One Million Homeless in Flooded Area; Water Batters Weak Levees

With the known dead at 293 the homeless well passed the million mark, and an additional 500,000 endangered, property loss placed at four hundred million dollars, flood water of the Ohio River marches on toward Paducah, Kentucky, purported next point of crisis.

Red Cross officials are hurrying to evacuate Paducah of the thousands of reluctant inhabitants in advance of the peak.

Cairo, Ill., just below, is an island city, with only men there behind its 60 foot sea wall, which is holding the water and which is being bolstered.

Mound City, Ill., a back levee collapsed, routing 650 men, 50 women and 175 CCC boys.

With rain in hard-hit Louisville, the hopes were darkened for recovery and that the city would be lighted soon.

The Ohio showed signs of loosening its grip upon a wide area between Pittsburg and Cairo but the full story of the havoc will not be known for days.

Tension has eased slightly as the river has started to recede, but sickness was increasing, electricity was shut off, water rationed and sanitation problems increased hourly in Cincinnati.

Some engineers predict trouble for the lower Mississippi, but others say the river and tributaries will be able to take care of the flood waters, but preparation for evacuation is being carried on.

Coryell Meets Two Quotas in Week; Quota Raised from $85 to $425.00

Coryell County, from one edge to the other, has contributed in an exceedingly grateful manner to the Flood Relief Funds which have been raised during the past week. The amount now is $563.83.

After the first telegram was received from Cary T. Grayson, Director of the Midwestern Office in St. Louis giving the quota as $85.00, the telegram below was received Tuesday:

Elsewhere is a list of KNOWN subscribers to this fund, and as new names are added, they will be published, if we can get hold of them. Many people have sent in direct contributions and we are unable to account for them, but will be glad if we can get their names.

SATURDAY NIGHT LAST DAY TO PAY TAXES WITHOUT ANY PENALTY

Whatever taxes you have to pay, city or county, the deadline is Saturday of this week, if you don't want to pay a penalty.

So far, according to our informants, taxes have been coming in rather slowly, most of the lack of speed, it seems, being from the bad weather for the past few weeks.

GATESVILLE IN FLOOD DISTRICT

Mrs. B. Foster, a niece of Miss Jessie Fauntleroy, has written a card to her telling of the terrible flood in Evansville, Indiana, where she, the former Miss Jessie Mae Smith, lives.

Mrs. Foster's card in part reads: "I have this opportunity to tell you we are all safe and dry. Wayland and family are surrounded by water, but there is no chance of water getting to them, and they have plenty of food and coal. All trains are stopped and I haven't heard ser home to us when we have above flood stage. It is beyond words to describe it to you."

People from practically every locality in the country have friends or relatives in the flood area, and it brings it even closer to home to us when we have friends here who have loved ones in a location like this, even if there is little apparent danger.

President's Entertainment Holds Limelight for Saturday Night

Preparations are being made. Powder puffs prepared. Grease paint mized! All is in readiness for the "Screamy" to be shown "in the flesh," mostly flesh, when Gatesville's male debutants are crowned with something at the City Hall Saturday evening of this week, to the sweet strains of music from "Seller's Seven Synopators."

Among the "dumb fairysels" or fair damsels, who will display yard after yard of pulchritude will be none other than the Court Herald, "Little" Ralph Bailey, "is Royal 'ighness, 'arry of the 'ouse of Flentge.

Princesses will be Floyd, of the House of Zeigler; Morton, of the House of Scott; Earl of the House of Worley; Marcus of the House of Chunn.

Duchesses will be Eugene Jr., of the House of Alvis; William of the House of Wiegand; James Reed of the House of Saunders; Claude of the House of Wallace.

There will also be a number of out of town Duchesses, but so far their modesty has prevented the publication of their names. The Crown Bearer will be Jack Roach, Flower Girls will be Pat Holt, Fred Schwarz, Pat Olsen, and Otis Ray, Train Bearers, J. M. Witcher and Er-cell W. Brooks.

Then, in all her seductive seclusiveness, sliding slimly, slinging slothfully, the Queen, in all his'n's majesty will be presented to a gaping audience, thus ending a week of awful agony of waiting and anticipation.

Entertainment will be numbers of the Lost Cord septet, (well, seven of them anyhow), a dance by a "fawn" C. H. Wallace Jr., another chorus, yodel, or howl, we don't know which yet then Goodnight Ladies by the "Onsomb" (French to you).

Well, if your sides don't ache after seeing this mess, you'd better see a certain undertaker here, cause you've been dead a long time, and this is no advertising plug. Anyway, squander two-bits whether you can go or not, and help a greater disaster to many children than the second world's flood which is now on in the midwest.

HOWARD FRANKS NOW NEW MANAGER OF PERRY BROS. STORE

Howard Franks, who has managed Perry Bros. Store at Stamford for the past few months, has been transferred to Gatesville to take charge of the company's store here. A. W. (Archie) Gartman has been transferred to Jacksonville where he will manage that store.

Walter Atwell, formerly employed in the Perry Bros. Store known in Gatesville has been made the new manager of the store in Stamford, replacing Mr. Franks.

Mrs. Howard Franks and children accompanied Mr. Franks to Gatesville.

The average automobile consumes approximately 691 gallons of gasoline a year.

REP. HUDDLESTON NOW ON THREE COMMITTEES OF THE HOUSE

Representative Earl Huddleston, now in Austin attending to the business of Coryell and Hamilton Counties at the meeting of the Legislature, has been appointed on three House committees. He is a member of the Public Lands and Building Committee, the Committee of State Affairs, and vice-chairman of the Agriculture Committee.

"THEY'VE MOVED FIRST BASE"

Coryell County's Red Cross quota was $85.00. On Wednesday a telegram came from Cary T. Grayson, Director of the Red Cross in St. Louis which stated our quota had been moved to five times $85.00, or $425.00. We can still do it!

The present disaster in the eleven states has proven more than five times as bad as was originally considered, and now, we MUST still reach or even surpass our quota. We are certain we will do just that thing. The $85.00 didn't bother in the least, and at this writing, practically all of the second quota has been reached.

It is probable that this may again be raised, but should it, we should fall in line and help these people who are really experiencing what deprivation, disease and desolation means. We are proud of Coryell county's donations, and will be still prouder when they reach "Home Base."

YELLOW SEEPS

Have you noticed them in our pavement around the square and up and down Leon and Main streets?

The life of this pavement is gradually oozing away. The rains, freezes and heavy traffic of only a few years, has started on the foundation, the life of any pavement.

Before we get any highways completed (not that we want to stop this highway work for one split second) we are going to have another problem, that of streets and city pavement.

Thanks goes to the firemen for doing a little "hydraulic mining" on the streets and washing down a great mass of loose dirt and gravel, which has been acting as "emery dust" in grinding out the present topping on the water weakened foundation which is causing cracks and fissures.

Looks like a little something properly applied would help stay this deterioration.

WORLD COMMENT

Texas Politics

It is said to be a wholesome sign of vitality in a democracy when politics is perennially on the lips of the populace. If so, democratic government is secure in the U. S. and in Texas for a long time to come.

Scarcely had Franklin Roosevelt received his walloping vote of confidence than discussions were instituted as to his possible successor and Democratic nominee in 1940.

But Texas—the happy hunting grounds for the Lubbocks, the Cokes, the Davises, the Baileys and the Fergusons in the realm of politics—surpasses the nation in the constancy of its politics.

