

Jonesboro Loses to District Champs After Valliantly Fighting Way into Semi-Finals of Basketball Tourney

A scrapping bunch of young hopefuls from Jonesboro, Coryell County Champions, carried the colors of that school high into the semi-finals of the district meet at Waco last Friday and Saturday.

The fine little Jonesboro team that won the County championship here a week ago, went to the district meet unheard of insofar as favored quintets are concerned. In the first game the Coryell team was pitted against a strong team from a town ten times its size but the game Eagles emerged with the big end of a 34 to 23 victory over Grosbeck, led by the brilliant paying of the Ward boys who took turns at demonstrating to the spectators the art of long distance goal shooting.

In the second game the Coryell County quint fought out a victory over the Clifton aggregation 33-28 to gain admission into the semi-final bracket. Although Jonesboro finished with the winning score the team came out of that game badly crippled with several players nursing injuries.

Meeting the strong district favorites from Purdon, a crippled Jonesboro team fell short in a 39-21 score, and Purdon continued a winning streak to win the District championship from the strong Waco Tigers. It was T. Ward, Watson and Smith that held the spotlight on the Jonesboro team during this final game.

Members of the Jonesboro team who made the Waco trip and saw action at the district meet included T. Ward, H. Ward, Rutherford, Watson, Young, Smith, Carrol, Goolsby and Lovelace.

The Coryell County championship team is coached by L. D. Young.

Former Justice States Intention of Entering Precinct 1. Race Again

Mr. W. T. Caruth has authorized the News to announce his candidacy for the office of Justice of the Peace for precinct one, subject to the action of the coming primaries.

Mr. Caruth has served in the capacity of Justice of the Peace for one term and an unexpired term and the people of the Precinct are familiar with the type of service which he rendered while in office. It is on his previous record in the office that he bases his campaign. His formal announcement will appear in a later issue of the News.

New High Fidelity Sound System Makes Debut at the Palace

The new equipment, which is similar to the type recently installed in the new Radio City super-theatres, in Rockefeller Centre, New York, provided a quality of reproduction that was revolutionary. According to Mr. Cunyus, Manager of the Palace, the new system is actually capable of reproducing a wider range of sound than many of the motion pictures now made can provide. In any case, however, High Fidelity reproduction gets the utmost out of the recorded film and literally recreates the sound in all its original brilliance.

With the new High Fidelity apparatus, audible sounds in a range of from 60 to 10,000 cycles are faithfully reproduced with all the delicate shadings of the human voice which are so distinguishable in actual speech. This "dynamic" shading of tone is just as apparent in the sonorous volume of a full symphony orchestra.

Monday's audience at the Palace was extremely receptive and appreciative, and responded with generous applause with the announcement of the introduction of the new sound made through the theatre's equipment.

Court Adjourns Here; Convenes at Hamilton On Following Monday

The 52nd Judicial District Court adjourned here last Saturday and opened the term at Hamilton on Monday morning.

The docket for the court here was rather light with more civil cases than criminal cases.

The following cases were disposed of in the last few days of the term:

Mrs. F. C. Green vs. F. C. Green, partition, dismissed at Plaintiff cost.

Mrs. Daisy Hampton vs. H. C. Deaton and Jodie Culp, damages, judgement for Plaintiff.

Sanitation Program Being Pushed Ahead To Ward Off Typhoid

Up to date, 125 pit privy units and five septic tanks have been constructed by the Coryell county Health and Sanitation project, according to Ray Culp, sanitary supervisor, and others are being rapidly constructed, in an effort to serve as many people as possible while C. W. A. labor is available. All county officials believe that this program will be of great benefit in controlling typhoid and other contagious diseases caused by contamination of water and food supplies, and it is hoped that after the program is stopped, people will install these units for themselves, where possible.

The sanitation program is now employing a crew of 47 laborers. Forty of these are building pit privys and septic tanks and a crew of seven are making sewer Lonnie Wharton, representing the Gatesville Fire Department, reports that 175 people have had a part in giving the more than $180.00 which has been raised toward the erection and lighting of a softball court for Gatesville.

It is hoped that the entire $250.00 which will be required to properly equip the court will be raised within the next few days. The games which will be played on the court will be free. It is hoped that the court will fill the long felt need for an inexpensive outdoor recreation for the people of Gatesville. Those wishing to have a part in this worthy endeavor may contact Lonnie Wharton or any one of the fire boys.

