LOCAL BOTTLING COMPANY INSTALLS NEW MACHINERY

The Gatesville Coca-Cola Bottling Company has recently completed the installation of a new modern equipment.

The machinery consists of a bottle sterilizer in which the bottles are submerged in a boiling hot sterilizing solution for a period of sixteen minutes. There is also a bottle filler and capper included in the equipment.

According to John T. Morgan, owner and manager of the plant, the machinery recently installed is the most modern and up to date to be had and is capable of filling and capping twenty-five bottles per minute.

Visitors are invited to inspect the plant at any time.

MEN GUESS ON ICE TO WIN STRAW KATY

The block of ice placed in the window at Painter and Lee Dry Goods store has created much interest among local people.

The ice was placed in the show window at 3:05 o'clock Thursday afternoon. The three men guessing closest to the time required for the ice to melt will be given any straw hat in the store free of charge.

At three o'clock Monday the ice had not melted though it had been in the process of melting for 96 hours. It was estimated that it would finish melting before last night.

E. I. TIPPIT NEW JEWELER AT FLENTGE DRUG

E. I. Tippit, formerly of Coryell county, has moved here from Ft. Stockton to enter the jewelry and watch repairing business and will be located at Flentge's Drug on the south side of the square.

Mr. Tippit was formerly in that same business at Flentge's Drug eight years ago. He has had fourteen years of experience in this line and has enjoyed an extensive patronage in the places where he has located.

Forty-Eight Seniors From G'ville Guests Of Baylor University

The Senior Class of Gatesville High School was well represented at the all-day entertainment at Baylor University in Waco last Saturday. The affair is an annual event sponsored by the Baptist Women of District 14 in cooperation with the University. Forty-eight seniors and five members of the faculty from Gatesville were present.

Events of the day were a program in the morning at Waco Hall, at which the following order was followed:

- "Texas, Our Texas," audience.
- Invocation, Dr. J. B. Tidwell, professor of Bible, Baylor university.
- Overture, "Zampa," Golden Wave band, Everett McCracken, conductor.
- "Baylor's Open Doors," President, Pat M. Neff.
- "Passing By" (Parcell).
- "Rain" (Curran), the Baylor university quadruplets—Roberta, Mona, Mary and Leota Keys, Hollis, Okla.
- "Waco Welcomes Her Own and Her Neighbors," Mrs. J. W. Dawson, chairman education committee, district one.
- Greetings from the W. M. U., Mrs. J. R. Comer, president W. M. U., district 14.
- Saxophone quartette—Quadruplets accompanied by band.
- Registration of visitors. Dr. W. S. Allen, vice president and dean, Baylor university.
- "The Last Roundup," men's quartette with Golden Wave band.
- "That Good Old Baylor Line," audience.

Other features of the all day program were: a play by the Little Theater, music programs, art demonstrations, educational pictures, a free barbecue dinner and in the afternoon the visitors witnessed the Baylor-T. C. U. ball game.

The entire university plant was open for inspection.

Everetts, Watson and Scott Elected to New County School Board

In the county wide School Trustee election held in this county on Saturday, April 7, Zim Scott of Gatesville, Tom Watson of Jonesboro and James Everetts of Oglesby were elected to places on the County School Board.

Elections for selections of district trustees were held in every school district in the county except Gatesville. Gatesville has no voice in the selection of the county-wide school board because of the fact that no trustee elections are held in its corporate limits. The charter of the City of Gatesville provides for the selection of the school trustees by appointment.

Ed Huckabee of Ireland and S. A. Turner of Copperas Cove are the hold-over members who, with the three newly elected men, will comprise the County Board.

Knox Williams Amateur Builder of Aeroplane Sees Production Fly

Knox Williams, whose home is near Purmela, has built an aeroplane and flown it.

Williams began on the construction of the plane about thirty-one months ago and has worked in spare time since. At the time he started the construction of the plane he had never been inside a plane and had only a blueprint to work from. His equipment as well as his knowledge of the construction details was very limited. In spite of the fact that he had never seen a plane built and had never ridden in one he started the construction and last Saturday saw the plane of his construction carry passengers into the air.

A reworked Ford motor furnishes the power for the plane, which is much larger than one would imagine.

The plane has been inspected by many aeroplane builders and had been pronounced 100 per cent efficient before the test flight which occurred last Friday afternoon.