Surely no other state can boast of as many highlights in its political history—both past and modern—as can the Lone Star State. The memorable battle between Richard Coke and E. J. Davis for possession of the governor's office in 1872 with Davis, the defeated candidate, appealing to President Grant to maintain him as chief executive with troops after the Supreme Court has refused to hold the election void; the impeachment of James E. Ferguson as governor in 1917; the formation of the American Party by Mr. Ferguson in 1920, upon which ticket the former governor ran as candidate for President; and the heated battles between the Fergusons and Dan Moody are only a few of the incidents which made Texas known to the Nation and to the world.

Austinites are currently engaged in their favorite pastime of picking the entrants in the 1938 gubernatorial derby. William McCraw, the present Attorney General, and Ernest O. Thompson of the Railroad Commission have already been entered by the political gossipers although an official announcement has not been forthcoming from either.

Lately the name of Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson has been injected as the candidate of interest desirous of keeping both McCraw and Thompson out of the executive mansion. Mrs. Ferguson, twice governor, has been inactive personally in politics since her retirement in 1932 from the political scene, although her husband was active in both the 1934 and 1936 campaigns.

In the writers opinion the entrance of Mrs. Ferguson into the 1938 race would have little affect upon the outcome of the election. Despite the support which her husband would give her, Mr. Ferguson's "vest-pocket vote" of past years has been irreparably split in recent elections with many of the former Ferguson adherents now ardent supporters of Governor Allred, whom "Farmer Jim" opposed in 1934 and 1936.

The first break in the Ferguson ranks came in 1934 when the candidate whom Mr. Ferguson supported lost out in the July primary. The backing of Mr. Ferguson was then thrown to Tom F. Hunter, who in turn lost to Jimmie Allred. Many of the Ferguson reliables refused to support Hunter at the dictate of their leader and voted for Allred. Since that date the influence of Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson has been considered negligible as a factor in Texas politics. Such convictions were fully borne out in the last campaign when Senator Sanderford, supported by Mr. Ferguson, ran fourth in the primary.

The appointment by Governor Allred of Robert L. Bobbitt as Chairman of the State Highway Commission has occasioned comment that Bobbitt might run for the gubernatorial office next year. As head of the highway body, succeeding Harry Hines in that position, he will be in a position to be before the people and build up his candidacy for the governorship.

Bobbitt's career in Texas politics includes three terms in the Legislature, speaker of the Fortieth Legislature, Attorney General (by appointment) for two years, and prior to this appointment to the highway commission, Associate Justice of the Court of Criminal Appeals of San Antonio. He was appointed to the latter position by Governor Allred, whom he opposed for the Attorney Generalship in 1930, and was re-elected in 1936.

Of those names mentioned as potential or probable candidates, that of William McCraw is the most potent politically. McCraw won a reputation as one of the best vote-getters the state has seen this century when, without a machine and limited funds, he defeated the veteran campaigner and legislator, Walter Woodward of Coleman, for Attorney General in 1934. Woodward was known throughout the State, having seen long service in the Senate, while McCraw's only venture into politics was as district attorney of Dallas County for three terms, the first person in history to be thrice elected to that office. In 1934, McCraw stumped the State from end to end, and out-campaigned Woodward at every turn, leading by 26,000 votes in the first primary over the Coleman Senator and another candidate, and out-distancing his rival by 90,000 votes in the August election.

Ernest O. Thompson, former mayor of Amarillo, was appointed to the Railroad Commission in 1932 by Governor Sterling to fill out the unexpired term of Pat M. Neff, and was subsequently elected in the same year for four years. Last year, running for a full six-year term, Thompson was confronted with four opponents, won a moral victory in the first primary when he lacked only 18,000 votes of having a majority over all his opponents, and defeated his runoff contender in August by a huge majority.

Bobbitt's ability as a vote-getter has never been proved. Aside from his election to the House and as Justice of the Court of Criminal Appeals, he was never elected to a State office. In 1930 he went down to defeat before Governor Allred for Attorney General. The two subsequently became close friends with Bobbitt lending valuable to the Allred gubernatorial campaigns of 1934 and 1936.

This Week In Oglesby

Oglesby's got a news paper. The Oglesby Outlook's initial number appeared Friday. A six page, four columns to the page sheet. S. B. Compton, owner and publisher of the Crawford Sun, is also the crown sheet, safety valve, and throttle of the Outlook and judging from the appearance of the first number, with proper backing, the outlook for our town to have a good paper is promising. S. B.'s father came to Crawford so long ago, we will not attempt to say how long, to establish a news paper. Someone remarked, "If you start a paper here you've got your grit." Well Mr. Compton started "Crawford Grit" and made 'er go. So you might as well look for S. B. to make Outlook go.

In 1936 every Texan that we know straightened up and prided himself in the fact that he was a Texan. Did everything possible to show up our big state, her history, traditions, legends, resources, size, and everything. They were all proud of her, but there was one Texan we didn't know, Forrest Gaither, 3604, Grim Ave., Waco. This week one of his little books, "Indictment," came to our desk. There is a lot of good thoughts in the book but he wants to divide Texas into five states in order to purify politics, and lighten the burdens of government—we quit reading at that point. We'd much rather read Lizzie D. Hamlett's poem, "Shall We Divide the State?" but we're going to finish reading the book someday.

AYRES COMPTON WRITES ON TRAFFIC IN THE "TEXAS PRESS MESSENGER"

In an article entitled, "Dallas Calls a Halt on Traffic Deaths," Ayres Compton, Director of Traffic Education for the City of Dallas, and son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard S. Compton of this city, has written a very informative article on this subject in the "Texas Press Messenger," official publication of the Texas press Association, which is an association of newspaper publishers in the state of Texas.

Mr. Compton states in part, "a permanent program of traffic control, based upon three agencies, was announced early this month. These three so-called agencies, or principles, are often referred to in traffic analysis as the three "E's"—Enforcement, Engineering, and Education."

This is the scope included in Mr. Compton's undertaking as Director of Traffic Education for Dallas.

Mr. Compton was formerly Editor-owner of the News, and has recently been connected with the Texas Centennial in Dallas after which, he received this nice promotion in Dallas.

WASHINGTON WITH Congressman

W. R. (BOB)
POAGE

The inauguration is over and I am sure that most of you either heard over the radio, or read in the papers, how bad the weather was on that day. Like the thousands of others I stood in the downpour of cold rain to see the President and Vice-President take their oaths, but also like thousands of others I now have a bad cold—and still the Washington weather stays bad—wet and cold, although no hard rain as on inauguration day.

There were a number of Texans here this past week, both for the inauguration and for the Council of State Governments which held its third annual assembly here the latter part of the week. In addition to these visitors, the Lieutenant Governor and representative of the Texas Centennial were here in an effort to get more help for next year's exposition.

I trust that most of our people have already heard that Honorable James A. Farley, the Postmaster General of the United States, has promised to visit our district and dedicate the new Post Office Building at Waco on some date in March. This is an especial honor, and especially so in view of the fact that the Postmaster General has never condescended to dedicate a post office outside the native

New York. It is his first official visit to any section since the great Democratic victory, which he so ably managed last Fall. The invitation was extended by Honorable Burriss Jackson, Postmaster at Hillsboro, Texas, Honorable Luther Johnson, Congressman from Corsicana, Senator Morris Sheppard and myself. I hope to come to Texas with Mr. Farley and want every Democrat in Central Texas to join in extending to him a true Texas welcome.

