Ground Broken for New Gym-Auditorium

Plan Completion of New Building by October

Clearing of the site and breaking ground was begun Wednesday noon for the construction of the $10,000.00 auditorium-gymnasium which will be erected on the school property west of the high school building in Gatesville.

The structure will serve as a gymnasium, auditorium and classroom building and is being built by the City of Gatesville according to their own plans. The architect's plans and specifications were made by Doyle Baldrige, teacher in the local schools.

Construction will be done with city labor on a straight building job, Paul Wiley, local contractor, having been named construction foreman.

The edifice will have outside measurements of 137 x 84 feet, outside walls to be constructed of concrete with frame and plastered inside walls. An asphalt and felt ply roof will cover the building.

The stage will measure 20 x 32 feet inside and will extend the entire width of the building. Dressing rooms will be located underneath the stage.

The gymnasium playing floor will be 42 x 78 feet, to be constructed of high grade maple. When the floor is in use the house will seat 600 people. When the stage is being used 2,000 people may be comfortably accommodated.

The east end of the building will be used for the Home Economics Department, being 22 x 84 feet dimensions, and will be equipped with all the necessary rooms to meet the requirements of the state school authorities.

It is hoped that the Economics department will be completed by the opening of school and the remainder of the building a month or forty-five days later.

The project has been planned as a self-liquidating enterprise with the idea of paying for the investment in ten years.

1,600 Head Inspected First Week of Cattle Buying Program Here

500 CATTLE CONDEMED

Approximately 1,600 head of cattle in Coryell County have been inspected in the last week, as a part of the extensive federal drought relief program, according to Tom Freeman, secretary of the cattle program in Coryell county. Of this number 500 head have been condemned.

"The producers must have the cattle which they are offering the government penned properly," says Dr. W. A. Smith, government inspector, "and should not be penned with the rest of the cattle."

Livestock owners are urged to pen the three classes of calves, yearlings, and cows separately. Also, they should wait for notice from headquarters at Gatesville informing them when their cattle will be inspected.

According to Mr. Freeman, 1,100 head of recently purchased cattle have already been shipped, averaging $6, $12, and $14 on the three classes of animals.

The unanimous attendance of Coryell County cotton producing farmers is expected at the mass meeting which will convene at the courthouse in Gatesville Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

The primary objective of the meeting will be to inform the farmers of the procedure to be taken in making Bankhead allotment applications. Other emergency programs will also be discussed at this meeting, including the stock feed loan.

It has been stated that cotton measurements will be completed by tonight (Friday). This will expedite the program Saturday since each farmer in attendance will have had his land measured and no time will be unnecessarily spent on this subject.

Deadline Is Set

The county agent and the county cotton committee have decided that in order to secure tax-exemption certificates in time for the producers to market their cotton orderly and without tax that the deadline date for receiving applications shall be set for Saturday night, August 11.

On Monday, August 6, sign-up on the Bankhead Act will begin. All landowners map go to the courthouse and sign ap-

Beginning August 7, and continuing through August 11, the committeemen will be in their respective district headquarters, where they will receive from all producers, landlords and tenants, applications for tax-exempt cotton under the Bankhead Law.

All producers are urged to cooperate with the various committeemen in order that they might finish their program by August 11. It is also urged that the producers be patient and not rush the committeemen that first day applications are taken.

The farmers of Coryell County are invited to attend a mass meeting at the courthouse Saturday afternoon, at which time the provisions of the Bankhead Act will be discussed freely by the County agent and other well-posted local individuals. The fact that all cotton producing farmers of this section are invited means that practically every farmer should be present, since farming without some sort of cotton crop is little known in Coryell County. At the Saturday meeting everyone present will have the opportunity of becoming informed on the Bankhead subject by the right to ask questions that pertain to his individual case. It is of utmost importance that this meeting be well attended, which will help to expedite the performance of the Bankhead Law in Coryell.

With the second primary only three weeks off voters should immediately prepare themselves to vote intelligently for those who have the qualifications best suited to each respective office. With only two candidates for each office, voters will have a better chance of selecting one of the two and should spend the next three weeks posting themselves on the platforms and records of the political aspirants. The voters might as well "let the past dead bury the dead," as the defeated candidates are doing and concentrate on a "second best" in cases where their first choices have lost in the first primary.