Mr. Williams, a pilot from Fort Worth, took the plane up for the test flight and piloted the plane while it carried up passengers at the Evant celebration last Saturday.

Winfred Jones Chosen For Stage Appearance in Dramateur Guild Showing

Winfred, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Jones of Gatesville, who resides in Waco, has been chosen to play an important role in the next play, "Three-Cornered Moon," which is to be presented by the Dramateur Guild Players on May 4th and 5th, at the Mistro Playhouse.

Mr. Jones, has had varied experience in dramatics since coming to Waco. For two years he was connected with the Civic Repertory Players, and during these two years he appeared in important roles in eight outstanding Broadway plays which were: "Meet the Wife," "The Show-Off," "Applesauce," "The Family Upstairs," "Lombardi, Ltd.," "Murder Trial," "Companionate Marriage," and "What A Family." For the Waco Little Theatre he appeared in, "Lady Windermere's Fan," "Trial of Mary Dugan," "Dead Eyes," "The Romancers," and just recently appeared as Laurie in "Little Women." And for the Mistro Players he has appeared in, "Holiday." For the Dramateur Guild Players he has appeared in "The Devil Passes," "Icebound," and will soon appear in the Broadway success, "Three-Cornered Moon."

BANK HOLIDAY

All three of the local banks will observe San Jacinto Day, April 21st as a legal holiday.

Those having business with either of these banks may arrange their affairs accordingly.

Softball League Opened Officially With Twin Bill

Baseball Teams Meet At State Park Friday; Gatesville to Play Eddy

Gatesville vs. State

A baseball nine from Gatesville met the S. J. T. S. team on the State Diamond last Friday afternoon.

Harris and Bellamy were the State pitchers and Burton and Whatley pitched for the Gatesville team. Gatesville won the game by a score of 3 to 0.

Eddy vs. Gatesville Here April 22

The strong Eddy nine will be here on April 22 to meet the Gatesville team on the Fair Park diamond according to Walter Grant.

Eddy is reported to have a very strong team.

Gatesville Lad Loses To Waco Champion in Dis't Tennis Finals

Lloyd Neil Kirkpatrick of this city lost the finals in the district tennis tournament to Tom Glenn of Waco on Thursday afternoon of last week.

Young Kirkpatrick had gone victorious through the preliminaries and semi-finals in tennis singles at the district meet on April 6 and 7.

The games Thursday were scored as follows 6-2, 6-3, 6-4. Kirkpatrick rallied for the third set and gave Tom Glenn a hard fight for the championship.

First Baptist Revival With Jester and Carnett Now in Progress Here

The annual revival at the First Baptist Church here began last Sunday with Rev. C. A. Morton, pastor of the church, preaching to capacity crowds at both the morning and evening services.

Dr. T. C. Jester, pastor of the Baptist Temple at Houston, arrived here Monday and spoke at both the morning and evening services yesterday. Dr. E. L. Carnett of the Baptist Seminary at Fort Worth arrived here Monday afternoon and conducted the song service at last night's service.

Thus far the revival has been marked by splendid crowds and much interest.

It is probable that Dr. Carnett will instruct the choir in a series of lessons on choir work during the two weeks of the revival.

Commercial fisheries afford a valuable industry to Texas. In 1932, according to figures released from Washington a few days ago, 14,034,000 pounds of fish were caught by Texas commercial fishermen. The value of Texas commercial fishing industry is around $3,000,000 a year.

The softball season opened here last night with a double header. The game between the R. W. Ward team and the Bob Arnold team was called at 7:30 and a game between the Baptist Young Men and the Methodist Young Men was called at about 8:45.

These games opened the official season of the local softball league.

There are eight men's teams and two ladies' teams in the league and there will be a double header game on each night of the week except Wednesday. A full schedule for the first half of the season will be published in the next issue of the News.

Evant Plays Hosts To 3,000 Visitors At Barbecue Fete

A crowd, estimated at 3,000, was on hand for the all day celebration at Evant last Saturday.

Among the features of the day were: a parade, a negro minstrel, a goat roaping, and a play. Judge R. B. Cross, Hon. Tom L. Robinson, Hon. Earl Huddleston, Dr. A. G. Livingston and other candidates spoke at the time set aside for that phase of the program.

The State Juvenile Training School Band furnished the music for the gathering. A free barbecue dinner was served at the noon hour.

Dave Carter of Evant acted as master of ceremonies.