Edmonson Seeks Support Of Voters in Election Of Assessor-Collector

I am taking this method of announcing myself as a candidate for the office of Tax Assessor and Collector. I am now serving my first term as Assessor; and since the offices of collector and assessor have been combined, I am making this race; feeling that in doing so, I am asking your support for a second term. The time honored Democratic custom has been to give an office holder a second term if he has proven himself capable of handling the office; with this fact in mind I solicit your support in my race for this second term. I would appreciate your vote and influence. I feel that I am qualified to discharge the duties that would be required, if elected. No one would appreciate your vote and influence any more than I would. I need the office. I hope you will see fit to honor me with this second term. I am going to try to see all the voters and personally solicit their votes; but if I fail to see you,—remember I will appreciate your vote just the same.

Sincerely,
Ivy Edmonson

Drive for Diphtheria Prevention in County Opens at G'ville Today

The county wide diphtheria inoculation campaign is well underway and it is hoped that the goal of 100 per cent immunization will be reached.

The question has been asked as to who the campaign is for. Any child in the diphtheria age who has not been immunized is eligible for the inoculation. Those in Gatesville who have not thus far been inoculated may be taken to the Gatesville Grammar School Building this morning at 10 o'clock or this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

A charge of 30 cents is being made to partially care for the cost of the toxoid and other materials.

Physicians assure us that there will be no sickness resulting from the administration and that the child will not have to miss any school work.

LISTEN FOR THE WHISTLE

It is only natural that the subscribers in Gatesville should hope to get the News early each Tuesday and Friday morning and it is the desire of the publishers to get the News to them as soon as possible.

Carrier boys will deliver the papers between the hours of seven and eight each Tuesday and Friday morning. Each boy is equipped with a whistle which he will blow when he delivers the paper to the subscriber's door. When the whistle is heard each reader will know that his paper is in his door.

DEMobilizing CWA

The process of demobilizing the CWA has begun. The order has gone out from Washington to inaugurate reductions in the rolls and these will be continued until the great part of CWA aid is dropped. The start is made in rural regions, because the beginning of Spring farm work is counted upon to take up whatever employment sack there may be outside the cities. This start is made first in the South for the reason that the Spring plowing season opens earlier here than in the North. In cities where there is no expanding seasonal labor demand to take care of jobless workers, CWA will be continued in gradually contracting scope. In a few weeks most if not all CWA jobs will be a thing of the past.

This demobilization was inevitable. It can not be imagined that the Government can keep on forever paying out money for work which is not vitally needed. And it was also inevitable that there would be some distress caused by the curtailment and final closing out of CWA. There would be distress no matter how long the end might be postponed. So the Government decides that the best for all concerned is to get it over with as speedily as possible, with public relief taking care of those who cannot be absorbed into the rapidly developing PWA program or into the expanding private industry.

The Nation will be fortunate if the CWA incident can be closed soon enough to avoid habit formation. One of the bad consequences of public relief by made work or by direct payments is that there is always left a greater or less number who never thereafter recover from the effects of being supported by the Government. The majority of those on CWA rolls now, and even the majority of those on direct relief rolls, are doubtless as fiercely determined as any not on the rolls to stand on their own feet, and will eagerly resume complete self-support at the first opportunity. But it is a fact that the number of those who will be permanently infected by the dole virus will be the greater the longer the extension of government aid in this form is continued.

The fear of sociologists is that no matter how completely the Nation may beat back from the depression and no matter how large may be the demand for labor by restored and expanding industry, there will be found a greatly increased mendicant group in the population.—Fort Worth Star Telegram.

SANITATION PROGRAM—

connections in the City of Gatesville. Materials for pit privy units are costing owners about $5 each exclusive of buildings. In most cases old houses are used, but in many cases the owners are furnishing materials to build new houses. Materials on septic tanks are costing about $50 each, according to the amount of new materials necessary.

Forty-nine pit privy units have been installed for the schools at Oglesby, Mound, Dunn, King, Antelope, Pearl, Hurst Springs and White Hall. Others will be installed at Bee House, Plainview, Murrell, Ewing, Flint Creek, The Grove and Hubbard soon. A special effort is being made to reach as many schools as possible, have been signed for. The in-as they should be a model for community sanitation. Mr. Stephens, county school superintendent, and Mr. Culp urge that all schools take advantage of this opportunity to get sanitary toilets installed, where the present installations are not satisfactory.

