GATESVILLE, TEXAS, FRIDAY, OCT. 27, 1933

NUMBER 45

HERE and THERE
By Joe Quinn

THE FARM strike agitators in the middle west, who have caused so much disturbance by "raising Cain" after a fashion, are going unheard by Texas cotton producers who are too busy making little piles with their cotton plow-up chips. It can truthfully be said that they are indeed aware of the fact that their bread is buttered on a certain side.

EDGAR WITT, Waco, lieutenant-governor of Texas, said, "If Texas wants me for Governor my modesty does not permit me from saying that the state would make a good choice, and if Texas does not want me, I am sure that a hundred years from now it won't make any difference."

THE LOCAL Round Table Club of Gatesville, promptly responded to a call from the newly organized Compliance Board to assist in the cumulation of individual information concerning the effects of the N. R. A. in this locality.

The Compliance Board was named in accordance with national specifications and upon order from the office of Director Hugh S. Johnson, composed of a representative group of citizens.

PEARL CLUB TO HOLD FIDDLERS CONTEST

The Four-Square Club of Pearl will meet Friday November 3. The entertainment will consist of an "old fiddlers contest." The contestants will be divided into two groups. The first group may play any kind of music desired. The first prize for this will be $5. The second group must play old selections such as "Cotton Eyed Joe", "Sally Goodin", etc. The prize for this group is $3. No fiddler can enter both groups. The seconds will be limited to one, either guitar or piano. Each fiddler must furnish his own second if possible and if not one will be furnished. All fiddlers are invited. There will be no admission charge.

Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Johnson passed through Gatesville Wednesday on their way to San Antonio, where they will attend the West Texas Conference in the interest of the Methodist Home. They have just returned from a similar meeting in Carlsbad, New Mexico. During the past few weeks they have attended the five Texas Conferences.

FOG TO BLAME IN SMASH WHEN AUTOS COLLIDE

A heavy fog which hung over Gatesville and the surrounding vicinity early Tuesday morning was responsible for a head-on collision of two automobiles, one driven by Paul Hinson, Gatesville High School football captain and the other by W. G. Walley, on the highway about five miles northwest of Gatesville.

Donald Weaver and Paul Hinson, of Ames, Gatesville High School athletes were driving to school in an old T-Model Ford touring car when their car collided with that of W. G. Walley, Turnersville mail carrier, resident of Gatesville. Walley was driving a new Ford V-8. The fog was so dense that neither of the drivers saw the other until it was too late to avoid an accident. Both cars were badly damaged.

Donald Weaver was thrown from his seat entirely over the other car by the impact and landed on his feet. His only injuries were a few minor bruises. Young Hinson sustained several bruises about his body and a cut on the jaw. The clothing worn by both of the boys body was lacerated. Walley was thrown against the steering wheel of his own car and sustained two broken ribs and minor bruises as a result of the impact.

Dr. J. H. Hamilton was called from Gatesville to administer first-aid treatment to the participants in the accident.

Director Virgil Jones In Scholastic League Ch'man Calls Meeting

At a meeting of the teachers of the county last Saturday, Virgil Jones, Superintendent of the Turnersville School, was elected director general of the Interscholastic League of the county. In pursuance of his duties in that office he has called a meeting of the heads of schools and the officers of the league to be held in the District Courtroom here at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

The purpose of the meeting is to name officials and committees for the county meet and to make other plans for that same event. Plans will also be arranged for a county athletic program.

Coryell County Boys In C. C. C. Regiment Ordered to Rockies

The sixteen young men from Coryell County who were chosen from a large list of applicants for enlistment in the CCC brigade for the next six months and who went to Waco for a medical examination last Friday are now in Denver, Colorado.

According to Fred G. Prewitt, local relief administrator, who accompanied the boys to Waco, immediately after they had successfully passed the examination they were informed that word had been received from headquarters at Washington ordering the boys to the Denver Camp for the winter.

The youths were highly elated over their removal to the Rocky mountain area and will no doubt have some very interesting experiences to relate to their friends concerning their camp life.

Local Administrator Leaves for Austin to Attend Relief School

Fred G. Prewitt, local Relief and Welfare Administrator, left Gatesville for Austin Thursday morning to attend a three days session of the various county relief administrators of Texas.

The meeting is being sponsored by the State Welfare and Relief Commission, of which Lawrence Westbrook, of Waco, is director. The convention will follow the course of a school for the county administrators while they are in the capitol city.

INFORMANT ON CHINA WILL BE GUEST OF CLUB

Miss Mary Novich, of Waco, eminent authority on the subject of china and glassware, will be the guest speaker when the Morris Federation of Gatesville holds its meeting at the home of Mrs. M. W. Lowrey Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The subject of Miss Novich's address will be "China and Glass" which will be emphasized by the accompaniment of a rare antique collection she will bring with her. Miss Novich will also talk on Irish Belleek and its romantic history.

The Morris Federation guest has recently written an article: "China and Why We Think English Bone is the Better China". This thesis will be released the first of January by the Altrusa magazine. Miss Novich is a member of the Waco Altrusa Club.

Miss Novich is an authority on the subject of the history and process of the making of finer china, glass, pottery, statuary, many women's clubs throughout the southwest.

The Federation is quite fortunate in having Miss Novich come to Gatesville.

Message to Parents In Letter by Sup't. Of Gatesville Schools

NOTICE TO SCHOOL PATRONS

With the close of the first six weeks period of the school year a failing list was compiled giving the names of all pupils who had failed in any course and giving also the subjects in which each pupil failed. Although the honor roll was acceptable the failing list was entirely too long.

In the high school with an attendance of about 240, there were 70 pupils who failed in a total of 112 subjects for the first period. These figures do not include students who dropped out before the closing of the period.

In the elementary school of about 400 students there were 229 pupils on the failing list with a total of 328 subjects failed. This is an extremely high percentage of failures. Although this does not mean that all these pupils will fail their grades for the year it does mean that there is plenty of room for improvement and that the situation is serious enough for our earnest consideration.

There is apparently no difference in the degree of difficulty in the courses as offered by the teachers this year and last. The theory advanced in the school for so many failures is the lack of effort on the part of the pupils and a lack of interest on the part of their parents.

The attention of the writer is called to the fact that practically every night students of both schools can be found in many places of amusement rather than (Continued on last page)

THE Half-Price Subscription Sale which was started last Friday by the Coryell County News for the benefit of subscribers in this county has already shown returns that far exceed the expectations of the newspaper's management.

Since the opening date new subscriptions and renewals have come in from all parts of Coryell County as a result of the extensive advertising which the News has sponsored through the medium of handbills and newspaper publicity. The actual returns have already netted an increase of nearly twenty-five per cent above the former circulation figures, and indications are that the promising number of new subscribers will be signed before the close of the campaign.

Display Saturday

Last Saturday the management of the News maintained an up-town office and display window on the north side of the public square, in the Joe Hanna old stand. A representative of the News was located there who received subscriptions during the day. This office was maintained for the convenience of patrons. The display window, which is still on show, contains several posters showing clippings of several of the regular weekly features of the News. Mats, cuts, and electrotypes, of various kinds are also on display and patrons who have not already seen this window are invited to inspect the exhibit. There will be a member of the News staff at this same office next Saturday and will be glad to give any desired information concerning the Coryell County News, and the features which this newspaper affords.

We have made arrangements to extend a special offer on a combination of the Coryell County News and the Dallas Semi-Weekly Farm News at a rate of $1.25 a year. Each of these newspapers are ordinarily sold for $1.00 each.

Offer Expires Nov. 4

The special sale offer of fifty cents a year on the Coryell County News will expire November 4, and patrons are urged to take advantage of the sale before that date.

Charges of drunkenness were filed against four local men and a second charge of driving while intoxicated was filed against one of the four, by county and city officials Monday morning following an automobile accident which occurred shortly after noon Sunday when the Chevrolet coach in which the men were riding collided with a Ford Tudor Sedan driven by Mrs. Sterling Edwards at the intersection of Leon and Twelfth Streets.

Both cars were badly damaged, however, no one was injured seriously in the occurrence.

HORNET TACKLE IS INELIGIBLE BY NEW RULING

By Nell Routh

Thursday night, October 19, the district executive football committee met in Waco and ruled Delmar Ramsey, Hornet tackle, ineligible.

The basis of this action was that records showed that he had been in high school four years prior to this season. Irregular grades, however, for the year 1930-31 indicate that he was not in school all of the 1930-31 term. If this contention can be proven, Ramsey will be eligible for this season of football.

A local committee called upon Mr. Johnson, former Gatesville Superintendent, Tuesday and secured his verification of the point at issue. This information, with other statements from some Gatesville people should convince the executive committee that Ramsey is yet eligible. School records to prove the point are not to be had since records for the year in question and prior were not kept.

It is likely that the committee will meet in Gatesville at an early date and consider the case again, in the light of the new evidence that has come up.

WOMEN OF BAPTIST W. M. U. TO PACK CANS

It is earnestly hoped that all the women of all the churches of Leon River Association will make an intensive campaign for food supplies of all kinds and for clothing, both old and new, to be shipped in the Association's car to Buckner Orphan's Home on Nov. 20, from Gatesville.

J. O. Brown tried to get me to tell him how much rain we had Thursday afternoon. As a matter of fact it was measurable only in drops and not in inches. Aubrey Collins and J. B. Martin have this business of sacking beans down to a fine point. Ivy Edmondson had a "lean" on the mail box on the bank corner the other afternoon, but I don't imagine he held it long. Troy Jones doesn't have to take many steps from the Gatesville National Bank across the street to his truck, about five paces is a good estimate. It seemed natural to see former representative Frank West greeting friends here Wednesday; I hardly knew him without his mustache. I could hardly believe the "barbecue story" John Washburn told me but Bert Richardson verified it, so it must be O. K.