Congress seems to be getting to work and I expect to see the wheels turning regularly this week. Last week we finally passed the bill extending the life of the R. F. C. until 1939. While there was some opposition to the length of time and some criticism of some advances made to relief agencies, there was a very general agreement, even among the Republicans, that the affairs of this agency had been well handled. I felt that this was a splendid tribute to our fellow Texan, Honorable Jesse Jones, who has handled it.

Today the House is scheduled to take up the problem of providing a permanent food-seed loan. I hope that this will be done without any further delay, as it is necessary that our people be able to know what they can do at once if these loans are to be of any value to them. I have sought to expedite this matter and think that we will get prompt action, although I think it is probable that it will be several weeks or even months before we get action on a farm purchase program. I hope to discuss this program soon and at this time will only say that the greatest danger that I see is that the new program may be made and intended primarily to help some land owners to unload some white rocks and Johnson grass on some poor tenant at about three prices rather than intended primarily to provide cheap money to the tenant so as to allow him to do his own buying.

I want to call especial attention to the people of Coryell County to the Range program of the Department of Agriculture. This program offers what seems to me to be an opportunity to stockmen to get some very helpful work in the way of cedar eradication, spreader dams and terraces, tanks, fences and fire guards, through government aid. The program will only be available in those counties officially designated as range counties by the Department of Agriculture. I personally contacted the Department and succeeded in getting them to tentatively include Coryell County.

My own feelings is that there is no doubt but what this area should be included and I expect to keep a request that it be done before the Department.

Sincerely yours,
W. R. Poage, M. C.

Surviving are three sons and one daughter, L. J., Wiley and Earl Turner and Mrs. Fannie Dixon. One sister, Mrs. Ollie Carroll of Flat and two brothers, Lute and Phil Durham of The Grove. All were present for the funeral services which were held at the R. A. Dixon home with Rev. Herschel Doss, pastor of the Primitive Baptist Church at Little Flock conducting. The deceased had been a member of this church for the past 25 years. She was laid to rest in the Hubbard Cemetery.

From shanty boy to timber king—that was the success story of Barney Glasgow, wealthiest man in Wisconsin. Once he had loved Lotta Morgan, a cafe singer, but thirst for power compelled him to marry his boss' daughter, Emmy Louise Hewitt. Lotta married Barney's old friend, Swan Bostrom, gave birth to a baby girl and shortly afterwards, died.
 Twenty-five years passed—it was 1906. Barney, now a man of fifty, had reached his goal. He had two grown children, Evvie and Richard. On a hunting trip to Iron Ridge to visit Swan, Barney met the second Lotta, now grown to glowing young womanhood, and became madly infatuated with her.

Chapter Four

The telegram which Barney wrote was addressed to Mrs. Emmy Louise Glasgow, Butte des Morts, Wisconsin. It read:
"DEAR EMMY LOUISE SWANS BACK MUCH WORSE TAKING HIM TO CHICAGO IN PRIVATE CAR FOR TREATMENT BY SPECIALIST BACK SOON AS POSSIBLE LOVE TO EVVIE"
 In Barney's private car attached to the passenger train speeding at the back of the cottage where Swan spent happy hours tending the flowers and vegetables. Karie bustled about the spotless kitchen like a contented mother-hen.

 "It's heaven, that's what it is," she told Lotta, "Valhalla—that us Swedes been yelling about all our lives."
 "Who do you think I saw on the way to business college this morning?" Lotta broke in excitedly. "Evvie and Richard Glasgow. They drove right by me as close as . . ."
 "How they look?" Karie asked curiously.
 "Evvie's stylish and awfully pretty . . . Richard's nice! Nicer even than he used to be as a kid. Wonder if he'll remember that summer he spent up north?" Her face glowing, Lotta rattled on. "Oh, Aunt Karie, was there ever such a man as Mr. Glasgow? All he's doing for us . . . for Pa!"
 A sudden thought froze Karie's smile.
 "Lotta—you don't suppose . . .?"
 "What?" asked Lotta absently.
 "Oh . . . nothing," Karie checked herself, but for the rest of the day she was quiet and preoccupied.
 In the last few months Barney had spent as much time at the cottage as he safely could without arousing gossip. He would come, ostensibly, for one of Karie's famous Swedish dinners, or stop by in the evening for a cup of coffee. His smart carriage and handsome pair of black geldings would be from Iron Ridge to Chicago. Karie, Lotta and Swan inspected the luxuriously appointed lounge with wide-eyed, open-mouthed wonder. The women were dressed in their Sunday best—provincial copies of the fashion of the day: tight basques, sweeping skirts, leg-of-mutton sleeves, and to top it all, huge befeathered hats perched on elaborate chignons.

At Rector's, where they dined, Lotta's radiant beauty attracted a good deal of attention.

 Watching Lotta's starry-eyed excitement, Barney felt himself growing younger by the minute. Beneath the friendly, jovial exterior he showed his guests, his blood stirred hotly. To humor Lotta's whim he agreed to order dinner in the dining car, where they were the pivot of all eyes.
 Chicago was a revelation to them. Barney took the women to the best shop in town, outfitted them from head to toe in the most expensive and fashionable finery. At Rector's, where they dined, Lotta's radiant young beauty attracted a good deal of attention. Now that she no longer looked like a rube, she preened herself like a peacock.
 "Listen, Lotta," Barney told her. "You don't need to worry about what other women think, because you'll always be the most beautiful woman in the room, and they'll all be wishing they were like you."
 An idea had begun to formulate in Barney's mind.
 "How about you all coming to Butte des Morts to live?" he said to Swan and Karie. "I've got a little house down on the Peninsula that'd just suit you—and Lotta could go to school right there—and we—and you all could be together."
 His suggestion had the effect of a bombshell. They stared at Barney in amazement and delight.
 "By Jimminy!" cried Swan. "Jumping Jehosaphat—"
 "Oh, Mr. Glasgow!" was all Lotta could say, but her face shone with joy and gratitude.

hitched to the Bostrom's front gate. But he never overstayed, never made the reason for his visits obvious.
 Barney's family had begun to question him about the Bostroms. Evvie thought they were sweet. Richard had heard reports of Lotta's beauty—"a humdinger for looks" was the way he put it. Emmy Louise pricked up her ears warily. There was a strange gleam in her eye. To all their questions Barney gave casual, evasive replies. Emmy Louise couldn't for the life of her understand his interest in the shanty family, or why he had brought them to Butte des Morts.

Nevertheless, at Barney's urging and because she herself was consumed with curiosity, she and Evvie went calling at the Bostrom cottage one afternoon. Evvie was friendly and gay, but Emmy Louise assumed her most frigid and polite social air. Evvie at once proposed that Lotta go riding with her some day. And she laughingly invited herself down for one of those Svenska suppers her father was always talking about.
 When they had gone Karie was thoughtful. How, she wondered, was all this going to end?
 "Lotta," she began hesitantly, "Mr. Glasgow's a married man. More than twice your age . . . you wouldn't . . ."
 "What if he is?" cried Lotta defiantly. "Nobody in the world has ever been so good to me as he has. I'd do anything for him, you understand? Anything!"
 Seriously disturbed now, Karie took her problem to Swan. They must go back to Iron Ridge at once—this was no place for them. All these things Mr. Glasgow had been doing for them . . . it wasn't for them. It was for Lotta. He was in love with Lotta; they had been blind not to see it before.
 "You make big mistake, Karie," Swan told his sister with gentle reproach. "Barney is not in love with Lotta . . . he is still in love with her mother, that is all. I won't hear such talk. You don't know Barney Glasgow. He is my friend!"

