

No Relief for Needy Who Refuse to Work Commission Decrees

$2,000,000 MORE RELIEF

Austin, Aug. 20. Checks totaling approximately $1,925,000 representing relief money allotments for the last half of August have been mailed to county administrators throughout Texas.

Administrators in cotton-producing counties were instructed by Assistant Director Charles B. Braun to reduce relief loads insofar as possible by placing able-bodied relief clients in cotton fields.

In this connection, Braun called attention to the resolution passed by the relief commission denying relief to those who refuse to work.

Administrators also were requested to study conditions in the counties preparatory to supplying information on which requests for aid from federal authorities will be based.

Barr Case Continued To January Term on Account of Illness

DEFENSE MOTION GRANTED

Continuation of the case of the State of Texas vs. John Barr until the January term was ordered by the court Monday morning upon the motion of the counsel for the defense, who reported the illness of the defendant to the extent that it was impossible for him to appear for trial.

The eighty special veniremen subpoenaed for the case were dismissed by the court.

John Barr is alleged to have killed John Mayhew on or about January 5, 1933, following an argument over a ditch which was dug on the property of the deceased.

In the January term of court following the incident, the jury failed to reach a verdict. In the next trial Barr was given a fifty-year sentence for murder. The defense filed motion for appeal to the court of criminal appeals and the case was reversed by the court's decree.

Sen. Sanderford Flays Allred in Firey Speech Before Saturday Crowd

DEFENDS HUNTER'S STAND

In typical senatorial fashion and in his own characteristic manner of free and convincing oratory Hon. Roy Sanderford, senator from this district, ex-honored the name of Tom Hunter against what he termed false accusations made by Hunter's adversary, Jimmie Allred his "henchmen," before a large crowd here Saturday afternoon.

In few but appropriate words Senator Sanderford described Tom Hunter as a man who made a success in the oil business despite the efforts of the major companies to drown him. He stated that Allred had harped upon his (Allred's) poverty in the present campaign, "yet he would spend $8,000 in one evening on a radio hook-up."

The much talked of sales-tax controversy was given a prominent part in Sanderford's address in which he openly challenged anyone who could produce a single legislator from either house who would under oath state that Tom Hunter ever said anything that might be construed to mean that he favored the general sales-tax, but on the contrary that Hunter argued in the Senate against such a proposal. The speaker further stated that it was Hunter's plan to relieve the real estate taxpayers by placing the burden on corporations and utilities, which he termed the "hidden wealth."

Regarding the liquor question, Senator Sanderford said, "while Jimmie preaches dry in his crying voice to a crowd of churchmen in one part of the country his assistants trade-out with the saloon-keepers of the Houston underworld for their support."

"Jimmie poses as the great anti-lobbyist yet the records will show that he gave to the chief lobbyists oil company receiverships in order to obtain their favor to help defeat the proposed bill against hot-oil running," he declared.

In a very concise manner, the speaker explained the status of the $1,173,000 check which Allred has used in his campaign, stating that this was "a gift and Jimmie had to take it by the decree of the supreme court even though he argued against the oil grant being given to the state."

Declaring that Tom Hunter had made no play for the Ferguson support having openly stated that he would reject any offer of a trade from any candidate that he could not make publically, the speaker branded the opposition as "Republican Hooverites" for their connection with "big corporation leaders and Republican bosses."

THE STORY

CHAPTER VI.—The cattle drives to Grand Junction are started. Jim Wall finds himself falling in love with Helen. He coaches her in riding western style, and finally kisses her. She is angry and dismisses him, but relents and asks him not to leave the ranch. Hays' men return from the drive with the stolen cattle. The leader has sold the cattle and brought back the money. A quick getaway is imperative. Hays tells his men to go on ahead, that he will join them at a certain canyon. The riders arrive at the canyon and to their amazement and Jim's dismay, Hays and a lieutenant are sighted with Helen Herrick—a captive.

CHAPTER VII.—The gang is about to break with Hays over the abduction, but he explains that he robbed Herrick and stole Helen for ransom. Realizing that Helen will be worse off if she falls into Heese-man's clutches, Jim Wall rides on with Hank and his men. Heese-man's riders are discovered in pursuit. After a running battle in which Latimer, one of Hays' men, is wounded, Hays leads the gang into a canyon retreat, difficult of access and easy to defend.—The Robbers' Roost.

CHAPTER VIII

AFTER breakfast Hays led his men, except Latimer, up through the west outlet, from which they climbed to the highest point in the vicinity. Every point of the green hole was in plain sight. Every approach to it, even that down the dark gully, lay exposed.

Brad Lincoln said sarcastically: "So you been savin' this roost for your old age?"

Then Jim put in his quiet opinion: "A band of men could hang out here for twenty years—unless they fought among themselves."

"Ha!" Slocum let out a single sharp exclamation.