Some 600 people in the county have expressed their willingness to purchase materials for pit privys and about 50 septic tank indications are that many of these cannot be reached with government labor and Mr. Culp urges that, where possible, people should dig their own pits so that more people may be reached before demobilization of the C. W. A. organization. People who signed for these units late should get the foreman in his district to construct the sanitary unit, and furnish their own labor for digging the pit, and thus avoid further delay and be assured of getting a sanitary toilet built.

WORLD FOREIGN COMMENT

A great deal has been written during the last week about the qualities and virtues of the deceased King Albert I of Belgium. We will not repeat these splendid statements about this splendid man, but will give a little "dope" on his son, the new king of Belgium, crowned last Friday as Leopold III.

Like his father, Crown Prince Leopold has had a hard, practical schooling. He has served in the Belgian Senate. He has specialized in the study of Colonial administration. He likes to tinker with engines; he drives his own car. But his hobbies are safer than his fathers: trout fishing and collecting butterflies.

In 1926 he married dark-haired Princess Astrid of Sweden. In order not to attract attention, Prince Leopold paid flying visits to Sweden in a third class railway coach, carrying his own luggage. People thought he was a new butler.

Thirty-two years old, Leopold will be the youngest king in Europe. He has many problems he must face at once, the most important of which are the Communists and the Nazi influence among Belgian workingmen.

ALMOST to a man the docile little politicians of Japans House of Representatives rose in their places last week to give Japan for 1934-35 a general's dream of what a budget ought to be. Out of its $633,000,000, full 44 per cent went to the Army and Navy, and all time peacetime high. The Army got $135,000,000, the Navy $446,600,000.

Hardly a murmur was raised against this gigantic bill for war weapons and men to use them. Indeed, Foreign Minister Takashi was credited with a victory in preventing the budget from going up another $100,000,000, as the Army and Navy originally planned. Regardless of the above figures, which are convincing enough, peace lovers at home and Japanese statesmen abroad continue to say that Japan has no intention of attacking Soviet Russia in the spring.

SAMUEL INSULL, who was due to be ousted from Greece on February 1, was permitted to remain for a time because of ill health, but the government at Athens then informed him unofficially that he must leave 12 days later. Two government physicians, after a physical examination, reported he was able to travel without danger to his life. Now he has been granted another reprieve. Insull is still a long way from New York, and he continues to spend his stolen money in Greece.

CHAPTER VI

Cross-Examination.

"DO YOU think Choo Choo is lying about that phone call?" Kilday inquired as the two men started back down-town. "I can't figure her out."

Peter puffed his cigarette meditatively. "She received a telephone call, I'm satisfied of that," he replied finally. "Why else would she have changed her mind about going to the wedding? And she did change her mind. Franklin was surprised to see her."

"However, it wasn't Fletcher who called. I can see no reason why he shouldn't tell the truth about it. What I am trying to determine is whether Choo Choo really believed it was Franklin's servant, or is only trying to make us think so, in order to conceal the identity of the person who really did call."

"She seemed mighty surprised that Fletcher didn't remember it," Kilday volunteered doubtfully.

"I can't forget that she's an actress," Peter confessed. "I find myself wondering how much of what she said and did was sincere, and how much was only for our benefit. What if it were the woman in blue—that would provide a motive for Choo Choo's visit, and for the crime. I don't think she was acting when she told us she loved Jim Franklin. It must have been that, or else the murderer knew of Choo Choo's relationship with Franklin, and telephoned her in an effort to bring her to the church. If that is the case, of course this actress had nothing to do with the crime and was only drawn in, by the real culprit, in an effort to confuse the trail." Peter shrugged. "If that's what happened, we're farther from a solution than ever."

The car had reached police headquarters, and the novelist followed Kilday up the battered steps. On the sergeant's desk lay the revolver discovered in the rectory garden, the dagger with which the crime had been committed, and the stained curtain on which the murderer had wiped the blood from the weapon.

"Every blessed thing we have to go on," complained the sergeant disconsolately. "Except, of course, the thumb-print on the gun. The keys won't be much help now. The only one we haven't identified is obviously not a door-key. It couldn't fit the apartment of our woman in blue."