SPORTS

With six of Worley's regulars gone from the lineup the boy's team faces an uncertain season, but the girl's team is forging ahead stronger than ever with consistent victories.

Featuring the sharp-shooting of Koch and Davis the girls won again last Tuesday night, beating Pearl 21 to 15. In a bitterly fought contest. Koch from her left forward position, led the scoring, making six field goals. This little brown-eyed beauty has a real eye for the basket and an accurate arm that leaves the net swishing.

Preston, right forward, starred for Pearl, accounting for all the visitor's fifteen points, and being ably backed by her teammates.

The lineup for Gatesville was: Davis, Eubanks, Koch, Rutherford, Martin, Aples, James, Hinson.

The line-up for Pearl was: Preston, Fitner, Franks, Preston, Whitt, Mosely, Henderson, Sims.

Friday night these two teams play a return engagement that promises to be a top-notch battle. Little attention has been paid the girls this year, and they have one of their best teams in recent years.

Pearl is always one of the strongest contenders from the rural districts, and they are running true to form this year.

Lauritz Melchior Will Sing Role Of Siegfried in Opera Broadcast

By LAURITZ MELCHIOR

A hero does something to us. Whenever destiny drops one among us—whether he be baseball player, statesman, aviator, or even singer at the Metropolitan Opera House—and he begins blazing on the horizon of our lives, we stop and wonder. Then we are lifted clear of ourselves shouting the praises of this one who, with seemingly god-like ease, leaps over the barriers that stop so many of us in our daily lives. It is as if we, too, were somehow clearing those same barriers. Possibilities open to us that seemed forever closed, and we are inspired to fresh effort. A new zest for living and doing fills us.

Siegfried, the role I sing at the Metropolitan next Saturday afternoon in Richard Wagner's opera of the same name, is made of hero's stuff. And the opera, which will be heard over the National Broadcasting Company under the sponsorship of the Radio Corporation of America tells the story of his rise. You may say that it is only music and drama, but you cannot deny that the things that Siegfried stands for, really happen in our world. We all know the heroes in the everlasting struggle between gods and men, giants and dwarfs for possession of the Magic Ring of the Niebelungs.

"Siegfried" is the third in a series of four operas that tell the story of ring. The first, "Das Rheingold," relates how the dwarf Alberich came to have the Rhine maidens' gold, how he fashioned the magic ring that gave him power over men and gods, and forced his brother, Mime, to create the Tarnhelm, which gave its wearer the power to take any form or become completely invisible. Then Wotan, pressed by the giants to pay for the castle Valhalla, robbed Alberich to ransom the goddess Fricka, held as hostage. Immediately, a terrible curse laid by Alberich on ring and helmet, began its work; one of the giants killed the other, Fafner, the remaining, turned himself into a dragon to guard the treasure.

"Die Walkure," the second, tells how Brunnhilde disobeyed Wotan by trying to protect Siegmund, who had angered Fricka by mating with thrusts Needful deep into Fafner's heart. "Like fire burns the blood," cries Siegfried, instinctively sucking a drop of the dragon's blood from his finger. Then suddenly he understands the language of the Wood-Bird, who tells him to recover the ring and the Tarnhelm. Mime slyly approaches with his cup of poison, but Siegfried now understands his motive and kills him for his treachery. Then the Wood-Bird tells Siegfried of the sleeping Brunnhilde and flies away to lead the hero who knows no fear to the mountain fastness.

Wotan, as the third act begins, tells Erda, the all-knowing goddess of earth, of his hope for the world's redemption when Siegfried and Brunnhilde bring forth a new race. He meets Siegfried outside the magic fire and in a last gesture of power opposes his progress; but Siegfried shatters Wotan's spear with Needful and the god retires to Valhalla to await the inevitable twilight of the gods. Siegfried, blowing his silver hunting horn, plunges into the flames.

Safely inside, the youth scales the mountain and discovers the sleeping Brunnhilde, whom he mistakes for a warrior. Then he lifts her shield and helmet, and discovers a woman. For the first time in his life Siegfried knows a feeling like fear; but in a moment he is swept away by a passionate love for this strange creature. Brunnhilde, having been put to sleep a goddess, at first resents the touch of a mortal; but she is unable to resist her new mortal emotions and surrenders to love, as the opera ends in a tremendous duet.

Brunnhilde, in the Saturday performance, will be the great Wagnerian soprano, Kirsten Flagstad. Wotan, the Wanderer, will be Friedrich Schorr. Mime and Alberich, the dwarf brothers, will be sung by Karl Laufkoetter and Eduard Habich. Kerstin Thorborg will take the part of Erda and Stella Androva will sing the Wood-Bird. Artur Bodanzky will conduct.

LAURITZ MELCHIOR

Sieglinde, his sister and Hunding's wife. Shorn of her godhood, Brunnhilde is condemned to sleep, surrounded by a wall of fire, until a mortal hero should awaken, and claim her as his bride. Sieglinde wandered through the forest to Mime's cave, and there died giving birth to Siegfried, who is reared by the dwarf.

As "Siegfried" opens, Mime is scheming to secure the ring and treasure for himself. But he cannot forge the sword Needful, that will slay the dragon. "None but who Fear has never felt," the Wanderer (Wotan) reminds him, "shall make Needful new." Then Mime knows that it is Siegfried who is destined to redeem the ring; and he stands aside brewing a poison as the impatient Siegfried fires the splinters of his father's sword and re-creates the great Needful.

At dawn Siegfried encounters the dragon and after a fearful battle, Basketball there is a year around sport with no side attractions such as football that Gatesville High has to contend with. Naturally their basketball teams are strong and usually they win more than their quota of games.

Gatesville High is also boasting of an excellent girl's team this year. Most of the girls hail from the rural districts and have played the game since their grammar school days.

Basketball for girls, although not as rugged as the male game, can be just as exciting (and much more attractive) when two good teams such as Pearl and Gatesville meet. The game Friday night should be well worth seeing.

"THE PLOUGH AND THE STARS," IRISH DRAMA, REACHES SCREEN

"The Plough and the Stars," hailed as one of the important pictures of the year, brings Barbara Stanwyck and Preston Foster in the principal roles showing at Regal Theatre next Sunday and Monday.

Produced by the same company, director, scenarist, and executive staff as "The Informer," which was widely acclaimed as the finest film of 1935. "The Plough and the Stars" is taken from the play by the Irish dramatist, Sean O'Casey, although its scenes and characters are entirely figments of fiction.

The story is based on the shattering effect of separation on a young Dublin couple, whose love is tortured, when the husband, despite his wife's pleas, takes his place as a combatant in the street fighting. To give a full and vivid panorama of the comedy as well as the tragedy and near-tragedy of this period, the story also shows the effect on a group of tenement dwellers who represent a cross section of Dublin at that period.

In five of these parts will be seen members of the world-famous Dublin Abbey theatre where "The Plough and the Stars" was first presented. Barry Fitzgerald, Denis O'Dea, Eileen Crowe, Arthur Shields, and F. J. McCormick. This quintet was brought especially from his native land to appear in this film, which boasts a cast ninety per cent Irish or of Irish descent. Among the well-known players who join them in the supporting roles are Una O'Connor, J. M. Kerrigan, Bonita Granville (the brat of "These Three"), Erin O'Brien-Moore, Moroni Olsen, Neil Fitzgerald, Cyril McLaglen, Brandon Hurst and Robert Homans.

John Ford directed the picture which was adapted to the screen by Dudley Nichols. It was filmed under the production guidance of Cliff Reid and Robert Sisk.

