

Making do with less

Funding cuts lead BSHA to accept more applicants

By STEVE REAGAN

Like many families it serves, the Big Spring Housing Authority is struggling to make do with less.

The housing authority, which works to get families into subsidized homes, recently learned that it will be expected to serve the same number of families as before, but with less money.

Paul Pryor, director of the agency, said local directors recently received word of a 5 percent cut in funding provided by the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development. "Everybody's funding

They're not talking trash.

OK, so maybe they are, but it's not the kind of trash most people might think of.

Musical group Vocal Trash is coming to Big Spring April 14 — the same day as the 2007 Don't Mess With Texas Trash Off — to bring a very different brand of music to the Crossroads area.

Compared to such successful specialty acts as Stomp, a popular drum act of which the members are known to play everything from trash cans to kitchen sinks, and legendary a capella group Nylons, Vocal Trash

HEED THE LEPRECHAUN

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) - There was no pot of gold behind the dancing roadside leprechaun, only speeding tickets.

Drivers in the Orlando area found out the hard way after passing a sheriff's deputy dressed as a leprechaun, warning drivers to slow down. A laser detector clocked cars above his sign reading "Watch your speed or it will cost you your pot of gold," and officers on motorcycles chased those who didn't heed the advice.

Deputy Richard Lockman said police had been giving out about a ticket a minute since 8 a.m. He was dressed in a green leprechaun outfit with a hat, tight white knickers and a fake red beard.

Plame to testify as Demos open hearings on CIA leak

Plame was scheduled to testify before a congressional committee Friday, but it was unlikely the hearing would offer any new information about the Bush administration's discussions of her employment at the spy agency.

"Valerie's going to be talking in general about the need to protect intelligence assets," her attorney, Melanie Sloan, said prior to her appearance before the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee. "She's basically talking about how important national intelligence is and about how leaking is bad."

Her prepared testimony would take about five minutes, Sloan said, and wouldn't include any behind-the-scenes details about the CIA or the White House.

The man with that kind of information is Special Patrick Prosecutor Fitzgerald, who spent years investigating the

> But Fitzgerald isn't talking, citing federal rules prohibiting such discussions. And nobody from the White House involved in the leak was scheduled to testify. Nor was someone from the State Department, where the leak of Plame's identity originated.

That leaves Plame to tell her story to lawmakers. She believes she was outed as retaliation against her husband, former Ambassador Joseph Wilson, who criticized the Bush administration's prewar intelligence on Iraq.

Wilson has written a book and Plame has one expected out soon. They are also suing Cheney and others, claiming their constitutional rights were violated.

Committee Chairman Henry Waxman, D-Calif., says he wants to know whether the White House appropriately safeguarded Plame's identity.

They pulled over and saw the trash bag among the trees and brush about 15 feet from the road. They alerted detectives when they got close enough to notice flies and a strong odor coming from the bag. OPINION

Let's get innocent out of jail

eff Blackburn describes his work, and life's mission, with this expression: "We're going to go down and pull n out." It summons a visual of Blackburn, director of the Innocence Project of Texas, charging the gates of Hades — or a Texas prison, in this case — armed with the law, a hefty dose of righteous indignation, and the smarts of a street lawyer. He duels with the devil himself - or a corrupt district attorney for the release and exoneration of prisoners wrongfully convicted. It's an image of legal warfare. It's not a picture of the pristine practice of corporate law or a placid mediation meeting. Because of a phone call, Blackburn will probably be using his trademark phrase more in the coming months.

Newly-elected Dallas County District Attorney Craig Watkins recently called Blackburn to request his help to conduct a joint review of the case files of nearly 400 prisoners who are appealing their convictions based on DNA evidence. Blackburn will team with Innocence Project law students at universities across the state to evaluate the cases. Watkins' call is a coup for prisoners waiting for post-conviction relief. It's a second chance for the emotionally hopeless and legally helpless, whose previous odds were zero-to-zilch.

Since 2001, appeals courts have overturned the convictions of 12 men in Dallas based on DNA evidence, and James Curtis Giles -- wrongly convicted for a 1982 rape when evidence identifying "James Earl Giles" as the assailant was not disclosed to the former's trial attorney - is a possible number 13 in the next few weeks. Wrong name but a warm body for an easy prosecution victory, and no one seemed to notice the difference.

