Feno W. Straw Buried In City Cemetery Here Wednesday Morning

Funeral services were held Wednesday morning at 10 a. m. at the First Baptist church of this city, for F. W. (Feno) Straw, conducted by Clarence A. Morton of the First Baptist Church. He was buried in the city cemetery.

Mr. Straw was born 48 years ago at the family home near Straw's Mill. He was educated in Gatesville, attending and graduating from the local high school. After leaving school, he worked for a grocery concern here before he received a job as clerk in the First National Bank. For twenty-six or seven years he followed banking as a profession, rising from his first job to a directorship and official of the bank where he gained an enviable reputation as a progressive banker, both at home and in the state. He gained many friends and the love and respect of citizens of Gatesville and Coryell county. He was a member of the Baptist Church, a Mason, Knight Templar and Shriner. Had been City Treasurer for a number of years, and was treasurer of the building committee of the First Baptist Church.

Rev. C. A. Morton in delivering his message Wednesday morning said: "there are three brief facts about his life: 1. He gave himself to his calling, 2. His love for his wife and family, and 3. His love for Jesus Christ and his ever devotion to the church."

"He was clean in person, pure in speech, sympathetic in spirit, big in heart, in disposition,—an upright, true man."

Mr. Straw leaves a large concourse of friends to mourn his going. In addition to his wife, Mrs. Vivian Straw, three boys, Jack Harry and Henry. He also has two sisters, Mrs. Stanley Peavy, of Graham and Mrs. A. R. Wilson of Houston, besides many other relatives and friends.

Out of town people who were here for the funeral, were Mr. and Mrs. Alvis Williams of Waco, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Perryman of Denison, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Smith of Waco, Byron Leaird McClellan of Austin, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Harper of Oglesby and Guy Draper.

Pallbearers were Dawson Cooper, Leake Ayres, Lewis Holmes, John O. Potts, Walter Stewart, R. R. Anderson, D. I. Glass, and C. C. Sadler.

Grand Jury Adjourns

After a return session of one day, Wednesday, the Grand Jury adjourned again after reporting four indictments, which were not divulged by the Sheriff's department.

Harvey Rivers First in Friday, 29th, Puzzle; Mildred Mayberry, 2nd

Novelty and uniqueness came into play in the News' second Puzzle Contest, featuring our advertisers and "cut-up" pictures of "People in the News" which has been running in "Your County Newspaper."

These winners, are Harvey Rivers of Gatesville first, winner of the $1.00 prize, and Mildred Mayberry of Ireland, second prize winner of a subscription for one year to the News.

This week's contest, we divert, just a little, from the regular run of "People in the News" just to make it more interesting and put in two people who you read about practically the minute you start in school, and another fellow who is rather big in public life. Try it! It's fun—and, you might win.

Other entries who sent in very good entries to the contest but unfortunately, not quite good enough were: Mrs. A. L. Sharp, Miss Callie Logan, Gatesville, Rt. 3; J. W. Hancock, Mound; Tomilene Young, Tama Star. These will be placed in our window so that you may see them.

BOY SCOUT WEEK FEB. 7-13

For 27 years, this organization has been in operation, the Boy Scouts of America. From a small obscure band of youths to a national organization.

The main reasons for the extraordinary growth of this particular organization, is what it stands for: good morals, right living, helpfulness, and cleanliness. These, and the fact that it touches the most important part of America, the youth of the nation, are the main reasons for its flourishing.

These boys, leaders of tomorrow, are the pillars of America's security. These boys are "organized" properly, and with adult guidance. They are not members of "gangs," with no guidance, and bad tendencies.

For these reasons, we say, "Hail, Boy Scouts of America!"

"FENO"

"Feno" to literally hundreds. F. W. Straw, an outstanding man in Coryell county's history was buried here Wednesday of this week.

A life like Mr. Straw's is not over with his obituary. Not by any means. His influence, his connections, his help to many people who came to him in his position as a banker in this section will make him long remembered and revered.

Too, Mr. Straw, was a man of varied activities, a churchman, a city official, a member of the Chamber of Commerce, and an outstanding figure in his every endeavor.

Coryell county, in losing a citizen like Mr. Straw is a loser as well as his many friends, his relatives and his immediate family.

J. J. TAYLOR CHOSEN AS HEAD OF "DALLAS NEWS"

Dr. J. J. Taylor, member of the editorial staff of The Dallas Morning News for the past 33 years has just been named Editor-in-Chief of his publication and allied publications, one of the greatest newspapers in the state and United States. Mr. Taylor was editor of the State Press column on the editorial page of this well known paper. He replaces Dr. Dealy who died recently.

William B. Ruggles, former sports editor and editorial writer has been appointed associate editor of this paper. Lynn W. Landrum is associate editor of the Journal, and DeWitt McMurray, associate editor of the Semi-Weekly Farm News.

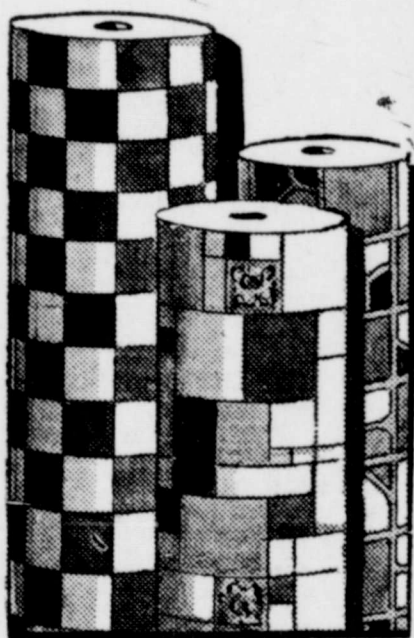

Dr. Taylor was formerly of Wilson, N. C., but came to Texas as a youth living at Clarksville where he became half owner of the Clarksville Times in association with S. B. Stanley. Among his first friends in Texas was John Nance Garner. He joined the News in 1904, and his popularity has been enhanced by his work in the column which he has conducted, "The State Press."

