Harmony Reigns Among Convention Delegates At County Demo. Meet

DELEGATES UNINSTRUCTED

Delegates from the Coryell county precinct conventions, duly elected at a previous date gathered at the courthouse here last Saturday afternoon to participate in the County Democratic Convention.

The meeting was called to order by Pat Holt, county chairman. Election of permanent officers preceded in the order of the day. Hon. Tom R. Mears, local attorney, was elected permanent convention chairman and Pleas M. Post, district clerk, secretary.

It had been mutually agreed by the two Gatesville Wards to elect delegates that would be in harmony with the democratic nominee. When the question of delegates to the state convention arose two groups of delegates were elected, one representing Allred and the other representing the Hunter camp. It was understood that the group whose candidate was nominated would represent the county at the state meeting. This action was followed in order to preserve harmony when the Democratic state convention meets at Galveston this year.

No resolutions were passed and the delegates will go to Galveston uninstructed.

DEATH CLAIMS LIFE OF FORMER CITIZEN

Y. S. Jenkins, age 86, who for many years was a resident of this city died at his home in Pasadena, California last Friday morning from a sudden attack of heart failure.

Mr. Jenkins was born in Alabama but came to Texas as a youth and settled in Gatesville. He grew with this section of the country and retired to Pasadena something like 25 years ago. He was superintendent of the Union Sunday school here in 1871 and was first superintendent of the local Baptist Sunday School and served in that place from 1833 until 1904. He was widely noted for his philanthropy, having been a heavy donor to the local Baptist church and to State Baptist Institutions.

Burial was in Pasadena on Monday afternoon.

He is survived by his widow, one sister, Miss Georgia Jenkins, who resides somewhere in Italy and a sister-in-law, Mrs. A. H. Gregory of this city, besides a host of other relatives and friends who deeply mourn his departure.

LITTLE THEATER TO HOLD SPECIAL MEET

Members of the Little Theater and others interested in the local organization will be pleased to learn that plans are now under way to cooperate with school officials in participating in the new gym-auditorium now under construction.

The director and business manager of the Little Theater have been extended the opportunity of outfitting the auditorium stage and in return will be allowed the use of the building for their presentations during the show season.

A meeting of Little Theater members and others will be called at an early date to outline plans for a complete reorganization to effect the work of decorating the stage. The date of this meeting will be announced in the near future.

BAND CONCERT WILL BE STAGED TONIGHT

According to D. W. Diserens, director of the Gatesville band, a concert will be rendered on the beautiful lawn at the local High School this evening at 8:15 o'clock.

Mr. Diserens has urged that a full representation of the band be present to participate in the vesper recital.

Indications are that a good crowd of people will be present for the concert.

LOCAL BUSINESS MEN SUPPORTING FLENTGE

A group of local business and professional men met in the county courtroom Friday afternoon and pledged their support to Harry Flentge, run-off candidate for the office of district attorney.

Upon the motion of C. E. Alvis, Pat Holt, local newspaper man, was named chairman of the boster organization.

Mr. Flentge attended the meeting and expressed his appreciation to the citizens of Coryell for their support in the first primary.

Plans were outlined for sponsoring the candidacy of Mr. Flentge during the remainder of the campaign. A petition bearing the names of local business men is being circulated as a public endorsement of the Coryell county candidate.

Kirkpatrick Defeats David Franks to Cop City Tennis Crown

WINS IN STRAIGHT SETS

Claim to the title of city tennis champion fell the lot of young Lloyd Neil Kirkpatrick Saturday afternoon when he defeated David Franks in straight sets of 6-1, 6-0, 6-0, in the finals of the municipal tournament.

Those who witnessed this match among other matches the course of the tourney conceded that Franks was badly off form and should have played his young adversary a better game. The fact was that Franks' physical condition was not up to par and he was forced to take time out several times during the match. Franks suffered an attack of intestinal flu more than a week ago and lacked a lot of regaining his strength before the final match. Young Kirkpatrick had also been the victim of a physical handicap when he injured a finger during a softball game several nights ago, however, this did not seem to bother the young high school champion's game.

Kirkpatrick took the lead by winning the first game. Franks retaliated by taking the second, then Kirkpatrick the third. It appeared to be the beginning of a nip-and-tuck match but Franks weakened and Kirkpatrick took the remaining four games and the next two sets.

MRS. S. A. RAINS HAS COTTON OPEN

Mrs. S. A. Rains would cash in on her cotton crop this year if she just had enough acreage.