Watkins wants to use the power of his elected office, and his political mandate, to right legal and moral wrongs. That makes him an anomaly on his side of the courtroom and an enemy to his convictby-all-means, convict-despite-theevidence peers.

In a recent interview, Blackburn said he sees "nothing less than a political revolution" in his and Watkins' "deliberate partnership," the first of its kind in the country, he speculates. Previously, Blackburn was no aficionado of Texas' criminal justice system, and is still enough of a hardcharging realist to be wary. "Dallas was famous for framing people and getting unjust convictions. It was in the hall of shame as far as prosecutorial misconduct," he said. But with Watkins' initiative, Blackburn knows his job of advocating for the falsely convicted within the system is far easier than taking down the entire structure and its gatekeepers police willing to frame defendants, deceitful prosecutors hawking "shoddy evidence," and indifferent judges. He can work within, instead of against, the system.

After the first or second prisoner walks free, though, Blackburn predicts we'll lose interest. He's right. If and when the court exonerates Giles, the extraordinary will become the commonplace. The media hype will become mere habit when we get to Nos. 3 and 4 on the list. We'll barely notice the name of the next guy who comes on down to play the game show, 'Oops, you were wrongfully convicted, Texas-style."

BIG SPRING HERALD

Friday, March 16, 2007

And why not? Because that man is not like you, or me. Blackburn said, "Most of the time, people who get falsely convicted had bad legal representation in courtappointed attorneys; they're poor, have no friends and no money, and no ability to get any friends or money." These people aren't soccer moms and NASCAR dads, with college funds for the kiddies. They're society's indigent. We'd be indignant if it was one of the former, but we're indifferent because it's the latter. We'd care if they were us, but they're not, so we don't.

An acquaintance and I were talking recently about the Innocence Project's work in obtaining releases and exonerations for wrongly convicted people wasting away in Texas' prisons.

"Aren't you worried," she asked, "that a court will release a guilty person when it rehears his case?'

"No," I replied, "I'm worried an innocent person will wait for justice that may never arrive. No one should go to prison for a crime he didn't commit."

"Maybe" isn't a good enough reason to keep someone in a prison when we can know for sure they didn't commit a crime.

Elections? Maybe despotism's better the other day John McCain came to town. It was an imperial visit. He was representing the Napoleonic wing of the Republican Party. While here, he visited with that Wing's permanent local envoy, Rep. Chris Shays, the last Republican in New England. After a few weeks of pre-election equivocation about the WAR, Shays is back beating the drum for escalation. What a pair. Of course, Democrats in Connecticut can't complain. They're more or less represented by Joe Lieberman, high mullah of the Napoleonic wing of the Democratic Party and Faithful Guardian of the Interests of the State of Israel. In fairness, the Dems did chuck him out in a primary, but he won as an independent when the Republicans ran a certified gambling addict for Senate, and sent Joe help from Washington.

But despite these three couch warriors, the WAR ought to be finished, right? The House voted heavily to disapprove it and the Senate did the same, 56 to 34. Bring 'em home! But wait...the Senate vote was only to end debate, not to actually bring 'em home. Ending debate needs 60 votes, not a mere 56. Thus, the WAR still escalates despite the will of the people. Emperor McCain didn't even show up to cast a ballot.

Then again, why should he? The outcome was pre-ordained, and he needed to be out there raising money, or...MONEY. Candidates have always needed that, but this year's expense portends to make all others seem paltry. For the first time in history, neither eventual candidate is expected to accept federal funding for the general election. They can't afford to. The limits are too low. They need to raise hundreds of millions to make the race competitive. Wall Street and Hollywood are in their sights.

But so are we. On the same day, Barak Obama announced his humble willingness to save the world. one of his minions called our house asking for MONEY. We were impressed. Who says this guy lacks experience? He knows how to do the only thing that counts - beg.

And by the way, in case you think that MONEY is overblown as an issue, consider former Iowa Gov. Tom Vilsak. He's already dropped out of the race and there are still 20 months to go. Said he couldn't raise enough MONEY.

Here in Connecticut we thought we had cleaned all that up. The new campaign finance law finally put restrictions on the amount that corporate lobbyists and other interest groups can contribute. Nice try. Now they're suing to protect their sacred constitutional right to bribe. And who do you suppose is representing them? The American Civil Liberties Union, that's who. Aren't there some downtrodden economic victims in America whom they could be defending instead?