They left Jim on the bluff to keep the first watch.

Jim had Miss Herrick's word as to the amount taken from her. It was a certainty that Hays had also robbed her brother. But he had not reported the truth as to the amount; and this was another singular proof of the disintegration of the chief's character.

In all likelihood Sparrowhawk Latimer was aware of this omission on the chief's part. Probably he had been bribed to keep his mouth shut. Whatever there was to learn Jim meant to learn.

Long after noonday, and when Jim had spent at least six hours on watch, Jeff Bridges detached himself from his comrades and laboriously made his way up the long slope to the bluff, upon which Jim was stationed.

Jim relinquished the glass and his seat to Bridges. He made his way leisurely down off the smooth red ledges to the slope, and eventually to the valley floor.

"Jim, take a snack of grub, an' then come to work with us," said Hays.

While they were at it Smoky suggested they erect a sun and rain shelter for the prisoner. Hays consented with a bad grace. So before dark they built one for Miss Herrick that would add materially to her comfort.

A tiny stream ran out from under the trees. Jim banked it up with clean red rocks, forming a fine little pool of clear cold water. Smoky deftly fashioned a rude arm-chair, which, when covered with saddle blankets, made an acceptable seat. Hays, not to be wholly outdone, cut and carried a great armload of ferns.

"Come out, miss," he called into the tent.

Helen emerged, her eyes suspiciously red, but that did not mar the flash of them.

"Hays, am I to gather from this kindly service that my stay here will be indefinite?" she queried.

"Wal, it looks like that."

"You can send Jim Wall and another of your men back to Star ranch. I'll write a letter to my brother to pay and ask no questions or make no moves."

"Shore, I reckon Jim would go. It's easy to see that. But none of my regular men would risk it," returned Hays.

"There's a better way, Hank," spoke up Smoky. "Send Jim an' me back with the girl. If she'll promise it we'll get the money."

"I give my word," swiftly agreed Miss Herrick.

"When it suits me—which is when it's safe to send for that ransom money—I'll do it an' not before."

Hays stalked away toward the cook shelter.

"You—what's your name?" Helen asked, turning to Smoky.

"Wal, you can call me Smoky," drawled that worthy.

"Jim has made you a friend—to help me?"

"I reckon so, but fer Gawd's sake don't talk so loud. Try to savvy this deal, an' what's your part in it." Smoky wheeled to his task as Hays strode back into earshot.

Miss Herrick entered her tent, and after that little more was spoken between the men, and presently, at Hays' suggestion, they quit for the day.

"Whar you bunkin', Smoky?" inquired Hays.

"Under the cliff with Sparrow. The poor devil needs nursin'."

"Jim, whar you sleepin'?" "There's my bed and pack and saddle," replied Wall, pointing. "I'll leave them there till it rains."

Darkness soon settled down, and with it the robbers, worn out with their labors. Jim stayed up long enough to see Hays stretch in his blankets under Happy's shelter.

The next day was like the preceding, with its camp tasks and improvements, the guard duty, attendance upon Sparrow, and the universal if covert observance of Miss Herrick. To do her credit she kept out of her tent, ate, exercised, and watched with great anxious eyes that haunted Jim.

After that day after day, full of watching and suspense for Jim, wore on.

The seventh day, during the heat of the afternoon, Jim was on the lookout from the bluff with his field glass.

When he returned, Smoky came to meet him.

"Sparrow's been askin' fer you," he said, moodily. "I'm afeared he's lots wuss."

When Jim bent over the wasted Latimer it was indeed to feel a cold apprehension.

"What is it, Sparrow? I've been on watch," said Jim.

"Am I a-goin' to croak?" queried Latimer, calmly.

"You've a fighting chance, Sparrow."

"Wal, I've been shot before. But I never had this queer feelin' . . . Now, Jim, if I git to sinkin' don't keep me from knowin'. If I'm dyin' I want to tell you and Smoky somethin' that I'd keep if I live. Savvy?"

"Sparrow, I couldn't honestly ask for that confession yet," replied Jim. "You might pull through. But I promise you, and I'm shaking your hand on it."

"Good. That eases my mind."

On the walk across the oval Smoky said seriously: "Jim, I reckon we better have Sparrow tell us tomorrer—whatever he has on his chest. That is, if we want to know it. Do you?"

"I sure do, Smoky. If it's something Latimer must confess it's something we ought to know."

That night Jim moved his bed closer to the grove, farther from the campfire, and it commanded a view of the rise of ground where anyone passing could be detected above the horizon. Even after he had crawled under his blanket he watched.

He fell asleep and dreamed that he was riding a gigantic black horse with eyes of fire, and that there was a white flower growing out from a precipice, and in a strange, reckless desire to pluck it he fell into the abyss. Down, down he plunged into the blackness. And suddenly a piercing, terrible cry rose from the depths.