Her Cotton patch bloomed earlier than possibly any other cotton in this section, and now she has quite a lot of the fleecy staple open and ready to pick.

Mrs. Rains planted the cotton primarily for the purpose of shading her melons, but will pick the cotton for use in padding quilts.—Hamilton Herald-Record.

CHAMPION FLY CASTER COMING TO HAMILTON

R. B. Miller received word Wednesday that Jack Lamb, champion fly caster, would be in Hamilton some time next month and while here will demonstrate his ability in fly casting. This news will be of especial interest to fishermen in Hamilton. Mr. Miller stated that he hoped to get him to arrange the dates so that he could be here during the fair the early part of October.—Hamilton Co. News.

sporting bright crimson tail feathers.

Crowding into the district courtroom, an estimated crowd of more than 500 Coryell county farmers, gathered in mass to hear the details of the Bankhead Act and other emergency agricultural programs explained by county agent D. W. Sherrill and others.

"This meeting has been called to tell you what you should do and what you should not do, but to correct many wrong impressions and give you a better picture of the agricultural situation as it is today," stated Mr. Sherrill in his opening remarks.

C. E. Alvis, county chairman of the Emergency Crop Reduction Loan, addressed the farmers concerning the provisions of the crop loan measure, emphasizing the fact that it was his hope that every eligible farmer in Coryell county participate in the loan.

Mr. Alvis gave detailed information as to the eligibility of the farmers, stating that the loan of the federal government will be made on the number of head of stock and poultry which each farmer had by April 1, 1934. The chairman also pointed out that in instances where there are liens held by the bank, the bank must sign a non-disturbance agreement that the bank will not take the mortgaged stock before January 1, 1936. Mr. Alvis stated further, in answer to an inquiry which came from the audience, that each of these government loans would bear 5½ per cent maturing November 1, 1935.

Following Mr. Alvis, the county agent discussed briefly the status of the cattle buying program in this county, stating that to date 1,500 cattle had been appraised and accepted, most of which had been shipped, with 600 more condemned by the veterinarian. Mr. Sherrill outlined the many benefits of the program and besought the cooperation of the stock owners in order to expedite the work in this section. Following these remarks Mr. Sherrill hurried over the latest developments of the Corn-Hog, Wheat Adjustment and Acreage Measurements.

Bankhead Bill Is Next

Through their eagerness to learn more definite information on the Bankhead Law, several farmers present called out questions to the county agent pertaining to this program in the early part of the meeting and each time they were answered when Mr. Sherrill stated that he would "take up the Bankhead when we get to it."

Mr. Sherrill reminded the farmers that Saturday midnight, August 11, is the deadline date for making applications for tax-exempt certificates, adding that these may be obtained from the community committeemen who will be located at their respective territorial headquarters from Tuesday (today) until Saturday. "It is the job of the farmer to look up these committeemen and not wait to be called on," he said. Those present were advised that if they expect to see any of their cotton tax-exempt they must make application before the deadline.

"Where there is a managing share tenant and third and fourth tenant who operates the entire farm and has signed the contract with the landlord, either tenant in that case or the landlord may make the application. Where a voluntary reduction contract has been signed the application for allotment will cover the identical acreage and farm unit.

"Non-signers are urged to have past five-year record of acreage, bales, etc., ready for inspection by the committeemen in making application.

"After today you are reminded that no more applications will be taken at the county seat but at the respective community headquarters instead.

"Landowners, in case of one or more share tenants, themselves must make application and must list tenants and their proportionate acreage in cotton and the percentage each should have of tax-exempt certificates. This list and data must be posted on the farm accessible to the tenants on that farm. This is required before certificates will be issued."

Practically no questions were asked after the county agent had outlined the Bankhead details, which suggested that those present must have understood its provisions.

NOTICE: Any erroneous reflection upon the character or standing of any person or firm appearing in its columns will be gladly and promptly corrected upon calling the attention of the management to the article in question.

This newspaper has had so much to say in the past regarding city halls, auditoriums and gymnasiums that it is not surprising to learn that some folk are accusing the News of over-emphasizing the subject. Never-the less we can't conscientiously pass up the matter without giving credit where credit is due. We have never been informed but believe that Superintendent Frank L. Williams is due most of the laurels for instigating the gymnasium idea which is soon to be a reality. We have had so many disappointments within the last year relative to building projects that we cannot help assuming a rather pessimistic attitude, but the fact that the ground is already broken makes prospects look much brighter than they ever have, so far as we are concerned.