There are certainly plenty of voting victims. Mostly poor and nonwhite. Florida, Georgia and Ohio (Texas must be in there somewhere) are perhaps the best known. They make registering to vote a nightmare for the poor, and as one hurdle is deemed unconstitutional, another (like insurgents) springs up to replace it. In Ohio, for example, the secretary of the state ordered that registration applications must be submitted on at least 80 lb. (heavy) paper. In Georgia the required voter ID cards were somehow not available for distribution in Atlanta. Only in the suburbs.

And felons can't vote much of anyplace, forever, in some of them. In such lands, it falls to the sheriffs to make sure that many more blacks are arrested than whites. Then, in Florida anyway, long, inaccurate lists of felons are sent to the polls to keep Democrats out.

Plainly, our democracy is a mess, but where can we find a benevolent dictator who would be better? There's even gutter talk about King Arthur. And suppose we ended up with Vlad the Impaler, or Idi Amin, or Dick Cheney. The Sultan of Brunei sounds OK, but he does it all with oil. There may actually be no suitable substitute for democracy. By being able to vote, at least we get the government we deserve, even if the Iraqis deserve better.

imprisonment for smoking marijuana

HUNTSVILLE (AP) - A man sentenced to life in prison 17 years ago after smoking marijuana while on probation was set free Thursday.

Tyrone Brown walked out of prison and was met by relatives and journalists. His mother, Nora Brown, embraced her son as he broke into a wide smile, according to a report on The Dallas Morning News Web site.

"I didn't believe this day was going to come," he said.

Brown received a conditional pardon Friday from Gov. Rick Perry. He will have to live with his mother, report to a parole officer, find a job and work with a therapist.

Violating any of those terms will cause the conditional pardon to be revoked, a Perry spokesman said.

Brown was 17 when he went on probation for taking part in an armed robbery in which no one was hurt. Judge Keith Dean re-sentenced him to life after one positive drug test.

Brown's case stood in sharp contrast to that of a convicted murderer whom Dean put on probation. John Alexander Wood repeatedly tested positive for cocaine and committed other violations, yet avoided prison. He even got permission to quit reporting to a probation officer and quit taking drug tests.

Neither man had a prior criminal history. The judge has never explained his actions.

Man accused of belligerent behavior on flight

AMARILLO (AP) - A man accused of becoming belligerent and claiming he had a gun in his carry-on bag after a flight attendant stopped serving him alcohol was scheduled to appear in court Friday.

James Joseph Egan was being held until a detention hearing on a charge of interfering with the duties of a flight attendant.

Egan was returning to his home in San Diego on Monday after attending his mother's funeral when he became belligerent, according to a criminal complaint. Authorities say he had been drinking and the Southwest Airlines flight attendant stopped serving him.

Egan spoke loudly, threatened to assault passengers and crew members, and said he had a gun in his carryon luggage, the complaint said. The plane, flying from Pittsburgh to Phoenix and then San Diego, was diverted to the Amarillo airport.

During questioning, authorities say, Egan told them he had 12 beers and admitted to being disruptive during the flight. He told authorities he was simply "calling the bluff" of the flight attendant who wouldn't serve him anymore alcohol.

Man accused in turnpike

rest stop beating death due in court adda acces

MOUNT LAUREL, N.J. (AP) - A man accused of fatally beating a traveler in an apparently random act of violence at a highway rest stop here was expected to appear in court Friday.

Authorities said Brian K. White of Humble, Texas, smashed Michail J. Makarenko's skull with a rock after Makarenko refused White's offer to sell him religious CDs.

The attack took place at the James Fenimore Service Plaza around 12:45 a.m. Thursday. Makarenko, 75, a former Soviet political prisoner who had lived in the United States since 1982, died at the scene.

White fled and was captured about an hour later 70 miles away in Teaneck after a lengthy pursuit by state troopers.

White, 26, a DJ who has gone by the name DJ Coldblooded, was charged with murder, eluding police and weapons charges. He was being held on $750,000 bail. And a judge said he could not be released until he had had a psychiatric examination.

The victim, who lived in Hillsboro, Va., had been traveling to visit friends in northern New Jersey and New York City, said his interpreter, Gregory Burnside.