Promoted to Position Of Floor Manager in Chain Organization

Lloyd Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Jones of this city, has recently been promoted to the place of floor manager of the shoe department of the new mammoth J. C. Penny Store at Houston.

Lloyd has been connected with the J. C. Penny store at San Angelo for the past 5 years and for the last year of that time was assistant manager of the store.

He is one of the three employees chosen from the large force of Penny employees for an executive position in the new store.

SOCIETY

Valley Home Helpers Club Meet

The Valley Home Helpers Club met Wednesday, April 4, with Mrs. D. L. McCallister.

There were about fifty-one quilt blocks pieced and one quilt quilted. Nine members and eleven visitors were present, with one new member, Mrs. Loraine Derick.

Cake and ice cream was served late in the afternoon.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. Jim Neely, April 18.

Contract Club Meets Friday

Mrs. T. R. Mears and Mrs. Louis Holmes were awarded high score trophies when Mrs. Jim McClellan entertained members of the Contract Club at her home last Friday afternoon.

Bluebonnets were the floral decorations and added much beauty to the occasion.

Players were Mesdames Chess Sadler, Johnnie Brown, Dan McClellan, F. C. Thompson of Temple, Miller Stinnett and the prize winners.

Tacky Party for Sunday School Class

Members of Mrs. C. A. Morton's Class of the Baptist Sunday School enjoyed an unusual treat in the form of a tacky party at the home of Mrs. Tom L. Robinson last Thursday evening. The guests arrived in tacky costumes and all were attired to furnish plenty of amusement for the others present.

Interesting and amusing games and contests directed by Mrs. Arthur Blankenship featured the evenings entertainment. Some of the outstanding attractions were the foot ball games played with eggs, and the nose and snap contests.

Mrs. Paul Pollard was bestowed the honor of being the tackiest dressed person there.

Cakes and iced drinks were served to about forty members.

Pupils Presented in Recital

Mrs. Ola Mae Parks presented her piano and voice classes in a costume recital at her home on Leon Street last Thursday evening.

The international idea was cleverly carried out with each person on the program rendering their number in the particular costume of their country. Over twenty numbers were rendered, after which the costumes were modeled.

The studio was beautifully lighted and decorated with flowers and ferns.

About eighty attendants enjoyed the program.

Baptist Church Group Enjoys Hike

Mrs. R. W. Jameson and Mrs. Frank Post met with thirty members and guests of the Intermediate Girls Auxilliary of the Baptist Church at the Baptist Parsonage Saturday and enjoyed a hike to the home of Mrs. Dan Graves.

Delicious eats were spread at lunch time, after which the group enjoyed the rest of the afternoon playing games and gathering wild flowers in the woods.

About two o'clock the participants were passed all day suckers and departed for their homes.

Bride Honored Saturday Afternoon

Mrs. J. B. Honeycutt Jr. and Mrs. Elland Lovejoy entertained Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Elland Lovejoy with a bridge party and shower complimenting Mrs. Carl Schwalbe (nee Mary Louise Walkup).

The rooms were beautifully decorated with spring flowers of lilacs and blue bonnets which gave a fragrant odor to the occasion.

At the bridge games, high score awards went to Mrs. P. A. Walker and J. E. Pruner.

At the conclusion of the party a pretty refreshment plate of brick ice cream with pink and white angel food squares was served.

The bride received gifts from about fifty people including those who were unable to attend.

High School Annual Banquet Saturday Night

The Junior Class of the Gatesville High School with Miss Nela Scott as sponsor entertained Saturday evening with a banquet honoring the members of the 1934 graduating class. High School faculty members were additional guests.

The main floor of the high school building was transformed into a banquet hall made beautiful by spring flowers, ferns, Japanese lanterns, balloons and brightly colored candles in holders of corresponding shades. Place cards and programs added to the Japanese atmosphere which prevailed. Miniature Japanese umbrellas at each plate served as nut cups.

The appetizing menu was served in three courses, and was enjoyed during the orchestra music furnished by Alice Earl Anderson, Jacqueline West, Margaret Gilder, Raymond Leonard and Miss Mamie Sue Halbrook.

Outstanding on the program was the address of Mr. Williams. He chose as his subject, "Wanted-A Man". He gave several definitions of what a man is, climaxing it with the Christian's definition that Man is God's Masterpiece. He emphasized the fact that every profession, vocation and position of life wanted A MAN. To satisfy this demand for a real man certain qualifications are necessary, he stated. A real man is honest, trustworthy, industrious and unselfish and must display initiative if he is to succeed. By examples and illustrations he showed the advantage of striving to possess those qualities which make a real man or woman. His address was concluded by appealing to those present to have high ideals and strong characters. His thoughts were expressed by quoting the poem, "God, Give Us Men."