JONES HOME IS DEMOLISHED BY FIRE SATURDAY

A fire which broke out shortly after noon last Saturday as the destroyed the Edgar Jones home on North 10th Street and furnishings and also resulted in the injury of Mrs. Edgar Jones, burned about the hands and face when the explosion occurred. The property damage is estimated at more than $3,500.00.

Mrs. Jones, a teacher at the State Juvenile Training School, returned to her home in Gatesville shortly after noon and retired to the basement to clean a coat with gasoline. She turned off the pilot light under the gas stove but failed to attend to the water heater flame, which ignited the gasoline fumes.

From reports of Mrs. Pleas Walker, daughter of Mrs. Jones, the former heard the explosion and immediately rushed down stairs to find her mother severely burned about the face and arms and on her limbs from the knees down. The house was in flames by the time Mrs. Walker helped her mother out of the house.

After some difficulty with the hose, the local fire department succeeded in extinguishing the flames, thereby saving adjacent property.

The building and furniture were insured and Mr. Jones was granted a full settlement on that part of the loss.

Commissioner Payne Attends Convention On at Mineral Wells

Dick Payne, county commissioner for the Gatesville beat, left Thursday for Mineral Wells where he will attend a three day convention of the County Judges and Commissioners Association of Texas.

Colonel Lawrence Westbrook, state relief director, will be the principal speaker on the convention program, and will address the gathering concerning winter relief for the destitute, unemployed families of Texas. He will also explain the new state relief act and the plan of federal relief aid. Westbrook will go directly to Mineral Wells from Washington where he has been conferring with federal relief administrators.

County Judge, Otis Miller, of Anson, is president of the association.

Clack Resigns Position With Gas Company; G. E. Bean Successor

James Clack, local manager of the Community Natural Gas Co. and Star Gas Co. of Gatesville, tendered his resignation to officials of the two companies the early part of the week, to take effect immediately.

Clack has been the local Gas Company manager for the past five years and his departure will be felt by a host of friends which he and his wife have made during their residence in Gatesville.

G. E. Bean, of Brownwood, has been named to succeed Clack as manager in this locality, and has already assumed his duties.

IRVIN SCOTT HONORED FOR SALES JOB

Irvin Scott, local Sinclair agent is a "Jumbo" and here's how he got that way.

The Sinclair Refining Company organized a club of dealers who were able to deliver "the goods" in sales of lubricants. The prerequisite to membership in the Jumbo Club was the selling of a ton of grease during one month. Scott sold 2,128 pounds of grease in September and as a result is proudly wearing a bronze "Jumbo" elephant on his watch fob.

There will be a ball game at 3 o'clock in the afternoon between Pearl and Jonesboro. The public is invited to come and see a real ball game and stay over for a real musical treat.

If further information is desired write to M. Tharp at Pearl.

GATESVILLE IN OPPOSITION TO MART 11 TODAY

By Brack Curry

The Hornets play the Mart High School team at 3:30 this afternoon on the local field.

The team was defeated last week 19 to 0 by a fast West team. The boys put up a splendid fight but were overpowered by a team superior in weight and experience. West scored on a pass in the first quarter and kicked goal, making the score 7 to 0. In the second quarter they advanced to the four yard line but were held on downs by a stubborn Hornet line. The local team, with Dillashaw doing some wonderful driving, then advanced to the 50 yard line, where they lost the ball. West scored 6 more points just before the half. The last half was savagely fought throughout. In the third quarter a West back made a long end run to score the last touchdown of the game. Neither teams scored in the fourth quarter.

Quarterback Harry Dillashaw was the outstanding player in the game last week. He gained yard after yard on off tackle plays and did some wonderful punting. Captain Paul Hinson and Clarence Bauman did splendid work at the guard positions; Joe Powell turned in fine work and Boyd Bonds, playing at end, was the outstanding lineman of the game. Baker and Weaver did brilliant work at the tackle positions; and the backfield, composed of Dillashaw, Byron, Rogers and McClellan, were especially noticeable on the defensive.

After roundly outplaying Marlin High for three quarters last week, Mart lost the decision, 7 to 6. Mart has a powerful team, and had a 9...to...6 edge on first downs in the Marlin game. The local squad was seriously weakened last week by the loss of Seth McClarty, 130 pound tackle. However, he will probably be in the starting line-up this week. Coach Maurice Ewing has been putting his charges through heavy practice on both offensive and defensive work.

The probable starting line-up for the Hornets is as follows: Ends; Powell and Bonds, guards; G. Dickie and Capt. Hinson, Center; McDowell, halves; Byron alternating with Hair, and McClellan, full back; Rogers, and quarterback; Dillashaw.

Heavy Rainfall With Slight Hail Damage Over County

Hail, which was probably the largest in volume for many years, fell in Gatesville early last night. The hail which fell several months ago probably did more damage, however. The downfall lasted for almost three-quarters of an hour and was accompanied by heavy rain and a thunder storm. Minor damage was done to numerous structures in this city. Hail stones ranged in size from that of a marble to almost as large as a man's fist and fell in such volume that streets and yards were white with them.

Three miles northwest of town the hail was reported to be six inches deep in fields and yards. Roofs were beaten almost entirely off of houses and barns.

that hail was severe and rain was heavy but the News was unable to learn the extent of the damage.

Reports from Ireland are that a heavy rain fell but that it was not accompanied by hail.

Mound reports shower, no hail. At press time rain was still falling but the hail had ceased. The rain will be worth many dollars to the farmers of sections in which it fell both as stock water and to bring planted grain up.

Birthday Supper For Dave McAllister.

An unusual courtesy extended Dave McAllister in honor of his birthday last Tuesday, was a barbecue supper and fox hunt, given by his father, Lewis McAllister.

Over a hundred invited guests, known as Coryell County Fox Hunters and their wives, assembled on the banks of Coryell Creek about eight miles north east of Gatesville. Barbecue and coffee were prepared at the picnic site by the men of the party; the ladies having brought the other part of the supper. Sometime after dark the men went to the mountains for the hunt which proved to be a good one, lasting until midnight. At this time they returned to meet the ladies, the entire party having waited until the hunt was over.

Wednesday Bridge Club With Mrs. Robt Brown.

Mrs. Robert Brown was hostess Monday afternoon to members of the Wednesday Bridge Club and guests, at her home, 702 South 14th Street.

A profusion of cosmos added cheer to the lovely reception rooms where four tables of players including Mesdames J. D. Brown, Geo. Painter, Bob Saunders, R. B. Cross, Francis Johnson, E. B. Garrett, Harry Flentge, Tom Mears, Ayres Compton, M. W. Lowrey, Clay Stinnett, A. W. Gartman, D. R. Boone, C. L. Thompson, Hugh Saunders and Francis Caruth, enjoyed a series of games. Mrs. Saunders and Mrs. Stinnett held high scores and received beautiful lacquer trays. A delectable salad plate was served by the hostess.

Mrs. Kermit Jones was a caller.

Approaching Marriage of Miss Gene Cayce Announced.

Announcing the approaching marriage of her sister, Miss Gene Cayce, to Mr. Otto Lengefeld, Mrs. E. Price Bauman entertained October 19th with a beautifully appointed afternoon bridge at the home of her mother, Mrs. W. W. Cayce.

The rooms were attractively

BYRON LEAIRD, Proprietor

IN MEMORY OF RUTH LESAR

We take this method of commemorating the virtues of Ruth LeSar born on the 25th day of June 1913 and called by the Grim Reaper beyond the great divide of mortality on the 9th day of October 1933 at the age of 20. Ruth, during her long and lingering illness, always faced her pain and her sorrow with a smile and was content with the fact that the Creator knew best and she was ready to depart this life with the consolation that she had put her trust in God. In recognition of those splendid virtues and qualities with which nature had decorated the character of Ruth and with the memorials of her life, we must say that above her tomb her daily sunshine has smiled where the tears of her loved ones have fallen; yet over the humblest she has bidden a good example and did not live in vain and today the butterfly—ancient emblem of immortality—waves his wings above every sod. A short time before the time to go was eminent, Ruth called and requested that the Bible be read and with a farewell smile was gone. The years lengthen and become dimmer in the panorama of time, but the deeds of Ruth who gave the supreme sacrifice at the age of twenty with a request for the Bible which had consoled her in a long and lingering illness, will grow brighter with the flight of time. In closing the writer, who knew Ruth during all her suffering and pain cannot refrain from quoting the couplet found in Laurence Benyon's poem: "At the going down of the sun and in the morning, we will remember her." A Friend.

NOTICE: Any erroneous reflection upon the character or standing of any person or firm appearing in its columns will be gladly and promptly corrected upon calling the attention of the management to the article in question.

INFLATION? DEFLATION?

The question uppermost in the minds of many of our political leaders and economists is whether or not the American Dollar will be inflated.

The American Dollar is simply a demand note against one hundred cents worth of gold held in reserve by the government. Inflation is no more than decreasing the gold security behind the dollar thus decreasing the purchasing power of the dollar.

The prosperity time of 1927 was a period of inflation although inflation at that time was in commodities not in the dollar. Inflated prices at that time lowered the purchasing power of the dollar. The inflated dollar of today would also decrease the purchasing power of the dollar.

The main question locally is: "What effect will inflation have on Coryell County and Gatesville?" This question must be answered in several answers, three of which follow.

If you have saved or accumulated some money and that money is on deposit in any depository—bank, trust company or savings institution—the value of your savings will decrease from 33 per cent to 66 per cent according to the scale of inflation IF you use that money for any purpose during the inflation period. On the other hand if you keep the money intact where it is, until the period of inflation is over, you will not have lost.

