiny delicacies, each served in an attractive little dish.

Tapas meets Toyota. Can't miss. And just as we've all got a fondue pot somewhere in the basement from that brief moment of Swiss cultural hegemony, so we may soon have a home tofu maker, too. Those machines are on the way, as are Japanese strawberries the size of cupcakes and Wagyu beef, which is to Kobe beef as a Lamborghini is to a Lexus. Wagyu is so marbled that it actually looks (and tastes) like high-priced lard. And since when have Americans been able to resist fatty meat?

In a desperate attempt to promote all-American ingenuity, homegrown purveyors are touting things like Carmi Flavors' pancake-scented coffee. "If someone wants chocolate chunk with fish, we'll make it, too," said the salesman, John Duff.

And we wonder why the dollar's dropping.

A chicken company was pushing its new dipping sauce that tastes like raspberry jelly and, unfortunately, makes dinner taste like a school lunch. And then there's Molson Coors' orange juice-flavored concoction, Blue Moon. The result is a beer that tastes great at breakfast.

I'm not sure that's what our country needs.

Whether orange beer, fatty beef or Japanese curry is going to be the next maki roll is anyone's guess. But I think we can all pretty much predict the fate of the mozzarella balloon. And American cuisine.

The 2007 Suzuki SX4

Entry-level surprises: Suzuki SX4 shows virtues beyond value

By TERRY BOX

The Dallas Morning News

Life dealt me a mean hand the other day — or so I thought.

There I was, a gray-haired, middle-aged guy slumped over the steering wheel of an odd-looking $15,000 Suzuki sedan. What was next: a one-bedroom apartment, a stack of credit card bills and two or three ex-wives?

Then I turned the key in my 2007 SX4, and those loser stereotypes started to fade. But admit it: Older, supposedly more affluent drivers look awkward in entry-level cars. And while sometimes I felt as if I were on my way to bankruptcy court, I came to appreciate the Suzuki's surprising virtues.

For one thing, the SX4 is the lowest-priced all-wheel-drive car available in the U.S. Many of us old muscleheads prefer rear-wheel-drive because that's the best configuration for handling and performance — not to mention burning rubber. But if I had kids and a tight budget to contend with, I'd give this sedan a look because of the safety and stability of all-wheel-drive.

Also — and this may surprise you — Suzuki was the fastest-growing Japanese automaker in the U.S. last year. The company's car sales were up 23 percent, twice Toyota's rate.

After years of struggling, Suzuki's cars are starting to provide good value. (Anyone remember the Samurai, a favorite of Consumer Reports?)

My silver sedan had a sticker price of $14,999, which included a 100,000-mile warranty, 24-hour roadside assistance, destination charges, mats and a full tank of gas. The car also came with a 2-liter, 4-cylinder engine cranking out a respectable 143 horsepower and a full complement of front, side and rear airbags.

Open one of the car's four doors, and the first thing you notice is how spacious it seems. The Suzuki is short, tall and rather ungainly, but its design permits a very useful height of 63 inches. It also has an enormous wraparound windshield that makes it feel kind of like a small Greyhound bus — or worse, a minivan.

But don't expect a bargain-basement Subaru WRX. The SX4 is no rocket.

It needs nine long seconds to get to 60 mph from a standstill. While the engine is smooth and feels pretty lively in the low and mid ranges, there's not much point in revving the SX4 past 4,000 rpm. No horses are in the barn, despite the engine's theoretical red line of 5,800 rpm.

I found the brakes to be kind of grabby, which may well have been from press-fleet abuse. But the car also recorded some longish stopping distances in a couple of magazine reviews, so there may be some relationship.

The whoa-and-go were undoubtedly affected by the car's pork. At 2,900 pounds, the SX4 is 200 pounds heavier than a Honda Civic.

But then, a Civic doesn't handle as confidently as the Suzuki — especially in lousy weather.