POSTMASTER GENERAL TO VISIT IN TEXAS

(Special to the News)
Washington, D. C. January 28.—Of widespread interest to the Democrats of the southwest, and particularly to those of this congressional district, is the forthcoming visit of Postmaster General Farley to Waco in March. It is believed that democratic leaders throughout Texas will formulate elaborate plans for his entertainment.

Mr. Farley comes to Waco to dedicate the new postoffice and Federal building. Wacoans should feel honored in that a figure of national prominence has agreed to be present for the occasion. In as much as the Postmaster General has never before appeared at such and affair outside his native state, New York, a gala program, no doubt will be arranged.

At the invitation of Waco Postmaster J. M. Patillo, the Waco Chamber of Commerce, and upon the personal insistence of Congressman W. R. Poage, M. Farley finally agreed to break a precedent and be present in Waco for the dedicatory program.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD THIS AFTERNOON FOR T. C. ROBERTSON

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon (Tuesday) at the First Methodist Church of this city with Rev. M. M. Chunn, pastor, officiating. Interment in the City Cemetery.

Mr. Robertson had been sick a short while having succumbed from injuries received when he fell on a stick of wood injuring his right side.

Martinelli Tells Story of Opera To Be Broadcast From Metropolitan

By GIOVANNI MARTINELLI

More operatic careers have begun and ended in single performances of the opera I sing in next Saturday afternoon than in all other operas put together. Many a man who today goes placidly about his business—he may be lawyer, broker or physician—will, with the least of encouragement, relate his personal experience in grand opera, or to be more exact, in Verdi's "Aida." For here is an opera—which, by the way, will be heard over the National Broadcasting Company under the sponsorship of the Radio Corporation of America—that does not demand that one be singer or dancer. It is enough to be able to carry a spear in the scene where Radames, the role I sing, returns from victory over the Ethiopians, and there must be thousands of heroes still living who in their day have passed in review before the Pharaoh of ancient Egypt.

"Aida," written at the order of the Khedive of Egypt and first produced at Cairo, is really a glorious musical spectacle, built around the rivalry of Amneris, daughter of the Pharaohs, and Aida, captive Ethiopian princess, for the love of Radames.

It opens at the king's palace, where the priest Ramfis is dropping a hint to Radames about a certain brave young soldier who will lead the Egyptian arms against the Ethiopians. "If I were only that warrior," breathes Radames, dreaming of victory that will reward him with his beloved Aida. Amneris, softly approaching, takes note of the ardent light in Radames' eyes, and tells him how much to be envied is the woman who could inspire such love. Her woman's wit sharpened by jealousy, she fishes for the name of a possible rival. "Aida—perhaps it is she!"

King and court enter to invest Radames with his command against the "fierce and indomitable" Amonasro. "My father!" gasps Aida. Torn between love and loyalty, she cheers

Radames; then, left alone when he goes to the temple, bitterly chides herself for divided sympathies.

Amneris, as the second act opens, plans her own conquest, but she cannot rest for jealousy. Deftly she draws out the secret of Aida's love by telling her that Radames has fallen, then cruelly tells her that both shall welcome the returning victor—"thou prostrate in the dust, I on the throne beside the King."

Then comes the magnificent scene wherein Radames, preceded by troops, chariots, ensigns, sacred vases and statues of gods, troops of dancers—pomp and splendor unsurpassed in opera—enters to be greeted by the King. Amneris crowns the victor and the King bids him name his reward. Prisoners, among them Aida's father who has concealed his kingly rank, are brought forward. Radames then asks this boon: freedom for all Ethiopian prisoners. But Ramfis demands that Amonasro and Aida be held; "let the rest be free."

The King, bestowing the hand of Amneris on Radames, declares, "With her, some day, shalt thou reign over Egypt." "Now let the slave come to take my love—if she dares!" says Amneris. To Aida, it seems, nothing remains but the tears of hopeless love. Radames groans that "the throne of Egypt is not worth the heart of Aida."

The third act opens on the starlit banks of the Nile. Amneris comes to pray on the eve of her marriage and Aida cautiously follows to meet Radames for the last time. Amonasro steps from the darkness and, playing on Aida's love and patriotism, promises her freedom, marriage to Radames and victory for Ethiopia if she will only learn the location of the Egyptian army.

He withdraws and hears Radames inadvertently betray the secret to Aida. Then he presents himself as King of Ethiopia and proposes that Radames desert, promising the hand of Aida as reward. Then Amneris, followed by priests, breaks forth from the temple and denounces Radames as a traitor. Aida and Amonasro escape; Radames surrenders.

If vindictiveness rules Amneris, still she loves Radames with all the passionate hunger of a selfish woman. In the fourth act she tries to save him. "Renounce her," she pleads, "and thou shalt live!" He refuses, and in futile rage she tells him go to his doom. Radames is condemned.

In the last scene he enters a vault to be buried alive. As priests chant above him, a shadowy figure approaches. It is Aida, who has chosen to die with Radames. They die in each other's arms while, above the tomb, the sobbing and penitent Amneris prays for Radames. And so, with the duet O Terra Addio (Farewell, O Earth), ends the grand spectacle with its great music.

Aida, in the broadcast performance, will be Gina Cigna; Amneris will be Bruna Castagna. Norman Cordon, Ezio Pinza and Carlo Morrell will sing the King, Ramfis and Amonasro. Our conductor will be Ettore Panizza.

EMPLOYEE'S NUMBERS DUE OUT SOON, REPORTS INDICATE

San Antonio, Feb. 1—Employers' identification numbers which are being assigned by the Social Security Board, will be received by employers well in advance of the time when they are first needed in filing information returns to the Bureau of Internal Revenue, it was announced today by Oscar M. Powell, regional director of the Board. Powell said many inquiries had been received from employers about these numbers.