If you have incurred debts in prosperity of inflation times and have never been able to pay these debts—it will work greatly to your interest because you will be allowed to pay inflated debts with an inflated dollar. In other words; If you bought an article for $45 in 1927 when prices and salaries were high and have not paid for that article then if you pay that debt with the present or deflated dollar you must pay double for that article because you can buy two like articles today for $45. If on the other hand the dollar is inflated you would be able to pay these old debts with the same kind of a dollar or a dollar that is just as easily gotten as the one under which the debts were made thus you would not have to suffer so greatly to pay the debt.

If you are a salaried or limited income man—the plan may work a great hardship because with inflation will come "sky high" prices and if your income remains the same you will not be able to make ends meet. If inflation comes incomes must be increased or want, privation and hunger will be rampant in our land and the wolf of destitution will scratch at the door of a million homes.

If you have some money and think inflation is coming buy something with it because the price of things is going up and the value of the dollar is going down—IF inflation does come.

THEY OUGHT TO BE DOCKED

If you loafed on the job you'd soon be looking for a job. If you took a half day off without asking for it you would have a permanent vacation. If you read on the job you'd soon have plenty of time for reading. If you spent your work time flirting, the problem would be how to support her after you had won her.

Why shouldn't these same sound business principles be applied to the Legislature and other public employees.

The Legislature takes an afternoon off to listen to a ball game over the radio. The college student legislators bring their "sweets" into the legislative hall and "spoon" during the session. It's been a long time since the legislature has been in session regularly on Saturday (and it isn't the NRA either). A legislator who listens to the floor debate is almost as scarce as "hen's teeth". They're too busy reading papers, magazines, books, etc., (some of them just look at the pictures).

Now we ask you are these actions right? Are they even honest?

FARM CO-OPERATION

(From the Stephenville Empire-Tribune)

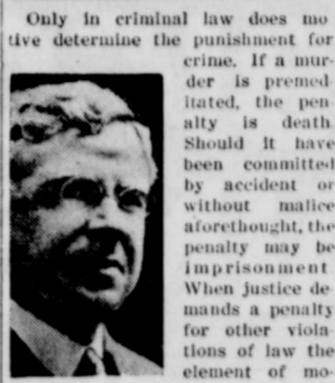

Farmers who believe that because the government is seeking to do certain things for them that they need do nothing for themselves might ponder these words of Governor Henry Morgenthau, Jr., of the Farm Credit Administration: "I believe in cooperation both as a way of advancement and as a necessity for the American Farmer. I do not believe any new form of economy or new regulation of production will make it less necessary. It is more likely to increase the importance of it."

Agricultural cooperation means that the farmer, in association with his group, is taking definite steps to help himself and is adopting sound and proven means of achieving a given end. The government recognizes this. The careful reader of recent farm legislation will be impressed with the emphasis laid on co-operative methods.

Morgenthau says that the new system amounts to a chain of banks for co-operatives. The government has indicated that it is going to help farmers by providing necessary financing; and the rest is up to the farmers.

MOTIVES

By
 LEONARD A. BARRETT

Only in criminal law does motive determine the punishment for crime. If a murder is premeditated, the penalty is death. Should it have been committed by accident or without malice aforethought, the penalty may be imprisonment. When justice demands a penalty for other violations of law the element of motive is not considered. It has been a long time since Jean Valjean, in Les Misérables, served 19 years as a galley slave in a French prison for stealing a loaf of brown bread. True he stole the bread, but the motive which impelled the act was the hunger of the seven little children of his widowed sister. That the penalty was unjust goes without question, but how far have we advanced in this respect from the days when Victor Hugo wrote?

In the reconstruction of our social order—and who doubts that it is undergoing a very significant change?—the element of motive is bound to receive more serious consideration. The most dangerous condition in our social order today is the problem of unemployment. This is due to two factors, the impossibility of procuring work by men who honestly seek for it, and the mental attitude of those men who do not care to work even when they have the opportunity. The latter believe that the government's duty is to provide shelter, food and heat for all persons deprived of these necessities. The element of motive always asks the question, Why? When welfare workers disregard the element of motive and give necessities indiscriminately to whomever applies, it only encourages that dangerous attitude which not only accepts but demands these necessities as the rights of citizenship. If a man's motive in accepting help is to escape work, there is no moral law which demands that he be assisted.

The element of motive is also vital to our national recovery. Why do we want recovery? The universal answer seems to be, recovery is essential to prosperity. But why prosperity? If our motive in seeking prosperity is that we may again become extravagant and indulgent and repeat the same mistake which brought about the depression, then the return to prosperity might be open to serious question. Whenever we have a recovery of our moral and spiritual resources along with the recovery of our material values, our prosperity will remain stable and secure and its recovery fully justified.

A Danger Spot in the Community

There is an interesting editorial in a recent issue of the Tri-State Tribune, Picher, Oklahoma.

It talks about a matter which rarely concerns the mind of the average citizen—the fire hose which is so important to the protection of the property and lives of himself and his neighbors. Just before the editorial was written there was a fire that threatened the entire business section of the city. The fire department did excellent work—but it was seriously hampered because it had but 600 feet of hose. One hundred feet of this was damaged beyond repair, leaving only 500 feet—one-third as much as it should have—for battling the next blaze that appears.

Poor and inadequate fire hose, broken down and inferior fire engines, poorly trained departments, faulty water supplies—one wonders how many lives and how many dollars these things have consumed. The problem presented is especially timely now—during depression communities have cut fire department appropriations to the bone, leaving the public safety menaced. One need only read the statistics concerning sales of standard fire engines to appreciate this. They have been at an alarmingly low point—thousands of engines which would normally be replaced or rebuilt are in service today.

Fire department modernization is made possible, along with the public works, in the great public works bill. There is no better place to spend money—there is nothing that will bring the taxpayer a greater return for his outlay. This is the time to put the fire department in the best possible shape.

Nearly 24,000 cars of fruit and vegetables were shipped out of the lower Rio Grande Valley in the 1932-33 season.

Keep Your Eyes Open

In his recent annual report, F. Robertson Jones, Secretary of the International Association of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, said that more legislation affecting that industry was proposed during 1933 legislative sessions than in any other year of which there is a record.

Needless to say, the great bulk of the proposals concerned bills that were ill-considered, and prejudicial to the increase of the underwriting companies, the insured and the general public. Increased insurance taxation, for example, was one of the favorites. Others advanced plans for monopolistic and competitive state compensation funds.

It is a hallmark of hard times that proposed legislation directed against important and essential industries appear in vast quantities. And that is a reason why the public—as well as genuinely public-spirited lawmakers—should be continually on the watch. In the case of casualty insurance, for example, the bills, most of which were defeated, would increase the cost of essential protection. They would, in some cases, lower the efficiency of the company in protecting the interest of those who have purchased policies. Such legislation would benefit no one—and would seriously harm many.

Insurance is already one of the most heavily taxed of businesses. Every cent of such taxes must be passed on to the policyholder—if new taxes are added, those will be passed on too. The wise citizen will watch the way the wind blows—and, if necessary, do what he can to defend an industry which protects him and his family from potential ruin.

The New Era in Home Building

From the standpoint of today's homebuilder, the depression has produced one good result.

According to a news item from Seattle, building has acquired a new status in the last three years. Architect and contractors agree that it will never go back to the old basis. The principal change has been in the degree of discrimination developed by the prospective builder and buyer. He may be buying a very inexpensive place—but he has learned to demand beauty and artistry and good workmanship and materials. It is doubtful, as the news item observes, if the old jack-knife carpenter and the contractor who threw up a number of jerry-built houses as a speculation, will have a place in the new order.

What is true in Washington is true, to a greater or lesser degree, elsewhere.

There was never a better time for building a new home or rebuilding the old one—never a time when we could get so much, both in materials and expert advice, as at present. The buyer's market still exists—the price rises that hev occurred recently are as nothing to the price rises that are coming.

Your local dealer and contractor can tell you the whole story. Call on him—and get in on the ground floor of the new era in building.

10,325 MORE BALES OF COTTON THAN 1932

Communication has come to the News from W. R. Goodson, Collector of Cotton Statistics in Coryell County, which reads:

"According to a report received from the Department of Commerce there were 19,624 bales of cotton ginned in Coryell County prior to October 1, as compared for 9,299 bales on the same date of last year. In these figures round bales are figured as half bales.

Cotton Growers Will Be Paid Rentals To Let Land Stay Idle

According to the latest plan of federal crop reduction, cotton growers will be paid rentals of from $3 to $11 an acre to let their land remain idle next year, with the purpose of the program to trim surplus farm production. The scale of payments will be based on the potential yields of the land under the control program made public today by the farm adjustment administration which aims to bring plantings down to 25,000,000 acres in 1934 as compared with about 41,000,000 this year.

Cost $100,000,000
It is estimated that the cost would be above $100,000,000. This will be met by continuing the processing tax of 4.2 cents a pound for another year.

Farm administrators said they intend to launch within two weeks their campaign to obtain agreements for reducing the plantings. The first step will be organizing of county associations of growers. Speed is necessary to make the control campaign parallel the government's program of making loans of 10 cents a pound on cotton held by farmers. The latter will be put into operation soon under the plans approved by President Roosevelt, with loans being extended by a commodity credit corporation to farmers who agree to join in next year's reduction program.

In addition to rental payments, producers joining in the 1934 control plan will be paid a benefit on the domestically consumed portion of their crop if the average price during next season is below the "parity" price for the staple based on pre-war average. Any rentals that have been advanced by that time will be deducted from the benefit payments. About one half of the cotton ordinarily produced is required for domestic use.

Schedule Announced
The schedule of payments in the 1934 program follows:
For land producing approximately 75 to 125 pounds of cotton per acre, a rental of not over $3 an acre; from 150 to 200 pounds, a maximum of $5; 225 to 300 pounds, a maximum of $7; 325 to 400 pounds, a maximum of $9 and for land producing 400 pounds and over a maximum of $11.