Miss Lillian Hale, student in Four-C College, spent the past week end at home.

Mrs. J. A. Hallman and baby daughter visited friends and relatives in Itasca over the week end. Miss Martha Weir and Mrs. R. R. Weir who have been visiting in this city returned to their home in Itasca with them.

La Grange—Milk production was held above normal all last winter on one-half the usual allowance of grain in the herd of Ivan Perry, Fayette county dairy demonstrator. The secret was the feeding of plenty of alfalfa hay and also grazing the cows on the alfalfa field during dry spells. Mr. Perry milks 9 cows and has 9½ acres of alfalfa. He cut the crop four times last year, which was a dry season. When turning cows on the alfalfa they are allowed to remain only 30 minutes the first time and are gradually let to stay longer as they accustomed to it, but never more than half a day.

GATESVILLE SENIORS HONORED

Forty-eight members of the senior class of Gatesville High School joined upperclassmen from eight other central Texas counties at Waco Saturday, as guests of Baylor University. The second annual "At Home" day was sponsored jointly by the University and the Baptist Women's Missionary Union of district fourteen.

It may be a business proposition or it may be a philanthropic one, or perhaps both, but whatever the affair may be it is certainly a worthwhile one. Other colleges and universities over the state would do well by adopting the same plan.

High school students, especially those of the Senior Class, are at the ripe age for prospective collegians. They have come to the point when they are interested in college if they ever will be and most of them are whether they or financially able to attend or not. Giving these youngsters a breath of college air is the best thing that could be done for them and for the college as well. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred a lasting impression is formed that will be hard to shake off.

A copious welcoming ceremony, led by the distinguished president of Baylor, Hon. Pat M. Neff, a concert by the college band, a directed tour over the premises and campus of the university, complimentary tickets to the baseball game and other interesting features are enough to impress any average high school student. These were among the events of the day planned and executed by the Baylor authorities for the Saturday guests.

It has always been a sad mistake, and a fatal one, in the past, when young high school graduates have gone away to college from the "home town" without the slightest indication of what college is all about. Figures will reveal that this has been the cause for many a dissatisfied young heart and many homesick boy or girl failing to make the grade or returning home without finishing the first college semester. College administration is beginning to see the necessity in acquainting the future college men and women with their future home.

Baylor University and the Baptist women went to a great expense in entertaining the 2,000 boys and girls that thronged onto the Waco college campus Saturday, but that was a good investment and would be a good investment for other colleges and universities. The money that was spent to furnish those youngsters with entertainment for one day will come back into the treasury of Baylor University and into the church organization from the students who enroll next fall as a direct result of that day's program.

REWARD OFFERED

In days of yore it wasn't unusual to see photographic facsimiles of the notorious bandits of the day posted in conspicuous places in every hamlet throughout the country. Today, the only chance we have of visualizing Barrow, Hamilton and Parker is through an occasionally newspaper-print likeness or a two-way photograph posted in the Post Office, in cases of federal offenses.

There are many people in this section today who have not the slightest idea as to the looks of roving desperadoes, and wouldn't know them if they met any one of them face to face.

Why can't we adopt the age-old policy of posting in prominent places the pictures of these marauders so that local residents might at least be on the lookout and give themselves a little protection.

Raymond Hamilton, Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker have escaped the law many times by walking in an out of cafes, filling stations, and garages unrecognized by local residents.

WORLD FOREIGN COMMENT

SAMUEL INSULL'S fight against extradition to the U. S. on charges of embezzlement and grand larceny ended last week when Turkish authorities handed him over to Burton Y. Berry of the Istanbul American Embassy to be returned to Chicago. Insull has fought a long and bitter fight for seventeen months, most of the time on Greek soil, against repeated efforts to be returned to face American justice, in connection with the collapse of his vast utilities empire.

Modernized Turkey's machinery of justice functioned rapidly, despite attempts of Insull's lawyers to prove that he had been illegally seized in international waters, as the Bosphorus Straits are considered free water in the Lausanne Treaty. At the same time that Turkey's foreign minister notified American Ambassador Robert P. Skinner that the former multimillionaire was being held at his disposition, Turkey ratified the Turkish-American extradition treaty.