"These identification numbers will not be used by employers until they file their first information returns in July for the period January 1 to June 30, 1937," Powell said. "Although tax returns must be filed each month, the identification numbers are required on them."

Employers were urged, however, to make application for identification numbers immediately, if they have not already done so. Applications (Form SS-4) may be obtained at post offices, field offices of the Social Security Board and from Collectors of Internal Revenue. Completed employers' applications are to be forwarded directly to the Wage Records Office of the Social Security Board, Baltimore, Maryland.

Styles for women's hats in Paris will be more extravagant than ever during 1937.

Lets Talk about Clothes

TEXAS STATE COLLEGE FOR WOMEN (CIA)

Denton, Jan. 30.—It takes wizardry, super-imagination, color sense to the nth degree, and enthusiasm to make hats that lift any and all out of a mid-season slump. But it's been done. Some of the most exciting models we've seen are in the shops ready for immediate wear.

Every one of the new hats achieves flattery. Each is daintily individual and not a single creation is anything but rhythm, inimitable color combination, and the last word in wickedly French accented smartness. For instance, the silk turbans are noteworthy examples of what undertaking hat-makers have done for a dark day in town. These are brilliantly colored and deftly tied in new headlines to cause appreciative glances from the spectators.

Vivid reds with greens and yellows, a reddish orange splashed with jade green and beige mixups, are the outstanding color combinations. These patterns dramatize all kinds of headlines, to say nothing of assuring a vivid accent for coats or suits. They also come in soft crepes as well as the smooth silks.

Tiny pill box hats of practically every fabric have beguiling streamers for smart sophistication. Black and beige lead the parade in colors, but there are some raspberry red numbers giving them a good run for popularity.

Variations of the Mary Stuart hat are seen in great numbers along the boulevard, and these interesting little models are special favorites with girls at Texas State College for Women (CIA). They're youthful, flattering to the face, and can be worn with a variety of frocks.

SOCIETY

Bride Elect Tendered Shower
Miss Elaine Cross, bride-to-be of Denver Roberts of Pettus, was honored Friday afternoon when Mesdames Marion Burlison of this city and Doyle Baldrige of Temple were co-hostesses at a gift party at the home of Mrs. E. L. Stewart on East Bridge street. A blue and gold motif was carried out in house decorations and games of bridge furnished the diversion of the afternoon. High and second high score awards went to Mrs. Floyd Zeigler and Miss Nola Mai Weaver and the honoree was presented a lovely gift which was wrapped in blue and tied with gold ribbon. The ribbon on the package was tied to a gift box in an adjoining room and when pulled into the room held an array of beautiful gifts.
Sharing the courtesies were Misses Francis Austin Nola Mai Weaver, Ruth Raby Franks, Mesdames Rufe Brown, R. B. Cross, Sherrill Kendrick, Byron Leard Jr., J. E. McClellan, Clark Jensen, Billy Nesbitt, Fred P. Mika, E. W. Jones Jr., L. K. Thomson Jr., Floyd Zeigler, Mrs. Morris Roberts of Pettus and the honoree, Mrs. L. K. Thomson Sr. was a caller.

"WHO'S THE BURGLAR" NAME OF SEVENTH GRADE PLAY

"Who's the Burglar?" a three act play, will be presented in the High School auditorium, Tuesday evening, February 9, 1937, at 7:30 by the members of the seventh grade of the Elementary School. The play is being directed by Mrs. Crist and promises to be very entertaining.

A group of high school students have gathered at the home of the Lansings for a week end party. Everyone will be interested in seeing how Miles Alden, a Boston law student played by Jimmy McClellan, is mistaken for a burglar by Dixie Davis, played by Frances Reesing, who attempts to reform him. Billy Merrill, a young freshman played by Bill Lasseter, becomes entangled in a scheme planned by Sidney Hiltton, a card shark, played by Ben Owen Crow. In this scheme Billy is accused of stealing a copy of a trick play and selling it to the opposing and see just how Dixie reforms Miles, how Tom Lansing, played by Duncan Kirkpatrick, who loves Billy Merrill's sister, Millicent Merrill, played by Margaret Zeigler, comes to Billy's rescue. Other characters are Ralph Lawrence, the football coach played by Dick Anderson; a Knight of the Jimmy, played by Charles Bailey Sydow; Shirley Hathaway played by Betty Jo Stewart; Eloise Elmer, a devotee of art and adjectives, played by Johnny Belle Coskrey; Frances Palmer, Mable Marion Brown; Gretchen Lansing, Mary Jane Stone; Amy Dean, Georgia Morgan; Pauline Thayer, Waldeen Clemons; Judith Gray, Katherine Ward; Mrs. Wilberton, Julia Ann Melbern; Tilly, Linnie Fae Turner; Patsy, Jean Hill; Ruth, Louvina Braziel; Jeanette, Dorothy Thompson; Sue, Winifred Rogers; and Emma, Onie Patterson.

Don't miss this exciting, comical and highly entertaining performance of an all-star cast! Proceeds will be used for the senior gift. Don't forget—Tuesday evening, February 9, 1937, at the High School Auditorium at 7:30.

Leou Degrelle, so-called Belgian Hitler, was fined 30 cents for his part in the October, 1935, street riots in Belgium.

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

By WILL ROGERS

SOME folks never leave their nerve at home. But restaurant people tell me they meet more nerry ones than anybody else. Maybe they mean among themselves or they might be blaming the customers, I don't know.

In a swell restaurant in Pittsburg the other day, a feller sat down and ordered a planked sirloin steak and as many high-falutin' side-dishes as he could eat. After complaining to the waiter about the service, he finished the meal and called for the headwaiter.