Certain citizens of this county who drew a long breath two weeks ago when the July term of court Grand Jury announced it had adjourned are in position to swallow their tongues again now that the investigating body has announced a reconvention. The twelve jurors didn't adjourn at all, they were just taking a recess but everybody didn't know it.

Although very little has been said about it recently, the trench silo program in Coryell County is a live subject. Several thinking farmers of this area have been able to see the benefit in such a means of conserving stock feed and their judgement has become popular among more farmers in this county. With the continued drought in this section the need for preservation of feed is becoming increasingly necessary. In previous years farmers realized the need for storage facilities but many of them could not afford to build the older type of silos. The new trench silo is very inexpensive and within the bounds of nearly every farm pocketbook. Spread of popularity in the line of trench silos may be credited to the county agent and Extension Service department of A. and M. College. Farmers are given every opportunity to learn about the simple and economical means of storing feed for their stock until the proverbial rainy day.

It is the contention of some folk that we should elect to office men who are in their younger years so they will have time to carry out all their campaign promises before they die of old age. On the other hand it might be well to elect the elders and accept their old-age absent-mindedness as a legitimate excuse for forgetting some of the things they promised.

Local people should not overlook the fact that although we were not in the storm area many others were . . . let us contribute generously to their aid.

Letters From Readers

Coryell County News,
Gatesville, Texas,

Gentlemen:

Each year the Baptist of Coryell County ship a carload of feedstuffs, canned goods, etc. to Buckner Orphan's Home at Dallas. This year there will be a shortage. This can be remedied, however, in this way: The government is buying cattle in this county. Some underweight cattle are not being shipped. This underweight stock, while it does not meet government specifications, is thoroughly suitable for human consumption. The matter of shipping some of this stock to Buckner's Home is being investigated with the home and with the government authorities. If such can be worked out I want to arrange for a carload of such calves to be donated to Buckner's Home. This appeal is made especially to Baptists who have calves which are underweight and which they will donate to the Home.

SOFTBALL SYMPTOMS

By TEDDY

The Team Standing has been incorrect in the last two issues, but appears correct in this issue.

There was much comment on my decision regarding the game between Gartman's team and the Baptists. There are those who disagree with me on the game, but I haven't run into one yet, in fact, I received a few more drinks and cigars. I appreciate the attitude both teams took regarding this matter.

A good crowd was on hand Monday night to see Gartman's bunch defeat the Bachelors 9 to 5. Gartman has a good team and they are beginning to show a little improvement.

The Methodists won their first game of this division Monday night from the Fire Boys 8 to 7. These Methodists have started up-setting my dope, and they might do anything now.

A very good crowd witnessed the games Wednesday night. The Baptists trined Arnold's crew 4 to 1. It seems as if the Baptists can not be defeated. They have determined to win this division, but if the ole saying, "pride comes before a great fall," runs true to form, it will not be long until the Baptists meet their "Waterloo."

Gartman's gang nosed out the Methodists Wednesday night 9 to 4. These Methodists have a good team, and are interested in the game. They might surprise any team one of these nights.

—MY—DOPE—

Today—The Firemen will defeat Arnold's bunch by a few runs.

The Baptists will defeat the Bachelors.

Monday—Gartman's gang will defeat Arnold's crew.

The Baptists will defeat the Firemen.

I appreciate more than words can express, your loyalty in Saturday's Election which I construe an endorsement of the principles that I discussed with you and an endorsement of the fact that I did not publicly or privately engage in personalities which I shall not do in the second primary.

All the laws should be enforced without fear or favor and should you elect me I promise that I will, to the best of my ability, do so without being dominated by anyone.

I cherish no ill will for those that voted for my two opponents and feel that under different circumstances you would have supported me.

Joan Crawford Stars In "Sadie McKee," Sat. Sun. & Mon. at Regal

Joan Crawford has delighted you before, which is why she is Joan Crawford, but never before has the star turned in a performance to equal her characterization of the name role in "Sadie McKee" at the Regal Theatre Saturday night, Sunday and Monday.

Whether it is entirely the star, the brilliant supporting cast of Clarence Brown's surpassing direction is a moot question. But the result is indisputably a great motion picture.