Insull would have been better off if he had stayed at home and faced the music. Seventy-four years old, broken in health, he has lived in an agonizing suspense for over a year and a half. He would probably have gotten what was coming to him if he had stayed at home but he would have been one year and a half nearer the end of his prison term, and public opinion is so exasperated with him that he will probably get a longer sentence than otherwise. The old Slogan is never wrong, folks, CRIME DON'T PAY.

CHAPTER I

Lone Mesa.

THE girl, clinging to the face of the weathered cliff, her booted feet barely touching the narrow ledge below, was chiefly conscious of the strain upon her wrists. All the pain in the world seemed centered there. She knew that three hundred feet of space hung blue and clear beneath her, that the azure sky cupped serenely above, and still she endured with her mouth set and her dark eyes flaming upward at the face which topped the mesa's rim.

This was a man's face, young and lean and weathered as the land above, a face wild as a hawk's with long blue eyes that watched her painfully.

Moreover, it was a drunken face—or it had been ten minutes ago.

Now it was sobering fast, and there was sweat at its temples.

"Let go with one hand—please—an' catch th' rope," its owner begged, "for th' love of God!"

"Leave God out of it!" the girl panted thinly. "A lot you know about him!"

"Then for your folks, miss. Haven't you got some folks somewhere who'd break their hearts if you—if you—fell?"

"Sure, I have—a brother who'd kill you if he knew."

"I'd give him th' chance. Only catch th' rope. It's a little pull. I'll have you up here in a minute."

"For what?" she asked bitterly.

The man groaned.

"For your life—an' your safety."

"You give me your word?"

"Yes. Will you take it?"

"I will. Swing that loop to my other shoulder. I'm left-handed."

With the expert precision of a trained cow hand the man swung the loop around her slim body. With a cat-like sweep of her left hand the girl caught it, let go the bare root of the dead pinon pine stump on the rim which had saved her, and swung clear.

Hand over hand the man raised her the scant ten feet which had separated them and pulled her over the edge of the cliff. Together they rose to their feet and stood looking into each other's eyes with tragic tenseness which precluded speech.

Then the man stooped and picked up the girl's wide hat and timidly held it out to her. She took it without a word, set it on her dark head, brushed the white, sandy silt of the cliff-face from her shirt and riding breeches, and watched him catch her horse and lead it back.

She took her reins and swung up in her saddle, her lips set in a tight line above her firm chin. In that tense silence she leaned to the start, when he caught her horse's bit.

"I—miss," he said thickly, "I want to—to say that I ain't ever felt so bad in my life. I've done a lot of things that wouldn't bear light, but nothin' so bad as this. I never made so big a mistake in judgment in all my days, an' there ain't no excuse I can offer. I just—just didn't know a woman lived who'd rather die than—than—"

"No?" said the girl like a rasp. "You've got a lot to learn, then. Now, get out of my way."

Across the high mesa she went like a streak of flame, her scarlet shirt against the blue sky making a fire in the spirit of the man who stood watching her. When he could no longer hear the sound of her horse's feet sliding in the loose stone silt he stooped and picked up his own hat. For a long time he held it in his two hands, staring at it unseeing.

Down on the sandy levels the girl gave her horse his head and sailed away toward the north and east. Two hours later she rode into the stone-flagged patio of her brother's ranch house and swung off with the last thunder of the iron-shod feet.

"That was a pretty piece of horsemanship, Sonya," said a man's voice; "quite spectacular. How long have you ridden like that?"

"Oh, hello, Rod! Why, I don't know. Ever since I've been in this country, I guess—five years now. It's a land that makes for flights and wide gestures."

"I see. You've been gone an un-conscionable time. Where've you been?"

"Over beyond Chee wash. There's a sick woman in a hogan, and I'm afraid she's going to die."

A shadow passed across the girl's face, darkening it for a moment.

"These Indians are so pitiful, Rod, so patient, so hopeless. And they are so poor. They make me fairly question destiny sometimes."

"My darling! Why bother your dear head? What's one Navajo more or less?"

"I wish you wouldn't talk like that, Rod," she said earnestly. "If you knew them like I do you couldn't. They are a lost people, that I grant you, who know they are lost, and they are going down to oblivion like a gallant ship with its sails set and flags flying. You don't understand, Rod."