Jim was sitting up in bed, his brow clammy with sweat, his heart clamped as in a cold vise. What had awakened him? The night was silent, melancholy, fateful. He swore that a soul-wracking cry had broken his slumber. Then he remembered the dream. He was not subject to dreams. The rest of the night he dozed at intervals, haunted by he know not what.

One by one the members of the gang appeared at Happy Jack's calls to breakfast.

Jim was the last to arrive, except Hays, who had not yet appeared.

After the meal Jim, as was his custom, hurried toward the shelf where Latimer lay. He had gotten half-way when Slocum caught up with him.

"Jim, you look like the wrath of Gawd this mornin'."

"Smoky, I didn't sleep well. I'm cross, and I reckon I need a shave."

"Wal, if that's all—Say, Jim, did you hear the gurl scream last night?"

"Scream. . . . did she?"

"Hub. If she didn't, I've shore got the jimjams. . . . My Gawd, look at poor Latimer!"

ALL HONOR TO LON A. SMITH

Leader of Many Confederate Parades

Yes, it is true! Hon. Lon A. Smith, candidate for Railroad Commissioner, has led many Confederate parades, a charge made sarcastically over the radio by one opposing his candidacy for reelection of second term, and attended many Confederate reunions, where he tenderly cared for the veterans as only a loyal son of the South could do. I have attended Confederate reunions and State Conventions of the Daughters of the Confederacy the past twenty-five years, and his opponents in this campaign may have been present, but I do not now recall either their names or their faces. Yes indeed, I have seen Lon A. Smith help the old Confederates lead many of their parades, guide many feeble footsteps along safe paths, carry many cups of cool water to trembling hands for parched lips, and help to carry cots where the frail and feeble veterans could hear and see.

I have also seen spasmodically, other sons of Confederate Veterans about election time "preen and strut" on Confederate occasions, and I have heard them "burst forth in Southern oratory," seemingly to launch their political skiff on "State Rights" for which their Confederate "dad" fought four long years, and for which I dare say their oratorical offspring never voted.

Every loyal Southerner should think well before they cast their vote. Such campaign over radio and through the press should pass the acid test of loyalty and truth, and none but "State Rights" Democrats should wear the royal toga of office.

Let it be known, a Confederate parade is a scene as unique as it is impressive, and whoever looks upon it as only a parade, staged to entertain and interest, has not caught its inner meaning. Each Confederate parade is a tribute to a past history righteously rich in glory. It is manifestation of devotion to a cause not lost but fixed as the stars that represent each state in the Star Spangled Banner.

It is a renewal of a pledge to eternal principles and a proclamation to all the world that principles can never be vanquished—nor can they be dishonored.

All honor to Lon A. Smith, Leader of Confederate Parades—may his tribe increase.

John Pundt

Mr. Pundt is experienced in the truck and bus business and can offer needed reforms in this vital business. The farmer, rancher, ginmer, produce grower and many businesses are vitally interested in trucking, for it can reach remote places not otherwise served, and at a reasonable freight rate. At present trucking is seriously impaired. Mr. Pundt is for raising the load limit from 7,000 pounds to 12,000 pounds thus giving a fair chance to the trucking industry. He also favors the reduction of railroad rates and the reduction of auto license fees.

Mr. Pundt is an experienced oil man and can remedy the situation prevalent in the oil industry of Texas. He says the hot-oil racket can be stopped. Let's give him a chance. Lon Smith has had his. He is for the interest of the people.

Though related to and sympathetic with Confederate Veterans he is not seeking office on that sympathetic tale.

I will think—talk—write . . . Texas Centennial in 1936! This is to be my celebration. In its achievement I may give free play to my patriotic love for Texas' heroic past; my confidence in its glories that are to be.

Among the Centennial ideals which will be adopted in Coryell county for the promotion of interest prior to the 1936 Texas birthday anniversary is an educational program for the schools of this section. Plans for such a program were discussed briefly at a recent meeting of the local Advisory Board. The committee in Coryell county will seek the support of school authorities in carrying out this educational project. Mrs. Tom R. Mears, Advisory Board member, will have charge of this phase of the local Centennial schedule. The objective of the plan will be to increase the interest of school children in Texas history and provide enthusiasm in the forthcoming Centennial celebration.

The decision of the Coryell County Fair Association to sponsor the midway exposition known as the Valley Shows should not be regarded purely as a means of gathering a little revenue for the financially strained organization. In the first place, the Roy Gray shows have a reputation of being a high type carnival and not one of the ordinary cheap affairs. Mr. Gray has furnished the amusement for the last two or three Coryell County Fairs and there were no objections to them. He has assured the people of this vicinity that he does not show the common, immoral expositions often expected. The Fair Association will provide a week of amusement, for the kiddies especially, in sponsoring the Gray shows that opened here Monday.