"Just because the pieces of the puzzle don't fit the first time we try them, is no sign we don't have all the pieces," retorted Peter.

"I'm merely pointing out that the keys are eliminated as one of the pieces of the puzzle," exclaimed Kilday ruefully. "I was hoping that they would help us identify this woman in blue, when we found her. But now," he tilted back his chair and gazed ceilingward through the haze of smoke that clouded the room. "Now I think you have given me a hint that is just as helpful."

He drew another long, reflective puff on his stogy.

"The trouble with this case," he began, presently, "is too many suspects. Of course, there aren't many genuine clues, but we haven't needed clues so much. Not since we've had an opportunity to talk to all these people. Peter, has anything struck you as peculiar about this case?"

"Not unless it's the fact that you've just mentioned—too many suspects."

The sergeant leaned forward, a smile warming the harsh lines of his face. "You've laid your finger on it," he said. "Now what would you say that indicates? No, don't interrupt. I know the answer myself. Whoever murdered Franklin purposely entangled some of these others in the case in order to drag a herring across his own trail, eh? Isn't that the way you figure it?"

Peter eyed his friend carefully. "It looks that way," he admitted.

"All right, then." Kilday made no effort to conceal his exuberance. "Let's find out who seems to have been manipulating the herring. Let's find out who seems to have been involved in this case by some one else. When we eliminate this class, perhaps we'll have the murderer. First," he began the enumeration of the suspects on his fingers, "there's Choo Choo. She claims some one phoned her, saying he was Fletcher, and told her Franklin wanted her to come to the church. Royce heard the argument, after she arrived there. Franklin wasn't expecting her. Of course, she may not be telling us the truth, but just at present, she seems to be telling a straight story. And Franklin wasn't expecting her. So it looks as though she was part of the red herring that the real culprit dragged across the trail to throw us off the scent. We'll eliminate her, for the time being."

"Then there's Fletcher. He hasn't been an important suspect, up to now, but I'd say that this eliminates him from further consideration, too. Why? Because who ever called Choo Choo was the murderer. If that was Fletcher, he wouldn't have given her his name."

"Third, Ambrose Carmody." Kilday turned down another finger. "He was dragged into it by that anonymous telephone call. Very similar to the trick employed to bring Choo Choo to the church. Strike him off."

"Fourth, Rylie Carmody. He was drawn into it by the story told him by Webster Spears and now we're getting hot."

"Hold on," Peter objected. "If you follow this method through, you'll eliminate every one, won't you?"

The sergeant, enthused over his idea, shook his head smilingly. "Not so you can notice it," he retorted. "Don't overlook this fact. We don't know who called Choo Choo. We aren't certain who phoned Ambrose Carmody. But we do know who told Rylie. It was Webster Spears. And if Spears involved one of them, what's to prevent him from being the one who involved the others?"

"Only one thing," the novelist replied soberly. "If he was clever enough to draw these others into the case without revealing his identity, why did he tell Rylie Carmody personally? Why didn't he telephone him, or write him an anonymous letter? If he took these other precautions to remain concealed, how did he happen to slip up here?"

But Kilday had an answer ready. "They all slip up, sooner or later. I've never known it to fail. There aren't any perfect crimes. This is the flaw in this one. It only requires a little reasoning to discover it."

"How about the others?" Peter was still reluctant. "How do you explain the presence of the woman in blue? What was Callis Shipley doing back there?"

"The woman in blue could have been drawn into it just as Choo Choo Train was. Spears only needed to know another woman with whom Franklin had had an affair to add a new note of mystery to the case which would keep us puzzled and throw us off the track of the real criminal. As for the Shipley girl, I don't know—yet. But I will, before long. I've sent for her. She lied to us about Rylie taking her home. Either she lied to us about Spears' remark in the church, or else Spears lied. Personally, I don't think Spears would have made such a remark, which obviously would draw suspicion to himself, later. Not if he had already planned a murder and arranged all this false evidence to throw us off the track. This girl is going to have to explain to me how she knew there had been a murder, too, and what she was doing at Webster Spears' house last night. I don't know how she fits into this case, but she fits, somewhere. I'll soon know where."