The Suzuki leans in corners like the econo-box it is. Once the car settles on a line in a corner, however, it offers lots of reassuring grip.

The ride, thanks partly to the car's weight, was very decent. (The SX4's paunch, by the way, is mostly a result of the all-wheel-drive.) Fuel consumption was nothing special for a four-cylinder car — 23 mpg city, 28 highway.

Inside, it wears lots of plastic. But the dashboard was attractive and well designed, and the controls were mercifully simple. The doors even sounded pretty good when slammed.

Moreover, the SX4 offers lots of features for 15 large. Besides a four-speaker AM-FM stereo with a CD player and MP3 capability, it comes with air-conditioning, tilt wheel, folding rear seats, power windows and locks, remote entry and roof rails — in case you need to transport someone else's kids in addition to yours.

For my money, the car needs at least 50 more horsepower, which, of course, would ruin its reasonable base price. But for your money — and I'll bet you're more mature and practical — this is a quiet sedan with a smooth engine and good road manners.

Sounds like someone I might date.

Opening lead — queen of spades.

Assume you're in four hearts and West leads a spade. There seems to be nothing to the play, so let's say you win with the ace, ruff a spade in dummy and cash the A-K of trumps. West shows out on the second trump, and you suddenly realize you're in serious trouble.

You continue with the queen of trumps and then, trying to make the best of a bad situation, play the A-K-Q of clubs. Unfortunately, East ruffs the third club, cashes the king of spades and continues with a spade, and you subsequently lose two diamond tricks to go down one.

Sometime later, it dawns on you that you should have made the contract. Rather than simply assume that the missing trumps would be divided 3-2 — in which case you'd wind up with two overtricks — you should have allowed for the possibility that the trumps might be divided 4-1 (a 28 percent probability). Had you considered that, you might have seen that you could guard against a 4-1 trump break by playing the three of trumps from your hand at trick two!

This seemingly ridiculous play has much more merit to it than at first meets the eye. After the opponents win the trick, they cannot stop you from scoring the 10 tricks — four hearts, five clubs and a spade — you started with.

The outcome demonstrates once again that a declarer should always try to arrange the play to cater not only to the most likely distribution of a suit, but also to a less likely one. The chief danger in this deal is that the trumps might split 4-1 instead of 3-2, and declarer should take the necessary steps to guard against that eventuality.

Tomorrow: Test your play.

AN ENCOURAGING WORD

By Eddy Pitchford

Hands can tell a life story. The presence of callouses testifies of hard work. Scars speak of hurt and pain. Ring fingers can proclaim a message of commitment.

Hands are used to hold a crying baby. They stay busy cleaning a house or working on a keyboard. They express love to a sweetheart or compassion to a hurting friend. They can be folded in prayer.

The hands of Jesus and Thomas communicate a message of love and faith that has been handed down to us today. "Then He said to Thomas, "Put your finger here; see my hands. Reach out your hand and put it into my side. Stop doubting and believe." (John 20:27)

Law's Aggies: From bottom to top

By JEFFREY McMURRAY
Associated Press Writer

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Even during the doldrums of a terrible freshman season, Acie Law IV remained confident Texas A&M would eventually become a basketball power.

Of course, he figured he'd be an alum by the time the Aggies blossomed.

Instead, thanks in large part to Law, Texas A&M took the fast lane to success.

"I knew that this program was headed in the right direction," the senior guard said Wednesday, "but I could never imagine that it would happen so quickly."

Three years after that ugly debut season — the Aggies went 0-16 in the Big 12 — Law has become one of the nation's most dynamic point guards. He led the Aggies within a whisker of its first Big 12 regular-season championship and a third seed in the NCAA tournament's South region. There was even some sentiment the Aggies deserved a better seed.

But as the Aggies (25-6) prepare for their first-round matchup Thursday against 14th-seeded Pennsylvania (22-8), Law is thinking a lot more about the experiences of his junior year than his freshman one.

