CITY BUYS MOTORIZED LAWN MOWER FOR THE RABY PARK

Undoubtedly to be used in Raby Park, a brand new lawn mower with a motor to pull the blades has just been bought by the city authorities. However, thru a shipping error, there's no handle, and the "Park Superintendent," will have to still strain his back on the old mower until the handle arrives. Bids will be received, no doubt, at the city Hall by folks wanting to borrow this mower.

Evidently, this indicates the new post office is completed to the specifications of Uncle Sam, and his inspector is no longer needed at Gatesville. So far, no dedicatory plans have been announced for the new building.

ANOTHER PETITION IS OUT OUT TO CLOSE STORES ONE HOUR FRIDAY NOON

As a lead-off for Gatesville's First Annual Rodeo and Home Coming, a parade will be staged on the main thoroughfares Friday at 1:00 p. m. and, probably, again Saturday.

Included in the parade, will be officials of the Rodeo, the contestants, and Superintendent Ercell W. Brooks, was asked by Chairman Bob Saunders to get as many school children as possible with their bicycles to be in the parade.

Definite plans have not been made or completed as to the complete parade, but the Gatesville High School Band and the band from the State Juvenile Training School will be two features.

Sheriff Joe White will probably lead the parade, which will also include Messrs Doc Spence and Emmet Digsby and their rodeo specialties.

Late Thursday afternoon, a petition was being circulated in an effort to get all business houses to close their doors an hour, beginning at 1 p. m. Friday, June 4 for the parade.

Publicity tours are being made in Coryell and other counties, and this is being carried out Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Monday of this week and next.

Everything is in order for the grand entry, and the beginning of Gatesville's entertainment feature for its trade territory and surrounding counties.

PROGRAMS ON WBAP-WFAA AND KTEM MAY TELL OF GATESVILLE

Gatesville Chamber of Commerce has been invited give information regarding Gatesville and the surrounding territory to the Hawk and Buck Company of Fort Worth, for use on their "Red Hawk" program over WBAP and WFAA during some time in the near future.

On invitation of the Temple Chamber of Commerce and Board of Development, a like program over radio station, KTEM is expected to be put on the air over that station.

As yet, nothing definitely can be announced, but if the arrangements can be made locally, these programs can be arranged.

Tom Sawyer, of Evant was a visitor in Gatesville the first of the week.

"ONE SIDE OF THE LINE" VERDICT HERE

Parking is permitted on one side of the line on the courthouse square, according to R. L. (Bob) Saunders, spokesman for the city, thus allowing plenty of parking space in Gatesville.

Mr. Saunders brought us a note stating that "Gatesville folks have consented to keep their cars off the parking spaces up town in order to give visitors plenty of parking space when they visit Gatesville."

This will make it more convenient for everyone concerned and the city officials are to be commended on this move.

E. R. Eudaly Of The Extension Service At Leaird's Barn Wed.

E. R. Eudaly, Extension Specialist, at the meeting to explain the operation, construction and use of the trench silo Wednesday afternoon, gave a very interesting discussion to a large numbers of farmers and business men who attended.

Mr. Eudaly said in part:

Trench silo means feed insurance, saves the feed and stays saved. An acre of feed put in a trench silo will make as much money as two acres put in a stack or barn, and can be put in the trench silo cheaper than it can be put in the stack or barn. There is no loss of feed when it is put in a silo regardless of the weather. A lot of feed is lost when farmers try to cure the feed so that it can be put in the stack or barn. Any kind of feed grown on the farm can be put in the trench silo, and it all worth saving. Grain sorghum and ear corn can be put in the trench silo. When this is done the farmer will have feed for his hogs, horses, chickens, turkeys and sheep, or in other words for all livestock on the farm.

To illustrate how an acre of feed in a trench silo is worth two acres put in a stack or barn—if a farmer had an acre of hegeri that would cut 5 tons per acre green he would put 5 tons in the silo and take 5 tons out, but if he cuts, shocks and dries it out and puts it in a barn or stack, because the green feed is fourfifths water and that is lost in drying. A ton of dry feed would last an average cow 80 days. A ton of green feed but in a silo would last a cow 40 days. If 5 tons were put in the silo per acre then the acre of feed put in the silo would last the cow 200 days, while the acre put in the stack would last only 80 days, which is better than two to one. Then too, the silage is a succulent feed, and therefore, is a better feed than a dry feed.