"No," said the man, getting up and coming toward her, "I don't. Neither do I want to. I only understand that your absurd devotion to them is keeping you from me and from your rightful place in life."

He stooped and kissed her gently. "Go wash and rest a bit, child," he said; "you look rather fagged. Lila is in the nursery with Babs, and Serge is out on the range somewhere. Said he wouldn't be in till night."

She rose and entered the deep house, a cool place, its walls laid up of flat stones chinked with adobe mud, its bare floors bright with Indian rugs.

Sonya Savarin loved her brother's house, his wife, his child, and himself best of all. For five years she had lived with them in this lone land of cactus, sand, and sunlight, and it seemed as if a hand tugged at her heart whenever she thought of leaving them.

She had thought of that gravely the last year. Of New York and Rodney Blake and all they stood for—convention and affluence and what the world called life. It had been a year, on the nineteenth of next month, since she had promised to marry him. Rod was the soul of gallantry and had made three trips to Arizona in that time, always urging her to come away with him, to give up her work, and always she had put him off a little longer. Not that she was fond of him. Who could fail to be fond of him with his good looks, his smiling good-nature? And he was Serge's closest friend. Dated from college days. But how could she give up her work here among the people whom she had learned to love and who needed her and her skill so badly?

These thoughts passed through her mind as she divested herself of her dusty riding clothes and bathed in the low pool in one corner of her room where the living waters of the spring ran softly through and out under the wall in a pipe. A treasure, this indoor pool. A blessing it would be hard to leave, along with Darkness, her horse, and Lila and little Babs.

Yet she had come near as a breath to leaving them three hours back and had not given them a thought. There had been no thought in her when she flung her body out of the arms of the man who held her and over the edge of Lone Mesa—only the age-old terror of conquest, the high, fierce flare of white-hot fury at defilement which has filled the heart of woman since creation.

She had essayed death as instinctively as she drew her breath, and had done it on the instant. The man, the tall, lean vandal of saddle and spur, who had ridden her down to the mesa's edge and lifted her bodily from Darkness' back, came back in her vision as he had come again and again on the ride home, in the patio with Rod. She could see the long blue eyes of him, wild with inner fire under their sleepy look. They had large pupils under their bronze-colored lashes, and they were fierce and cruel, swift eyes that could change in a second from one vital expression to another.

She had seen them change, instantly, when she looked up after the sliding fall over the rim, the jolting catch of her clutching hands in the pinon roots. From that promising, sleepy wildness to wide shock. Had seen them literally sober themselves from half-drunken dementia to anguished sanity. Strange eyes. Beautiful, even in their beast-like cruelty. There had been no mercy for her in them. A wave of the cold terror of that moment went over her, followed instantly by a burning flush of anger.

"I'll take my pound of flesh from him for this," she told herself through tight lips, "if it takes me the rest of my natural life. If a free citizen of this country can't ride in safety I'll know the reason why."

Then she finished dressing, and went out to where Lila, dark Serge's long-haired, golden wife, put the finishing touches on the table for the evening meal. They were a striking foil for each other, Sonya and her sister-in-law, one so tall and dark and wild, the other so small and pale and soft. Lila, with her blue eyes above her dusky eyes, Sonya in her movements, the other small and fragile as a flower, a fair thing to look at, to know. They were close as a hand in its glove, these two.

A tight conspiracy against the crown, Serge sometimes told them smilingly, meaning himself. But it was a conspiracy of love and loyalty and that dear service which only love engenders, and he knew it. It had served him well, for things had not been too easy on the ranch in the sagebrush country where Serge Savarin ran his flocks of sheep, and women can hold up the hands of men when the waters of circumstance become too deep. These two had waded with him, leaning in against his shoulders. Frail Lila had carried his child, too, and Sonya had stood by at its deliverance. That had been three years back, and he knew in his heart that if it hadn't been for their strong courage he'd have given up. But he had been ashamed to quit, and times were better now. The flocks had become herds. He had Indians with them in camps all over the sage.

"Hello, Sonya," said Lila. "How's Two Fingers' wife?"

"Bad," said Sonya. "I'm afraid I'm going to lose her. She's a sweet thing, too, pretty and young. Two babies. The patience of these Indians is pathetic. She whispered to me that if she had to go away, why sorrow? It was the common lot."

"If she dies," said Lila, "what will become of the babies?"