Justice Department: Juvenile prison violates inmates' contstitutional rights

AUSTIN (AP)' - Texas' juvenile prison in Edinburg violates the constitutional rights of inmates with its high levels of violence, overcrowding and too few guards to control the facility, a federal Department of Justice review has found.

The rate of inmate-on-inmate assaults at the Evins Regional Juvenile Center is about five times the national average for a comparable facility, creating a "chaotic and dangerous" atmosphere, according to an investigative review released Thursday.

The report also warns the state to resolve the issue or face a potential lawsuit from the federal government.

The Evins facility is part of the Texas Youth Commission and the report is another embarrassing blow to an agency staggering under scandal of allegations of sexual abuse on inmates by staff and a possible cover-up.

Bonilla nominated for ambassador slot

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Bush has nominated former Rep. Henry Bonilla, a Texas Republican, to be the U.S. representative to the Organization of American States, the White House announced Thursday.

Bonilla, 53, lost his seat in Congress to Rep. Ciro Rodriguez, a San Antonio Democrat, in a December special election. The loss came after the U.S. Supreme Court ordered the redrawing of Bonilla's District 23 to correct violations of voting rights of Latinos in the district.

Bonilla was elected to Congress in 1992 and spent seven terms in Congress. His nomination was endorsed by Sens. Kay Bailey Hutchison and John Cornyn, both Republicans.

Bill allows oversight of TXU sale

AUSTIN (AP) - State regulators would be able to review TXU Corp.'s pending sale to private investors and would have more power to encourage competition among utility companies under bills the Senate unanimously approved Thursday.

The legislation also would force utility companies to refund any money they make by abusing their market power and would place a moratorium on disconnections for some needy Texans.

TXU and its potential buyer said the bills' passage was expected and was just the first of many steps to come in the legislative process.

Electric deregulation has been a hot topic since the Legislature approved the plan in 1999 with the hope that increased competition would drive down prices. The state has been phasing deregulation in since then, but few residential customers have switched electricity providers even though rates have actually risen. "The intent is that electric rates will come down," said Sen. Troy Fraser.

The most noteworthy bill clarifies that the Public Utility Commission has the authority to review the sale of any utility to ensure it does not affect the delivery of electricity.

Nonprofit auctioning Enron items for charity

HOUSTON (AP) - A nonprofit wants to cash in on Enron's infamy by auctioning the desks once used by former Enron executives Kenneth Lay and Jeffrey Skilling to raise funds for spaying and neutering cats and dogs.

Bidding on eBay starts at $25,000 each for the 20year-old desks, which were donated to Saving Animals Across Borders by a group that bought Enron's Houston building after the company collapsed in 2001.

"We feel a collector of American pop-cultural items might want these," said Sean Hawkins, of Saving Animals.

The items were posted on eBay on Friday and continues bidding through March 26.

Hawkins said the group accepted the desks because Enron had a history of supporting animal-welfare groups. The company and the Lay family made donations and provided office space the Spay-Neuter for Assistance Program, he said.

A news release on eBay said the desks were designed by Gensler Architects and made by Brochstein's, a manufacturer of custom architectural furniture. The desks, which have an Makore "elegant Pommelle veneer," would cost more than five-figures to replicate today, according to the news release.

You would go down if South won the spade and returned a heart, and it turned out that North started with five hearts to the king and the remaining spade honor.

This outcome can be avoided if you play the ace of diamonds at trick two, cash three club tricks ending in dummy, then lead the queen of diamonds and discard the ace of hearts! Once you do this, the contract is ice-cold. The defense cannot avoid either putting you in dummy with a heart or a diamond to cash nine tricks, or putting you in your hand to achieve the same result with your clubs and spades. You give away a trick by discarding the ace of hearts, but it comes back with interest. The only tricks you can lose on this line of play are two spades, a dia and a heart.

Methodists approve leasing SMU land for Bush library

DALLAS (AP) - A Methodist council gave its blessing this week for Southern Methodist University to lease land for George W. Bush's presidential library, one of the last steps the school needed before officially sealing the long-awaited library deal.