In the first place, Vina Delmar's story dramatizing a beautiful young girl of humble birth (she is the daughter of a small town cook) is a perfect vehicle for Joan Crawford, whose fame rests on her vivid interpretation of the modern girl. As pretty Sadie McKee, Joan is indisputably in her right element.

Three Men in Her Life

Three men play significant roles in her life. They are Franchot Tone, as Michael, attorney at law; Gene Raymond as Tommy, charming weakling and crooner of lush songs; and Edward Arnold, as Brennan, a roistering, drunken millionaire whose privilege it is to be her husband for-a-time. All three give performances brilliant each in his especial way.

Jean Dixon and Leo G. Carroll of New York stage fame, make their screen debuts in important roles in a manner which reflects credit upon both themselves and the picture. Gene Austin, singer of sweet songs, also makes his bow as a night club entertainer, with happy results.

I WISH TO SAY---

... to the Voters of Justice Precinct No. 1 that I appreciate very much the nice vote given me in the first primary which entitles me to second place and the opportunity of entering the run-off.

It was a pleasure to me to find that the persons whom I had known for some time and those with whom I was best acquainted were my most loyal supporters.

I fully realized during the previous campaign that both my opponents were worthy gentlemen and I have no ill feeling toward anyone who supported either of them.

I am ready to enter the run-off with a clear conscience and shall appreciate your support during the second primary.

Respectfully,

THE STORY

CHAPTER IV.—Heeseeman tells Wall that Hays was once his (Heeseeman's) partner and double-crossed him. Herrick delegates Jim to go to Grand Junction to meet Miss Herrick. Jim gets Barnes, a young cowboy with him, to tell her that he (Jim) is a desperado of the worst type. Barnes does so, and later Jim tells her he is what is known as a "bad man," but the girl treats the information lightly.

Wall flicked the reins. "Look, Miss Herrick. We're on top at last. There's your country. The black snow-capped mountains are the Henrys. We go through that gap—a pass—to Star ranch. That purple space to the left—with the lines and streaks—that's the desert."

"Ah-h-h!" she had cried out, breathlessly.

Jim drove down the hill, and again put the blacks to a keen gait on a level road, this time a straight, white line across a longer valley. Jim calculated that he would beat the time he had declared, and reach Star ranch before sundown.

When he drove past Heeseeman's camp all that worthy's outfit were at supper. The road passed within fifty feet of their chuck wagon.

"What a ruffianly crew!" murmured Miss Herrick. "Who, pray, are these men?"

"Part of the outfit your brother hired to protect his cattle from rustlers," replied Jim. "Funny thing about that is they are rustlers themselves."

"Deliciously funny, though hardly so for Bernie. Does he know it?"

"Not to my knowledge. Heeseeman—the leader of that gang—came on his own recommendation and got the job."

"I'll have the fun of telling Bernie. . . . Oh, what's that. . . . What an enormous barn! All yellow. And a new one going up. Logs and logs. . . . Look at the horses! I want to stop."

"No, Miss Herrick," he replied grimly. "I'll drive you home safely or die in the attempt. . . . Don't look at this tall man we're coming to."

"Which?" she asked, laughing. "The one standing farthest out," replied Jim. "He's got on a black sombrero. . . . Don't look at him. That's Hank Hays. . . . Miss Herrick, drop your veil."

She obeyed, unobtrusively, though her silvery laugh pealed out. "You are teasing, of course. But I must reward your effort to entertain me."

Jim drove by Hays, who stood apart from a group of cowboys. If he noticed Jim at all, it was totally oblivious to Jim. But Wall's glance, never so strained, pierced the shadow under Hays' dark sombrero rim to the strange eyes below. They were not pale now. Jim's hand clenched tight on the reins. He became preoccupied with the nucleus of the first deadly thought toward Hays.

"Hank Hays. Who is he?" Miss Herrick was saying. "Another of your brother's vigilantes."

"Ugh! How he stared! But it wasn't that which struck me most. In India I've seen cobras rise and poise, ready to strike. And your Mr. Hays looked for all the world like a giant cobra with a black sombrero on its head. Wasn't that silly of me?"

"Not silly. An instinct. Self-preservation," returned Jim, sternly. She passed that by, but only perhaps because she caught sight of the ranch house up the slope. Here her enthusiasm was unbounded.