The unofficial returns of the democratic primary election in Coryell County were tabulated in their entirety Monday when the last voting box was recorded, that one being Eagle Springs. On Tuesday morning the News went into the homes of its readers carrying in its columns this complete information on the election. We printed some fifty extra copies and by Wednesday evening they were all gone. Many people who do not subscribe to the News came in and requested these copies. The point is that we feel that our efforts in getting the election figures to our readers at such an early date were well spent.

Rev. C. A. Morton's idea about securing culled cattle from the federal buying program in this vicinity is not at all a bad one. The local Baptist minister would have these underweight cattle, which are wholly fit for human consumption, shipped to the orphanage, after they are refused by the government inspector. We do not know what sort of plan can be worked out along this line and if such a plan in is conflict with the government program and nothing can be done about it, even then it isn't a bad idea. The fact that Reverend Morton has made his appeal to the Baptists of this county for their culled calves should not be construed as being a selfish enterprise. It is anything but that. The idea is to provide food for those in need—a purely humanitarian proposal.

The fact that Coryell county has never been very strong on loyalty to native sons is recognized even among the citizens of this county. An exception to this fact occurred Friday however when a group of local business and professional men met at the courthouse late in the afternoon and publicly endorsed the candidacy of Harry Flentge for the office of District Attorney. Whether the candidate realizes it or not he should consider this very complimentary. And whether the citizens realize it or not, such a move should help to elect Flentge in the run-off primary.

Many of us often wonder just when a state-wide election is over. The press continues to publish election returns for what seems to be months after the election proper is over. For the sake of information, we might advise that the final (yet unofficial) tabulations show that out of 254 counties returns have been received from 252, totalling 901,354 votes out of an estimated 1,000,000. So after all, there's not much telling when the first primary will be over—we hope before the run-off begins.

Texas Centennial Will Mark 100th Anniversary of Texas

By BRACK CURRY

The Texas Centennial — the One Hundredth Anniversary of the Independence of Texas—will be observed at one of the state's leading cities in 1936. The object of the celebration will be to show the nation and the world the historical, cultural, artistic, and religious life of Texas during the last stirring century.

The city offering the best site and greatest financial inducement will receive the central exhibition of the centennial. All Texas cities with historical significance may have small regional celebrations which will precede and accompany the exposition proper.

Dallas, Houston, San Antonio, Fort Worth and other Texas cities are squarely in the fight to secure the central exhibition.

The movement for a Texas centennial celebration had its origin as far back as 1924, when a large assembly of citizens met in the Senate Chamber at Austin in response to a proclamation by Governor Pat Neff. The assembly adopted plans for a State-wide organization of one hundred, which would compose a Governing Board, whose duty it was to conduct an educational campaign in every part of the State to inform the people as to the proposed undertaking.

Jesse H. Jones of Houston was named permanent director general of the centennial in 1926 and Lowry Martin of Corsicana permanent secretary of the governing board.

When the Legislature convened in January, 1931, a committee formulated a constitutional amendment, which was submitted to a vote of the people at the general election in 1932 and adopted by a majority of more than 70,000, to permit the Legislature to give State support to the centennial.

The committee has been busily engaged in keeping the centennial movement proximately before the public through the press, which has expressed its whole-hearted approval and pledged its cooperation, the schools, patriotic and civic clubs, and their organization, in stimulating public interest in the early history of Texas and the 1936 centennial.

The Federal Congress, through the naming of a joint Senate and House committee, of which Senator Tom Connally is chairman, has officially recognized the Centennial. The Federal government will appropriate $5,000,000, the State government $5,000,000, and the city at which the celebration will be held, a considerable sum. The city securing this honor will be the most widely publicized city in the United States for the next three years.

With the State divided into twenty-five districts, the Highway Commission and the Park Board are making rapid progress in their plans for beautifying all Texas before the great Centennial.

The departments have requested the co-operation of all the citizenry in beautifying historical spots, making cities and towns attractive and doing all the things which these boards have not authority to do.