The South Central of the Jurisdiction Methodist United Church voted 10-4, with one member abstaining. The group must approve leasing any land already in use by the school, and the proposed 36-acre site on the southeast side of campus contains some dorms and a parking lot. It also contains a now-razed condominium complex SMU bought - which caused two of the owners to sue but has not yet used. In his presentation to the church council at a Dallas hotel, SMU President R. Laura Lewis will be the guest demonstrator at Tuesday's meeting of the Big Spring Art Association.

Lewis is a landscape artist from Lubbock who paints West Texas scenes. That, of course, means big skies and wide expanses. In her presentation for the BSAA, she will demonstrate the use of translucent glazing techniques to create an illusion of depth in the landscape painting. In order to show the project Club through the final stages without regard to drying time, she has prepared four panels at various stages NEWS of completion. Several original paintings by Lewis will be on display and participants will receive samples of Gamblin oil paints.

The BSAA will meet in the Howard County Library at 7 p.m., Tuesday. The BSAA meetings are open to the general public and anyone interested in art is welcome to attend.

Retired Teachers Association

The Retired Teachers Association will meet at Howard College's Cactus Room at 11:30 a.m. Monday. All retired school personnel in Howard County and surrounding counties are invited to attend. We also welcome guests from other area schools.

Marge Carpenter will be the guest speaker. She is a wealth of information about Howard County and always very interesting. Members and guests will have a dutch treat lunch before the meeting.

At the last meeting, new officers for the 2007-2008 year were elected. They are president, Bo Fryar; first vice president, Bettie Cox; second vice president, Loma Jean Wynn; recording secretary, Jean Slate; corresponding secretary, Jean Warren; and treasurer, Don Green.

The Retired Teachers Association is very active in promoting benefits for all retired school personnel. Legislative updates from the Texas RTA keep members informed of pending legislation and ways we can influence positive changes in matters concerning retired school personnel. Our state convention is April 14-16 in Austin. The new RTA president, vice presidents and recording secretary will be delegates.

Turner said the library, museum and Bush institute may be built on one of two sites in the area and that the president's site selection committee wanted to have options. After the vote, Turner said he was grateful and 'we can now really go forward."

He said he expected a final decision in a few weeks.

"There are still other things that have to be worked out, but this is a major step," Turner said.

SMU became the apparent winner in the library competition in December when the site selection committee said it was entering into further talks with the 11,000-student private university, which is first lady Laura Bush's alma mater. Bush has said he is leaning toward SMU.

Bowie Kuhn dead at the age of 80

Bowie Kuhn, the bespectacled lawyer who oversaw baseball's transformation from sport to a business of free agents making multimilliondollar salaries, died Thursday. He was 80. The former commissioner died at St. Luke's Hospital in Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla., following a short illness, spokesman Bob Wirz said. LEXINGTON, Ky. There's nothing wrong with being a favorite in the NCAA tournament. As long as you play like a favorite, that is.

A year after putting themselves on the college basketball map with a big first round upset of Syracuse, the Texas A&M Aggies were the odds-on choice Thursday against Penn. They needed a couple of clutch dunks to put away the underdog from the Ivy League.

Texas A&M (26-6), the No. 3 seed in the South Regional, got 20 points from Acie Law and a double-double from Joseph Jones in a 68-52 victory over 14th-seeded Penn (22-9).

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. Experience told Boston College's tested team not to panic when Texas Tech took the lead midway through the second half. The Eagles hung in and handed Bob Knight another early exit from the NCAA tournament.

Sean Marshall scored 15 of his 21 points in the second half to help the Eagles rally and beat Knight's Red Raiders 84-75 on Thursday, giving Boston College its fourth straight first-round victory.

Tyrese Rice had 26 points for the Eagles (21-11), the East Regional's seventh seed. Jared Dudley added 19 points, setting up a matchup with former Big East rival and second-seeded Georgetown in Saturday's second round. "We're a relaxed ballclub," said Marshall, a four-year starter along with Dudley. "Even when we're down, we stay the same." In a game that stayed close the entire way, Boston College put together one of its steadiest offensive performances of the season - particularly through the final 10 minutes. The Eagles shot 53 percent for the game and used a 14-4 run to erase a four-point deficit midway

ODESSA - After losing quarterback Walter Washington to the Berlin Thunder of NFL Europe this offseason, the Roughnecks have gone out and signed the best quarterback on the market in Chad Friehauf, according to Odessa head coach Chris Williams.