The amount of the cash rental will be determined by the county associations, subject to the approval of the recovery administration.

Economic Highlights

happenings That Affect the Dinner Pails, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of every individual. National and International Affairs Inseparable From Local Welfare.

Industrial activity, in spite of the appearance of some downward tendencies, is continuing at a comparatively high rate. In August, production was more than 50 per cent greater than in August, 1932. In July, production reached its peak, when it was equal to the 1923-25 average.

Price advances, which started with the first manifestations of recovery, continued through September. The cost of living has accordingly risen. An exception to the general trend is farm prices, which have declined. One of the best of recent signs is that the wide discrepancy between production and consumption, which confused the outlook a short time ago, is narrowing.

Latest information concerning basic industries shows:
Domestic Trade—Both wholesale and retail increased in August, in both volume and value. Department store sales were well above the August, 1932, level.

Employment—Though production declined somewhat in August as compared with July, payrolls and employment continued to improve—the advances being carried into September. It is estimated that 750,000 persons found work in August, and the September experience, when detailed, may be still more favorable.

Commodity Prices—The advance in prices, with the exception of retail, slackened in August and September. Retail prices rose 8 per cent between August 1 and September 1—the greatest monthly advance in a decade.

Credit—The most significant recent change in the credit situation is that open-market purchase of U. S. Government securities by the Federal Reserve has increased. Purchases rose to a weekly rate of $35,000,000, as compared with $10,000,000 previously. The Federal credit expansion drive, which includes liberating of assets in closed banks, is apt to work sudden and unexpected changes.

Securities—Market action has been confusing and unpredictable. Generally speaking, stock prices have fluctuated with quotations on the dollar. Among bonds, high-grade domestic issues have stood up well, and issues of foreign gold standard countries have advanced.

Foreign Trade—Exports have declined and imports increased. The outlook for increased exporting is not bright for the moment.

Construction—Contracts jumped 26 per cent in August, due principally to public works and utility undertakings. Building activity, however, is lower than it was last year or the year before.

Transportation—There was a contrasational decline of 6 per cent in freight traffic in August, and the decline continued through September. However, comparison with the months preceding July, and with 1932, are still favorable.

Automobiles—Production schedules dropped in September, but less than was anticipated. The decline in retail sales has been less than seasonal trends would have indicated. Demand at end of September was holding up well. Tire output in August, while smallest in five months was at the highest August level since 1929.

Power—Steady and continued advances in electric consumption have been registered in practically all parts of the country.

Chemicals—Activity has been affected by declining production in the major productive lines which constitute the market for chemicals. Demand was dull so far as paints and varnishes were concerned, with a seasonal increase in alcohol orders. Prices have been firm.

Farm—The August wheat movement, because of the short crop, was comparatively light. The month's receipts were down 27 per cent as compared with July, and wholesale wheat prices declined. Corn prospects were slightly better. Hog receipts were much higher than before, and sheep and lamb receipts likewise showed improvement. Butter receipts showed the usual seasonal decline.

Foods—Production in the food processing industry declined 8 per cent in August, with allowance made for the customary seasonal decline. However, activity was 8 per cent above a year ago, and employment and payroll levels were encouraging.

Lumber—Curtailment in receipts of new orders has caused an increase in stock on hand and a lessening of production. Prices continue to advance, as do payrolls and employment.

Iron and Steel—Steel production declined during August, and a still sharper drop followed during first half of September. Orders have come in slowly. Unfilled orders of U. S. Steel at end of August were lowest since April.

Textiles—Though production has slackened, August production was the best for that month since 1929. The textile code has produced substantial gains in payrolls and employment.

IF YOU COUNT THE COST

The cost of attending our school is nominal for two reasons: In the first place, our tuition charges have always been very reasonable and, in the second place, we afford the student the opportunity to get the fullest possible out of his investment of time. In other words, we make it possible for the good student to finish his course in a short time, thus both limiting the cost of his education and giving him a chance to take employment much earlier than would be possible were his courses unduly extended.

It is said one pays for an education even though one does not get it. This is true. One pays for it in decreased earning power, limited opportunities, and small achievements. Therefore, the cost of an education is infinitesimal as compared with the cost of not having it.

After all, a thing is worth what it will do for its owner—nothing more. On this basis some types of education have doubtful value, but business education rates high in the scale of worth. It means preparation for immediate and certain employment, as well as certain advancement; so the worth of a practical business education is greatly in excess of the cost.

The practical training is the type of training we specialize in. We endeavor to equip the young ambitious person so he may step right out the next day after graduation and begin earning—not four or six months each year but for the full twelve months.

We solicit the bright ambitious young man or woman, equipped with a high school education to spend a few months with us. When his course is finished and with the aid of our Employment Department, we will find him or her a place in business, with an assured future to economic independence.

Bexas county wheat farmers are going many others one better in their loyalty to the government in time of stress. They have voted to stay out of the wheat plan but to reduce their wheat acreage 15 percent anyway.

We have records of garden sub-irrigation water coming from surface tanks, windmills and from weekly wash. Now a Hutchinson county woman is reported by the home demonstration agent to be catching water that runs off the roofs of house and barn for diversion into a concrete tile sub-irrigation system.

Somervell county farmers received from $2 to $4 more per acre for their plow-up cotton on terraced land than on unterraced.

An average of 236 containers of home raised garden stuff was canned by 7 girls of the King's Highway 4-H Club in Brazos county this year. They had 24 varieties and averaged 2386 pounds of vegetables per garden.

Three creep feeders have been placed on the Elsinora Ranch in Pecos county to prevent retarding of the growth of calves when the grass is short. If found profitable the county agent says the ranch will provide these feeders for their entire 329 sections.

Cooper—In studying the yard of Mrs. T. A. Moseley, a Delta county yard demonstrator, it can be seen that the native shrubs were not affected either by the severe winter weather or the hot dry weather as the other plants were. Mrs. Moseley set out 2475 native shrubs and plants of 18 varieties and, since the cost was only $1.63, others have realized that with plans, brains and a little work anyone can have a beautiful yard. In Mrs. Moseley's yard you will find that she selected shrubbery so that she would have evergreens, flowering shrubs or vines, winter berries, and autumn leaves to give color for each season. She has sumac, butterfly bush, trumpet vine, ivy, tamarix, cedar, pepper tree, coral berry, red bud, two kinds of haws, verbena, ageratum, lambs-quarters, golden rod, Indian currant, elderberry, snow-on-the-mountain, and Indian blanket.

Wharton—A pantry valued at $360 with a cost of $13.75 has been a chieftain by Mrs. O. H. Obenhaus, 4-H Pantry demonstrator for the Bonus-Nedra home demonstration club in Wharton county. Her goal for this year was to put up 900 containers of food to help her in securing an adequate diet for her family of six. She has canned a total of 1019 containers, 119 above her goal, and this extra amount will be used for company. A total of 1084 pounds of meat, sausage, lard, cheese, peas and beans have also been cured to add to the variety of food, making 114 varieties. All of this food, with the exception of part of the fruit, was raised on their farm. Sixty feet of shelving at a cost of $1.20 was added to hold the canned food, organizing it in groups to save time and energy when using. Mrs. Obenhaus sold 750 dozen eggs at an average price of 16c per dozen, making a total of $136.60 which was used to pay expenses of pantry, buy staple groceries and clothe the family. Anxious to help others live at home she has helped 9 non-club members can 484 cans of food.

SWEETWATER—A back porch which was very small was enlarged and converted into an attractive bedroom by Mrs. B. F. McGee, bedroom demonstrator of the Bitter Creek club, according to the Nolan county home demonstration report of Miss Fontilla Johnson, agent. In it Mrs. McGee built a closet with five shelves and a rod made of a broom handle. The walls she painted green. A dressing table was made from scraps of lumber and a mirror was hung above it. A new bedspread and linens were added. New chair cushions made of cretonnes to match the dressing table were made. All of the furniture was refinished.

LUBBOCK—A return of $2.53 for every dollar's worth of feed his herd of 22 Holstein cows consumed last year is reported by W. M. Bolton, dairy demonstrator for Becton Community, Lubbock county. The herd averaged 311.2 pounds of butterfat per cow, the average feed cost of which was 5.4 cents per pound. The ration consisted of whole grain sorghum bundles and wheat pasture. His total net profit for the year was $482.71 from the herd. The highest production per cow was 10,161 pounds of milk and 370.3 pounds butterfat, and the lowest cow gave 5556 pounds of milk and 192.3 pounds of butterfat. The records were kept in cooperation with R. N. McClain, assistant county agent, who comments that it took good cows, a cheap ration and high production to get any profit at all during the last year.

Oh Cynthia!

CHAPTER I

The Cary House.

"THIS must be the house!" Geoff Enslow thought, alighting from the taxi and stopping before the gate.

Here was the double-pointed iron fence enclosing the large yard. Here were the two stone lions guarding the front steps; lions on whose broad backs Geoff's mother and little Nona Cary had ridden some thirty years ago. There at the left was the garden with the antlered deer, one kneeling on delicate forelegs, the other standing haughtily erect. Time had been at work upon the impressive length of their antlers, but otherwise they were just as Mrs. Enslow had described them.

"By George! There's the identical marble lady pouring water from the two-handled jug on her shoulder! How I loved to hear about that fountain when I was six and had scarlet fever!"

He had reason to remember that illness since it gave him more of his mother's attention than he had enjoyed before or since. Mrs. Enslow was not, as she herself frankly admitted, the maternal type of woman. She loved her clever husband with all her heart and soul, and as his profession of chemical engineer carried him to all parts of the world, she had gone with him, leaving Geoff at first in the care of his grandmother, then, as he grew older, at various schools and summer camps.