Herrick stood on the porch steps with his dogs. He wore high boots and a red coat. He waved.

Presently Jim reined in the sweating horses before the steps. He was most curious to see the meeting between brother and sister. She stood up.

"Bernie, old top, here I am," she said gayly.

"Yes, here you are, Helen," he replied, and stepped out to help her alight. "Did you have a nice trip?"

"Ripping—from Grand Junction in."

They did not embrace or even shake hands. Jim, coming to himself, leaped out and began removing the bags. Barnes, whom he had totally forgotten, jumped out on the other side.

"Barnes, carry the bags in. Jim, hurry the blacks down. They're hot. You must have pushed them."

"Yes, sir. Stage was late, but we made up for it."

"Helen, where's that Wells-Fargo package?" queried Herrick.

"Here in my satchel. Oh, Bernie, it's good to get home—if this can be home."

"Come in and take off that veil," he said, and with his arm in hers led her up on the porch.

Jim let Barnes take the team, while he crossed the bench and made his way down the steep, rocky declivity to Hays' cabin. Happy Jack was whistling about the fire, knocking pans and otherwise indicating the proximity of supper.

"Howdy, Jack. What's tricks for today?" asked Jim.

"Glad you're back, J. . . . declared the cook cordially. "Anyone'd have think you was goin' to dish the outfit—judgin' from Hays. He's been like a hound on a leash. Smoky rode in today full of ginger, news, an' a roll of long green that'd have choked a cow. But even that didn't ease the boss."

"What ailed him, Jack?" inquired Jim, not without impatience.

"Dinged if I know. It had to do with your goin' to Grand, a darned sight more than Smoky's."

Heavy footfalls outside attested to the return of Hays. Without more comment Jim stood up and away from the table, to face the door. Hays entered. He was not the genial Hays of other days, yet it was hard to define the change in him, unless it consisted in a gloomy, restless force behind his stride. Smoky followed him in, agreeable by contrast.

"Hullo, here you air. I waited at the barn," said Hays gruffly.

"Howdy, boss. I took a short cut down," replied Jim.

"I seen Barnes an' had a word with him. So your trip come off all right? You shore made them blacks step."

"It wasn't as pleasant a drive as you'd imagine," returned Jim, darkly.

"Haw! You must be one of them women-haters. . . . Outside of that side of it, what happened to Jar you?"

"Nothing to concern you or your outfit. Smoky saw me yesterday before I got a line on him. He ducked off the road. At Grand Junction nobody paid any more attention to me than I'd expect."

"Ahuh. That's good," replied Hays, and going over to the pack beside his bed he rummaged about to return with a packet, which he slapped down upon the table.

"There you air, Jim. On our first deal."

The packet unrolled and spread out—bills of large denomination.

"What's this for?" queried Jim.

"Quick action. That's how we work. Your share. Smoky fetched it."

Jim did not care to give the impression that he was unused to this sort of thing. Straddling the bench he sat down to run through the bills.

"Five thousand six hundred," he said, as if to himself, and he slipped the money inside his pocket. "Much obliged, Smoky. Now I'll be able to sit in a little game of draw."

"Jim, ain't you got any news at all?" inquired Hays, searchingly.

"A feller with your ears an' eyes shore would pick up somethin'."

"Miss Herrick fetched a Wells-Fargo package to her brother," rejoined Jim slowly.

"Then it's come," said Hays cracking his hands. "Herrick was expectin' money last stage."

After supper Smoky was the first to break silence:

"Boss, now Wall is back you can make up your mind about what I'd like to do."

Straddling the Bench He Sat Down to Run Through the Bills.

"Jim, listen to this: Smoky an' the other fellers, except Brad, want to make a clean sweep, with this next drive. What you think?"

"Clean Herrick out?" asked Jim.

"That's the idee."

Jim pondered a moment.

"It's be harder work, but save time, and perhaps our bacon as well. These cowboys are going to find out pretty soon that the cattle have thinned out. If Smoky drives a couple thousand more it'll be sure to be found out, sooner or later."

"See thar, boss. Wall sees it just as I do. There's plenty of water along the road an' feed enough. . . . Let's make it one big drive."

"Wal, it'd mean leavin' Star Ranch sudden," cogitated the robber chief.