After all, last year as a 12th seed, Texas A&M knocked off fifth-seeded Syracuse in the opening round and nearly beat LSU, which advanced to the Final Four, in the second. The Aggies know as well as anybody that upsets not only can but do happen in March.

Texas A&M's guard Acie Law (1) drives to the basket past Louisiana State's Garrett Temple (14) and Darrel Mitchell (22) in the first half of game against LSU. The Aggies have a No. 3 seed and are ready to make some noise in the NCAA tournament this year.

"In the field now, every team is a good team," Texas A&M guard Dominique Kirk said.

Before last year, the Aggies hadn't won an NCAA tournament game since 1980. Coach Billy Gillispie, who took over after the disastrous 2003-04 season, has helped put the traditional football power back on the basketball map.

And so many former students that really care about their school, you're going to have a

Suns shock Mavs with 2 OT victory

DALLAS — When the second overtime began in a game that already had plenty of thrills, Amare Stoudemire was ready to settle things.

So he went to the basket. Hard.

Between points and fouls that got Dallas Mavericks starters disqualified, Stoudemire's strong start got the Phoenix Suns going toward a 129-127 victory Wednesday night in a tense, thrilling game between the league's two best teams.

"He's a great finisher," marveled teammate Steve Nash. "That was quite a performance."

Stoudemire had 41 points and 10 rebounds, and Nash played like a two-time MVP down the stretch. He scored 10 points in the final minute of regulation, capped by a tying 3-pointer with 2.7

seconds left. He finished with 32 points, 16 assists and eight rebounds.

Jerry Stackhouse scored 33 points, his most in three seasons with Dallas, and Dirk Nowitzki added 30 points, 16 rebounds and six assists. He had eight points and seven rebounds in the third quarter, when the Mavs turned what had been a 16-point deficit into a 15-point lead going into the fourth quarter.

Phoenix rallied by opening the fourth by making eight straight shots and 10-of-12. While that set up Nash's great finish, four missed free throws by Dallas — including two by Nowitzki — were equally important.

The Mavericks remained shaky at the start of overtime, then Jason Terry scored five points in the final 48 seconds, including a long 3 over Nash with 4.5 sec

NCAA bracketology basics

It was not too long ago that there were two seasons in the State of Texas — football and spring football. Not anymore, not with high-profile coaches like Bob Knight at Texas Tech, Rick Barnes at Texas and now Billy Gillispie at Texas A&M.

Football is still king in Texas, but basketball has surpassed spring football and baseball as the second love for many sports fans across our old Southwest Conference plains. If you're still on the fence or more concerned with how many passes Colt McCoy and Stephen McGee are going to complete in spring games, then you're going to miss something grand this March.

The madness is sure to bring upsets galore and a Cinderella team dancing deep into the tournament, but this year you could see a couple of Texas teams, two-stepping their way into the spotlight.

Here are my picks for your brackets in the first round:

MIDWEST REGIONAL
First Round

— FLORIDA (1) vs. Jackson State (16) — The Gators start their run to a title defense with an easy win and head for a matchup with Ohio State — just like the football teams.

— ARIZONA (8) vs. Purdue (9) — Both teams closed the regular season well before losing quarterfinal tournament games to eventual conference champions, but the Wildcats have a more balanced offense with all five starters averaging between 16.8 and 9.5 points per game. Purdue plays in a tougher conference. I like Purdue in a close game that could go either way.

— BUTLER (5) vs. Old Dominion (12) — It's just a numbers game and nothing more. The truth here is that I have not seen either team play, but chance," Gillispie said. "To win, you have to have really good players, and it's an advantage to be in a state that has a lot of really good players."

Tops among them is Law, a lefty sharpshooter from Dallas with a penchant for hitting big shots, who averages nearly 18 points and five assists.

"I'm a totally different player," Law said. "Biggest thing is mindset and my mentality. I've matured a lot."