The headwaiter came over, and this bird looks at him and says, "Ain't you the guy that threw me out of this joint a couple of years ago when I was temporarily short of funds?"
"That might be true, sir," explained the waiter, "but those were the rules, and I..."

"Well," says the customer, "You did such a good job that I'm back again, only this time I'm permanently embarrassed, so I guess you'll have to kick me out permanently."

Mr. and Mrs. Kay Kimball drove down from Fort Worth Thursday and Mrs. Laura Rayford returned home with them to visit for the next two weeks.

Perry Davidson and Miss Ruth Rutherford visited Misses Ruby Merle Henson and Irma Lee Rutherford in Brownwood over the week end.

Mrs. C. E. Alvis Jr. left the first part of this week for Roscoe to be at the bedside of her mother, Mrs. E. J. Worthy, who has been ill for the past week.

Richard Johnson, who has been visiting his sister, Mrs. Geo. Bean and family, returned to his home in Brownwood Wednesday morning.

SPORTS

Basketball

This afternoon at one o'clock the annual Senior Boy's Basketball Tournament gets underway with no heavy favorite in betting. On the hardwood of the High School Gym the thump-thump brigade will match crisp shots and dribbles to decide the championship of Coryell county and for the honor of going on into district competition.

Under ordinary circumstances the Gatesville High Hornets would be the pre-tournament favorites, because of their larger enrollment and number of cage stars from the rural districts. Before the nightmare of the second semester the Hornets boasted of one of the classiest teams in central Texas, one that might have entered the state finals. Decisive wins over Waco High and Brownwood High, much larger schools with impressive records, had the fans glowing in a rosy optimistic attitude with thoughts of great things to come, but a run of hard luck has dispelled those ambitions.

Influenza and ineligibility have wrecked Coach Worley's cage machine, and his revamped model is faring little better with the dreaded "flu" still raging. With all the breaks, the Hornets may finish ahead of the field, but probably will wind up somewhere in the top bracket.

From the rural districts come the "dark horses" of the tournament. Turnersville, Jonesboro and Pearl. Out of these three contestants will probably come the champion of the tournament. Since the early days when your correspondent used to ask Papa "for a dime to go the County Meet" these three teams have always been strong and always potential champions of the annual affair.

Jonesboro seems to be the class of the crop this year, with Pearl and Turnersville in that order. Levita and Ireland are the darkest "dark horses" of the entire tournament and may cause some surprises.

Today come the elimination games with the playoffs on Saturday. Beginning at 7:30 tonite with Turnersville vs. Pearl, the "major games" of the meeting start.

With the sun shining steadily and the roads somewhat dried up the gymnasium should be packed for this yearly gathering of the county's basketball teams and fans.

EDWARD ARNOLD TOPS THE "COME AND GET IT!" LINEUP

"Come and get it!" Sameul Goldwyn's production of Edna Ferber's colorful novel of the lumber camps brings Edward Arnold, Joel McCrea and Frances Farmer to the Regal Theatre for three days beginning next Saturday.

Arnold has his greatest role as Barney Glasgow, the great lumber baron who, in his youth had given up love for power, and years later is mocked by his decision when he falls madly in love with the daughter of the woman he once loved, and finds his own son his successful rival.

Great Cast

Joel McCrea is seen as the son and Frances Farmer, the lovely blond newcomer, plays both the mother and daughter Arnold loves.

Mady Christians versatile Viennese actress, is seen in the important featured role of Aunt Karie and Walter Brennan, the unforgettable "Old Atocity" of "Barbary Coast," has his best role to date as "Swan," the colorful old Swedish lumberman.

Others prominently cast are Mary Nash, the distinguished stage star, Frank Shield, the tennis ace, and Andrea Leeds, the beautiful new Goldwyn discovery.

Risked Lives

A location risked their lives in the dense woods of Northern Idaho to get authentic lumber camp scenes for "Come and Get It!"

Edna Ferber, who gave us "Cimarron," "So Big" and "Show Boat," personally supervised the adaption of her latest novel to the screen by Jules Furthman and Jane Murfin.

Howard Hawks and William Wyler collaborated on the direction of this powerful production which is said to top any film that was ever produced for drama, thrills, spectacle, romance and comedy.

"Come and Get It," is released through United Artists. The costumes are by Omar Kiam and the sets by Richard Day.

Mrs. Arch Boyd is confined to her bed with the mumps.

Mrs. Doyle Baldrige, who spent the latter part of last week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Gandy returned to her home in Temple Saturday.

MEAT FOR CHILDREN

Dried Beef with Toast Points

By MARIE GIFFORD
Armour Food Economist

There are still a goodly number of anxious mothers who come forth with periodic questions about what kinds of meat they may serve their young children.

Like all people with healthy appetites children relish the flavor of meat. This enthusiastic response of the young child to meat flavor is to be expected for meats have the highest appetizing qualities of any single food.

Far from being harmful in the young child's diet, meat is considered an essential by the present day medical and nutrition world. Bacon is allowed in the diet of very young children because of its appetizing qualities and its highly digestible fat. Chopped lean beef and liver are next to enter the child's diet and may be served once a day from toddling age on. Any well prepared lean meat, such as chicken, lamb, beef or veal, prepared by broiling, roasting or simmering are suitable for the pre-school youngster.

Dried beef is another cured lean meat which has a valued place in the child's menu. Give it variety by serving it in sandwiches or mixed with scrambled eggs. Creamed dried beef is always in order and should be served not over toast but with toast points which the child can pick up in his hands and eat.

All these provide the essential proteins for adequate growth requirements and the building up of new tissue, besides the invaluable iron so essential to the blood. Heart, liver sweet breads and kidney are doubly valuable because they supply not only those good proteins but valuable vitamins and an extra supply of iron.

In cooking any of these lean meats for children—be sure to cook them lightly and season them lightly as well. A very little salt is all that is necessary.