Reluctantly, Peter realized that his friend was only giving expression to the misgivings that had been troubling him concerning this girl. Only he had not before thought of her as an accomplice of Webster Spears. He had associated her with Rylie Carmody, for whom she had seemed chiefly concerned. And he had preferred to explain her evasion as her anxious effort to extricate Rylie from the evidence which seemed to entangle him. In that light, he had been able to find an explanation for the fact that she had lied to him. It offered a possible explanation for her visit to Webster Spears the previous evening—a visit which the latter had denied. For, in spite of himself, he had been stirred by the girl's defense of young Carmody during that interview with her. Her courage had quickened his sympathies. He recalled the anxiety mirrored in her blue eyes. Surely this girl had no part in the murder of Jim Franklin. She was scarcely more than a child. He thought of that second deep knife thrust that had ended Franklin's life. Could that blow have been guided by a girl's hand?

"The Bowery" to Be Shown at New Palace Thursday and Friday

The Gay Nineties are coming back in "The Bowery"!

Hilarious fun, robust romance and naughty night of Frankie-and-Johnny times are promised with the arrival of Wallace Beery, George Raft, Jackie Cooper, Fay Wray, Pert Kelton and a host of other celebrities in "The Bowery" at the Palace Theatre Thursday and Friday.

Of all the decades in American history, that from 1890 to 1900 seems to be the most popular in these times with photoplay audiences. So, in tune with that expressed preference, "The Bowery" brings back the music and dances of the '90's, buxom chorus girls, bustling young ladies, Mamie O'Grady with puffed sleeves, Bowery boys with puffed eyes, prize fights that were on the square, beer with a punch and love's young dream along "the higest mile on the face of the globe"—New York's world famous Bowery.

"The Bowery" brings back to life, re-created from faded tin-types and photographs yellowed with age, such famous characters as Chuck Connors, "Mayor" of Chinatown; Steve Brodie, who did the famous brodie from Brooklyn Bridge and lived to tell about it; John Sullivan smacking 'em down for a $25 purse; Carrie Nation with her hatchet battling the beer bottles on the Bowery; as well as many other celebrities of the times.

"The Bowery" reunites the two stars of "The Champ"—Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper, who were loaned to 20th Century Pictures by M-G-M. George Raft was leased by Paramount, while Fox contributed its ace director, Raoul Walsh.

Feminine interest in "The Bowery" will be intense because of the emphasis placed on the life of the romantic old thoroughfare. Fay Wray and Pert Kelton

High Points of Corn-Hog Contracts

1. The contract signer agrees to cut the corn acreage on the farm he will operate in 1934 to at least 20 per cent less than the average on that farm during 1932 and 1933. If he is to operate a new farm in 1934, the size of corn crop on previously operated farm is not to be considered. Corn acreage base stays with the land.

2. Acreage can be reduced more than 20 per cent, but benefit payments will not be made on an acre in excess of 30 per cent.

3. Farmer must not increase on other land he owns, controls or operates above the acreage on that land in 1932-1933.

4. Contracting producers shall reduce the number of litters of pigs farrowed on his farm or farms or farrowed by sows owned by him in 1934 to at least 75 per cent of the average number of all litters owned by him when farrowed in 1932 and 1933.

5. He agrees not to increase above his 1932-1933 average the number of feeder pigs he buys in 1934.

6. The farmer agrees to reduce the total number of hogs he markets in 1934 to at least 75 per cent of the average number marketed from litters owned by him farrowed in 1932 and 1933.

7. Unless given special permission to the contrary, the farmer shall use retired corn land only in one or more of five ways: To plant more permanent pasture; to plant crops such as clover or lespedeza to improve the soil or to prevent soil wasting (but not to be harvested; let the land stand fallow; carry on a campaign to eradicate weeds; or plant a farm woodlot.

8. The farmer agrees not to increase his total acreage of food crops, other than hay, or any crops planted for harvest stipulated as basic crops, or lived above the productions in either 1932 or 1933, whichever ones are higher. Basic commodities named in the act are cotton, wheat, field corn, tobacco, hogs, or milk and its products.

9. A producer may hasten the delivery of his benefit payments by signing a "rider" in which he gives advance permission to the county allotment committee to adjust or correct the figures in his contract without recourse by him.

As compensation for the adjustments listed above, cooperating farmers shall receive as benefit payments $5 a head on 75 per cent of the adjusted annual average number of hogs produced for market from 1932 and 1933 litters, and 30 cents a bushel on the established yield of corn that might have been produced on the land retired from production.