When the pressure is highest, it's rare that anybody but Law ends up with the ball.

"He's very patient," Penn guard Brian Grandieri said. "He'll cross you over once, pull up fast and cross you over again. His poise is unbelievable. They don't call him 'Captain Clutch' for nothing."

The Aggies have been to the tournament eight times but never beyond the second round. If they make it this time, a friendly crowd may await in San Antonio for the second weekend.

Not this weekend, though. Rupp Arena is just about 80 miles from home for sixth-seeded Louisville, which the Aggies could face next if the Cardinals get by Stanford.

Coach Glen Miller says tournament experience, a current 10-game winning streak and an earlier matchup this season against North Carolina should give his team plenty of confidence.

"I don't think they'll be nervous," Miller said.

Penn boasts the Ivy League's two leading scorers, forward Mark Zoller and guard Ibrahim Jaaber. Texas A&M's players said the Quakers' ability to get the ball inside for high-percentage shots is what scares them most.

"We expect to play good basketball and represent ourselves well," he said.

onds to go that the second OT.

Stoudemire helped Phoenix take it from there, although it still took a missed 8-footer by Nowitzki as time expired to end Dallas' 23-game home winning streak and tighten the race for the top seed in the Western Conference.

"This was a big game. We aren't going to try to downplay it," Stackhouse said. "It was a little disappointing not to get the win but we'll bounce back."

The Suns won their sixth straight and 11th in 12 games, moving them within 2 1/2 games of the Mavericks for the best record in the league.

Dallas seemed like a lock for the top spot just a few days ago, when a 17-game winning streak prompted talk of 70 wins for the season.

But now the Mavs have lost two straight games.

Butler received a No. 5 seed for a reason.

— MARYLAND (4) vs. Davidson (13) — The Terrapins enjoyed a seven-game winning streak that included two victories over Duke and one over North Carolina, a team that just might win it all.

— NOTRE DAME (6) vs. Winthrop (11) — As much as I would like to make everyone around the Herald happy, Notre Dame is eighth-best in the country when it comes to scoring. The Irish will avoid the upset — sorry.

— OREGON (3) vs. Miami, Ohio (14) — Miami enjoyed its last-second 3-point shot by Doug Penno that won the Mid-American Conference title game. There are no more miracles. The Ducks will advance.

— UNLV (7) vs. GEORGIA TECH (10) — What happened to the high scoring Runnin' Rebels? UNLV is making its first NCAA appearance since 2000 and it looks it will be one and done. Take Georgia Tech.

— WISCONSIN (2) vs. Texas A&M-Corpus Christi (15) — The Badgers are one of the best teams in the country and Texas A&M-CC has already had a terrific season by making the field.

WEST REGIONAL
First Round

— KANSAS (1) vs. Niagara (16) — The Jayhawks are riding an 11-game winning streak and just knocked off the Longhorns and the best player in the country (Kevin Durant). Unlike in recent years, the Jayhawks are poised to make a tournament run.

— Kentucky (8) vs. VILANOVA (9) — Upsets are always going to take place in March. A No. 9 seed over a No. 8 hardly qualifies as an upset, but I'm taking it and moving on.

— VIRGINIA TECH (5) vs. Illinois (12) — Again, this is numbers game. The Hokies of Virginia Tech would be double-digit favorites in football and that has to mean something. What, I have no idea, but I like VT.

— SOUTHERN ILLINOIS (4) vs. Holy Cross (13) — Who and who? Just kidding, the Salukis of Southern Illinois have a great name and won 13 straight before losing in the Missouri Valley Conference title game. They should win easily.

— DUKE (6) vs. Virginia Commonwealth (11) — Duke may be a No. 6 seed, but there is no question that they will make it out of the first round.

— PITTSBURGH (3) vs. Wright State (14) — This one is all about the conference. Pitt just lost to a very good Georgetown team in their tournament and a No. 3 seed does not lose to a No. 14 very often.