Trench silos are practical for any size farmer. We have trench silos that only hold one ton. They are 2 feet wide, 2 feet deep and 20 feet long, therefore trench silos are practical for a farmer even though he has only one cow. The width and depth of the trench should be regulated by the minimum number of livestock to be fed from it, the length is regulated by the amount to be buried, the length may be 10 feet or a mile.

WE'RE PRETTY BUSY

That's a fact! We are so busy, many of us are going to overlook the fact that May 30 is Memorial Day.

This is the day, busy one, that the usual custom is to honor to our buried soldier dead, by redecorating their graves, holding different sorts of services, selling poppies and by other means.

In the midst of the busy modern world, sometimes, we neglect these ceremonies for those who have paid the supreme sacrifice by giving their lives for causes in wars, especially the last one, which seems to have been fought in vain. A very unappreciative lot, we are, anyway!

At this time, however, let us pause, and declare that there will be no more wars—then there won't be any Memorial Days for any who have given this supreme sacrifice.

PARKIN'

If you are wrong, and stay wrong—it's wrong!
If you're wrong, and get right—alright!

So, with the city council and the local city government. They, we assume, quite unknowingly, pulled a horse. They have acquiesced! They have moderated the parking on the square (which, we believe you'll agree needed something) so that there will be one line of parking on the inside next to the inside track. They are to be commended for this moderation.

Scratch your head, and you'll remember the "horse trough clamor," "the hitching post removal opposition,
"the trouble about the courthouse," and a number of others, which ired folks considerable and, regardless of all arguments pro and con, were eventually ironed out by the differing sides, to the evident satisfaction and progress of everyone.

The root of the whole matter is, someone's (and in this case, many) habits were changed. No man likes to change a habit of years, personal, or public. That's the reason many laws are not obeyed today. That's the purported reason for the failure of the famous 18th amendment.

So, it's a give and take proposition in the parking trouble and we believe this will iron out the difficulties where traffic regulation was becoming more and more of a necessity.

Decoration Day

Next Sunday, May 30th, will be Decoration Day. The colors of many lands will blend in sacred devotion to the dead.
The graves of the heroic dead who paid the supreme sacrifice to build and preserve the new civilization, which sprung up on American soil, will be dedicated with the tended tributes of love and flowers. The brilliant poppy from Flanders Field;
the rose from the north the lily from the south, the bluebonnet from the waste places of Texas will blot out the color scheme of men uniforms, and a loving tribute will be paid the Union Soldier from Vermont; the Confederate from Georgia; the world war veteran from Washington; the buckskin clad Texas Ranger who's bones bleached on our western prairies and to the dead heroes of of the Texas Republic and the Spanish American war. In striking contrast to the odor of flesh smoke that ascended from the funeral pyre of the Alamo which clouded the Texas skies, the incense of flowers will today ascend to the glory of our heroic dead bearing the fine sentiments of love and devotion.

Miss Jane Thomson entertained a group of friends Sunday at her home on East Leon street with a one o'clock luncheon. Pastel shades of summer decorating the dining table and placed at other vantage points.

A three course luncheon, consisting of tomato juice cocktail, pear salad, fried chicken, asparagus on toast, baked potatoes, creamed peas, olives, pickles, hot rolls, iced tea, strawberry ice cream and angel food squares, was served the following guests, Misses Mary Ann Post, Anita Yowrey, Rosylene Anderson, Helen Chamlee, the honoree and Messrs Jack Hestlow, Jack Straw, Jack Reesing, Buzz Colgin and Edwin McDonald.

Impressive Wedding At M. E. Church Tuesday

Just at sunset Tuesday, May 25, Miss Bobby Shomake and Joe Boleman, both of Waco, were united in marriage at the First Methodist Church of this city with the pastor, Rev. Marcus M. Chunn officiating with the single ring ceremony.

The bride wore a lovely frock of new blue crepe and a shoulder corsage of sweet peas. Her accessories were of white.

Immediately after the ceremony the couple left for a honeymoon trip after which they will be at home in Waco. A motor party composed of approximately twenty relatives and friends of the couple motored to this city for the ceremony.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. DAN McCLELLAN

The home-going of Aline Leaird McClellan marked the passing of one of the most beloved of women, one who was so dearly cherished in so many human relations; as wife, she was held, devotedly, in the heart of her husband for her constant helpful, companionship and love; as a mother, her inspiring ambitious care for her boys; as a daughter, for tenderness and thoughtfulness; as a sister for her loyalty and abiding interest, and as a friend, in the social circle, for her generous and unselfish charm. How beautifully she played these many roles in Life's drama!