Assured of perfect authenticity by months of research, the sets were designed by Van Nest Polglase and Carroll Clark.

Telegram to Red Cross Chairman Urges Aid 400,000 Flood Victims

In line with the gigantic floods which are sweeping eight states of the East Mid-western parts of the United States, Rev. M. B. So far, no clothing calls have been made, and we don't know if clothing is accepted by the Red Cross or not, but should they accept old clothing, the News will be glad to act as a collection plan for any and all clothing, canned stuffs or anything else that can be used by the flood sufferers.

Some day, something like this might happen to us, and we would like to receive help—who knows!

Funds have already started coming in for the flood relief and Herman, Alf and Guy Lockhart, all of Pidcoke brought in $1.00 each for the Red Cross. The News will be glad to handle any and all other donations if necessary.

COPPERAS COVE WINS AT CENTRAL TEXAS TOURNAMENT HELD AT TEMPLE

For twice in two years, a Coryell County team has won the Central Texas Invitation Tournament for basketball held at Temple Saturday, showing Central Texas that Coryell county lads really take their basketball seriously.

Copperas Cove fought their way through the Temple Telegram's Tournament to win the Class B Championship, Gatesville having taken Class A honors last year. Several teams were hampered by colds, mumps, and the Gatesville Hornets, favored to take the tourney, were forced to remain at home due to six players having influenza.

Copperas Cove out-reached Pearl, also a Coryell County team, in the finals by a score of 34-21.

Bright and early Monday morning, the first cases appearing before District Judge R. B. Cross, and his cohorts for trial were various inmates of the State Juvenile Training School, all accused or indicted for assault to murder Roy Catlett, guard at the institution in August of last year.

Mr. Catlett was slugged August 23 with a rock by one of the boys as they were working near the institution. Three of the boys escaping at that time.

The first case to come up was that of Lawrence Nichols in a case stilled The State of Texas vs. Lawrence Nichols, charged with Assault with intent to murder. He was given a five year suspended sentence.

Erwin Steele, in a case similarly stilled and with the same charge was given two years in the state penitentiary.

Orville Nation, also so similarly charged also got two years in the penitentiary.

Ordney Haywood, also charged with assault to murder in the same instance was given a 5-year suspended sentence.

Another case, The State of Texas vs. Lee Edward Adams, colored, charged with burglary was not completed at the time of going to press. No information as to the other cases to come up was given out from the Hall of Justice.

"THE OGLESBY OUTLOOK" MAKES FIRST ISSUE

We have "The Oglesby Outlook", a very creditable paper published weekly on Friday at Oglesby, Texas by Editor S. B. Compton, carrying a nice line of features, advertising, school and local news.

The Outlook, at present, we understand, is printed in Crawford, but soon they will have their own equipment in Oglesby and publication will be from that city. The first edition is a six page, four column paper.

WESTERN UNION SAYS "HAPPY BIRTHDAYS" TO F. D. R.

The Western Union has placed its nation wide system of telegraph offices at the disposal of the President's Birthday Ball Committee for receiving 25c from each person who places his signature on a multiple signature birthday greeting: "Happy Birthday, Mr. President. I am proud to participate in the sending of this personal greeting to you and thereby help in the fight against infantile paralysis to which you have given such notable leadership."

Signatures from every city, town and hamlet will be mailed to New York where they will be bound into what probably will be the greatest birthday greeting in history. One hundred per cent of the money will be turned over to the National Birthday Ball Committee who will arrange proper credit for each community.

Coryell County Soil Conservation Association Elects

Yesterday at noon, members of the Coryell County Soil Conservation Association met at the CCC Camp, at the call of the President, D. I. Glass, and a new board of directors was elected for the new year, consisting of W. L. Rabbe, D. I. Glass, P. H. Martin, J. L. Voss and Sam Powell.

Interesting speakers on the program were Sam Powell, who gave a discussion of "How I Managed My Farm in 1936".

D. I. Campbell, read a paper on "Relationship of Soil Fertility and Plants or Animals Grown on Land".

E. E. McCallister, the Secretary of the association, joined with Guy Powell, county agent in handling the meeting. The directors have not named the officers for the ensuing year, but besides the others named, P. H. Martin is Treasurer.

Roy H. Gough, formerly of the local camp and now at the District headquarters at Dublin, gave information from the headquarters of the district.

Capt. Alvin Moore, who is leaving soon for Lamesa, Texas, spoke briefly on "The Relationship of the Army to the S. C. Work".

After the speakers, there was a round table discussion of problems of the association, and resolutions were passed commending Roy H. Gough and Capt. Moore who are leaving or have left this camp.

Capt. Roy E. Adair, sub-district-commander of District No. 1 of Fort Worth will replace Capt. Moore as Commandant at the CCC Camp here.

And, all for charity since 30 per cent of the proceeds of the large production goes to the President's Warm Springs Foundation for the aid of children with infantile paralysis.

Today, in a special release to the Press, an exclusive interview with impressario Olsen, he stated there would be Tarzan Choruses, Adagio Dances, specialty numbers galore, and everything to make the evening a howling success.

Tickets will and are on sale at the drug stores, 25c per each, and also at the high school, and everyone is urged to buy, whether or not they can attend. 70 per cent of this money goes to local sufferers of this dreaded affliction, and will be disbursed by the Lions club. Mrs. Francis Crist is the Director of the big show.

GENERAL MOTORS STRIKE

The numerous strikes which have beset the U. S. industry during the last twelve months, have done nothing to add prestige or arouse public sympathy with labor.

The strike of 154,000 employees of the five General Motors Corporation plants at Detroit is an excellent case in point. There the attitude of labor leaders has from the beginning been one of coercion and intimidation of General Motors executives. A "sit-down" strike was called in each of the five Detroit production plants, under which the workers would neither labor nor evacuate the plants. William S. Knudsen, executive vice president and negotiator for the company, was told that the strikers would not withdraw from the plants until their demands were met.

Thus the company were confronted with an indefinite tie-up of its plants unless it acquiesced to the demands of its striking employees. Protestations of good faith on the part of General Motors executives and mediation efforts by Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan and Labor Department conciliators were of no avail in altering the demands of the union until the end of last week.

Then, both sides to the dispute made concessions which it was thought would permit a fifteen day period of negotiation. The sit-down strikers agreed to evacuate the plants upon the condition that the cooperation to remove equipment or resume operations for the duration of the consultation period, but later refused to do so because of General Motors moves to bargain with the Flint Alliance, an organization that includes many nonunion employees of the corporation, thus throwing proceedings into a stalemate.

In brief, the workers demands are these:

Six-hour day and thirtyfour week; abolition of piece-work and speed-up; minimum pay; a seniority system; reinstatement of all workers dropped for union activity; recognition of the United Automobile Workers of America as sole bargaining agency for employees; bargaining on a national scale, instead of by plants.

Prolongation of the troublous situation might have been prevented but for the obdurate stand taken by the union in contending that it should act as sole bargaining agent, President Martin's union has less than half of the 235,000 G. M. employees on its membership rolls.

The role of the company was not entirely blameless, however. The refusal of Mr Knudsen to discuss "matters of general corporate policy" held up negotiations in the early stages of the strike. The position of the company was quickly modified when it became apparent that the strikers had no intention of resuming work or of evacuating the plants so that work could be resumed with substitute workers.