Farm Home Conditions Improved in 1936; Outlook Good

College Station—The general conditions of farm home life throughout District 8, which is composed of Anderson, Bell, Bosque, Burnet, Coryell, Falls, Freestone, Hamilton, Hays, Houston, Lampasas, Leon, Limestone, McLennan, Madison, Milam, Robertson, Travis and Williamson Counties, is much improved and the outlook for 1937 is the best since 1928, according to Miss Zetha McInnis, district agent supervising the work.

"Fewer women are saying that they can't attend meetings because they don't have gasoline," she said. Women and proved their kitchens by adding windows and doors, improving the floors and walls, installing water systems, adjusting work surfaces to comfortable heights and adding equipment such as storage cabinets, kitchen stools, refrigerators and lamps. A total of $13,995.41 was spent in making these improvements.

Totals show that 4,843 plants have been put out in landscaping farm homes; 1,018 trees have been set out, many of which are pecans and will add to the farm income in years to come.

girls, totaling 6,541, enrolled in 393 home demonstration and 4-H Clubs in 15 counties of District 8 have provided $28,224 containers of canned or brined meats, fruits and vegetables; have stored, cured and dried 963,611 pounds of meats, fruits and vegetables in 1936. Various means were employed to provide this food. Some grew it all, some exchanged a surplus of one food for a shortage in another, while others exchanged labor for food.

In nine counties 3,836 women and girls have helped to clothe themselves and families fashionably and adequately by keeping accounts which have helped them to spend wisely the money available for clothing. A careful study of colors and designs suitable to the wearer, brands which are good, and care and cleaning of garments also aided.

Home improvements requiring very much money have not been made during the past few years, but the cash brought into the counties through the Agricultural Conservation Program has relaxed the tense feeling about money and many farmstead buildings have been repaired, new ones built, and the grounds landscaped. Anderson, Limestone and McLennan Counties conducted a kitchen improvement demonstration in which 1,136 of the 1,190 enrolled im-

WASHINGTON WITH Congressman

W. R. (BOB)
POAGE

The House has been in session all afternoon each day this week and some days into the night, but it has passed only one piece of important contested legislation. This is the so-called Postmasters' Civil Service Bill, introduced by Congressman Ram-speck of Georgia. This bill has received good publicity and is leading the public to believe that it placed all postmasters under the Civil Service and that it took the postmasters' appointments entirely out of politics. Certainly no one would be more ardently in favor of this than a Congressman who has to make selection of postmasters between a number of his good friends. I earnestly wish that we could remove every vestige of congressional influence from the appointment of postmasters, but this bill did not do that. As I see it, it simply undertook to perpetuate the present First, Second and Third-class postmasters in their positions. It provides that all postmasters shall be appointed "with-out term" and that is for life or good behavior. It then adds that "Postmasters now serving who have satisfactory records shall continue to serve until their four-year terms of office expire, after which they may be reappointed without term, in accordance with the provisions of Section 2 of this Act." Then Section 2 provides—"Appointments to positions of postmaster at First, Second and the Third-class post offices shall be made by the reappointment and classification, non-competitively, of the incumbent postmaster or by promotion from within the Postal Service in accordance with the provisions of the Civil Service Act and Rules, unless the Postmaster General certifies . . . that there is no qualified person serving in the vacant office."

As I understand this language, it is simply an attempt to freeze Democratic postmasters into lifetime positions and I feel that it will even fail in that, because it is certain that if the Republicans came back in power they will repeal the bill. In the meantime, it does not remove postmasters from politics, inasmuch as it leaves the way wide open for wire pulling to get the Postmaster General to certify that there is or is not a qualified employee in an office, and when the examination is given it still allows the selection to be made from the three high men. As I see it, it has all the evils of the old system. I voted for a substitute which would have required every postmaster to take a competitive examination at the end of a four year term and let the high man in the examination get the position. This of course would have eliminated all political influence and would have given anyone an even break at these positions, but this amendment was defeated, largely, I think because the Republicans supported it and many Democrats would not vote for anything that the Republicans supported. There were, however, three of us from Texas who supported the proposal. This bill has not yet passed the Senate, but it is assumed the Senate will approve of anything the House does in regard to postmasters.

The other outstanding activity of the week was the President's reception for Members of Congress and their families. There were approximately a thousand people present at the White House and while I had great difficulty in getting dressed for the occasion, I found it rather interesting to attend. Usage requires all gentlemen attend this affair in full dress and while I succeeded in getting hold of the necessary clothes I found myself unable to tie the tie and had to ride across town to get Representative Garrett, of Eastland, to tie it for me. I then went to the White House with Mr. and Mrs. Garrett. On arriving, we had to show a card on our windshield to be admitted to the White House grounds and presented another card at the door to be admitted to the White House. We then checked our wraps and were lined up in the East Room and allowed to pass into the Red Room where the President and Mrs. Roosevelt stood in front of a fern bank and shook hands with each visitor whose name was announced by an official with more gold braid than a Rear Admiral. We then passed on through the Blue Room, into the State Dining Room, where punch, cake, candy and nuts were served and we then returned to the East Room where dancing was engaged in for about an hour. The President did not come into the rooms where the guests were, but Mrs. Roosevelt made a hurried tour.

"DON'T REFUSE TO HIRE IF NO NUMBERS," POWELL

San Antonio, Feb. 1.—Employers should not refuse to hire workers who do not have social security account numbers, Oscar M. Powell, regional director of the Social Security Board, declared today after he had received numerous complaints from individuals who said they had been refused employment merely because they were without account numbers.

"It is not necessary for the employer to have the employee's account number immediately," Powell said. "Employee account numbers will not be needed by employers for their first information returns to the Bureau of Internal Revenue until July, 1937. The monthly tax return to the Bureau of Internal Revenue does not require employees' account numbers to be listed."