"Shore. An' that's good."

"But I don't want to pull out of here sudden," declared Hays.

"Why not, if we get away with ten thousand head?" queried Smoky, astounded.

"That ten thousand won't close the deal I'm on."

"What've you got up your sleeve, Hank?"

"That's my business. Yours is drivin' cattle."

"You mean to rob the Englisher? Hank, don't be a hawg!"

"Hays, if you'll excuse me, I'm thinking Smoky talks sense," interposed Jim, quietly.

"My mind's made up. We'll stick to our first idee. You fellers make drive after drive, goin' slow. . . . that'll give me time—"

"Ahuh. So you'll risk goin' the whole outfit," interrupted Smoky, with a curious gaze at his superior.

"Wal, yes, if you put it that way," replied Hays, and he stalked on.

"Smoky, will you start the second drive tomorrow?" asked Wall.

"I'll lay it up to my outfit. Wal, so long. See you soon, one way or another."

Next day Jim went back to work on the new barn. A subtle change in Hank Hays augmented his suspicion of that individual. Jim let him alone.

Herrick was around as usual, interested in every detail of the building. Hays had gone off with the cowboys across the valley to put them upon some job there, which no doubt was a ruse to keep them away from Limestone Springs, where most of the stock grazed. And the day had ended without one glimpse of Helen Herrick.

At breakfast the following morning Hays surprised Jim.

"Was the Herrick girl out yesterday?" he inquired.

"Didn't see her."

"You didn't say what kind of a looker she was."

"Oh, that," laughed Jim. "I forgot or didn't think you were interested."

"Wal, I'd like to see her once before our deal's off here."

Hays had his wish fulfilled next day. He was at work on the new barn, on the far side from where Jim was occupied, when Miss Herrick came down with her brother. Jim stared as if his eyes deceived him. An English riding habit was known to him only from pictures. She looked queenly. Jim did not look at her face. Besides, he wanted most to see the effect upon Hank Hays. That worthy's hawklike head was erect, but Jim could not see the tell-tale eyes. Hays stood transfixed.

Herrick and his sister walked toward Jim's side of the barn.

"Good morning," she said. "Bernie told me how you shot bob—no, jack rabbits—from the saddle. I want to see you do that. And I want to learn how. Will you show me?"

"I'd be pleased, Miss Herrick."

"Tomorrow, then, you will ride with me?"

"I'm at your service."

TOM REESE THANKS VOTERS OF DISTRICT

I am grateful to the citizens of this District for their interest and support of my candidacy for District Attorney, as shown at the election last Saturday. I take this method of thanking each and every one of you and at the same time solicit your continued support at the second primary on August 25th.

Sincerely yours,
Tom Reese.

CENTENIAL—100TH

The word Centennial means the 100th anniversary of some event. One hundred years ago, in 1836, Texas won its independence on the bloody field of San Jacinto. The opportunity to pay homage to the leaders of that era comes but once in a hundred years. Texas can't wait another hundred years for this observance. Texans by a large majority have amended their constitution so that this Centennial may be held. Tell your neighbor to Think-Talk-Write Texas Centennial in 1936.

FRED MAYBERRY Thanks Voters

I appreciate the vote cast for me last Saturday which made it possible for me to lead the ticket by 143 votes. I desire to thank each one of you for your support and again solicit your vote in the August Primary.

If you again elect me your constable, I will to the best of my ability try to make you an efficient and faithful officer.

Yours respectfully,

Fred Mayberry

To Coryell County People

Through the columns of the News, I wish to thank my friends for the many courtesies extended me and my opponents, in the campaign, which has just closed. I would ask that those same considerations be continued to those of us who have been fortunate enough to get in the run off.

I wish to ask for the support and influence of the voters who believe that I will serve them well and faithfully, as County Superintendent, in the coming term of office.

Sincerely,

J. M. WITCHER

ROBBERS ROOST—

"Wall, you'll oblige me by riding with my sister when it suits her," said Herrick.

"Yes, sir," returned Jim, gazing across at the statue-like Hays.

The couple moved off toward the open yard, where mounted cowboys were leading out saddle horses.

"I seen her, Jim," Hays said, as if the event were epic. "She walked right by me."

"What if she did, Hank?"

"Nothin'. What was she sayin' to you?"

