

Jury Reports Without A Verdict; Dismissed After Out 82 Hours

SECOND TRIAL FOR SCOTT

The case of the State of Texas vs. Burl Scott, charged with the murder of his brother-in-law, Herman Wheat, on the evening of June 23, 1934, near Scott's home, about one mile northeast of Eagle Springs, resulted in a hung jury here Wednesday morning, at which time the jury was dismissed.

The case went to the jury Saturday night about 11:30, and they reported Monday morning that they had not been able to reach a verdict. District Judge R. B. Cross sent them back to the jury room for further deliberations. On Wednesday morning around 10:30 o'clock, after eighty-two hours of deliberations, they reported that they were still unable to agree on a verdict, and were dismissed.

This was Scott's second trial, both of which resulted in hung juries.

Angelina County Given 532 Acre Park Site By Perry Brothers

The following paragraph was taken from the Lufkin Daily News.

"The Perry Y. M. C. A. camp near Zavalla, which the Perry Brothers of Lufkin have presented to the Angelina county Y. M. C. A., is the realization of a long-time dream of the organization here. For many years it has been the hope of the board of directors of the Y. M. C. A. to have a permanent camp and now through the generosity of the Perrys, that hope is building into reality."

Perry Brothers have 63 stores all of which are in Texas, and one of which is located in Gatesville.

Angelina county is to be congratulated in having men that are willing to share their possessions for the young men that will be of benefit to the state in the future.

Mexican Youth Charged With Murder To Trial Monday, February 25

LAST MURDER CASE SET

The case of the State of Texas vs. Anderson Ortega, Mexican youth, charged with the murder of Paul Rodgers, 19 year-old Mexican youth, is set for trial in District Court here Monday morning, Feb. 25th.

The trouble between these two Mexicans occurred in front of the home of Jim Ortega, brother of the defendant, soon after 10 o'clock Saturday night, October 6, 1934. Following a fracas over domestic affairs, the two brothers received pistol shot wounds, one in the left leg and one in the right, alleged to have been inflicted by Rodgers.

After being stabbed seven times with a heavy pocket knife, Rodgers got in his car and drove to the business section of town. Suffering from loss of blood he turned the wheel over to his brother, Jeff, who drove on to the home of Sam Dyer, near the Schley community. The youth died before they reached Dyer's home. The latter drove the car back to Gatesville, where Justice of the Peace A. Shirley held the inquest in the presence of County Attorney Floyd Zeigler, Sheriff Joe White and Constable Fred Mayberry, on the night of the killing.

This is the last murder case to come before this term of District Court.

GATESVILLE GRANTED FIRE RISK CREDITS

We notice from a recent news dispatch where thirty-seven towns were granted 15 per cent credits on insurance policies because of good fire records the past year by the Fire Insurance Department at Austin. Several towns did not get 15 per cent credits. Credits ran from 15 per cent down, and twelve towns were penalized.

Gatesville was among the thirty-seven towns receiving the 15 per cent credits, the highest percentage awarded.

Had a nice chat with R. G. Davidson the other day, and he stated getting the News' was like getting a letter from home. Glad the local boy that made good likes it. Saw Fred Prewitz, City Bookkeeper, M. W. Lowrey, Mayor and J. O. Brown, Alderman of Ward No. 2, in a huddle in front of the City Drug yesterday, probably discussing the coming City Election I guess. The writer was stuck for one of those "two-bit" drinks the other day, having to "set-up" Jim Boy Brown, E. W. Jones, Jr., Lester Britala and Charles Baker. Boy what I mean it was good. Mildred Graves seems always in a good mood, collecting bills or delivering flowers, it makes no difference. Miss Beverly Chamlee and Clinton took me for a ride the other evening and were showing me some of their pictures, upon asking my opinion, I commented and was "dumped."

TO DISTRICT MEET

The local Hornets will embark this morning at 10 a. m. for Waco where they will enter the District Meet. If the locals can win their game with Purdon today at 12 noon, they have a good chance of entering the finals.

Raby Park, located in this city near the school campus, is having the finishing touch applied by setting-out shrubbery.

The Park has been worked on for nearly a year, and has become one of Coryell county's beauty spots. Starting with building a new bath house, the entire campus has been worked out in uniform manner. The public roads, tennis courts, benches on the campus and other improvements have been made to emphasize the beauty of that portion of the city.

The different kinds of shrubs with the uniform manner in which they are being transplanted, add much to the natural beauty of the local park. Something in the neighborhood of $500 has been spent for the shrubs and recent beautifications which have improved the park to the extent that it being one of the smallest, yet one of the outstanding beauty spots of Central Texas.