Friehauf is no stranger to the Intense Football League, as he spent last the second half of last season playing for the CenTex Barracudas after being cut from the Denver Broncos the year before.

"We played against him last season and he gave us fits on defense," Coach Williams said, after the Roughnecks signed the dotted line on his contract. "They played us tough and I think they scored about 70 points on us. That was with Chad playing only half a season. I'm expecting him to play really well for us this season - we just need to teach him our system and he will be fine.

"He has the ability that is needed at the next level and I think the only thing missing for him is a full season of game film. He's going to help us win some football games and we're going to help him move on."

At the Colorado School of Mines in Golden Co., Friehauf set school records in passing yards with 9,783 and touchdown passes with 84. He completed 773 passes out of 1,183 attempts in his college career and set Division II records for passing yards and completions in a season with 4,646 and 384. Friehauf also won the distinguished Harlon Hill Trophy, which is given to the best player in Division II football. That award is the equivalent to the Heisman Trophy Award.

Odessa will start its season March 31, when the Roughnecks host the San Angelo Stampede Express right here in Big Spring.

Do you have a beautiful future ahead of you? Or is there something unsightly looming something you've been avoiding for months that's now right around the bend? HOLIDAY Venus and MATHIS Pluto, in a harmonious ; arrangement, urge you to set aside your fear and believe in the brightness of tomorrow. Your optimism brings with it a fate all its own.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You deserve to be acknowledged for your talent — but so do others. Take turns being the audience and the entertainer. If you feel creatively stagnant, vary your routine and creativity returns.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Loved ones experience a case of classic guilt, and you're the benefactor. Getting money or attention because others are trying to absolve themselves feels funny, but take the goods.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). While you're looking longingly in someone's direction, someone else is looking longingly toward you. These games of triangular love could go on for days. Or you could put a stop to them right now. CANCER (June 22-July 22). You'll hear some pretty silly excuses as to why someone didn't come Jan. 19). This day defi-through for you. But you are too busy accepting the gracious generosity of others who did much more than they promised! LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Is money really tight for you, or do you just feel that it is, and so you are creating the illusion of scarcity in your world? Relax. Dollars are flowing to you from all channels, expected and unexpected. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept.

22). Say what you really mean, because the meaning comes across regardless. Words have the power to teach, wound, inspire and activate. This is especially true about the words you use when speaking to yourself. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23).

Your plans are revised because you're adjusting to circumstances beyond your control. While this sudden shift may be frustrating and could inconvenience you temporarily, the end results will be spectacular. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov.

21). The Encarta World Dictionary defines "mystical" as "with a divine meaning beyond human understanding." Your decisions aren't practical, but your feeling that you're being guided is accurate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21), Your awareness of how you use your mind is growing. You can put your vivid imagination to the task of solving problems just as easily as you can use it to create problems. The choice is yours. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-nitely has a "wow" factor! It comes in the form of an unforeseen opportunity, a beautiful change of scenery or a chance encounter with the next big love of your life.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Because you seek knowledge, you find it everywhere, including the most unlikely places. What you learn at work could be wonderful for your love life and vice versa.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). The hardest thing to give up is the need to be right about everything. When you let go of that, you have so much more energy! Choose partners carefully. Avoid stubborn types.

WEEKEND LOVE FORECAST: ARIES: You're tough when you have to be (and you will have to be), and merciful when it counts. TAURUS:

Dating? Keep things light by steering clear of controversial topics. GEMI-NI: Your communication skills are put to the test. CANCER: The stars throw in a little extra competition, which brings out your very best. LEO: Be thoughtful! Loved ones need to see, touch and feel your love. VIRGO: All bets are off. You could fall for the very person you never thought you'd be with. LIBRA: You love without worrying about how it will come back to you. SCORPIO: Family influences your romantic choices, but you can't give too much credence to their opinion. SAGITTARbetween several offers. CAPRICORN: The best things in life are free, so make it your mission to things. find these Newspapers have a wealth of information on no-cost entertainment. AQUARIUS: Know what you have to offer a relationship, and keep it foremost in your mind. PISCES: Forgiving and forgetting are the same now. If you say you've for-given, but still hold the grievance against your loved one, you haven't gained the full benefit of forgiveness.