"It seems Herrick told her about my shooting jacks from my horse, and she wants to see it done."

"You're goin' ridin' with her? . . . The luck of some men!"

"Hank, shall I tell Herrick you'll go in my stead?"

"Nix, much as I'd like to. I can't hit jumpin' rabbits."

Hays hung around the barn, mostly idle, watching the valley, until the Herricks returned. The cowboys brought the horses down. Whereupon Hays abruptly left. And he did not come back. From that hour he became an elusive man.

That day ended Jim Wall's carpentry. On the next he was summoned early after breakfast to ride with the Herricks.

Under the stimulation of this girl's inspiring presence Jim gave an exhibition of swift and accurate shooting that surpassed any he had ever accomplished.

"Marvelous!" she exclaimed.

"Helen, he's a bally good shot," declared Herrick.

That night Hank Hays evinced slight but unmistakable symptoms of jealousy, occasioned, perhaps, by Jim's report of killing thirteen out of fifteen bounding Jack rabbits. Happy Jack, wide-eyed and loud-voiced, acclaimed Jim's feat as one in a thousand.

"Air you thet good frontin' a man who you know is swift?" drawled the robber chief.

Jim stared. "Hank, I'm not so good then," he replied slowly.

"Wal, somebody'll try you out one of these days," added Hays.

"I daresay," he rejoined, coolly, and sought his seclusion. He refused to let that linger in his mind. Something else haunted him. His slumber was troubled.

CHAPTER VI

NEXT day Herrick did not accompany his sister on the daily ride, a circumstance which, if anything, gave freer rein to her spirit. Jim had concern for her safety. He could not judge well of her horsemanship, because of the side-saddle she rode. Bluntly he disapproved of the atrocious thing and said it was worse than the "pancake" her brother rode. But she rode after the hounds just the same, and held her own until she was thrown.

If she had fallen upon rocks or even hard ground she would have been seriously injured, if not killed outright. But when the horse stumbled she hurtled over his head and hit in the sand. Jim was off almost the instant she struck.

"I'm all—right," spoke up Miss Herrick, weakly. "I came—a cropper—didn't I?"

She sat, evidently not hurt, though she clung to Jim's arm. With his scarf he wiped the sand from her face, aware that his hand was not steady. Her hair had come partly loose to fall in a golden mass on her shoulder. She rearranged it and put on her hat, deftly despite gloved fingers.

"Help me up, please," she said.

Jim placed a strong arm under hers and lifted her to her feet. Then something cold and tight within let go, and his reaction was to take refuge in anger: "Miss Herrick, I told you that saddle was no good. It's a wonder you were not killed."

"I believe I did strike pretty hard," she admitted, ruefully.

"You want a cow-saddle with a double cinch, and overalls," concluded Jim.

"Overalls!" she exclaimed, and she blushed rosy red. "You mean like these blue trousers Barnes has on?"

"Yes. Then you can ride. This is the West, Miss Herrick. You like to run a horse. It's dangerous. I shall have to speak to your brother."

"Don't. I've never ridden astride, but I'll do it, since you are so very fearful about it."

That experience left Jim shaky, probably a good deal shakier than it had left Miss Herrick. But it was not fear for her. Jim reveled in the torturing sensation engendered by contact with this beautiful girl. He shook like a leaf at the staggering realization that when she lay on the ground with her arms spread wide, her hair gold against the sand, he longed to snatch her to his breast. A natural impulse, under the circumstances, but for him—idiotic!

Miss Herrick took to the Western saddle like a duck to water. She could ride. Moreover, that spirit of which she had hinted certainly overtook her. More than once she ran off alone, riding like the wind; and upon one of these occasions it took the cowboys till dark to find her. That with Hank Hays and Heeseman there to see her gallop away unescorted! Herrick did not seem to mind.

As far as Jim Wall was concerned, however, these rides with her centered him upon the love which had come to consume him; and the several she took alone were more torturing because they aroused fear of Hank Hays. It could not be ascertained whether or not Hays followed her, but when the day came that Jim discovered Hays had been riding the trails frequented by Miss Herrick, it seemed time to act.

This placed Jim in a worse quandary. To act, for a man of his training at such a time and place, was to do only one thing. But how could he kill his leader upon mere suspicion of sinister intent to kidnap the girl? It was a predicament for a man who had always played fair, alike to honest friend and crooked ally.