"However, all individuals under the age of 65 in employments covered by the Social Security Act who have not already done so should file application (Form SS-5) for an account number immediately in order that they may receive account numbers well in advance of dates they are required for these information returns.

"Employees' applications for account number (Form SS-5) are now available upon request at all post offices, at the field offices of the Social Security Board and at offices of the Collectors of Internal Revenue. They may be returned to post offices through the employer, through a labor organization, or by mail or personal delivery.

"Employers are right in encouraging their employees to obtain account numbers as soon as possible," Powell asserted, "but employment should not be refused to a man simply because he has not received an account number."

"IF YOUR MONEY'S GONE" BRING OLD CLOTHES FOR FLOOD RELIEF

It's being done in Waco, and other places! We have a big lobby we are not using, and already have a few old clothes to send to the Flood Relief, so if anyone has any old clothes to donate for the flood sufferers, we'll gladly take them, and may be we can figure some way out to get them to the proper spot, or St. Louis, or some other distribution point.

WORLD COMMENT

Joe Burns

The Ohio Valley Disaster

Frequent assertions that many phases of the New Deal program have been incompetent finds plenty of substantiation in the floods which have ravaged the Ohio Valley, taking a toll of 425 lives to date, rendering 1,250,000 homeless, and destroying property in excess of $400,000,000.

Since 1932 billions of dollars have been poured forth from Washington for CWA, CCC, and PWA projects. As many as five million men have been on the pay rolls of these agencies at one time, and a most Americans are painfully aware, many of these have done no more constructive work than chop weeds on a vacant lot or lean on a hoe handle.

This is not to say that the named agencies together with the Public Works Administration have not carried out some very worthwhile projects, but it is to say this: that none of the projects for which funds were provided from Washington were as desperately needed as flood-prevention construction on the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers.

That Washington was unaware of the need of flood-prevention work in the valleys of the two rivers can not be asserted, for as early as 1928 army engineers outlined a huge program for the construction of dams, levees, and spillways on the Mississippi and Ohio to cost eight billions of dollars. That Washington for the last four years has had millions of men under its employ and has expended billions of dollars for public works and rehabilitation projects without following flood-prevention recommendations signifies woeful lack of coordinated planning.

Following the devastating dust storms of 1934 and 1936, Civilian Conservation Corps boys were sent into action on the broad plains of the middle west reforesting the barren hills and government authorities are expected to lessen the possibility of a recurrence of the dust storms or alleviate their widespread destructiveness if they do recur.

Yet the dust storms could be foreseen by no man, although they were the result of his own work in denuding the slopes and plains of vegetation to make way for the planting of wheat during the World War. But the rivers of the eastern and north central portions of North America have been periodically flooding their valleys since long before white man set foot on this continent.

A splendid beginning could have been made on the proposal of army engineers in the last four years, although the entire plan involving the expenditure of eight billions could not have been completed of course. But reforestation will delay the runoff of the rains, and storage and check dams on the headwaters will equalize the flow of the rivers. Had such work been diligently pursued by CWA, CCC, WPA and PWA Administrations since their creation at various intervals since 1932, the catastrophic consequences of the Ohio flood could have been allayed to great extent. The floods are coming; they have been coming for hundreds of years; man cannot prevent the floods, but he can by sedulous labor control them. They must be controlled floods are to be inhabited and habitable.

Perhaps Washington will make a start on this great work. Perhaps the opposition of power interest, fearful of the efforts to make the storage dams pay for themselves through the generation of electric current, will delay or prevent such work as has so often been the case in the past.

There is no question but that with proper engineering and the expenditure of a sufficient sum of money the valleys of such rivers as the Ohio, the Missouri and the Mississippi could be made safe for human habitation, that is, the people of these regions might be freed from the ravages of the rivers, freed from seeing their homes, their possessions, often their loved ones lost in the swirling, muddy waters of an angry water body.

Important Social Security Information For Employers Of Less Or More Than 8 Employees

Austin, Feb. 4.—Texans liable for Social Security taxes should put a red circle on their calendars around the dates February 25, February 28 and March 31.

With Texas employers facing three different deadlines for filing four different returns under the Social Security law, collecting agencies here in Austin are fearful that many more will be penalized unless they familiarize themselves with the situation created by the recent granting of extensions for filing returns and making payments.

R. B. Anderson, chairman of the Texas Unemployment Compensation Commission, and Frank Scofield, collector of Internal Revenue for the First Texas district today joined in an appeal to taxpayers to acquaint themselves with the final filing dates.

"The first thing I want made clear," Collector Scofield said, "is that the extension granted by the treasury department a few days ago applies only to taxes for unemployment compensation, or Title 9 of the Act. Therefore it applies only to those employing eight or more persons who are due to make returns on Form 940, covering the calendar year 1936. It does not apply to Title 8, the old age benefit section, which is concerned with employers of one or more persons and who should file returns on Form SS-1. The old age benefits tax is payable monthly, the final date being the last date of the succeeding month. Thus, the return for the month of January, 1937, must be in my office on or before February 28. There has been no extension applying to this title and I am without power to grant one."

The extension which was granted by the treasury department allowed an additional 60 days for filing such returns. Under the law no further extensions can be granted for these returns.

Chairman Anderson's chief concern is that Texas taxpayers not confuse this 60 days' extension with the 30 days' extension granted by the Texas commission. The new deadline for the payment of the Texas Unemployment Compensation tax for the calendar year 1936 is February 25, while the Federal deadline on this tax is March 31.

The Texas commission also has a series of monthly payments not affected by the extension. All employers of eight or more persons must take monthly returns during 1937. These monthly payments are due not later than the 25th day of the month following that for which payment is made. Thus, February 25 is the final date for payment of the Texas unemployment compensation tax for January, 1937.