The romantic and inspiring history of the State is to be considered. The history of the State from 1836 forward is so closely interwoven with that of the Nation that there can be no division of the two interests. Citizens from every state in the Union, Canada, Mexico, and foreign countries are interested in the history of the Lone Star State and may be counted on to attend the centennial. Citizens of the United States, former high officials, played an important part in the making of Texas, and Texas played an important part in the making of the Union. When Texas became an independent Republic, later to be annexed to the American Union, the territorial limits of the United States were extended for more than a thousand miles west from the Sabine River. The annexation of Texas made possible the rapid march of the flag to the Pacific.

Citizens of the United States have not forgotten that the leader of our revolutionary forces and our first constitutional president, Sam Houston, was the former Governor of an American State and a close friend of an American President, Andrew Jackson.

The state is doing its part in appropriating several millions of dollars for the centennial and by connecting all important highways in order to offer the attractive possibility of paved highways to out-of-state visitors. So folks, let's all take the pledge "I will think-talk-write. Texas Centennial in 1936!" and do our part to help push this thing along! Remember, "This is to be my celebration. In its achievement I may give free expression to my patriotic love for Texas' heroic past; my confidence in its glories that are to be—"

SOFTBALL SYMPTOMS

By TEDDY

A good crowd witnessed Arnold's bunch walk-away with the Firemen Friday night. In the first inning Arnold's crew tallied 5 times. The Firemen were forced to take their fifth defeat of this division by a score of 11 to 6.

The Baptists had no trouble licking the Bachelors Friday night 13 to 5. Blanton has a good combination man in Wilson. He can play most any position on the field and is not a bad hurler. These Baptists have much confidence and are going to win this division, if something isn't done.

—MY—DOPE—

Wednesday—The Methodists will defeat the Bachelors. This game will decide which of these teams will stay in the cellar. Both are just about up to par when it comes to thinking of softball ability.

Gartman will defeat the Fire Boys, but they have no set-up on their hands.

Magic Flower

Miss Ruth Mayland of Chicago holds the more or less sacred night blooming cereus in her hands and explains the charm of this flower that blooms but for one hour, one night, each year. The roots of the cereus sometimes weigh as much as 25 pounds and are supposed by some native Mexicans to be a panacea for all pulmonary ailments when made into medicine. Its blooming is the occasion of a "fiesta," and one was held in the streets of the Mexican Village at the new World's Fair.

Judge Ben C. Dawkin in federal court today.

The bullet-riddled car in which Barrow and his woman companion were riding when shot down by officers near Gibsland has been the object of litigation for several weeks.

The car was in possession of Sheriff Henderson Jordon of Bienville Parish until Warren brought court proceedings to obtain possession of it. The car has been in the possession of the United States marshal for some time.

It is reported that Warren plans to place the car on exhibition. It was stolen at Topeka.

MONSTER BROKE FISH NET

MURPHYSBORO, Ill.—There's something in Carbon lake near here too big for fishermen to handle. The monster breaks through their nets without trouble. Whether it is an 80-pound buffalo, or a 125-pound "shovel-bill," or a monster alligator gar, or a 100-pound snapping turtle they are unable to tell.

MOSQUITOES NEED RELIEF FROM DROUGHT

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 5.—If misery loves company, think then of the mosquito, ye drought sufferers, and rejoice.

Modern Ruth

Mrs. Leola Knox, Columbia, Tenn., a modern Ruth, examines an old plow used in biblical days, and contrasts it with the ultra modern implement on exhibition at the Sears, Roebuck display at the new World's Fair in Chicago. She enjoyed it so much, learned so much, and wrote so much about it that she was made Home Editor of a farm publication in Nashville.

Splendid Formal Gardens Charm Fair Visitors

The dignity of perfect symmetry in landscaping is strikingly apparent in the formal gardens that are maintained as a part of the beautiful home which Good Housekeeping magazine has erected on the grounds at the new World's Fair in Chicago. The garden, through its simplicity and its perfectly balanced color scheme of green and white, strikes a note of tranquility, fittingly symbolized by the graceful statue at the north end which, white and leafless, might well have been called "Tranquility." In planting the verdure, a deliberate effort has been made, and achieved, to use poplars and elms—seconded by lush evergreen growth—so that a sense of seclusion surrounds those who stroll or lounge therein. The style is in the classic modern, and the garden is 175 feet long and 112 feet wide.

ELEPHANT KILLS MAN WHO PUT LIME IN HIS WATER

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 4.—Months ago Pedro Garcia, a peon circus worker, put some lime in the water of a huge circus elephant as a joke.