Mr. Sloan, president of General Motors, stated the position of the $1,500,000,000 corporation in full-page newspaper advertisements in every part of the nation:

"Wages, working conditions, honest collective bargaining have little, if anything, to do with the underlying situation. They are simply a smoke screen to cover the real objective. That real issue is perfectly clear, and here it is: Will a labor organization run the plants of General Motors Corporation or will the management continue to do so"

Not until extreme pressure was brought to bear by State and Federal authorities did Mr. Martin and his associates relent in their announced intention of dictating terms of peace. And then as stated above, they relented only upon the condition that the company promise not to remove equipment or resume operations.

The contention of the union that it should act as sole bargaining agent in the dispute and the refusal of the workers to leave the plants were indicative

IN TRUCK LEGISLATION

Any change in existing Texas truck laws which will increase the present 7,000-pound load limit will affect adversely all communities in the state, both rural and urban. This statement is proved best by identifying the causes and effects upon Texas communities.

These are:

1. Increasing truck loads mean correspondingly increasing the distance which the truck can profitably carry its load.
2. Increasing the distance of profitable truck haul means bringing the small town wholesale houses and industrial plants, such as wholesale grocers, bottling plants, feed mills, oil mills, grain elevators, cotton compresses and retail lumber yards, into direct competition with similar establishments in large cities.
3. Such competition will inevitably result in further drying up the small country towns by taking from them the payrolls, taxes and local purchases represented by their present establishments. Property values, both residential and commercial, will decline; volume of retail sales will grow smaller and former employees will migrate to the cities to reinforce the ranks of the unemployed and the bread lines.

4. Large cities, at first stimulated by increased trade territories, bought at the expense of the country towns, will be ultimately affected adversely because of the resulting unhealthy condition of the rural communities forming these trade territories.
5. Because of the consequent shrinkage of the state's tax revenues from country towns, taxes from the cities will have to be increased correspondingly.
6. The lower truck load limit of Texas now has the effect of acting as a barrier at Texas borders to the movement of the larger truck loads carrying merchandise from the metropolitan and producing centers of other states. Any increase in Texas truck load limits will break down that barrier and permit the free truck movement into the state of many commodities which unquestionably would be sold directly to the retailers, thus destroying, in a large measure, the business of wholesalers and jobbers now located in Texas cities.

Conditions which affect adversely the well-being of Texas communities also affect Texas railroads in identical manner and degree.

of an inherent weakness in the union's demands. Such actions branded the union as seeking to gain its demands through force and not by collective bargaining, and indicated fear on the part of the union to present its demands before an impartial tribunal for consideration.

Generally, the attitude of the company has been conciliatory. At the time the recalcitrant strikers were occupying the plants, Michigan was experiencing a severe blast from Old Man Winter. The plants were heated at company expense as during operations for the comfort of the striking employees. Food was provided gratis in some instances by the company.

What Mr. Knudsen and his superior, President Sloan, have been seeking throughout has been the speedy resumption of operations so as to cause as little loss as possible to company workers, dealers and affiliated industries. The utility of mediation efforts by Governor Murphy and Federal conciliators was occasioned solely by the attitude of the union.

Denton, Jan.—Thin pastel colored woollens piled high in fascinating early showings are ready for home sewers or resort wardrobe seekers, sharing the fashion spotlight with the newest silk patterns. Both collections are causing a lot of excitement. Fingers itch to cut into the lovely materials, or you yearn to leave town in order to have a good cause for getting into the light colored outfits.

Enterprising shoppers buy the woolens and fashion some of the smartest one or slim two piece outfits that can be worn right now under fur trimmed winter coats or under fur coats. The assortments are complete and the colors have never been so intriguing.

There's a knockout powdery mauve, clear citron, exquisitely hazy blue, different new tones of Chartreuse, coral pink, some of the most flattering pastel greens that have been seen in years, and stunning putty grays, that illusive shade of gray that has been so hard to find. All these pastels come in the thin, almost sheer wools ready for the scissors and pins and patterns of the make-your-own crowd.

In the same department are bolts of brand new, but thick wools for the fitted reefer style high fashion coats to wear with are especially popular with girls at Texas State College for Women (CIA). There's a very unusual basket weave gray wool, just the right degree of darker tone to use as the subtle contrast for the light gray wool used for dresses; a deep rich old gold, a deep cornflower blue and a bright emerald green, as well as the price collections of beige wools in both the thick coat wools and the sheer dress wools.

PLAYING "BALL" WITH THE PRESIDENT

At last it had to be an individual that came across with the President's Ball idea here, or rather two individuals. We must pause to commend Pat Olsen and Mrs. Francis Crist for their leadership in this matter.

Now, since they have broken the ice, it remains for the rest of us to swamp the City Hall on the night of January 30 with our presence and "two-bits" to make this entertainment the success it certainly should be.

So, in the words of Walter Winchell, "Orchids to these two kindly souls who have shown their souls by making this Warm Springs Foundation Presidential Party a reality!"

DEEP WATER

Coryell county has never been unfortunate enough to get into serious "deep water". Consequently, we don't know what "deep water" really means, as they do in the eight states now practically covered.

Today, you'll notice on the front page, copy of a telegram to the Chairman of the American Red Cross in reference to this catastrophe. President Franklin D. Roosevelt has given the Red Cross complete charge of the relief in this section and has practically guaranteed that federal funds and the whole federal set up will be back of relief in this section.

Coryell's part, if we had a part, would be just one drop in the relief bucket, but why not give that "drop" because it is going to take many "drops" to wipe out the catastrophe that these 400,000 homeless people are suffering.

Let's do our part, even tho it might be small!

BEWARE OF FAKIRS WHO HAVE SOCIAL SECURITY FORMS TO SELL

San Antonio, Jan. 23.—It is not necessary for employers to install elaborate forms or accounting methods in order to furnish information in connection with old-age benefits provisions of the Social Security Act, it was announced today by Oscar Powell, regional director of the Social Security Board.

"Employers have told us that some salesmen have attempted to identify the Social Security Board with their products," Mr. Powell explained. "We have also been informed that prospective buyers have been told by salesmen that particular forms have been endorsed by the Social Security Board and that the Federal Government is paid a small percentage on each of these forms; that employers will be subjected to heavy fines if they do not install a certain form or system of accounting; that a particular form or system has the official approval of the Social Security Board.

"All of these allegations are false," Powell declared, "and proprietors of business houses should be warned not to allow themselves to be victimized by such misrepresentations. The facts are:

"Treasury regulations require employers who are liable for taxes under Title XIII of the Social Security Act to keep accurate records, in any form convenient to them, of all remuneration paid to employees after December 31, 1936, for services performed after that date.

"These records must include and show for each employee the name, address, and Social Security Account number; occupation; total amount and date of each remuneration payment and the period of services covered by the payment; the amount of the remuneration subject to tax; and the amount of employee's tax withheld or collected on each payment, and—if collected, at a time other than the time of payment—the date collected."

WOOD RAT EATS UP A PAIR OF LADIES SHOES

"Believe it or not," as Robert Ripley would say:

The past week in looking over his stock, E Brooks discovered a big wood rat with an increase of some eight or ten little ones all housed in one of his shoe bores. Upon further investigation he discovered that the rat had completely eaten up a pair of ladies shoes.

Now, just what do you think of a rat filling up on shoe leather in a store where so many other good, wholesome foods are kept?

It may be that shoe leather contains plenty of proteins and all the vitamins, at least we give the rat who was the victim, benefit of the doubt, and to say the least of it, Mr. Brooks is loser of one pair of shoes.—Four-County Press (Evant).