"I want to urge all employers who come under the Texas Unemployment Compensation Act to pay the state the required nine-tenths of one per cent on 1936 pay rolls as soon as possible," Chairman Anderson said. "Such payments must actually have been made to our fund before credit can be granted on the Federal tax. In short, the total unemployment compensation tax for the year of 1936, if it is paid on time, will be only one per cent—nine-tenths to the state and one-tenth to the federal government. But if employers do not make their payments to the Texas Commission in time to get Federal credit, then they will be liable for the full amount of both state and federal taxes, or a total of one and nine-tenths per cent on their 1936 payrolls."

The schedule for employers is as follows:

February 25—All employers of eight or more must pay their unemployment compensation tax for the month of January, 1937, by this date. This tax, also to be paid to the state commission, is one and eight-tenths per cent of the total payroll for January, 1937.

February 28—Employers of 8 or more persons must pay the federal unemployment compensation tax for 1936 to the collector of internal revenue.

March 31—Employers of eight or more persons must pay the federal unemployment compensation tax for 1936 to the collector of internal revenue. This tax is one-tenth of one per cent of the total 1936 pay roll provided nine-tenths of one per cent has been paid into the state fund and credit properly claimed; otherwise the federal tax is one per cent of the 1936 pay roll.

FIELD OFFICE SOCIAL SECURITY IN WACO

Included in the fourteen field offices of the Social Security Board, is the one opened at Waco, in the Service Mutual Building at Sixth and Franklin.

These offices will play an important part in the administration of the Federal old-age benefit program. They will also furnish employers as well as employees accurate information on the Social Security Act.

Barney Glasgow, once a shanty boy, married Emmy Louise Hewitt, his boss' daughter, and became the most powerful lumber baron in Wisconsin. At fifty Barney became desperately infatuated with Lotta Bostrom, the nineteen-year-old daughter of his old friend, Swan. Evvie, Barney's daughter, was in love with a mill hand and Richard, his son, in an attempt to get Lotta out of his father's way had fallen in love with her himself. Unaware of this were Barney and Swan.

Chapter Six

Barney entered the darkened house and mounted the stairs two at a time, hoping to find Emmy Louise still awake. She was. Before broaching the subject uppermost in his mind he decided to tell her about Evvie and Tony. As he expected, she took it badly.

"Aren't you going to stop it?" she cried indignantly.

"You can't stop a thing like that—not when two people really love each other. No, Emmy Louise, you let her alone." He braced himself and continued with quiet force. "She's not going to make the same mistake you and I did."

Emmy Louise looked at him with startled eyes, hardly daring to understand.

"I want a divorce," he went on. "I'll give you anything you want—had come true at last. Emmy Louise embraced Evvie with tear-filled eyes. She kissed Tony. They looked so happy, she couldn't help crying just a little. Mrs. Schwerke enfolded Evvie in her ample, motherly arms. Swan, Karie and Lotta crowded around and wished the couple happiness.

When Evvie had changed into her travelling dress she stopped at Richard's room expecting to find Tony there. The door was slightly ajar and she suddenly stopped, paralyzed by what she saw. Richard and Lotta were standing in the middle of the room, locked in each other's arms. They were completely oblivious of her presence.

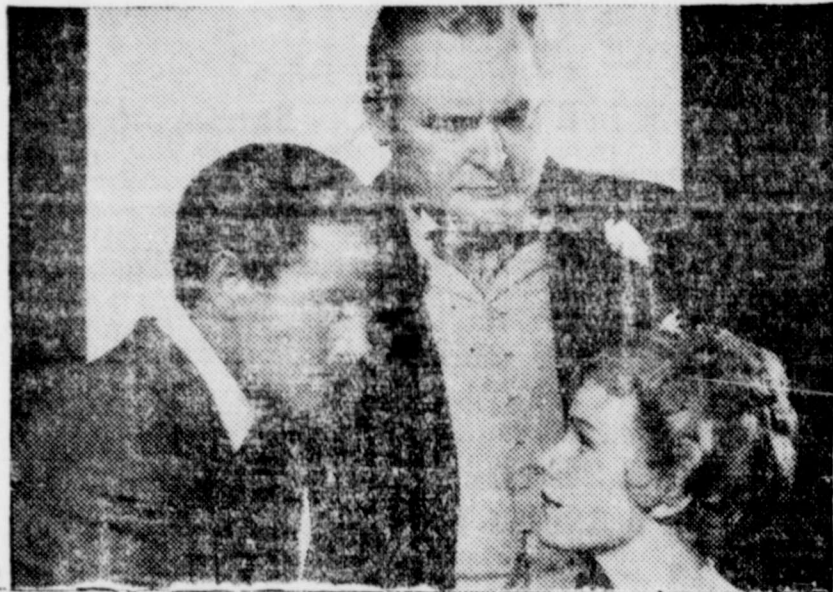

Evvie walked quickly down the stairs and detached her father from a circle of smiling friends. She kissed him tenderly.

"Do me one more favor," she said. "I left my bag with the railroad tickets up in Richard's room—"

Barney chuckled and went upstairs. At the threshold of Richard's door he stopped dead in his tracks. Richard was kissing Lotta with passionate adoration. At the sound of his entrance they turned, their arms still entwined. Barney's face was terrible to behold. His mouth hung open and he was breathing like a man who had been running. Without a word of warning he lunged at Richard. Richard ducked, evading him.

"Lotta and I are gonna be married—" he began.

"You fool!" cried Barney. "She's my girl—she's my girl!"

"Lotta and I are gonna be married —" Richard began.

All the money you can spend—you can write your own ticket and I'll see that it's all kept quiet—no scandal, no—"

"Bernard Glasgow, you're crazy!" Emmy Louise broke in, her face distorted with fright. "Are you in love with someone? Is it that girl of Swan's? Are you trying to trade an old wife for a new one? You're another of those silly middle-aged rich men that want to marry a young girl and be made a fool of!"