John Enslow was dead now, and Geoff was following in his father's professional footsteps. Mrs. Enslow, however, did not suggest accompanying him to Denver where he was to spend a year in laboratory work before returning to take his father's place in the New York firm. Instead, she settled down to finish the book "Properties and Uses of Hydrofluoric Acid" which her husband had begun and which his publishers considered could be completed satisfactorily by his widow.

"You must look up the Carys in Denver," she told Geoff. "The Aylesburys, I suppose I should call them now. Only Captain Cary is left. I used to visit Nona Cary every summer when I was a child. Her father had large mining interests there and my father had business with him."

"I know," said Geoff. "Have you forgotten how you used to tell me about the big house and the lions and the lady in the garden? I even know that there was a blackheart cherry tree back of the house and you and Nona made yourselves sick one year eating them."

His mother looked amused. "I'd forgotten I'd told you all that! I always intended to get back and see Nona after I married, or have her come here. I always remember to send Cynthia a birthday gift each year," she added hastily.

Geoff grinned at her. "You remember! Who was it reminded you last month and went down with you to select the gift? A corking jade dinner ring it was! As a godmother, he reproached her, "you leave something to be desired."

"As a mother, too, perhaps," she said quietly, "though I must say you've rather thriven under neglect. Nona Carey, now—Nona Aylesbury, I mean—will fulfill all your dreams of an adoring maternal parent. She'll fuss over you, pet you, worry about you if your little finger aches—she was a perfect little mother even when we were children together."

"You talk as if you expected me to live with her?" Geoff, interested in this implication, did not heed the faint bitterness in his mother's tone.

"It might be a good thing for everybody concerned," she answered. "I rather imagine the Aylesburys are having a hard time financially. Captain Cary was never a business man—he inherited his wealth from his father, who came from Virginia and made a fortune in his old age. I believe Nona's husband put his own money in with the Captain's, and when he died—Mr. Aylesbury, I mean—it seems to me there was some sort of financial crash. Your father and I were in Spain—" She stopped abruptly, her eyes dark with memories.

Geoff, however, was very much occupied with the present. "I hope you haven't committed me to living with them?" There was alarm in his voice, the alarm of a young man who has had rueful experience with ambitious mothers of pretty young daughters.

She shrugged. "Think it likely? You've managed your own affairs for a great many years now. But I know you hate hotels and boarding houses, and the Cary place used to be delightful."

"Mrs. Aylesbury went back to it when her husband died?"

"Oh, she never left it. Her father insisted that she and Mr. Aylesbury move right in with him—Mrs. Cary had been dead for years—and the house is big enough to hold several families. Nona has two children; a son about your age, and Cynthia, Cynthia's younger."

"What's she like?"

His mother lifted her heavy eyebrows. "Ware Cynthia! If she's like her mother, she's pretty and appealing, and learned to flirt in her cradle. How long did you say you'll be in Denver?"

Geoff's eyebrows lifted in imitation of her own. He had caught the trick from her when he was an adoring small boy, and had never lost it.

"I told you," he said mildly. "A year; perhaps longer. It depends on how well I stick to business and learn what I'm there for."

"Less than a year, then," she said with some dryness. "You work like a tiger. I wonder why?"

The idle question betrayed how little understanding she had of the fierce ambition which had whipped him along for years. To be as brilliantly successful as his father had been; to command his mother's respect, her admiration; to stand at least on an even footing with her who had been the idol of his boy's heart! This had been the goal toward which he had been working through long months and years of study.

And now that he was within sight of that goal, now that he had met his mother as an adult instead of a child, he asked himself uneasily if it had been worth while after all. His clear young eyes saw her now as she was; a woman suddenly deprived of all that had made life worth while to her, getting through the rest of her days as best she could, having an affectionate interest in her son, but never rising to those heights of companionship and understanding of which he had dreamed so long.

He was remembering this conversation now as he stood outside the Carys' yard. There was a little girl in there, he saw, jumping rope. She had heavy dark hair cut in an Egyptian bob, big black eyes, a thin little heart-shaped face, and long thin arms and legs. She wore a handsome linen frock which was none too clean, a pair of blue silk socks and patent leather slippers. Her bare knees were scratched and grimy.

As Geoff laid his hand on the gate she came toward him, still jumping. "Hello!" he said with his friendly grin. "Does Mrs. Aylesbury live here?"

The child nodded. "And Cynthia and Cup'n and Marguerite—"

Geoff shook his head reprovingly. "Never give any more information than you have to," he instructed her. "It's extravagant, and besides, in these days of kidnapers—"

She skipped closer and regarded him with interest. "Are you a kidnaper?"

"I don't know yet. I'll tell you later, when I'm better acquainted with you. Is Mrs. Aylesbury at home?"

"It's—Not—the—House!" She Pant-ed. "It's—Cynthia!"

with you. Is Mrs. Aylesbury at home?"

She nodded, never ceasing her rhythmical motion. "You can unlatch the gate yourself, can't you? I have to jump all the way up to the front steps, and I have to be careful about cracks. Step on a crack and you'll break your mother's back! Only I haven't got any mother," she said cheerfully.

"That's too bad!"

"No—it—Isn't!" She was growing short of breath and her words came with short spaces between. "If I—did—have—I'd—have to live—with her!"

Geoff was quick to catch her meaning. "You like it so well here? Well, I rather like the looks of the house myself."

The child shook her head and the dark mop of her hair swung forward, to be impatiently swung back again. Geoff watched her a little anxiously. It seemed a long time for her to keep up that jumping.

"It's—not—the—house!" she pant-ed. "It's—Cynthia!"

"Look here!" He put an arresting hand on her small shoulder. "Don't jump any more now. We've come to the foot of the steps."

"I'm going—to—jump up them! It's easy!" She essayed the first one, missed the rope and stumbled. Geoff caught her in his arms. She laughed and rested against him contentedly. "Cynthia said not to try them when I was tired. She led me to wait and take 'em when I was fresh."

"Cynthia was right. You may tell her I said so," he remarked affably.

"Cynthia's always right."

"You don't tell me, Miss Jumping Jill!"

She laughed joyously. "Jumping Jill! That's a lovely name. I'll tell Cynthia. Now watch me jump the steps!"

The rope flashed in a quick arc, the child's slippers rose and fell. Geoff, to be out of her way, went up the eight steps which led to the porch and stood waiting for her there. Near the door stood a table, and he had an opportunity for a quick survey of what it held. A bit of dainty sewing, the needle quilted carefully into the flimsy stuff; a book on amateur photography, its pages held open by a half-intended apple; a sample budget book issued by a national firm, a line drawn through the printed figures and penciled ones substituted; a roller skate with its strap broken; a pair of tortoise-rimmed spectacles; a fountain pen with its cap off; and a handkerchief on which someone recently and very copiously had had nose-bleed.

"The spectacles belong to Captain Cary," Geoff mused. "The skate and the handkerchief—cause and effect!—are the child's. The sewing done by a pretty girl—and the book indicates a camera complex on young Cary's part. The budget book and the apple—"

Miss Jumping Jill interrupted this exercise of his deductive powers. She flung herself upon him again, gasping but triumphant.

"I did it! I didn't miss a single one!"

"Good for you!" Geoff took out his handkerchief and mopped her hot face. "What'd you say we call it a day on this jumping business? Run—no, walk, won't you?—in and tell Mrs. Aylesbury that Geoff Enslow's come to call."

"That's a funny name," she said impersonally. "Mine's Tenny."

"Tenny?"

"Tenny Montague."

He held out his hand and she slipped her own small one in it. "Mighty glad to know you, Tenny!"

"So'm I. I mean I'm glad to know you. I'll go and tell Miss Nona now. You better wait here."

She flashed into the house. Geoff could hear her slippers feet crossing the parquet floor inside, then dying away into silence.

Geoff, waiting for Tenny to return, lost himself in admiration of the glorious view. It was his first visit to Colorado and he found its heady air, its dreamlike vistas, its sharp contrasts interesting. So enthralled was he with what he saw that it was with a start he realized that nearly ten minutes had elapsed since the child disappeared.

He rang the bell and though he could hear its tinkle far in the back of the house, no one appeared to answer it. At last he walked boldly around the porch to where the veranda ceased with two shallow steps down to the grass.

At a little distance a group of people were clustered beneath an apple tree. The tall, sweet-faced, gray-haired woman must be Nona Aylesbury, his mother's friend, Geoff thought. The old man with the beautifully brushed white hair and the mustache and imperial was Captain Cary. Tenny was there; also a negro woman. They were all bending over something that lay on the ground. Geoff's foot-falls were inaudible on the grass and he cleared his throat to make his presence known.

Everybody turned in his direction and Tenny ran forward remorsefully.

"I forgot! I went to find Miss Nona and she was out here—"

Geoff interrupted her. "I'm Geoff Enslow, Mrs. Aylesbury. My mother—"

He saw that there were tears in her eyes. She brushed them away quiet unaffectedly, and smiled at him.

"Eunice Hampton's son! My dear boy, welcome!" Both her hands were held out to him and when Geoff took them she held up her face very simply for his kiss. As he stooped his tall head, a little glow warmed his heart. Here was a welcome indeed! "Father, this is Eunice Hampton's boy. You remember Eunice?"

Captain Cary was equally cordial. "Glad to see you, boy! Remember your mother? I should think I do remember her! Loved her almost as much as I did my own daughter here! What good fortune brings you to Denver?"

Before he could explain, Mrs. Aylesbury touched his arm, her eyes again filling with tears.

"Geoff, see! Do you think you could do anything for him—"

On the ground and partly hidden by the stooping colored woman lay a cocker spaniel. The dog's throat was badly torn and Geoff's experienced eyes told him that the little animal was near its end. He knelt and made a quick examination.

"Done for, I'm afraid," he said regretfully. "It's a shame to let him suffer like this. Have you a gun in the house?"