News of a thief who entered the state office of Lon Smith, railroad commissioner, might be interpreted as a political gesture by the opponents of Smith. Within the same twenty-four hours, however, the press carried news of Pundt's collapse while addressing a crowd in San Antonio. This might also bear the same interpretation. We can hardly believe that in either case there should be room for question. The facts are that someone stole into Mr. Smith's office during the night, ransacked his personal and political files for what reason we do not know. Mr. Pundt's collapse while addressing a crowd in San Antonio, recent automobile accident. A physician recommended that Pundt refrain from further campaign activities.

This word "drought" seems to be giving newspapers especially no little amount of grief. Heretofore the noun has been infrequently used but necessity of its recent use has been brought about by the fact that we are actually having a DROUGHT and all its complexities. The worst of it is that opinions differ as to the proper spelling of the word. According to Webster, it may be either d-r-o-u-g-h-t or d-r-o-u-t-h. So readers need not criticize the press for improper spelling. If the story indicates a situation in which lack of rain seems to be the predominant feature there shouldn't be any question as to what the narrative is all about—it must be drought.

World Comment

By JOE BURNS

Out in the Midwest, elections are going to be mighty important occurrences this year. Heretofore, the Republicans and Democrats have been evenly divided, except on "off" years—the Republicans of course carrying the Midwestern states in 1928 and the Democrats in 1932. But this year when most of the candidates—for governor, Senator or Congressman—are either New Deal or anti-New Deal, the elections are going to mean a lot for Roosevelt and the Administration—the continuance of his work or a revivification of the Republican party.

Important two-party elections were held last week in Ohio and Nebraska—one an industrial state and the other a corn belt state—the two places where the New Deal will be put to its severest test.

In Ohio, Representative Charles West had the tacit support of the Administration and Democratic Chairman James A. Farley for the Democratic senatorial nomination. His opponents were Governor George White—serving his third term, by the way—and former Governor Vic Donahey. West entered the race only about six weeks before the election—at the insistence of New Deal Democrats in Ohio.

The truth of the matter is that Ohio New Dealers, led by Senator Robert J. Bulkley, thought that White would beat Donahey with only the two in the race, and were afraid White couldn't beat the Republican nominee in November. So, after several hurried conferences with Postmaster Farley and "others" in Washington, they decided to run West, who was a consistent supporter of Roosevelt at the last session of Congress.

Governor White was generally well liked in the state but a few months ago got mixed up in some strikes and lost a good bit of his political prestige. So, like some of the governors of Texas who were mixed up in things they were entirely innocent of and consequently "ruined" politically, White had a hard race on his hands.

Now to get to our point. Donahey won the race over both White and Administration-backed West. West had put all his eggs in the Roosevelt basket and ran on the slogan of being "the most regular Democrat in Congress." Evidently the Ohioans had rather have a popular ex-Governor who wasn't such a good Democrat than West.

Nominee Donahey promises to support Mr. Roosevelt's policies generally but in his campaign failed to indorse all the alphabetical agencies set up by the President in an attempt to win economic recovery. Postmaster General Farley immediately after the election moved to take Donahey into the New Deal camp by wiring him that he would "come to the senate in January as an ardent and entire supporter of the Roosevelt program." Ohio Republicans renominated Senator Simion D. Fess, who holds the the marathon record in speeches in opposition to the New Deal, over four opponents.

In Nebraska, where the drought has put thousands on the relief rolls and considerable criticism has been directed against the Administration's farm program, the New Deal candidate was elected. Charles Bryan, brother of the "great commoner," went down to defeat for the senatorial nomination under a mass attack of New Deal strength. Mr. Roosevelt's floor manager at the last Democratic convention took personal charge of scuttling Bryan. His candidate was Representative Edward R. Burke, who never failed to vote for a Roosevelt measure. Bryan was the candidate of the more conservative elements of the party.

Burke's Republican opponent will be Robert Simmons, a critic of the Roosevelt administration.

It is interesting to note that in four recent primary elections in as many states boss control has been repudiated. In Oklahoma, Governor Bill Murray's candidate for governor to succeed himself was defeated in the first primary. The same thing happened in Ohio. Governor White went down to defeat in his efforts to win the senatorial nomination as well as his entire slate of candidates for state offices. In Nebraska efforts of the Bryan faction to retain control of the state government failed when Bryan lost the nomination for the senate and his slate of candidates for state office went down to defeat. And here in Texas, "bossism," better known as Fergusonism, was repudiated by the voters when the administration candidate for governor ran third and far behind the two leaders.

Of course, in Missouri Tom Pendergast's candidate for Senator won over two champions of the New Deal, although Pendergast is a Democrat himself. "Big Tom," as he is called, is boss of Kansas City and is now in control of the state administration. But generally speaking, bossism and most of the other "isms" have gone down to defeat under an avalanche of freedom seeking voters.