MRS. TOM MOORE, PIONEER OF IRELAND PASSES AWAY

YOUR CHILD AND THE SCHOOL

By Dr. ALLEN G. IRELAND
Director, Physical and Health Education
New Jersey State Department of Public Instruction

What Would the Child Expect?

This is about a little problem I sometimes leave with audiences. Although impossible and imaginary, it is thought-provoking.

Let's pretend. I tell them, that a child entering the school at the age of five has the experience but not the schooling of an adult of forty years. What, then, would he expect of the school? What would he tell the teachers he wanted to get from them?

This is a challenge not easily satisfied. It calls for a real analysis of one's troubles, failures, worries; a sincere acknowledgment of one's deficiencies.

I am convinced this imaginary child would ask for a thorough training in sportsmanship. With him character should stand first. Surely he would demand art and music appreciation and etiquette. Very important to him would be knowing how to drive an automobile without being killed or injured and without endangering others. He would ask for swimming and dancing, how to make a home attractive and healthful, how to select and prepare food, how to select a mate, how to raise children, how to be a good neighbor, how to succeed modestly or lose without quaror, how to be confident, honest and courageous; for of these he would say "they are life, they are what I need to live," and he could add thoughtfully, "it is my right to expect them."

Fire drills at motion picture houses are just as important as those at school. Dr. Ireland points out in his next article.

KNOW TEXAS

Denton, Jan. 20.—Have you ever noticed just how flat your food tastes when salt is omitted? It's really surprising how a few tiny grains of the crystal will bring out a flavor, and how necessary it is to your daily life.

Salt is found in natural brines and in rock formation. The industry in Texas is rapidly taking a foremost place in mineral production. Large areas, including the coastal region and plains of West Texas are underlain with a thick stratum, and there are surface outcroppings in a number of places.

Principle production in Texas is from Grand Saline in Van Zandt County, where a national salt manufacturing company operates a large mining and manufacturing industry. There is an extensive mine in the rock salt stratum 700 feet beneath the surface of the earth.

Palestine in Anderson County also boasts of a large salt producing industry which has been in operation for a long period of time, and a salt enterprise was opened at Houston several years ago. There has been a small commercial production in recent years from the salt flats north of Van Horn. This great surface deposit was a source of supply for a large area in the early history of West Texas, and it was the attempt of private interests to effect a monopoly through obtaining mineral rights that caused the so-called "salt war," in the '80's.

Courtesy of SOUTHERN LABORATORY KITCHENS

"Where Flour is Proved"

Steamed Apple Dumplings
Two cups flour, 1 tsp. salt, 1/2 cup shortening, 1/2 tsp. baking powder, enough cold water to make a stiff dough.

Sift flour, baking powder and salt together 4 times. Cut the shortening in with a knife, then add the water slowly cutting it with the edge of a spoon until thick dough is formed. Toss on to a dough board, knead slightly for a second or two, and roll out in an oblong sheet about the thickness of pie crust. Cut into 6 inch squares. Pour 1/2 cup of peeled and sliced apples in the center of each square, and over this pour 1-4 cup sugar and dot with butter using about 1 tsp. with each dumpling. Bring the corners of dough together and pinch firmly with the fingers. Place in a well buttered baking dish. Sprinkle sugar over the top and dot each one with butter. Add one tbsp. boiling water. Cover tightly and bake in a 400 degree F. oven 40 minutes. May be flavored with cinnamon if you wish.

Chicken Dumplings
2 1/2 cups flour, 1 tsp. baking powder, sweet milk, 1/2 tsp. salt, 1/2 cup shortening, 1-8 tsp. white pepper.

Sift flour, baking powder and salt and pepper together 3 or 4 times. Cut the shortening in with a knife, then crumple with tips of fingers. Add just enough sweet milk to make a stiff dough, cutting it in with the edge of a spoon. Roll out on a well floured board about 1-8 inch thick and cut into strips and drop into boiling hot water or rather stock in which the chicken has been previously cooked. The water should be boiling madly when dumplings are dropped in. Then lower heat. Cook slowly about 20 minutes. These are good. I have known some of my newspaper publishers to eat from a quart to a half gallon of them at one time.

Chicken in Blanket

Pie pastry, 1 chicken. Dissect a chicken as for frying, boil until tender. Roll pastry thin and cut into squares. Wrap each piece of chicken in a square of pastry, place in a hot oven with some of the stock and bake until brown.

Onion Shortcake

Slice 6 onions thinly, 3 slices bacon, 1 beaten egg, 1 tsp. salt, 3 tbsp. butter dough.

Melt butter and to this add onions. Allow to simmer for a few minutes. Remove from fire and cool. Add beaten egg and salt. Roll out a piece of regular biscuit dough 1/2 inch thick, put in pan; spread onion in egg mixture over top. Cut bacon into small pieces and sprinkle on top of onions. Bake in hot oven 450 degrees F. until brown.

IRELAND NEWS

It looks as if winter weather is making good headway. In the previous icy spell our town people were forced to go back to the old fashioned way of living with kerosene lamps instead of electric lamps and radios and the telephone wires were broken down, making any communication impossible.

Our school continues to increase on numbers since the starting off of the New Year. Seventeen new pupils have enrolled.

John M. Edwards and family have returned from Port Arthur and are now occupying their home in South Ireland. We are glad to welcome them to their old home town.

Mrs. Sam Pearson returned the past week from Austin where she has been at the bedside of her sister, who is quite ill and has little hope of recovery.

Pete Faubion is now at work for the Cotton Belt and was an Ireland visitor the past week end. Pete says he is liking the work fine.

Charlie Loeme and family have moved on the Doyle Ranch where Charlie will farm this year.

Mrs. Ludie Hill and daughter, Willie Percy, of Evant were very recent Ireland visitors. They have many friends here.

Mrs. George Bradley, after a visit with friends in Ireland, returned to her home in Galveston.

Barney Glasgow had risen from chore boy to Big Boss of the Line of Silas Hewitt's vast lumber domain in Wisconsin. To celebrate his promotion Barney and his friend, Swan Bostrom, whooped it up at the Alcazar Saloon in Iron Ridge. There Barney met Lotta Morgan, the singer, and fell in love with her. But true to the teachings of his mother, who had died hoping Barney would some day be an important man, he left Lotta to marry Emma Louise Hewitt, his boss' daughter, in Butte des Morts. On the day of his wedding Swan married Lotta in Iron Ridge.

Chapter Three

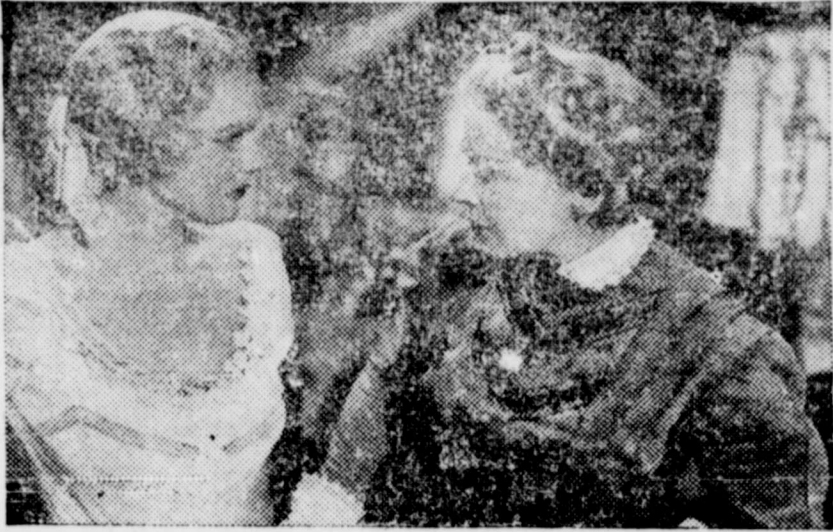

The calendar in the office of the Glasgow Paper Mills bore the date: October, 1906. Twenty-five years had passed since the day Barney Glasgow walked out of Iron Ridge, leaving Swan to console Lotta. He was a big man now, the richest and most powerful in Wisconsin. His father-in-law had died, leaving him owner of the paper mill at Butte des Morts and the vast Hewitt lumber holdings. Two children, Evvie and Richard, were the result of his union with Emmy Louise. The years had not been as kind to Emmy Louise as they had

"Barney, you old polecat!" Swan returned delightedly. Then his face fell. "I got bad news, Barney. Your camp—she burn in the middle of night—but in two weeks I fix it good as new. We get deer anyway. You stay at my house."