She paled and hid her face in her hands. Geoff heard a stifled murmur of "Cynthia!" Captain Cary turned away, blowing his nose loudly on the white silk handkerchief he pulled from his pocket. It was Tenny, her black eyes enormous in her white face, who answered Geoff.

"Cary's got a gun! Up in his room. I'll get it—"

"Not, by a long shot," he told her. "Show me where it is and I'll get it." He paused to say significantly over his shoulder to the Captain: "If you'll take her around by the front, sir—"

So Geoff Enslow found himself entering the Cary house for the first time by way of the kitchen; following Tenny through a maze of pantries and halls and up the wide stairway to the second floor.

"Here's Cary's room," his guide said, flinging open a door. "He keeps it in his dresser drawer. I'll show you!"

Geoff pocketed the gun. "Stay up here for a little while, Tenny."

She nodded, and putting her hands to her ears, ran away to her own room.

A few minutes later when the little dog's troubles were over and Geoff was digging beneath the apple tree with a spade with which the cook had supplied him, Tenny, red-eyed but quiet, appeared, a handsome silk shawl hung over her arm.

"Miss Nona wants you to wrap Hadji up in this," she said, keeping her eyes averted from the tangle of black hair on the ground. "She says Cynthia's dog mustn't be buried without something to wrap him in."

"Is it Cynthia's shawl?" Geoff took the heavily fringed thing in his hands. "It seems rather a shame—"

"No, it's Miss Nona's. You see, she thinks it's her fault Hadji got hurt. There's a new police dog next door and Cynthia said to keep Hadji shut up while that dog was out. And Miss Nona forgot and let Hadji out. She says she's afraid of what Cynthia will say when she comes home—"

"Your Cynthia appears to have the entire household pretty well in subjection," was Geoff's comment. "All right, Tenny! Run back into the house and I'll be with you in a few minutes."

Ten minutes later, having washed his hands in the old-fashioned bathroom to which the cook showed him, Geoff joined the others in one of the double parlors below.

"I'm so grateful to you about Hadji," Mrs. Aylesbury said softly. "I dread to have Cynthia know. She was so fond of the dog—she'll think we were careless with him—"

She touched a wisp of handkerchief to her eyes, then tucked it away and patted the couch beside her. "Sit down, my dear boy, and tell me about your mother—about yourself!"

Geoff, beginning with the hesitancy such an invitation usually engenders, presently found himself launched on an enthusiastic description of his new work, of what he had done and what he hoped to do. He heard his own voice going on and on in eager talk while Mrs. Aylesbury listened attentively.

"And you'll be in Denver a year!" she exclaimed when he paused for breath and realized rather sheepishly his own loquacity. "Geoff, I can't tell you how happy that makes me. Your mother was my dearest friend when we were girls. It has been a great grief to me that we've been separated so long."

"But next to having Eunice with me, we'll love having her son. You'll live with us, Geoff, of course; Oh, yes," she went on as he protested, "you can see for yourself what a big house this is. You can have your choice of rooms—several rooms, if you like."

"But—your own family—"

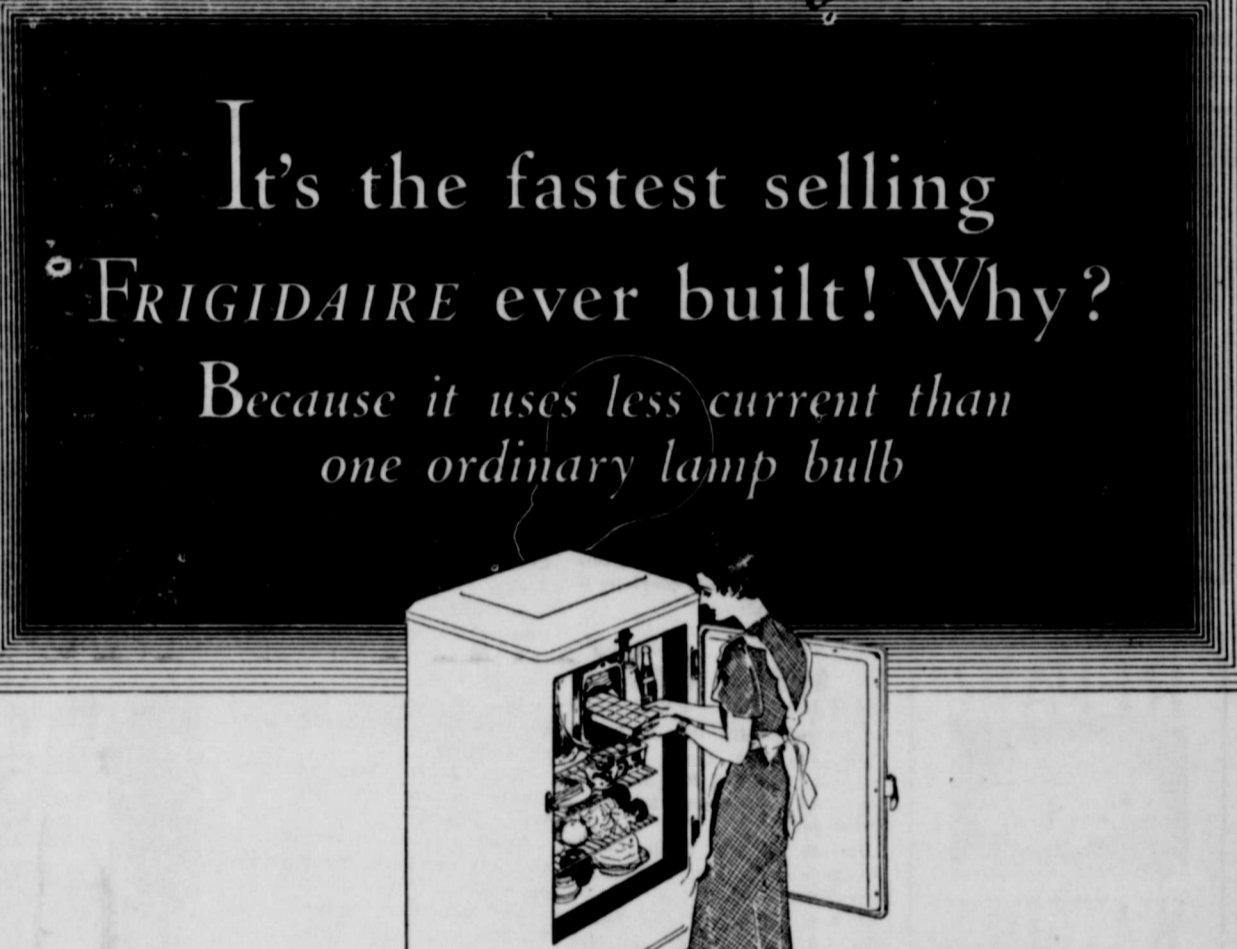

"It will be pure joy for Cary to have another man—a man of his own age—here. My father will enjoy it. Cynthia—over her face, so expressive of affectionate welcome, flitted a look of apprehension—"

"Cynthia will . . . You mustn't mind it—just at first—Cynthia seems a little—cold. She's the dearest of girls, you know. How we'd get along without her. I don't know. But she's not like Cary and me. She . . . she's businesslike. She runs a shop—a little gift shop—"

Inwardly Geoff shuddered. Gift

Oh, Cynthia!

shops were his pet abomination. Every girl he knew, he said, sooner or later engaged in the sale of picture frames and crepe-paper futilities, and polychrome candlesticks and bridge sets and gilt edged booklets whose pages stuck together; and not only did they set up these shops but they expected Geoff to patronize them lavishly. And now it appeared Cynthia, about whose name was beginning to cluster adjectives which did not express a passionate desire on Geoff's part to meet the daughter of his mother's friend, herself engaged in this fashionable form of piracy. "And I'll bet she spells it with two p's and an e," he told himself gloomily. He resolved not only to refuse Mrs. Aylesbury's invitation to make his home with them but to select a boarding house as far away from the Cary house as possible.

But he reckoned without his hostess. Miss Nona took it for granted that Geoff was to stay with them. She waved away his protests; she made light of his vague murmurs about uncertain hours; she told him that he must stay on to dinner, now that he was here, and afterward Cary would drive him down to his hotel to pack his bags and have his luggage sent out.

"You should have come directly to us," she reproached him. "Eunice's son in a hotel! It's utterly out of the question. We have oceans of room. That's one reason we were able to take Tenny in with us. Poor mite, she was in a boarding school and she hated it—"

"I know!" Geoff said involuntarily.

"You know what they're like? And of course it's worse for a little girl than for a boy. Anyway—"

she smiled—"Tenny's father was an old beau of mine and when his wife died I wrote and asked him to let us have Tenny—"

"That was good of you!"

"For our own pleasure," she finished. "Her father tried the boarding school first, then yielded and let her come to us. And you," she said with a trace of coquetry, "might as well yield in the beginning, for I don't mean to take no for an answer."

He looked embarrassed. "Nothing would please me more, Mrs. Aylesbury, if—if you would let me make some financial arrangement? I couldn't visit here indefinitely, you know—"

"Why not?" It was the Captain who spoke. He had entered from the hall in time to hear Geoff's protest. "We had your mother for—how many years was it, Nona?—and there was no foolish talk about financial arrangements in connection with her visits. Also Nona went to New York and spent a winter with the Hamptons and I don't remember that I offered to pay her board! Come upstairs with me, young man, and pick out your room. I thought—the hunting room?" he asked his daughter.

Geoff, helpless in these determined hands, followed meekly. The "hunting room" opened on one of the foolish little balconies in the front and from it Geoff had a superb view of the mountain range.

Cary Aylesbury had arrived when the two came downstairs again. He sprang up to meet Geoff, cordial hand outstretched, handsome young face alight with welcome.