— INDIANA (7) vs. Gonzaga (10) — Gonzaga been a Cinderella favorite for the last several years, but they are missing the offensive star they used to enjoy in March. They are averaging 80 points a game and this one should be a tussle. I'll take Indiana in a close one.

— UCLA (2) vs. Weber State (15) — The Bruins may have lost two straight, but this is a no-brainer. UCLA wins big.

EAST REGIONAL
First Round

— NORTH CAROLINA (1) vs. Eastern Kentucky (16) — The Tar Heels average 87.1 points per game and are a No. 1 seed. Eastern Kentucky, well they are Eastern Kentucky. North Carolina will dominate this one.

— Marquette (8) vs. MICHIGAN STATE (9) — Does Michigan State coach Tom Izzo have any March magic left in his bag of tricks? I think so, at least enough to get to round two.

— SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA (5) vs. Arkansas (12) — Everyone loves Arkansas after a good showing in the South Eastern Conference Tournament and the Trojans have lost three of their last five. It would be a great upset pick if everyone was not weighing down the bandwagon. I'll take USC — they are not playing Texas in the Rose Bowl.

— TEXAS (4) vs. New Mexico State (13) — The Longhorns start four freshmen, but one is the best player in the country (Durant). Horns' coach Barnes hates playing on Sunday in the Big 12 Tournament and an overtime loss to Kansas was certainly not what he hoped for, but Texas should have no problem in the first round.

— VANDERBILT (6) vs. George Washington (11) — Even in football I would not care to see this one. I'll take Vandy, something I don't do in the fall.

— WASHINGTON STATE (3) vs. Oral Roberts (14) — ESPN has raved about Washington State and what a run they have made. Before flipping the station the other night, I heard that No. 3 seeds make it to the final four almost as often as No. 1's. That can't be good news for Oral Roberts.

— Boston College (7) vs. TEXAS TECH (10) — The Red Raiders have the all-time winningest coach in Knight and everyone loves to see him win for the post-game press conference. Get your guns up, I'll take Tech in an upset and hope they can make a nice run.

— GEORGETOWN (2) vs. Belmont (15) — The Georgetown Hoyas are one of the best teams in the country. This should be a sleeper for them.

SOUTH REGIONAL
First Round

— OHIO-STATE (1) vs. Central Connecticut State (16) — Look for the Buckeyes to make it to the Elite 8.

— BRINGHAM YOUNG (8) Xavier (9) — This is another toss up that has me thinking of spring football. Take BYU here, but I sure miss the light blue football uniforms.

— TENNESSEE (5) vs. Long Beach State (12) — It's said that Chris Lofton is one of the nation's best guards in the country and that he can knock down the 3-point shot with regularity. Sounds good to me. Take the Vols.

— Virginia (4) vs. ALBANY (13) — This is another numbers game. There is no way that a No. 4 seed should lose to a No. 13 seed, but they call it "March Madness" for a reason. I'll take Albany in the big upset.

— LOUISVILLE (6) vs.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

BY HOLIDAY MATHIS

The Aquarius moon livens up the atmosphere with technological diversions, wacky ideas and brilliant ways to cut work time and elongate "recess." So don't stand on the sidelines, get into the Aquarian spirit! Start by using Aquarian phrases, such as, "I wonder what would happen if I" and "Can I try that?" And of course, "Wow!"