Relief labor is being used on this project.

WHY NOT INVESTIGATE?

Down at Austin the "insiders" regard the investigation situation as a stand-off between the Senate and the Governor. Mr. Allred is said to have exerted his influence with members of both bodies to have the matter dropped. The "insiders" say that is what will happen, with the Senate satisfied with checkmate.

At the beginning everybody admitted that Mr. Allred had put a troublesome monkey on the Senate's back when, at his request, the House passed the joint resolution calling for an inquiry into the private employment and source of income of all legislators. In the late campaign, it will be remembered, Mr. Allred made much of the charge that many members of the Legislature were receiving pay from corporations and individuals interested in state legislation, and frequently asserted that the public interest suffered greatly thereby.

Then when the Senate turned around and broadened the resolution to take in the recent record of various state departments, especially those having to do with "hot" oil, along with the campaign finances of elected and defeated state candidates in the recent campaigns and the ins and outs of the late speakership contest in the House, everybody agreed that the Senate had put the first monkey's twin brother on the Governor's back.

Now it is a case of "horse and horse," is the cheerful view of the insiders at Austin.

But the public's view is not quite so cheerful. It is less interested in the checkmating of the Governor by the Senate than in the things that were said on both sides, implying that there are some things not generally known at Austin that might be of public interest. Letting the matter drop officially is easier than getting the public to forget it.

What seems to be in danger of being overlooked at Austin is that, although neither the Senate nor Mr. Allred can claim a victory over the other, nothing of what has been charged and implied by both has been disproved.

The public has not overlooked that point, and the more nothing is done about it by those who ought to do something the more the public will be impressed with the force of the saying that where there is much smoke there must be some fire.

It would seem an act of elementary responsibility to the public, as well as of self-justification and self-protection, on the part of both the Legislature and the Governor to join hands to bring about an investigation so complete that it would leave no unlighted corridors to stimulate imagination or suspicion. The best way—indeed, the only conclusive way—to establish the baselessness of the charges, insinuations and inuendoes, is to unlock all the doors and open up all the books. * * * —Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

World Comment

By JOE BURNS

President Roosevelt pulled a shrewd one in withdrawing the American consul-general to Russia after the break-down of debt negotiations with the Soviets. In the first place, it showed the Russians that the administration was willing to take stern measures if they refused to carry out the provisions of the recognition treaty and settle the debt question. And more important was the effect upon Japan. The government needed to do something to help along our relations with Japan. Our recognition of the Soviet Union more than a year ago was construed as a move against them, as the forerunner of close economic relations and the extension of credit which would measurably strengthen the Soviet Union. The termination of the debt discussions is, indirectly, the most significant step the administration has taken toward assuring the Japanese that we are not determined to try to check their expansion in the Far East.

Preparedness fever seems to have taken a firm hold upon the present Administration and Congress. Once in a while, you know, Congress gets all in a fluster about national defense and appropriates several million dollars for the army, navy, and air corps. And then for several years these defense units languish along with scant attention from the legislative bodies unless prompted by the executive department on a threat of war. Consequently, when the defense question is again brought before them they find a navy with antiquated vessels upon its hands and an army that could not effectively fight Mexico if the need be.

The Roosevelt administration has pursued a policy of expansion for both the army and the navy. Large appropriations have been made for bringing the navy up to the limits of the naval treaties with Britain and Japan and the army has been mechanized to a certain extent. The national House has now come forward with a War Department appropriation bill carrying over $318,000,000 for military activities. The navy bill will be around $477,000,000. This money will be spent for carrying out to a greater extent Chief of Staff Douglas MacArthur's mechanization program. Several air bases will be built in various sections of the country and $11,000,000 will be spent on a giant air base in Hawaii. President Roosevelt is authorized under the bill to increase as he sees fit the army's strength from 118,000 men to 165,000 and the National Guard by 5,000 men. The strengthening of the National Guard may not be such a wise step. During the last two years the Guard has been used mainly to carry out the wishes of state dictators, such as Huey Long and Eugene Talmadge. But the wisdom of bringing the nation's army forces up to a standard in proportion with those of other powers cannot be questioned. In view of the threatening attitude of Japan and the uneasiness prevailing throughout Europe we should be prepared for any and all eventualities. For two years preceding 1917 one dreamed of the U. S. entering the European conflict. Just so we can not see ahead into future conflicts which we may be compelled to participate.