"Miss Nona tells me she's persuaded you to cast your lot in with us," he began; then as Geoff looked puzzled at the boy's designation of his mother, he laughed and slung an arm around her shoulders. "I ask you: does she look old enough to be 'mothered' by a hulking fellow like me?"

ask you: does she look old enough to be 'mothered' by a hulking fellow like me? We've called her Miss Nona—Cynthia and I—ever since we were children. Picked it up from the servants, I suppose, in the beginning. You know Grandfather brought a lot of his Kaintuck darkies up with him." He flung a gay glance at the Captain. "The fascinating southern accent has sort of petered out in this generation, but you notice it's still going strong in the two preceding us."

"Cary, you bad boy!" Miss Nona rested her head for a moment against her son's broad shoulder. The sight of those two gave Geoff a little pang. It exemplified so exactly the sort of relationship he had longed for with his own mother: the understanding, the comradeship, the sympathy between them. Cary's eyes were brown like Miss Nona's. He had her fine profile, the crease in the cheek which was not a dimple but gave the effect of one. Geoff liked him at first glance.

"When's dinner?" Cary demanded. "I'm starved! Are we waiting for Cynthia tonight?"

"No, it's her day to stay until closing time. I thought perhaps you'd pick her up, Cary, when you take Geoff down to his hotel for his bags."

Cary nodded. "Poor old Cyn! I wish she'd ditch that infernal shop. She works too hard."

"So do I," sighed his mother. "I hate to think of her down town all day in this heat. I'm always hoping that some time she'll listen to our protests and give it up."

The Captain added a disapproving comment. "An expensive toy—that gift shop!"

Geoff had found this scrap of conversation enlightening. Cynthia, it appeared, had not been driven into the realm of commerce by necessity but by her own desire. Another one of those females who craves self-expression, he thought disgustedly, though God alone knew what they expressed by means of Cape Cod lighters and snow-storm paperweights.

Boss of Federal Stamp Division Resigns; One Of Leading Authorities

Washington, Oct. 15.—Michael L. Eidsness Jr., who was superintendent of the philatelic agency grow from a tin box on a desk to a size that will command a suite in the new Postoffice Department building, has announced his resignation.

He said he was going into the business world and would devote his leisure time to writing a book on stamp collectors and their amazing avocation.

No stamp collector is Eidsness. For twenty years he has been in the stamp division and stamps don't seem like an idle-hour pastime to him. But he is an authority on the subject.

Postmaster General Farley made the estimate that there are 9,000,000 stamp collectors in this country, and Eidsness agreed that is a conservative count, on the supposition it included the small boys who deal mostly in the cancelled variety.

Of course the stamps that bring shekels into the Federal coffers are those that are hoarded uncancelled. The philatelic superintendent said it would be impossible to estimate the amount they aggregate annually. But he said the Washington Bicentennial series alone netted approximately a million dollars.

Worth More Than Face

"If all the uncancelled stamps were suddenly put into use it would undoubtedly unsettle post-office business but that is hardly likely to happen since many of them are now worth more than their face value," he said. "Furthermore, for every stamp collector or who becomes disgusted and uses his stamps, two more crop up."

"Strangely enough, the depression seems to have stimulated stamp collecting," he added. "It may be due to the fact that people have more time on their hands."

Placing President Roosevelt at the top of the list of chief executive collectors, he continued:

"He can speak in purest philatelic terms. It is a pleasure to hear him talk about them. And he really planned the Byrd stamp which is one of the most beautiful."

Buffalo Most Beautiful

The most beautiful stamp of all, he contended, is the sepi 30c buffalo.

"Look at it under the magnifying glass," he invited. "Such art! Such detail! It's the only really live one of the lot!"

Other odds and ends collected by Eidsness about stamps are:

The NRA is the most speedily turned out stamp—designed, engraved and put on the presses within five days.

The Kosciusko, which went on sale Friday, is the most insistent-ly demanded—more than 1,500 requests for it have come in

The last six months has seen the most events commemorated by stamps.

The rarest of United States stamps is the 1919 inverted airplane, one good copy of which sold for $3,300. It was a two-color job and a girl got a few sheets in reversed, turning a small airplane upside down. Only one sheet got into circulation, three others being found by the bureau and destroyed.

Recently the bureau purposely made a copy of this high-priced error to show at the Chicago Century of Progress.

Sales of automobiles in Bolivia have been increasing recently.

Roosters on roller skates, next?

With everything "going mechanical" on the farm these days, one wonders if soon there won't be roosters on roller skates. Trucks, tractors, windmills, pumps, incubators, electric lighting plants—each of them needs some special fuel or some special lubricant. To aid you in keeping track of these needs Sinclair has developed a Call-me-by-postcard Service free to farmers. We supply you with postcards requiring no postage on which is printed a list of the principal Sinclair products. Opposite each item is a space for noting down the number of pounds or gallons you require. As your supply runs low you simply set down the amount required, sign your name and drop the postcard in the mail. The mail carrier and we do the rest. May we call and leave a supply of cards?

We sell Sinclair Opaline and Sinclair Pennsylvania Motor Oils, Sinclair Tractor Oils, Sinclair Gasolines, Sinclair Super-Flame Kerosene, Sinclair Cup and Sinclair Axle Greases, Sinclair P. D. insect spray.

HUBBARD NEWS

Rev. Willie O. Hopson filled his regular appointment at the Baptist Church here this week end. He was called for another year as pastor of the church. Due to misunderstanding we have failed to have Saturday night prayer meeting. Hereafter prayer meeting will be held at the school house each Saturday night.

We have been negligent in our duty to the young people and to ourselves by not organizing a Sunday School. We hope to have one soon. Last week was show week here. There was a 10 and 15 cent show here and everyone enjoyed it.

We are glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Opal Jackson and his mother as new residents in this community. Ben Lofton and family have moved to Houston. We are sorry to lose this family. Most of the folk who went to west Texas to pick cotton have returned.

Mrs. Less Shelton is visiting her mother, Mrs. Frank Whittenburg. Clyde Worthington and Joe Gray visited in the M. W. Spence home Friday night.

Mrs. Jack Hopson spent a few days last week with her mother, Mrs. Parks, of White Hall, who recently underwent an operation. We are sorry to report that Mrs. Parks is not improving very rapidly.

Mr. and Mrs. Fate Blanchard visited in the John Hancock home Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Lonzo Spence of Mound visited Mr. and Mrs. Roe Spence Sunday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Dell Hancock have recently moved to Temple. Wayland Blanchard spent Sunday night with Mr. and Mrs. Roe Spence.

Fears that possible marked increase in acres of grazing land would result in adding to existing surpluses of dairy and livestock products are said to be groundless. Pasture crops, even if utilized fully without restrictions produce far less livestock feed per acre than harvested grain crops.

Records from various parts of the country show conclusively that land in harvested grain and forage crops produces at least twice as much livestock feed as the same land in pasture, say livestock specialists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Specialists of the Texas A & M College Extension Service point out, however, that many of the improved pastures in East Texas are producing more feed per acre than cultivated crops on similar land.

"Since 1890, farmers have reduced the acreage of grazing land about 10 per cent and increased the acreage of harvest crops 50 per cent. This increase in cultivated land has been largely responsible for increasing the production of pork and milk approximately 50 per cent. It therefore appears clear that reducing the acreage of corn, wheat and cotton by returning a part of the land to grass will decrease rather than increase the total of meat, milk, and wool supplies. Reduction of cotton acreage cuts down the supply of cottonseed meal and hulls which are used for livestock feed.

Commenting on the suggestion that dairy farmers could produce fewer gallons of milk and still make more money, by producing at a lower cost and reducing the quantity of milk going to already overloaded markets, the Federal Bureau of Dairy Industry recently issued a statement which pointed out the advantages of shifting land to permanent pastures.

Observations of dairy-farming methods in many sections, together with results of feeding experiments, having convinced the bureau that "many farms would find it advantageous to change their system of farming to one in which they would keep most of their land in permanent pastures and legumes, and feed very little if any grain."

A geologist's estimate puts the value of mineral products taken from Montana since 1865 at $3,000,000,000.

Deputy Sup't. Visits Schools of County

E. W. Brooks, Deputy State School Superintendent, spent two days this week with County Superintendent Stephens in the interest of the schools of Coryell County.

A friendly visit was made to Oglesby, Copperas Cove, and Turnersville. These schools are applying for classification and affiliation. The visit was an official one but was for the purpose of Mr. Brooks' advising with the schools relative to the requirements set up by the State Department of Education for Classification and affiliation.

Mr. Brooks expressed himself as being well pleased with that much can be accomplished this year with the effort that is being put out by the teachers and trustees of these schools.

Clean Up Campaign

Our school yard looks quite different after the clean up campaign Tuesday. Everyone was busy with hoes and rakes, anxious to improve the school yard. New flower beds were made near the shop and kitchen.

A new basketball court was erected for the Junior Boys. Everyone is doing their best to keep the yard in as good condition as possible.

3rd, 4th and 5th

We have twenty-eight students in our room; we think we have the choicest room in the building.

We are taking our monthly tests this week. The fifth grade is studying the poem "The Pied Piper of Hamelin", which we are learning in play form.

The third grade is making posters representing "The Three Bears", "The Three Little Pigs" and several other stories.

The fourth grade is making some very attractive health posters.

Primary Room

We are all very thrilled because we have sixteen new red chairs and are going to get a new table.

We have learned two Mother Goose rhymes and have a new Mother Goose poster.

We are making spooky faces for Halloween.

Sports

Last Friday the Pearl Dragons clashed with the Jonesboro Eagles on the Jonesboro court. The game was very fast and peppy. Both teams were playing fine ball neither side getting ahead over two or three points. At the half the score was 14 to 16 in Pearl's favor, then the Eagles made three goals in succession. The final score was Jonesboro 20, Pearl 18. As this is the first game of the season we are still in fine spirits and hope to win the next game.