"Two Fingers has a sister over in Long Ruins. Maybe she'd take 'em. I'd hate to see them go into—"

EMMETT FAUNT LE ROY

Emmett Faunt Le Roy was born in the State of Kentucky and came to Texas in early youth. He was the son of J. B. Faunt Le Roy and Nannie Allenworth Faunt Le Roy. He had the honor of inheriting by birth two coats-of-arms (Faunt Le Roy and Jennings).

His early life was spent in Gatesville and here the earliest friendships were formed. His trade as a leather worker led him to various places among which was Dallas, Shreveport, La., Kansas City and Springfield, Mo., New Orleans, Louisiana and Muskogee, Oklahoma where he held responsible positions with leading firms and dealers. His fine personality made him many friends in every locality in which he lived who remembered him to the end. He was of an old and loyal family. He was loved and respected by both young and old.

During his long illness he was visited by many of his friends and he enjoyed and appreciated their visits.

Emmett Faunt Le Roy carried with him through life the rugged honesty of the earlier days. He was loyal to his friends and devoted to the things he believed to be right. He had made peace with his God and was not afraid when the time came for his passing. He will long be remembered in the hearts of his friends here and in the various places where he has lived. He died March 23, 1934 and was laid to rest in the City cemetery on Saturday, March 24th, 1934. Services were conducted by Dr. Arthur Stout of Waco.

Active pallbearers were Paul Hensler, Robert Powell Jr., H. S. Compton, George Miller, Dan McClellan and John P. Reesing.

Honorary pallbearers were R. E. Powell, J. B. Graves, John Hearne, Luther Manning, Jake Stout, Will Rutherford, J. R. Graham, W. G. Walley, Bob Brown.

Lockhart—In a move to get the necessary fruit supply for the family produced at home on the farm, a family orchard campaign recently conducted in Caldwell county has resulted in the purchase of 1675 fruit trees by 94 families, reports A. O. Hebel, county agent. The last day of the campaign was devoted to instruction in planting and care of the trees. It was pointed out that a half-acre fruit plot will give a family of five their fruit needs in ordinary years.

If fruit is not produced on the farm or the crop fails, certain garden crops may substitute for fruit in the garden, home demonstration agents say. Tomatoes are an excellent substitute and there are instances in Texas where tomatoes have been used exclusively for nearly a year without other fruit, and health maintained. Melons, rhubarb, and roselle are also fruit substitutes.

Louisiana is challenging the dominance of Texas in sulphur production with a large new plant in Plaquemine parish. Some observers believe that the renewal of activity in Louisiana resulted from the sulphur tax imposition by the Texas Legislature, Louisiana having modified its former restrictions and levies on the commodity.

A saving of $3.75 on one dress due to making her own garment by the help of a foundation pattern is reported by Mrs. Jack Marshbanks, wardrobe demonstrator of the Deep Creek Home Demonstration Club in Shackelford county. "My pattern has given me confidence and ability to design and make my clothes at a great saving," she says. The foundation pattern is the biggest single contribution the Extension Service has made to good dress at low cost during the depression.

Wooden checks placed in ditches failing to stop erosion, Emil Bretzke of Guadalupe county has turned to the county agent for a terracing system. It is now under construction and solves a drainage problem as well as soil washing. Its cost, Mr. Bretzke says, is less than what has already been spent to check erosion.

A winter gopher campaign in Nacogdoches county resulted in poison distribution on 55,000 acres of land. The work was done by U. S. Biological Survey, CWA and the county agent.

The family food supply for 1934 has been planned out and budgeted by 297 farm women in Angelina county in cooperation with the home demonstration agent.

Out in Imperial Community in Pecos county folks have had to go 12 miles for a drink of water. Now the county agent reports that one member of the community, Mr. Johns, has built a 40x60 foot barn equipped to drain rain-water from roof into a cistern. Others are expected to follow this example.

Chester Smith down in Webb county tells the county agent that he could dump his silage cutter into the river and still be ahead of the game. A saving of $100 per month in feed bills has more than paid the expense of digging silos, buying machinery, and filling the trenches.

Childress—Sweet clover, alfalfa and espedeza planting are on the increase in Childress county this year because of the cotton acreage reduction program, according to V. E. Hafner, county agent. Some demonstrators have planted spring plots of alfalfa but most of them are preparing the ground for fall sowings.

One demonstrator, Joe King, has prepared a 10-acre field by building a "syrup pan terracing system." It is so arranged that any time there is running water the entire plot of ground will be flooded.