THE STORY

CHAPTER IV.—Heeseeman tells Wall that Hays was once his (Heeseeman's) partner and double-crossed him. Herrick delegates Jim to go to Grand Junction to meet Miss Herrick. Jim gets Barnes, a young cowboy with him, to tell her that he (Jim) is a desperado of the worst type. Barnes does so, and later Jim tells her he is what is known as a "bad man," but the girl treats the information lightly.

CHAPTER V.—On his arrival at the ranch, with Helen, Jim is confronted by Hays, who betrays unusual interest in the coming of Miss Herrick. Jim tells Hays that Miss Herrick brought a Wells Fargo package, probably of money. Jim goes riding with the Herricks and greatly impresses Helen with his revolver shooting.

At breakfast next morning Hays raved about the fact that Smoky had not been there for over two weeks. "Things air comin' to a head," he concluded, gloomily.

"Reckon they ought to have made two drives by now," rejoined Happy Jack. "I rid down the valley yesterday eight or ten miles. Cattle thinned out, boss. Any cowboy with eyes in the back of his head would be on to us by now."

"Shore. Haven't I kept them workin' up here. But I've no control over this hossback ridin' after hounds. Pretty soon Herrick will be chasin' down Limestone way. Then the fire'll be out."

"Hank, he wouldn't know the difference," interposed Jim.

"Aw, I don't care," replied Hays, harshly, and that finally intimidated much. "Wait till Smoky's outfit shows up!"

Every morning when Jim rode down to the corrals he fell back under the spell of something sweeter than wine. The sunny hours with the sage flat ahead, the fragrant pines, the baying hounds, and always out in front this bright-haired girl, were vastly different from the dark hours when the day was done. In moments of humility, engendered by the higher emotions this girl aroused, Jim clasped to his breast the fact that he was protecting her from worse men.

Barnes and another of the cowboys had taken the horses for the Herricks up to the house. To Jim's honest dismay he espied Helen riding ahead, with the cowboys behind leading her brother's mount. Herrick was not coming.

Miss Herrick looked far less proud and unattainable in the boy's riding garb she had adopted. Moreover, it had transformed her, yet her femininity appeared more provokingly manifest than ever.

Barnes turned Herrick's horse over to a stable boy, and with his companion fell in behind Miss Herrick, who rode out upon the valley. Jim rejoined them, and they trotted their horses together.

"Why didn't Herrick come?" asked Jim.

"He was rowin' with Heeseeman," replied Barnes, soberly.

"You don't say! What about?"

"Reckon I don't know. They shet up as I come along," returned the cowboy. "But I seen enough to calculate somethin's wrong. They was on the porch. Herrick looked sort of peevish. He didn't want his sister to go huntin' today, I heard that. An' she said right pert she was goin'."

"How did Heeseeman look?" went on Jim, ponderingly.

"Dead serious, like he was tryin' to persuade the boss to somethin'."

Jim lapsed into silence. What turn would affairs take next? It was getting warm around Star ranch.

Three or four miles out the hounds jumped a coyote from a clump of sagebrush.

The cowboys took the lead, then came Miss Herrick, while Jim brought up the rear. It was a long, gradual ascent up to an open ridge.

Here the hounds jumped a herd of deer. Despite the yelling of the cowboys they dashed up the ridge with a chorus of wild yelps and barks. They all passed out of hearing.

Jim caught up with Miss Herrick, who waited in an open spot among the pines. Flushed and disheveled, with her sombrero on the pommel, panting from the arduous ride, she made a distracting picture.

"Hunt's off for us, Miss Herrick," said Jim.

"Too bad! But wasn't—it fun—while it lasted?" she replied gayly. "Let us rest the horse. I'm out of breath myself."

Jim dismounted to tighten his saddle cinches.

"Wall, take a look at my cinches," she said.

"May I ask you not to call me Wall? I must remind you I'm no butler."

"Pray pardon me," she rejoined, in surprise. "I presume I should address you as Mr. Wall?"

"Yes, if you're too stuck up to call me Jim," he said.

She lifted her chin and deigned no reply. And that infuriated him.

"While I'm at it I'll tell you this, too," he went on doggedly. "You must not ride around alone again. I've had no chance to speak with you. But I told your brother. He laughed in my face. He is a fool."

"Mr. Wall, I will not listen to such talk," she spoke up, spiritedly.

"Oh, yes, you will," he flashed, striding over to her horse. "You're not in an English drawing room now, confronted by a disrespectful butler. You're in Utah, girl. And I am Jim Wall."