"I'm asking for freedom, Emmy Louise," Barney said evenly.

"You're a fool! You're an idiot! You married me and a fortune with me. You never cared for me, did you? Answer me!" Then, as Barney said nothing, she continued hysterically. "No, don't say it! I know it's true, I've always known how you felt. But I loved you—you could never understand loving like that—I was like a dog crawling after you . . ."

"I'm terribly sorry," Barney said almost in a whisper.

"Don't do this to me," she begged. "I know you'll leave me if you want but I'll never give you a divorce—never! You'll never marry that girl if I can help it!"

Barney looked at his wife in anger and contempt. What was the use? He started for the door, his feet dragging. Behind him there was a sharp cry. Her hands outstretched, trembling, Emmy Louise came toward him. She was sinking to her knees. He caught her quickly, roughly. She looked at him with terrible, tragic eyes.

"You're all I've got—all I've ever had in the world. I don't care who Evvie marries—if you'll only stay with me! If you say he's all right it's all right with me—anything you say, only don't leave me!"

Sinking into a chair, Emmy Louise buried her head in her arms and began to weep in long, tearing sobs. A torrent of pity welled up within Barney, pity so great that even his resolve was shaken. With awkward gentleness he put his hand on her shoulder and walked from the room.

The Glasgow house was filled with wedding guests. Evvie and Tony were being married. When the ceremony was over Evvie looked at Tony with love and pride shining in her eyes; her dream

Lotta rushed at Barney, her eyes blazing.

"Don't you believe him, Richard. It's a lie! Ask Aunt Karie—ask Pa. He never touched me—I wouldn't let him. He's lying—"

Richard, advanced toward his father, his fist doubled.

"Say you're lying—say it's a lie—what you just said, or I'll lick you—father or no father—"

As Barney and Richard struggled breathlessly, Lotta cried out in terror.

"Richard—let him be—let him be! You'll hurt him. He's an old man—he's your father—"

Clutching at Richard's coat, she dragged him away from Barney, who stared at her, stricken by her words. "He's an old man." His breath came in choking gasps. Turning slowly, like a man in a daze, he walked out of the room.

At the bottom of the stairs Emmy Louise awaited him.

"That precious son of yours—I threw him out!" He looked ill. His eyes were sunken and glazed. As she stared at him, uncomprehending, he went on. "That girl. He said he was going to marry her."

"Is that all? Is that all?" There was relief and joy in Emmy Louise's eyes. "I don't care, not as long as it isn't you—I thought—"

She wiped away the tears that rolled down her face. "I think Evvie's going to be happy—maybe Richard and this Lotta can be too. Things seem to be taken out of our hands. Maybe it's better that way . . ."

Barney put his hand gently on his wife's shoulder and looked about for Evvie. Evvie—she had sent him upstairs on purpose! Well, he was glad of it, it was what he needed to bring him to his senses. Amid general goodbys, kisses, tears and a shower of rice, the newlyweds made their departure. The butler was announcing lunch. Putting his arm around Swan's shoulders, Barney turned and faced his guests. His face was twisted in a strangely bitter smile but he was calm.

"Come and get it!" he said, echoing the old familiar cry. "Everybody, come and get it!"

KNOW TEXAS

Denton, Jan. 30.—"Flood Waters Continue to Rise", "Millions in Property Loss", "Death Toll Mounts"—these were among the headlines of the past few days, bringing the nation face to face with the serious problem of flood control. To no small degree is the future economic and civic program of Texas and the nation dependent upon a solution of this problem.

The chief difficulty in the past has been lack of a coordinated program. However, in recent years rapid progress has been made toward a coordinated water conservation plan which would consider each river basin as a single problem, and endeavor to achieve the ends of flood control, irrigation, municipal supply, and power in a single program.

The Brazos River Conservation and Reclamation District, which plans to control the waters of the basin through 13 or 14 dams along the middle course of the river and its tributaries, is the outstanding example of cooperative effort in the conservation program of the state. The Brazos, throughout its history, has presented a greater flood control problem than any other river in Texas. This is due both to the density of population in its bottoms and to the physical character of the drainage basin.

The rainfall in the Brazos basin, while averaging only about 25 inches a year, is frequently heavy, rapidly swelling the flow of water in the streams. Rising at over 4,000 feet, the descent of the Brazos channel is relatively rapid until it breaks into the plain of the Grand Prairie and blackland belt about the lower limit of Somervell County. The rapid descent of flood water from the upper reaches into the slow-moving stream of the coastal belt has created disastrous floods.

At present the largest proposed project in Texas is the Red River basin at Denison dam. The project is a part of the Mississippi River development and flood control program, and will also be used for power, navigation, and municipal supply.

World Comment—

ed conclusively our case in point, when the system of artificial levees proved insufficient to check the Mississippi at its flood stages the municipality spent millions and induced the state and national government to match it with additional millions to create the spillway system, which it is said can control any amount of water the Mississippi brings down from the north.

The Bonnet Carre spillway, mile-long concrete structure that was built in 1935 at the cost of $13,000,000, is the chief link in the system whose purpose it is to divert the oncoming waters into nearby lakes. Bonnet Carre cuts through a narrow strip of soggy land running approximately five or six miles with a gentle slope from the Mississippi into Lake Pontchartrain. Its gates traverse an area about five miles or more in width, and are set at two levels above a concrete dam or sill.

Thus did New Orleans, under somewhat mire compelling circumstances than the regions of the Ohio and upper Mississippi, prepare in advance for the inevitable. Today, facing the greatest volume of water the Mississippi has ever been tasked to discharge, the the Creole City calmly pursues its ordinary course of business while citizens of Evansville, Cincinnati, Louisville, Paducah and countless smaller cities busy themselves with rehabilitation efforts on the ruins of their once prosperous communities.