HOLIDAY MATHIS

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You hear the call of the wild and want to answer. Instead of labeling your impulses freakish, let them out. There's no reason to tame the beast. By expressing yourself, you encourage others to do the same.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). It'll be hard to hide what you're feeling, but why would you want to? It's liberating to state it as it is. That doesn't exempt you from being compassionate with your opinions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). A group field trip would be nice. Corral the gang into doing something spontaneous and fabulous! The more originality and spice you bring to the vision, the more attractive it becomes to your tribe.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You're like a hot kettle in that state right before it squeals with delight. Turn up the heat, and you'll generate amazing creative output. Keep those fires steadily stoked into the evening fun.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). A relationship introduces exciting new options, but if you question the attractiveness of the offer, you may miss it altogether. The logical path is to find out what's in it for you, but follow your gut instinct. Gut wins over logic every time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You're like a marathon runner. Timed intervals of activity and breaks are essential. An attitude of forbearance won't help you in the final stretch, but an enthusiastic cheer from your teammates pulls you through the finish!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). It's not every day that you feel this frisky. And it's not every day that your worshippers are at your beck and call. Take advantage of this special kind of popularity. Credit your charm for all the attention.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You're like an electrical appliance that sometimes shorts, causing little sparks to fly for no apparent reason. There's nothing to fix. A little friction is kind of like a reminder to "look alive!" It clears the system.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You know your words pack a punch, but it's just so hard to bite your impulse to speak what you see. MLK Jr. said, "The truth shall set you free," and it will set other people free, too!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Remember Mr. and Ms. Pacman? They were classic '80s consumers, eating energy pellets as fast as possible while outrunning ghosts. Turn around and face the ghosts. It uses up less energy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). One of your fellow Aquarians has hosted a virtual roller-disco party from India, sending out an Evite to her global friends, asking them to meet her in cyberspace. And you'll have similar genius ideas today.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). The occasional mistake you make can cause you to want to hide from the world — not a bad idea. Although not always an option, solitude is the interface between mind and spirit.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS: "I'm a Virgo, born Aug. 25, 1961. I feel as though I'm spinning my wheels and getting nowhere. I was divorced when my children were young. Since then I stayed in a 10-year relationship much longer than I should have. I had a beautiful business that I had to give up due to a troubled economy. For the past year, I've been seeing a 50-year-old Libra man, born on Oct. 12, who says he loves me. We live an hour apart. We spend almost every weekend together. He's very kind to me, and we have a great time, yet he considers us to be good friends.

How far away is true happiness in love and career?"

At this stage, I liken you to Dorothy in her homeland of Kansas. You have to see Oz before you realize that there is indeed "no place like home." You've created a fabulous life for yourself, but you're overly critical of yourself at the same time, and you for some reason refuse to enjoy yourself. Of course you can have more. Up the ante in all areas of your life. Take big risks, like breaking up with your sweet man in order to make him realize what he has in you.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: Born under the sign of great actors, Pisces William H. Macy is a prolific, loveable and memorable character actor with over 109 screen credits. Together with feisty wife Felicity Huffman, the two give a new face to Hollywood power couples — a mutually supportive, down-to-earth, family-oriented and non-publicity-seeking face!

Annie's Mailbox : Advice for those in need

Dear Annie: Last summer, our small business of 26 years suffered a devastating flood. My wife, who had just completed chemotherapy, waded through waist-deep water in an effort to save our most valuable records and computers. We lost 13 trucks, and our offices were out of commission for six months.

Throughout this disaster, neither my brother nor sister offered to help. Not one day, not one hour. My sister, who has summers off, never lifted a finger to assist with office work, although she did write to our local newspaper, mentioning our courage in rebuilding our business and saying how proud she was. My brother used several excuses, one of which was that I didn't help him build his house. Neither did he. A professional contractor did it.

In my desperation, I fired off a series of angry phone calls to my elderly mother. I stated how dysfunctional our family was, hoping she'd help put things right. I am sorry that I left those messages on my mother's answering machine. She played them for my brother and only made things worse.

Perhaps I should not have lashed out, but several weeks had passed after the flood, and we were physically and emotionally exhausted. No one from my side of the family gave us any assistance whatsoever. Now we are ostracized from them. How did we become the bad guys? Do they just not care? — Binghamton, N.Y.