As a child Aline was remarkable for her delight in the best in literature and art, and her artistic temperament was increasingly expressed in the discriminate furnishings and surroundings in the home which bore the imprint of her personality.

In early years her thoughtful attitude toward things serious, caused her to consider her relation to God, and to unite herself to the church and to live faithful to its teachings throughout the after years.

Aline's lack of self-seeking and the ignoring of the claims of her physical well-being were outstanding. Luxuriating in idleness had no place in her life, but with enthusiasm and energy, with all attention on the plans and hopes ahead, she, as did the noble hero of the round table, "Lost herself to find herself."

Each day she practiced that philosophy which believes that "except a grain of wheat is planted it abideth alone, but if it is committed it bringeth forth much fruit," and she projected her life into that of her loved one's so from such sowing "There will blossom fair, life that will richer be."

When passing through sorrow, attendant on the going of one with life ahead, and with grieving ones to leave behind, one sometimes experiences a momentary dimming of faith and a questioning attitude toward the "ways of God with men," but only for a moment, for we quickly realize:

"There is no unbelief; Whomere plants a seed beneath the sod,

And waits to see it push away the clod, He trusts in God.

Whoever sees 'neath winter fields of snow The silent harvest of the future grow

God's power must know."

And as time goes on and we come to see that only those are sad and despairing—

"Who never see The stars shine thru the cypress tree,

Who, hopelessly, lay their dead away Nor look to see the breaking day

Across the mournful marbles play; Who hath not learned in hour of faith,

This truth, to sense and flesh unknown, That life is ever lord of death,

And love can never lose its own."

But more comforting than all the beautiful words of human utterance are those of the Savior: "I am the resurrection and the Life, whosoever believeth in me shall never die."

May 22, 1937

While the final vote will not be taken until Monday, the House has been working on two of the most important measures of the session this past week. On Thursday the Interior Department Appropriation Bill was passed carrying $123,700,000. This bill which includes the appropriation for the Indian Service, Reclamation, Geological Survey, National Parks, Bureau of Mines, Public Health, Federal Aid to Education, the General Land Office and other agencies had been debated for approximately ten days. The bill as reported by the Committee was nearly $6,000,000 under last year's appropriation. In the course of consideration on the floor of the house the amounts for reclamation were decreased and the aid to Vocational Education was increased from $3,000,000 last year to $14,000,000 for next year. I voted for both of these changes, as I feel that the reclamation work is not needed at this time and that the education of our farm boys and girls should be carried on—particularly inasmuch as the last Congress had in effect promised this amount and the states had all made their estimates with the exception of receiving this full fourteen millions which is necessary to carry on the present program of vocational education we have undertaken in Texas and other States. As finally passed, in spite of the substantial increase for schools, there was a total increase in the bill of only two million dollars, indicating that in spite of the fact that a number of activities have been transferred into the Interior Department there was an actual net cut of approximately nine million dollars in the bill, exclusive of schools.

As soon as the bill was finally passed the House took up the Works Progress Bill. This bill contains the largest single appropriation for relief in any form. The sub-committee had previously recommended $1,000,000,000. The full committee offered an amendment to make the amount $1,500,000,000. In the last year there was appropriated for this purpose only $1,425,000,000 but to this was added a deficiency appropriation of $789,000,000 making a total of $2,214,000,000, and it is estimated that there will be approximately $250,000,000 remaining unexpended (although most of this has been obligated) on July first, the effective date of all regular Federal Appropriation bills. There were Members who wanted as high as four billion dollars, or far more than has ever been appropriated for this purpose. (The great $4,800,000,000 appropriation of 1935 contained many other items not in this bill.) The House finally voted in the Committee of the Whole House (where most of the debate is held) by a vote of 210 to 128 to fix the amount at $1,500,000,000 to which must be added the $250,000,000 above mentioned. I voted for this amount. I believe that with this amount we can give work to those who will be unable to secure private employment next year. I know we can if we can revise the rules and procedure so as to put the money on the jobs rather than in the offices and we are trying to do this, although I see very little success as yet. The administration feels that it can care for the situation with this amount and I feel that to cut the figure too low would not only result in unnecessary suffering but would result in a probable breakdown of our economic recovery and result in a loss of all of the gains we have made. On the other hand to spend the large sums suggested would result in such aggravated financial troubles for the government that we would inevitably sink into utter collapse or wild inflation and in either event the hard pressed laborer, dependent on a small wage, would be the greatest sufferer. The bill will not be finally passed until Monday, but the amount will probably be left at $1,500,000,000 and the action Monday will probably be confined to amendments seeking to perfect the administration of the bill. At that time I expect to support an amendment to be offered by Mr. Lanham of Fort Worth to confine this work to American citizens.