COUPLE OF THE WEEKEND: Capricorn is in a mood to commit to love. This is done in a sentimental, mushy wayquite uncharacteristic of cool Capricorn, and that's half the fun! Who better to be on the receiving end of such gallant gestures than openhearted Virgo? They're two earth signs who succeed brilliantly as a couple, as long as Virgo promises not to criticize (too much) and Capricorn promises not to dominate (too often).

Annie's Mailbox -: Advice for those in need

Dear Annie: I am attracted to a friend and am unsure if I should tell him, or how. I always find myself thinking about "Ian" and having sexual fantasies about him. I know that sounds crazy, but I can't help it. To me, he is the perfect big fans of the mental telepathy school of friendship. She expects you to read her mind and gets angry when you don't. Worse, after you ask her to be more direct, she refuses and prefers to end the friendship. We say, good riddance. Dear Annie: I read the letter from the 15-year-old girl who cuts herself. My beautiful 13-year-old daughter has done it, too. The school counselor gave me the news, saying one of my daughter's friends had informed her. She suggested immediate counseling and advised me not to confront my daughter. I went through my daughter's stuff and found written statements about her cutting. I took her to a counselor and told my daughter that I was aware of the cutting and asked her to give me the knife she was using. When I asked why she was cutting, she said I was overprotective and that she was sad over the recent death of her grandmother. I have asked her several times if she has stopped cutting and she says yes, but then she gets upset with me. The problem is, I don't trust her anymore. I worry she's lying. How can I be sure? — Scared Mom in Texas Dear Mom: We know you are afraid, and you should be watchful, but it might help to back off a bit. Your daughter is already seeing a counselor. You should make an appointment, too, and ask the counselor how best to deal with your child. Dear Annie: My husband, "Alfred," has been gambling for the last 10 years, and his habit is getting progressively worse. I have caught him numerous times, and each time he promises to quit, but then lapses. We have both gone for counseling, together and separately, but he feels he can control his problem. I insisted he go to Gamblers Anonymous meetings, and he did for about six months, but says he doesn't get anything out of the meetings. He is blind to his addiction.

Alfred has lost approximately $100,000 in the last 10 years, and I don't see his skills improving. He has even taken $60,000 out of his 401(k). Each time I catch him, he is contrite and says he won't gamble again. I have now restricted our savings accounts (his suggestion), so only I can withdraw money. Alfred has lied, cheated and stolen money from me and our savings accounts, but still does not see how serious his problem is. He has opened up credit cards and borrowed money against them. He recently went to a high-interest loan company that charges him 119 percent for a short-term loan, and I've run out of patience. I still love him. He has a lot of good qualities, and I also need him because I'm mildly disabled. Should I just cut the ties and get a divorce? Our children are grown, and I don't want him draining the last of our retirement money. —" Gambler's Wife Dear Gambler's Wife: First, put some of that retirement money where your husband can't reach it. He isn't ready for help yet, and we can't tell you if he ever will be. You, however, should contact Gam-Anon (gamanon.org), for friends and relatives of gamblers. man and a wonderful friend. I have had bad relationships in the past, always finding Mr. Wrong.

Ian has been divorced for several years, but I know he still cares about his ex-wife and would probably do anything for her. What really makes things hard is that Ian and I are roommates purely platonic, of course. I don't want to make our living situation uncomfortable and surely don't want to lose him as a friend. What should I do? Torn in New York

Dear Torn: We say not to rush this. It's very likely you are having fantasies about Ian because he's so near and you are seeing him in a domesticated light. flirt with him a little and see if he responds, but you risk losing the friendship (and a roommate) if you actively pursue him when he's not ready.

Dear Annie: I have a problem with "Alexis," a good friend of three years. Not long after returning from a visit with her, she began giving me the silent treatment. After many unanswered calls and text messages, Alexis finally responded, saying she was upset at me for something I said four months ago. She added that she thought it might be best if we were not friends anymore.

apologized Ι for unknowingly offending her, and Alexis accepted my apology and said she thought we could move on. After some thinking on my part, however, I asked if, in the future, we can address problems immediately and not let them fester for so long. I felt blindsided in this situation and told her I was completely unaware of what had upset her and was hurt that she hadn't told me sooner.

Alexis e-mailed back and said she doesn't think she can change, and felt that I should not have turned the situation around on her. We have now parted ways. Did I act improperly? Hurting as Well in Mississippi Dear Mississippi: Alexis