Dear Binghamton: Often, when people don't behave the way they ought to, they become defensive. We think your family members' feel guilty they did not rise to the occasion, and blaming you allows them to feel better. You have to decide if you want to let them off the hook. If so, call your mother and siblings and say you are sorry there's been a rift, you were so distraught by your personal situation that you weren't yourself, and you miss your family. Then you have to let it go, whether they deserve your forgiveness or not.

Dear Annie: Why do doctors make appointments and then have you sit and wait? Is this the fault of the doctor or the scheduling? Every medical office should take a class on time management. Patients should be notified if a situation has caused a serious delay and should be offered the choice of staying or rescheduling.

One of my appointments was made a month in advance, and when I arrived, the waiting room was packed with patients and others had to wait outside. The doctor wasn't even going to be there for another 30 minutes. Any help? — Lady in Waiting

Dear Lady: Doctors with hospital emergencies are often delayed, and that needs to be tolerated. But you are right that sometimes appointments are simply overscheduled. When you find yourself waiting repeatedly and for long periods of time, you should let the doctor know. You also can call the doctor's office before leaving your home and find out if things are running on time. And, like any other dissatisfied customer, you can take your business elsewhere.

Dear Annie: My sympathies to the woman married to a man addicted to Internet porn. I am in a similar situation. My husband even uses Viagra for this.

Counseling for her is a good idea, so she doesn't have to feel inadequate as a woman. To the men out there who are blaming the women in their lives, after seeing what you are doing and looking at, who would want to sleep with you? Get help before your marriage is over. My solution? I am the tech person at our house, and I've got our computer locked down pretty tight. Good luck to him trying to figure out how to unlock it. — Married to a Closet Perv

Dear Married: Well, at least you've found your own way of dealing with this, but any married man who takes Viagra so he can watch porn has a serious problem.

Dear Annie: There are quite a few children on our block, ranging in age from 5 to 11. The kids are always outside playing. The problem is one little girl I'll call "Betsy." Betsy is pushy and always invites herself into the group. Most of the kids don't like to play with her.

On weekends, as a family, we like to go outside and play with just our children. But as soon as Betsy hears us, she comes running over and won't take "no" for an answer. I can't tell you the number of times we've had to go inside just to get away from her.

The real problem is Betsy's mother. If the kids say they can't play or don't want to include Betsy, her mother comes outside and makes the other kids feel guilty until they let Betsy in. The mom also allows Betsy to phone people multiple times within an hour and go to their homes over and over to see when the kids can play.

Many of us are bewildered and don't know what to do. We have told our children not to be mean or rude, but I don't think it's fair that they should be forced to play with Betsy just because she lives on our street.

Any suggestions other than moving? — Frustrated Neighbor in Crown Point, Ind.

Dear Frustrated: Betsy has obviously learned her poor social skills from her mother. Still, when children play outside in full view, it is unreasonable and cliquish not to include other neighborhood kids. Under those circumstances, we hope your children will play with Betsy, like it or not. If Betsy intrudes when you are in your backyard, however, you should escort her home and tell her (and her mother) that this is family-only time, sorry. When she phones repeatedly, tell her she is allowed only one call per day, remind her when she calls back, and hang up. The same goes for ringing the bell. Since her mother won't teach her these things, you'll have to.

Dear Annie: My son is 9 years old and has recently been diagnosed with Attention Deficit Disorder. He may also be a little bit oppositional defiant. I am trying to find the best way to help him. He is on medication, and we have been trying to get him into therapy.

I've been reading a lot about a new procedure called neurofeedback. Is this something that really works? Is it worth the expense? — Frustrated Mom

Dear Mom: The jury is still out on neurofeedback for children. Studies have shown it can be helpful, but generally, the children who do best with it are also in a comprehensive treatment program that includes counseling, behavior modification and sometimes medication. There are also videogames that use neurofeedback to promote retraining the brain — a cheaper alternative, if you want to try them. (Check out smartbraingames.com.) Your best bet is to discuss all options with your son's doctor.