While the action of the Senate Judiciary Committee in giving an unfavorable report to the proposal to add new members to the Supreme Court makes it improbable that the measure will ever come before the House in its original form, the action of Justice Van Devanter in availing himself of the benefits of the retirement bill recently enacted by this Congress makes it certain that the President will be able to appoint the determining factor in the Court and to assure a progressive thinking majority thereon. I am sure that everyone will agree that it is very fortunate that the Sumners Bill was passed so as to enable the change to be made in the Court in a manner to which no one objects.

WORLD COMMENT

VAN DEVANTER'S RESIGNATION

The motives impelling the resignation of Associate Justice Van Devanter are not important in relation to the Supreme Court reorganization issue. Only the results growing out of the resignation of a member of the court's conservative bloc, and the opportunity afforded the President to appoint a justice of his own political philosophy bear upon the fundamental issue.

Indications are that there will be no strategic retreat from the worst presidential blunder of the century by the President, but instead there will be an insistence upon the bill as originally submitted or upon a compromise which will leave the court under the thumb of the New Dealers.

I say the resignation of Van Devanter has afforded the President an opportunity to back down from his original demands on the grounds that his objectives have been accomplished. Such a retreat would mean no loss of prestige for the President, and would prevent an irremediable split in the ranks of his congressional supporters.

Decisions of the last two months, in which Justice Van Devanter voted against administration bills, definitely indicated that the liberal group has gained the ascendancy by winning Justice Owen Roberts to its side.

The vacancy created by Van Devanter means the addition of a Rooseveltian liberal to the liberal group as now composed of Justices Stone, Brandeis, Cardozo, Roberts. In other words, the resignation of Van Devanter reduces the conservative strength from four to three and increases the liberal bloc from three to four. Roberts and Chief Justice Hughes are still classified as indeterminable, as in the past they have frequently voted with the conservative.

If there was any sincerity in the President's contention that he wanted a liberal court and proposed his reorganization bill as the only means of effecting this end, this objective has now been realized and there is no sane or logical reason why the matter should be dropped.

It is highly probable that the next twelve months will witness the resignation of other members of the court, recently it was whispered in Washington that Justice Louis D. Brandeis, 80, and Justice George Sutherland, 75, would resign at the end of the current court session. Informed observers feel that several of the elderly justices are eager to quit once the storm raging about the court is quieted.

It is known that the bill proposing to add six new justices to the court has no chance of passing. Speculation now ranges around a multiple group of compromises submitted by members of the senate. The President has shown no willingness to compromise at this stage of the fight. Just what the attitude of the opposition senators would be toward a compromise measure no one can foretell.

In my opinion, there can be no compromise of the issue as presented by the President. Only after the perfidious proposal has been rejected in its entirety can there be compromise.

One of the compromise measures receiving great attention is one which would permit the appointment of two new justices. A vote for this measure would mean a surrender of all the noble principles form the which the opponents of the original bill have been so bravely contending.

Let the President withdraw his bill. A constitutional amendment could then be framed which would achieve through constitutional ends the objectives of the President. The only workable compromise thus far submitted—compulsory retirement of justices at 75—could be instituted.

The fear of those unalterably opposed to the usurpation of the traditional prerogatives of the court and even of many sympathetic with the underlying objectives of the court bill is that the President and his closest advisers want not a liberal court but a Roosevelt court. It will be recalled that the liberal members voted against the chief executive on the NRA and other pet New Deal measures. Thus a "liberal" court would do this.

THE ROUND-UP OF THE SHORT FAMILY

Another enjoyable day was passed Sunday, May 23, when all of the Short children and their mother met at the Ewing school house for a reuniting of the Short family for the first time in nine years. During this period of time God called our dear father and grandfather to his home above. Several of the grandchildren were unable to attend, but those of us who were present were very thankful to God for his care over us these past nine years.

We were very happy to have our brother and uncle, Mr. J. C. Short of Los Angeles, California, with us for the first time in three years.

We arrived at eleven o'clock and talked until twelve. The women spread a large dinner and after the tables were cleaned, we talked until three o'clock. We bade each other goodbye, hoping and praying that we might meet again, if not on this earth.