Personals

Henry Franks, an ex-student of the school, visited the school Monday.

C. J. Shook, Andy Karl, Rev. Reynolds and Henry Franks are busy sawing wood at the school building.

Mart Carroll visited school Friday afternoon.

Grady Keeton has some new corduroy pants of which he seems very proud.

We are glad to report that Miss Ola Pearl Dyson, who has been sick, is back in school.

Jonesboro School News

School Athletics

The Pearl Dragons went down in defeat Friday under the Eagles' brilliant playing. The score was 18 to 29. Guard for the Eagles, Hazen Ward, was high point man with a score of 9 points. The other players showed fine work. The schedule is with Ireland on the 27th, Turnersville the 3rd, Pearl again on her home field again on the 10th. The Eagles are out for many more smashing victories.

School Activities

On Friday night Nov. 3rd the students of the high school will have a negro minstrel with plenty of music and laughs. Everyone is invited to attend.

Senior Class

The Senior class met Monday and elected Mr. P. T. Lemmons as class sponsor. The class colors are blue and white. The flower is white rose.

School opened October 2nd with 119 enrolled. The teachers this year are Mr. R. B. Forrest, Miss Louise Hall, Miss Hanna Hoff, Mrs. H. C. Brittain, and Mrs. W. E. Swift.

Next week we will have a Halloween party. The school has provided a Halloween program. The sixth and seventh grades will sell popcorn and the home economics girls will sell candy. The proceeds will be used to buy pictures for the classrooms.

Every Friday morning we have chapel exercises. We have had several good programs. Among these was a talk by Miss Hall.

about her trip to Washington, D. C. We all agreed that the trip must have been a good one. Mr. Forrest made a talk on keeping the grounds clean.

In the near future we are going to organize a girl's basketball team. Miss Hoff is sponsor.

We have organized a volleyball club. Mrs. Swift is our efficient sponsor.

Our playground ball club is one of the strongest in the county. We are planning to win the county championship. Mrs. Britain is our director and she is a good one.

A tennis court has been built by the shop boys under the direction of Miss Hall.

This year we have seven girls in home economics class. Miss Hoff is our teacher.

The Improvement Club has been organized in the sixth and seventh grades. The purpose of this club is to keep the building and school grounds clean.

The Texas history class is going to visit and study an old cave. The purpose is to excavate old Indian relics for a collection.

Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts will be organized next week with Mr. Forrest and Miss Hall as sponsors.

PEP SQUAD PERFORMS AT G. H. S.-WEST GATE

By Charlotte Rivers

Between the halves of the game between West and Gatesville on Friday, Oct. 20, the Pep Squad, under the direction of Mrs. Williams, gave a unique performance.

The squad marched on the field behind the band and formed the letters W. H. S. giving a yell for each letter. They then changed to G. H. S. They gave the yell "Yea, Hornets". Accompanied by the band the girls sang "The eyes of Gatesville", and "Cheer Boys Cheer," before leaving the field.

The girls, mascots and sponsor were dressed in full uniform.

GIRL SCOUTS BEGIN PLANS FOR LODGE

A large number of girls attended the first Girl Scout meeting of the year held last Tuesday in the Elementary School Auditorium. Three patrols were organized under the leadership of Misses Gladys Blankenship, Ila Fae Selby and Bess Holmes. The committee sponsoring the work is composed of Mesdames M. W. Lowrey, L. K. Thompson and Levi Anderson.

Plans for the building of a Scout Lodge in the School Park have been adopted and work toward that end has begun. The Boy Scouts will assume part of the responsibility of this project and work in co-operation with the Girl Scouts in raising the necessary finances.

Thursday afternoon about 50 girls and a few boys met with the committee and leaders at Mrs. Lowrey's home. They picked out pecans and made about 25 pounds of candy which they sold at the game Friday.

A group of Boy Scouts worked in the park Saturday cleaning it up. These boys will be glad to clean the yards of local residents; engagements may be made through C. L. Thompson at the High School.

The Girl Scouts offer their services in picking out pecans for the holiday cooking season. Any work given them will be appreciated.

Miss Pauline Edwards visited friends at Osage last week end.

Miss Claudine Goodall, a teacher in the Grandview schools, is spending this week with her mother, Mrs. Ethel Goodall.

GOSSIP, JR.

By Eddy Gab

The organization of a Press Club under faculty supervision is a very fine step now being undertaken in the High School. The object of this club will be to gather news and submit it to local newspapers. There is nothing like experience in any field of work and the benefits which the membership of this club will receive are untold. The high school preparatory work will be especially good for those who intend to study journalism.

Various forms of athletics are a benefit for any school. Football, for instance, not only instills school spirit in the players but into the student body and faculty. Injuries seldom occur in high school football, but physical development is an important feature which must not be forgotten. The boys of the local team deserve high commendation for the indefatigable fight which they have manifested against teams vastly superior in weight and experience. It is splendid for a spirit to be developed in boys where, win or lose, they continue to smile and strive again to win.

The Pep Squad should be complimented for the work which it has done this season. Of course, the entire student body is rooting for the boys on the field, but a united yell from a mass of yellow jerseyed girls instills in the boys a desire to win which is insurmountable. These girls are certainly "doing their part."

In speaking of the various units connected with athletic work, we must not forget the band. It is always on the job at the games, blaring forth in perfect harmony the school songs which will inspire the boys on to better playing.

PRESS CLUB HAS SPEAKER

By Emil Lee

Last Monday morning the Press Club held its regular meeting. So far the club has not been thoroughly organized and probably will not be so until its membership is eliminated to a smaller group.

The Club was considerably fortunate in having Ayres Compton, editor of the Coryell County News, address the meeting. The subject of his talk was "News Reporting". In this he brought out the three fundamentals of news reporting which are clearness, conciseness and originality. He also explained many other phases of newspaper work.

Those present enjoyed Mr. Compton's talk and hope that he will be with them again.

FRESHMEN CONDUCT CHAPEL SERVICE

By Bertha Lillian Stewart

The Freshman class held the chapel service at the High School Tuesday morning.

John Rufus Colgin gave the history of the class. A one-act play entitled "Red Carnations" was presented. The three characters were: a man, Bob Thomas; a boy, Edwin McDonald; and a girl, Belva McCoy. Mrs. Glass, the class sponsor, directed the play. The program was enjoyed immensely by the student body.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE UP TO TOTAL OF 773

At the close of the first six weeks of school the enrollment figures for the various units of the local school system were available. The High School has enrolled 275 regular students and 10 post-graduates. The Elementary School shows a total of 430 pupils with the Colored School registering 58. These figures bring the total enrollment of all schools to 773.

The High School enrollment is 25 more than at the same time last year. Comparisons for other schools are not available.

The report also shows that 33 pupils have dropped from the high school leaving 252 in actual membership. In the Elementary school there have been 30 to withdraw leaving a total present membership of 400.

The percentage of attendance for the six-week period was 96.3 for the elementary school and 97.4 for the high school.

City Officials Keep Busy Preparing Data On Proposed Building

A resume of previous information is being compiled in the office of the city secretary which will be forwarded to Clifford Jones regional director of the Public Works Administration, at Fort Worth, dealing with Gatesville's application for federal aid on the Municipal Building project which was begun some time ago.

The project, according to the plans, will amount to something like $30,000, including labor and materials.

Before the final approval of the local enterprise, federal inspectors will be sent here to go over the plans with local authorities and view the premises upon which a unit of the Municipal Building now stands.

Those who are in charge of the local program seem highly encouraged as to the prospects of obtaining federal aid.

MR. AND MRS. PAINTER IN WHOLESALE MARKET

George Painter, co-proprietor of the Painter and Lee Dry Goods establishment, accompanied by his wife, spent several days in Dallas last week visiting the Wholesale markets in the interest of their store at Gatesville.

Mr. Painter has made several trips to Dallas this season and has brought back a wealth of new goods. His most recent trip was devoted to shopping of winter seasonal goods.

Young Mens Bible Class of Methodist Church Entertained

Members and prospective members of the newly organized Young Men's Bible Class of the Methodist Sunday School, and their guests, enjoyed a delightful party in the recreation room of the Methodist Church Wednesday evening. Mr. Frank L. Williams, teacher of the class, and Mrs. Williams were in charge of the entertainment. Various exciting games were played; the guests being divided into two groups which vied with each other for the scores.

A lovely refreshment plate completed the evening's hospital. ity.

PREACHING AT FORT GATES

Next Sunday afternoon, weather permitting, Rev. W. W. Ward will preach at Fort Gates at 3:00 p. m. This will be the last preaching service before Conference, and the community is invited to attend the services.

Very respectfully yours,

spending some time studying. Some frequenting places of amusement such as theaters, skating rinks, etc., others spent the time skating on the sidewalks, others are in social affairs in the homes while others are not in group affairs but are socially occupied otherwise. It is quite frequent that plans for a night affair are heard being discussed in school.

The idea is that the pupils who pass their school work generally have to spend some time in home study. The school cannot and will not, except in very rare instances, sanction socials of any kind on school nights and we are asking the patrons of the school to cooperate with us in this matter. If socials are held on school nights some students will attend who should be at home studying. Of course your child might be passing his work but probably his participation in socials will encourage another child who is not passing, to also be away from his lessons. So we maintain that amusements, socials, tent shows, carnivals, etc., should be indulged in on Friday and Saturday nights if at all.

Only in very rare instances will there be a school affair for students on school nights. One social was held on a school night near the first of the year but this was a special reception for the new students to the school and since they go home on Friday afternoons it was necessary that a school night be used.

We invite your interest and solicit your cooperation in any movement which will work to the interest of the child. We believe this is one movement which will tend to reduce the extreme number of 299 pupils failing in a total of 440 subjects.

Very respectfully yours,
Frank L. Williams Supt.