Waxahachie—"From 50 tomato plants we sold $35 worth of fresh tomatoes, canned 60 quarts and had all the fresh tomatoes a family of five could use during summer and fall months," Mrs. H. Harrison, Red Oak Home Demonstration Club in Ellis county, reported to Miss Ross, home demonstration agent of that county.

Mrs. Harrison stated that a trench was dug deep enough for ten or twelve inches of barn yard manure to be placed below the roots of plants. Then large tomato plants were transplanted 6 or 8 inches deep in good garden soil in the trench over this fertilizer.

Georgetown—Native shrubs are being put to good use in Williamson county yard work according to the report of Miss Bessie L. Vogt, home demonstration agent. Mrs. Olive Edwards, cooperater in the school. They're so little and so wild—like baby quail. They need a woman's love, not a routine."

Lila sighed and looked at Babs through the open door.

"This world is hard on children—and women," she said, "and only a man's true love redeems it."

"And here comes one of the crusaders now," said Sonya nodding her black head towards the northern sage. "Serge."

A little later he came in from the back patio, scrubbed and shining, his riding clothes brushed free of the day's sand and dust, his dark face burned by sun and wind.

A handsome man was Serge Savarin, taller than Sonya, showing his Russian blood in the bold contours of his face, the fire in his black eyes, the slowness of his movements.

He kissed Lila with a long kiss, smiled at Sonya.

"Whew!" he said. "Sure is good to get home."

Rodney Blake came in, his hands in the pockets of his plusters.

"This is the darnedest family," he complained, grinning. "Here am I, a guest under its roof, and I've twiddled my thumbs all day waiting for it to see I'm around."

"Now, Rod!" said Lila, "is that nice? Haven't Babs and I paid you all the attention possible?"

"Babs! The young autocrat! She's slept most of the time and ignored me the rest. You've done pretty well, Lila, considering the thousand things you've done today about the house, but as for these others, well, I know I should be highly affronted by their indifference. Some day I'm going to be, no kidding."

"Yeah, like h—l you will," said Serge. "Come here, Babs, and sit on daddy's lap for supper."

It was a pleasant meal that followed, and later the small group sat in the big patio watching the twilight march across the mysterious land in unspeakable beauty.

Sonya, resting her head against the long chair's back, sighed in sheer ecstasy of appreciation.

"Tired, dear?" asked Rod tenderly.

Sonya moved and looked at him. "Tired? Why, no, I'm not tired now," she said.

"Then why the sigh?" "Oh, I don't know. Just—just drinking in—all this, I guess."

She waved her hands apart, and the gesture compassed the whole lone country with simple eloquence.

The man, smoking, watched her with speculative eyes in which there was a glint of hardness. This country and its problems—they menaced his hope, and he was beginning to hate them with a deep and abiding hatred.

Serge was talking about the bands of his sheep on Bad Land Levels, and Lila was asking this and that question at intervals, and presently Sonya, watching the great stars come out upon the blue heavens, lost the purpose of their words. She was thinking of the woman in the lowly hogan beyond Chee wash, and the dark-faced man who loved her in his silent fashion, and her heart was sad and heavy with her fears for them.

And then, superimposed upon their pathetic tragedy, she saw again the sky beyond Lone Mesa's rim and the wild fair face of a man sobering in bewilderment and anguish. She stirred in her chair, and Rod Blake touched her hand.

"Eh?" she said, startled.

(To be continued next Friday)

yard improvement, in the Rural Liberty Hill Home Demonstration Club, has already set out in doorstep and foundation plantings and in screen plantings evergreen sumac, wild plum, pecan, agartas, red bud, dog wood, native cedars, yaupon, bridal wreath, althea, nandina, flowering jasmine and liac. Mrs. Edwards does not own the pace she planted but she has improved the appearance of it greatly.

Port Lavaca—The Roemerville Home Demonstration Club reported to the Calhoun county home demonstration council that 254 containers of meats and vegetables had been canned by club members since the January report. Since October 1st, the Olivia Club members have reported to the council the canning of 2894 containers of farm products.

Tyler—Mrs. Jess Garrett, wardrobe demonstrator for Praire Lea Club, reports to Miss Lida Cooper, home demonstration agent of Smith county, that she made a foundation pattern for one of the cooperators, Mrs. Van Stone, recently. She then made a dress by it without "trying on". She feels that this shows more and more the true value of foundation patterns.
