Will the Youth Center become a reality? their part—and more—to insure its development.

The American Legion Post 206 has offered, without charge, the facilities of the large basement building to the rear of the Legion Hallto be used solely by the youth program when and if developed.

With very, very little work this building could be made most attractive. The large floor provides ample room for table-tennis, shuffleboard, games, lounging, etc. The location is desirable.

Favorable comments are coming in from many angles, from the students themselves, various organizations and individuals.

So, with the building available, it is up to come aggressive parents, organizations and students to take it from there. The minor differences in theories of operation can be re-

Mr. L. R. "Buck" Miller, of Pampa, Texas, is manager of the Schafer Ranch, and is proud of the savings that his ranch foreman, Ray Roles, is able to realize with his electric farm shop. Mr. Miller is equally proud of the choice Aberdeen Angus cattle that are raised on the ranch.

"My shop is a money maker the year round", Mr. Roles explains. "During the summer season we repair machinery on the spot, saving time and money. During the winter months we repair all our machinery and have it ready for the busy season, thereby eliminating costly last minute repairs.

An electric welder, a 34 hp electric drill, and an electrically operated air compressor comprise the major electric ools in the Schafer Ranch shop. Evi ice of this well equipped shop and Mr. Roles' skill is present at every turn on this modern ranch.

Mr. Roles has used his skill in putng the equipment and buildings at ae Schafer Ranch in number one condition. If he needs a piece of equip-ment, and can't buy it, he builds it. Through the ingenious use of his elec-tric welder and other shop tools, the foreman has built several machines to make the ranch operations more effi-

A well equipped electric farm shop offers the farm operator the opportunity to cut his repair bills considerably and realize an even greater profit in time saved by making repairs on the spot. Additional profits are realized when all of the farm machinery is put in A-1 condition during the winter months when other work is not pressing. Experience on the Schafer Ranch shows that little time is lost due to repairs during the critical season.

This modern efficient farm trailer flanked by Mr. Roles and L. R. "Buck" Miller, Schafer Ranch foreman and manager, respectively, was an outmoded farm wagon before Mr. Roles overhauled it in the ranch electric shop. Everywhere you turn on the ranch, equipment has been repaired or improved to make it more useful.

The modern ranch and farm has become a place where top production through efficient operation and management is the goal. In increasing numbers, farm and ranch managers are the farm programs of this nation are bankrupting the nation, just do not coincide with the facts. The truth is that the losses in some portions of the farm program, which were being tested on a trial and error method, do not amount to a thimbleful when compared with the vast subsidies that have gone to industry in this country for years before the farmer was thought of, nor to the vast sums of money that have been sent overseas as gifts and grants to many who had sought to destroy our government and our nation.

The advance of civilization has always required changes in laws and in programs under which peo-ple have lived. New problems are created by new discoveries and new advances in many fields.