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS lost its prestige in the Manchurian and Chaco incidents, due to its failure to terminate these conflicts, but now it seems to have lost its honor. When Abyssinia appealed to the League for succor and protection from Italy, that august body replied that the black empire would have to look to Italy for a settlement. But if the League is not maintained for settling disputes, then what is it for? It can all be summed up thus. The League is in reality dominated by France, Italy and Great Britain. It is an open secret that France and Britain gave Italy carte blanche to do as she pleased with Abyssinia. And we all know what that is. In return France received a stand-pat agreement from Italy to protect Austria against Germany. So naturally France isn't going to discipline the Italians through the League. Now what has the League come to if it is going to be merely a tool in the diplomatic schemes of France and Italy. The Abyssinian question was not treated justly. The League couldn't bring Japan to terms about Manchuria without war. And it exists to prevent war. But when it had the chance to correct an injustice in Africa, it calmly referred the conquered to their conquerors. Perhaps Japan and Germany had some justification after all in withdrawing from the councils dominated by a group of self-seeking, anti-German French imperialists.

Paul Muni Is Hardest Working Star of Screen

Paul Muni, who does but two pictures, is yet the hardest working star in Hollywood. Others rest between pictures. That is when he is busiest.

If nine out of ten stars reduced their picture worries to words the result would probably be "My part must be a big one; sympathetic, so the audience will like me; a script that makes sure no other character outshines me."

Paul Muni's worries begin long before a story is bought and continue until the rests are okayed on the last fade-out.

He reads every book, play or story that is suggested as a screen possibility.

It is common gossip around the studios that he rejected twenty-seven stories and four plays before he selected "Bordertown," his latest Warner Bros. picture, which comes to the Regal Theatre on Saturday night at 10:30, also showing Sunday and Monday.

Muni is an odd young man. He is high strung, nervous and eager. Inside there is a strange driving force that will not allow him to compromise. He hates the mediocre, despises the passable. He is physically active and mentally restive.

Once his story is chosen a thousand details, large and small, drive him. He has innumerable conferences with writers, before anyone starts on the script. When the first draft is finished, he works over the dialogue; carefully balances the value of words; tests the strength of his speeches by reading them to people.

Meanwhile, he has meetings with the technical departments to discuss settings and atmosphere. These are things to which a star gives no thought, usually. To Muni, they are part of the unified whole which he visualizes. Everything that goes into his production must dovetail with his preconceived ideas.

In the selection of his supporting cast, he is most concerned. Unlike many stars, he insists on the most capable players that can be found.

His latest picture, "Bordertown," is laid along the nation's boundaries. The hero is a foreign born youth with an overweening lust for power. He is a distinct type whose reactions to moral codes are consistent with his reactions to everything around him.

Paul Muni went traveling to meet this character in the flesh, to see the environment in which he lived. He found him in the sordid underworld of a real "Bordertown."

"Bordertown" is a powerful drama set in a picturesque border community, wild, lawless, colorful; ridden by rogues, gamblers and outcasts and the rednecks of American millionaires and bored society women.

THE STORY OF CANCER CONTROL

Written Especially for Women, with Special Emphasis on Preventability and Cure.

NATIONAL AGENCIES INTERESTED IN CANCER CONTROL

In 1930 the American College of Surgeons, consisting of a membership of some nine thousand physicians, recognized the need of coordinated efforts in the field of cancer control. They therefore set about emphasizing early diagnosis and effective treatment, convinced that this would materially aid in reducing the mortality rate.

Since that time the American College of Surgeons has demonstrated the feasibility of this viewpoint by (1) urging certain well qualified members to specialize in this field and (2) by developing one hundred and forty highly organized special diagnostic and therapeutic cancer clinics in general hospitals. In these institutions certain minimum standards as to procedure, physical equipment and trained personnel must be maintained in order that the public shall receive all known benefits. In this way the diagnosis and treatment of cancer is gradually falling within the province of highly trained physicians keenly interested in the effectiveness of the services of fered.

To this group are being added highly specialized medicalmen whose training and experience as deep x-ray and radium therapist in the field of cancer make them victorious combatants against the disease. The public little realizes that this high standard is the result of cooperative responsibility in the field of cancer by the membership of the four national societies.

The American medical Association has been highly successful in focusing the attention of its members on the cancer problem. The results accomplished in the field of popular education alone justify comment. Through its component societies five year cancer control programs are being successfully promoted thru-out many states. In addition postgraduate studies and research are being stimulated by university medical schools and by competent medical societies.

More and more other national agencies with memberships in very city, town and hamlet are formulating their efforts and giving the cancer control movement the benefit of their influence, training and experience.