"That last is obvious, to my regret," she returned coldly. "Will you please be so kind as to tighten my cinches? It will be the last service I shall require of you."

"Thank the Lord!" ejaculated Jim, in grim heartiness. "All the same I'll tell you. If you were an American tenderfoot, it wouldn't be hard to make you understand. If you were western, you would not need to be told. But as an English lady of quality, who thinks her class will protect her anywhere you need to be jarred. . . . It's wrong for you to ride around alone on this range like any wild tomboy."

"Why?"

"Some of these men might kidnap you for ransom."

"Nonsense," she retorted, contemptuously.

"What do you say, Miss Herrick, when I tell you that Hank Hays has been watching you from the ridges, riding the lonely trails, biding his chance to waylay you?"

She paled at that.

"I don't believe it," she said, presently.

"And you'll go on riding alone when it suits your royal fancy?" he queried witheringly.

"That is no longer any concern of yours," she replied, at last stung.

"But I certainly shall ride when and how I please."

"Then you're as big a fool as your brother," declared Jim hotly. "Here I am, the only man in this Star outfit with honesty enough to tell you the truth. And I get insulted and fired for my pains."

She sat her horse mute. Jim laid a strong hand on her pommel and shook it.

"Your saddle's loose. Will you oblige me by getting off?"

"I can ride it back," she replied, icily.

"But your blanket will slip out. The saddle might turn with you."

She removed her foot from the stirrup. "Tighten the cinches then—and hurry."

Jim complied expeditiously enough, but in doing so he accidentally touched her. Something like fire shot through him at the contact. Under its stimulus he looked up to say a few more words to her, words to mitigate his offense and protest his sincerity. But they were never uttered. She had bent over to fasten a lace of her boot, and when

"But I Certainly Shall Ride When and How I Please."

Jim raised his head it was to find his face scarcely a foot from her red lips. Without a thought, in a flash, he kissed them, and then drew back, stricken.

"How dare you!" she cried, in incredulous amazement and anger.

"It just happened. I—I don't know—"

She swung her leather quirt and struck him across the mouth. The blood spurted. The leap of Jim's fury was as swift. He half intercepted a second blow, which stung his neck, and snatching the quirt from her hand he flung it away.

Then his iron clutch fastened in her blouse. One lunge dragged her out of the saddle. He wrapped his other arm around her and bent her back so quickly that when she began a furious struggle it was too late.

His mouth hard pressed on hers stilled any but smothered cries. There was a moment's wrestling. She was no weakling, but she was in the arms of a maddened giant. Repeatedly he kissed her lips, long, hard, passionate kisses.

Suddenly she collapsed heavily in his arms. The shock of that—its meaning—pierced Wall with something infinitely more imperious and staggering than bitter wrath. He let go of her. There was blood on her lips and cheeks; otherwise her face was like alabaster.

"I think I must have been in love with you—and wanted to protect you—from men worse than myself," he went on, huskily. "I hope this will be a lesson to you. . . . Your brother was crazy to come here—crazier to let you come. Go home! Go before it's too late. Make him go. He will be ruined shortly."

She wiped the blood from her cheeks, and then shudderingly from her lips—

"You—did that—to frighten me?" she presently whispered, in horror, yet as if fascinated by something looming.

"Get on your horse and ride ahead of me," he ordered, curtly. "Now, Miss Helen Herrick, one last word: Don't tell your brother what I did to you till after I'm gone. . . . If you do I'll kill him!"

She left a glove lying on the ground. Jim made no effort to recover it. His horse had grazed a few paces away, and when he had reached him and mounted Miss Herrick was in her saddle. Jim let her get a few rods in advance before he followed.

The excess of his emotion wore off, leaving him composed, and sternly glad the issue had developed as it had. The situation had become intolerable for him. It mocked him that he had actually desired to appear well in the eyes of this girl. How ridiculous that one of a robber gang should be vain! But he was not conscious that being a thief made any difference in a man's feeling about women. He knew that he could not command respect or love; but that in no wise inhibited his own feelings. Strange, he had indeed fallen in love with Helen Herrick.

She rode on slowly down the ridge without looking to right or left. Her gaze appeared to be lowered.

The ranch-house came in sight. Miss Herrick saw it and halted a moment, to let Jim catch up with her.

"Can you be gentleman enough to tell me the truth?" she asked.

"I have not lied to you," replied Jim.

"That—that first time you kissed me—was it honestly unpremeditated?"