Jim paced under the dark sheltering trees, in the dead of night, when he should have been sleeping. Days had passed without his once seeking to avoid disaster; and he had not sought it because he knew it was no use. To wish to be with his blond girl seemed irresistible. More than once he had caught himself in the spell of a daring impulse—to tell Miss Herrick that he loved her. The idea was sheer madness. Yet the thought persisted, and when he tried to shake it the result was it grew stronger in a haunting maddening way.

To the Voters of Coryell County

I wish to thank my friends who supported me in last Saturday's election. I especially thank those who spoke words of encouragement and assisted me in my campaign. I also appreciate the many kindnesses shown me by all those with whom I came in contact.

I compliment the friendliness shown me by my opponents, and the clean race they conducted. I wish them every success in the future.

Although I was defeated for the office which I sought, I feel no ill will toward any one; and if at any time I can be of service to you, I shall gladly do so.

Sincerely your friend,

W. A. FREEMAN

C. P. Mounce Thanks People of Coryell County

I want to thank the people of Coryell County for the vote they gave me for the office of County Clerk in the election Saturday. I wish it were that I could thank you individually and personally instead of by means of mere message in the News columns.

I am always glad to help, aid and assist you in searching out the records in the office for information that you desire and I am pleased to have you visit the office.

I would fall far short of an appreciative attitude of the favors you have shown me, should I fail to serve you cheerfully and as promptly, adequately and efficiently as I can.

I hope that my services meet with your approval and to this end I will lend my efforts.

Gratefully yours,

C. P. MOUNCE

A Word of Thanks from George R. Hodges

It is my desire to see each voter in Precinct One personally between now and next election time, but if I fail to see you I want you to know that I will greatly appreciate your support or anything you may do or say in my behalf.

If you see fit to elect me I shall strive to fill the office as it should be filled and shall be at your service at any time.

Sincerely yours,

GEORGE R. HODGES

Coryell Contracts on Corn-Hog Program Are Approved at Wash'gton

College Station.—County by county figures released this week for the first time by the Corn-Hog Review Board indicate that 32,104 Texas farmers in 228 counties have contracted to participate in the corn-hog reduction program. As cash return for their cooperation $4,805,500 will be coming to these farmers.

The work of the Corn-Hog Review Board was inaugurated by a statewide trip of the chairman, E. N. Holmgreen, accompanied by F. E. Finley, statistician from the crop estimate division of the Federal Bureau of Agricultural Economics, meeting county committees and county Extension agents to discuss and explain the contract. After this Mr. Finley remained at College Station and handled the statistical end of the Board's work throughout the entire time.

That the work of the county committees has been well done is shown by the fact that when the contracts of the first three Texas counties, Delta, Coryell and Gillespie, reached Washington they were immediately approved and passed for payment.

MARVIN FLETCHER THANKS THE VOTERS OF CORYELL COUNTY

It is with the deepest gratitude and sincerest appreciation that I acknowledge the honor bestowed upon me on July 28, by the citizens of Coryell County, who supported me in my race for County Clerk.

It was not as difficult for me to find words with which to solicit your support as it is to try to find words to express my appreciation to you for the splendid vote you gave me in my race for County Clerk. I realize that it was the unselfish work and able assistance of my loyal friends which made it possible for me to receive such a splendid vote.

I wish to assure the splendid gentleman who opposed me, as well as his supporters, that I have nothing but the kindest feeling toward them.

Gratefully yours,
MARVIN E. FLETCHER

TO THE VOTERS OF PRECINCT ONE, Coryell County, Texas

I wish to thank everyone for the liberal vote cast in my behalf in last Saturday's primary. I appreciate very much the vote and influence of those who supported me.

To those who did not support me, I would say that I hold no ill will whatever. I solicit your vote in the run-off.

It has been impossible for me to see all of the voters because of the fact that I must look after the duties of my office. I feel that I can do the people of the precinct a better service in performing my duty than I could by electioneering for a new term. I consider my first obligation is in the performing of the duties of my office.

Again, may I express my appreciation for your vote of July 28 and ask for your support in the Run-off on August 25th.

Respectfully yours,
A. SHIRLEY