Barney could barely conceal his disappointment. He contemplated returning to Butte des Morts that night. But he was curious to see young Lotta, and he permitted Swan to lead him to Ridge House for breakfast. Karie, who was head waitress, greeted Barney effusively. "How'd you like to come to Swan's tonight?" she suggested. "And I'll get you a good supper. All Swede cooking."

"No thanks—I'm going back tonight," said Barney firmly. "Well, wait and see. A pity to go back without getting a deer or a bear. Do you good to stay up at the Ridge awhile. You look kind of jumpy."

But all thoughts of returning to Butte des Morts were forgotten when Barney met Lotta. Lotta was nineteen and a beauty. She had a strong slim figure, eyes of melting brown, soft full lips and bright gold hair. An incredible creature to be in such a place! The thought rang familiarly in Barney's mind. Gazing raptly at the girl, he was carried back to his first meeting with her mother, overcome by the rushing memory of that other Lotta and the electric realization that she was now standing before him, only to Barney. She was dour and faded, clinging tenaciously to her love for the still-handsome Barney. In two months' time Evvie, Barney's favorite child, was to marry Orville Bremmer, a marriage that had been arranged by her mother. Evvie had no joy in the prospect, for she secretly loved Tony Scherke, a third hand at her father's mill. Tony was too proud to marry her and accept help from her father. Provided, that is, that her father would consent to the marriage, which Evvie doubted. Every time she and Tony met they realized the hopelessness of it, but it was always the same. Evvie loved him too much to let him go.

"You and Pa been dumb all your lives!" Lotta burst out. "Mr. Glasgow's rich and can do a lot for me."

"So we aren't going to see each other any more?" said Evvie one day when they had gone over the same ground and as usual, had quarrelled. "No," replied Tony soberly. "What's the use?" "In that case," said Evvie, her eyes sparkling, "I'll sneak out to the summerhouse after I get home from Orvie's party." "I won't be there!" Tony retorted hotly. Nevertheless he took her in his arms and kissed her almost fiercely before he thrust her abruptly from him.

The air was clear and crisp, the bite of an early Wisconsin winter was in the air one morning when Evvie found her father dressing in his room. He had just received a letter from Swan, whom he had not seen in four years. Lotta, Swan's daughter, was growing up, the letter said. When her mother had died some years previously Swan's sister Karie had mothered the girl; she was now a waitress at the Ridge House. Swan urged Barney to come up for a week of hunting. Unable to face the tedious round of parties Emmy Louise had arranged in honor of Evvie's engagement to Orville Bremmer, Barney made an excuse of urgent business to his wife and left.

As he alighted from the train at Iron Ridge, Barney was greeted by Swan. Swan was sixty-three now, but he had lived a lifetime in the open and he looked ten years younger. Seeing him again, Barney was struck with the thought that he himself was getting on, much as he disliked the idea. "Hi, Swan!" shouted Barney heartily. "Where are them deer?"

younger and more ravishingly beautiful. He stayed. Swan was delighted. "By Golly, what you want, Barney? Smorgasbord and schnapps and beer and artsoppa and kaidomar, eh, Karie? By Jimminy, we give you feed that make you feel like shanty boy again! Whee! Yoap! Whee! Eee-ow!"

While the men went into the woods with their guns, Karie bustled about making preparations for the evening. "Look Lotta—soon's dinner's over this noon, I'm going to hump right home and get things goin' for supper—then I'll come back at six and you get off and be up there time Mr. Glasgow and your Pa get there." "No," said Lotta, quietly, as she ironed her second clean dress that day. Barney's interest had not been lost on her, and already a plan was forming in her mind. "I'll come later. Mr. Glasgow'll like it better if I'm not there when he comes—and then he waits awhile and thinks maybe I'm not coming—and then I come—"

Karie was dumbfounded. What was the minx up to, anyway? Giving herself airs—and with Mr. Glasgow, too! "You and Pa been dumb all your whole lives," Lotta burst out. "But I'm not going to be like that. I got ideas—Mr. Glasgow's rich and can do a lot for me. I'm Swan Bostrom's girl—and I got looks—I can amount to something and he'll help me—you just wait and see!"

Lotta was as good as her word. She kept Barney waiting until he had worked himself into a fever of impatience. He was as infatuated as a boy of twenty. Finally Lotta came. "She isn't going to wait on anybody any more if I can help it," Barney told the incredulous Swan. "Girl like her's got no business in a hotel dining room—the way those men looked at her this morning! You don't realize, Swan—she's got to have the right start—I want to help her." Then, almost believing himself and feeling virtuous, he added hastily, "Least I could do for old times' sake. . . ."

In the kitchen Lotta gleefully faced Karie. "What did I tell you?" she cried triumphantly. "You stick to me and you'll wear diamonds!"

Broadway LIMITED

by W. A. S.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—When I received a colorful invitation to have tea with "Seigneur et la Dame de Serk" I presumed a new hot spot was opening in town... further investigation revealed that the Seigneur and his Dame—Lord and Lady to you—were the only feudal State rulers in the world... Taking my courage in both hands—and feet... I hopped and skipped over, mindful to watch my p's and q's and grammar in general—not to offend high nobility... only to find the "Seigneur" to be Bob Hathaway, born in Iowa, and who married "La Dame" several years ago, just to help the little lady rule over her 560 subjects... under benevolent British rule... and I had naively believed that at last I had crashed into royalty!...

Of course New York is feeling the after effects of the most prosperous New Year week in years... it was a week of tumult... Broadway prospered... plays sold out, hot spots and even ordinary feed places turned customers away... and now that the din has died away, and New Yorkers and out of town visitors have returned to their humdrum ways, I hear a few kick-backs... "New York wasn't so hot!" etc., etc... only a very few—true... but brother (and sister!) your reporter whose wanderlust has taken him to the four corners of the earth in search of sights and lights still insists: That, if you want a gay day or night... to the accompaniment of hospitable folks... beautiful girls... and the world's finest choice of entertainment, food and drinks—just head straight for little old New York, and you won't be disappointed... It's got everything! Of course, I too was tipped off to the fact that Gracie Allen and George Burns would arrive in town bringing a "load of dirt" with them... the telegram had said so Curious, I joined the rest of the newshawks and dirt disher-outs... but what Gracie had was just plain dirt, and she wheeled it off the train in a little red wheelbarrow with a gag about it being "the only kind of dirt I could find in Hollywood"... And I had passed up a date with a Beatrice Lillie chorine, who had promised to give me a true story of her life just to get Gracie's "dirt" straight from Hollywood... The Broadway Parade.