"Miss Herrick, I don't know what to swear by. But, yes, I have. My mother! I swear by memory of her that I never dreamed of insulting you—I looked up. There your face was close. Your lips red! And I kissed them."

They went on for perhaps ten paces, as far as the road, before she spoke again. "I believe you," she said, without a tremor of the rich, low voice, though it was evident her emotion was deeply stirred. "Your action was inexcusable, unforgivable. But I should not have struck you with the whip. . . . That, and your passion to frighten me, perhaps justified your brutality. . . . I shall not tell. . . . Don't leave Star ranch."

400-MILE BICYCLE TRIP NO FEAT, SAYS LAD

Using a bicycle as a mode of transportation for a 400-mile trip would be an unusual experience and a difficult task for any traveler, it would seem, but to Guy Sherrill, Jr., 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Sherrill of Houston, it was "nothing to speak of." In fact, he refuses to talk about it, except to wave the subject aside as being of no importance whatever, and the long ride here on his bicycle no feat at all.

Sherrill made the trip from Houston to Stephenville in 2½ days, and after visiting with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Sherrill, rode his bicycle on to Winters where he spent a week with his mother's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Haverhill.

He returned to Stephenville

Friday and expects to visit here several days longer with his relatives before starting back to Houston on his bike.

Sherrill's parents are both well known in Stephenville, his father having been reared here, later going to Houston where he has employment in the post-office. His mother, the former Lois Havenhill of Winters, attended John Tarleton College from which she was graduated a short time before her marriage. She also taught with Charles W. Froh in the conservatory of music at Tarleton.—Stephenville Empire Tribune.

Hoop-Rolling Revived at Fair as Sport

Every Thursday, which is Children's Day at the new World's Fair in Chicago, when a nickel is the price of admission to the gates and most everything else for children, a hoop-rolling contest is engaged in on the green in the Colonial Village. A prize goes to the winner and a good time is had by all, including the on-lookers. The old-fashioned sport has aroused much interest on the part of boys and girls, and the weekly entry list is growing bigger for each repetition of the event. The above contestants are Rob Wipperman, James Waring, Charles Latourette, Robert Leutchmann, Jimmy Evans, and Glyn DeWitt, none more than 12 years old.

Fair Queens Broadcast Beauty

West, carrying invitations to the Fair from President Rufus C. Dawes to the mayors and governors of the towns and states which they visit. Later, they may extend their goodwill tour to more distant points.

Earl Huddleston Thanks People for Their Support

According to the election returns the people of Coryell and Hamilton Counties have by a large majority elected me as their Representative for a second term.

I want to take this method of thanking each person personally in the two counties who assisted me in my campaign. I realize that it was because of the loyalty of my friends that enabled me to receive the large vote which was voted for me.

To those who saw fit to cast their vote against me I have but the kindest feeling.

I want to assure each person in my District that it shall be my purpose to serve all to the best of my ability. I invite everyone to confer with me any time on any subject of legislation in which you are interested or any matter in which I can be of service to you.

Sincerely,

DOZEN HEAR ADMONITIONS OF STREET SPEAKER

Although he had "something greater than the gift that is in the hand of the people," a street speaker Saturday afternoon spoke to possibly a dozen persons, while large crowds swayed to, fro and otherwise on the streets, the admonitions of the preacher hitting few attentive ears.

Now and then a passing person or group paused, caught on that there was no politics; then moved on, wending their way to points where election talk was in progress. A car or two slowed down, and then crawled on through traffic.

But the preacher had his say, despite the fact that his crowd changed personnel about every nine minutes.—Stephenville Empire-Tribune.

JAIL BREAKER FROM MILLS CO. IS RECAPTURED

(Goldthwaite Eagle)

Oran Conway, one of the three men who escaped from the Mills county jail here on the morning of July 4, was captured yesterday in a badly shot-up car in east Texas, according to information reaching Sheriff Bledso. Officers of that county were believed to have taken him in the general round up of suspicious characters around Houston, while searching for the men who broke the death house in Huntsville Sunday. Jorn Dingus, charged with burglary at Mullin, and Gordon Langford, held under sheep theft charges, were the two other men who escaped jail here July 4, and are still at large. Mrs. W. H. Lee, wife of the jailer, was slugged and two teeth broken off when she went to the cell to take medicine to the men.

Conway will not be returned here immediately, but will be held for investigation at Crockett for a time, the sheriff's office was informed.