Those enjoying this wonderful day were Mrs. G. H. Short of Gatesville, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Short and family of Flat, Mr. and Mrs. F. Ludwick and family, Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Powell and family, and Mrs. W. H. Ford of Fort Worth, Mr. J. C. Short of Los Angeles, California, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Short and son, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. The plan of work in the tomato phase of the Garden Demonstration for 4-H Club girls included planning and planting the garden first, then preparing preserving, and organizing its products.

Elwanda Tabor, Garden demonstrator of the Slater 4-H Girls' Club has planted tomato plants with the help of her parents; they have been transplanted and are now blooming.

To assist her in carrying out subsequent details of the demonstration, she has an 18 qt. pressure cooker and an automatic sealer for her use.

Elmer Sparks Winner
Of Trip to Pan-Am.
Exposition for Essay

Elmer Sparks of Gatesville Elementary School has just won a trip to the Pan-American Exposition in Dallas for his essay which was entered in the Greater Texas Essay Contest conducted by the Dallas Chamber of Commerce and sponsored by the Greater Texas and Pan-American Exposition. He was first in District 15, elementary division.

Another student, Josephine Clary, also won a prize in this contest, $2.00, and won eighth place in the same district and division.

We present here, the first prize essay, and will later, print the other prize winner. The schools were divided into 24 districts outside of the Dallas district and eight winners were selected from each district.

Although neither essay carried a title, we gather from the content that the title should be "Why I Want to See the Greater Texas and Pan American Exposition."

Spark's essay follows:
 "I want to see this Greater Texas and Pan American Exposition because it will be a great review of the progress a state has made in a century. Progress from Indians, wilderness, law-breaking and uncultivated plains to a state of a great resources of agriculture and refinement."

It will show the guest of friendship between nations in the mingling of various races of people at this exposition.

It will show reviews of science, art, literature, agricultural, manufacturing and almost anything you can think of in the line of earthly things. It will give many people a chance to see things that otherwise they could not see in years.

Dallas alone has many spots of beauty that anyone would enjoy seeing.

This exposition will excel even its sister exposition, The Texas Centennial Exposition in beauty, splendor and interests.

All of the glory of the Esplanade of Nations is preserved for the Greater Texas and Pan American Exposition, and engineers have made the lighting spectacle even more breathtaking than it was last year.

For the Centennial, the United States government spent $325,000 to erect a federal exhibit building. In it was gathered the finest array of exhibits of our government work that had ever been shown. The federal building is again a central feature of the Greater Texas and Pan American Exposition.

There are a great many more building and points of interest, but I will not take the time to mention and explain all of them for I think that what I have said would be sufficient reason for anyone wanting to see the Greater Texas and Pan American Exposition.

PANTRY DEMONSTRATOR OF CARDEN PRODUCES HOME
FOOD SUPPLY

"We are living out of the garden now" is a true remark made by the Carden Home Demonstration Club Home Food Supply Demonstrator, Mrs. Sol Veazey. Current vegetables include green snap beans, Irish potatoes, lettuce, squash, and English peas. Her green beans are about ready to can for bean should be about 3/4 inch in diameter, of a deep green color, crisp, tender, and fresh with seeds not larger than pin heads. In canning them, Mrs. Veazey will use the Steam Pressure Cooker because green beans are a non-acid vegetable which should be washed thoroughly in several waters, ends snipped and cut into desired lengths. Next they are covered with boiling water and heated thoroughly, drained, and packed immediately. Fill No. 2 cans with 13 ounces of drained beans; No. 3 cans with one pound and 8 ounces. Add 3-4 teaspoon of salt to each No. 2 enamel or plain tin can and 1 teaspoon of salt to each No. 3 can. Cover the beans with boiling water in which they were blanched. Seal immediately and process No. 2 cans and pint glass jars 40 minutes at 10 pounds pressure. No. 3 C enamel or plain tin cans and quart glass jars 45 minutes at 10 lbs. pressure.

If snap beans are desired mixed with the shelled, use about 1/4 weight snapped peas for each size can.

TURNERSVILLE SCHOOL GETS TWO MORE AFFILIATED CREDITS

Turnersville High School has been granted two credits in Home Economics, according to Supt. Virgil Jones.

Although the State Supervisor was unable to visit the school, credit was granted on the basis of the papers and exhibits which were carried to Austin.

This additional credit brings the school's affiliation up to a total of 19 credits.

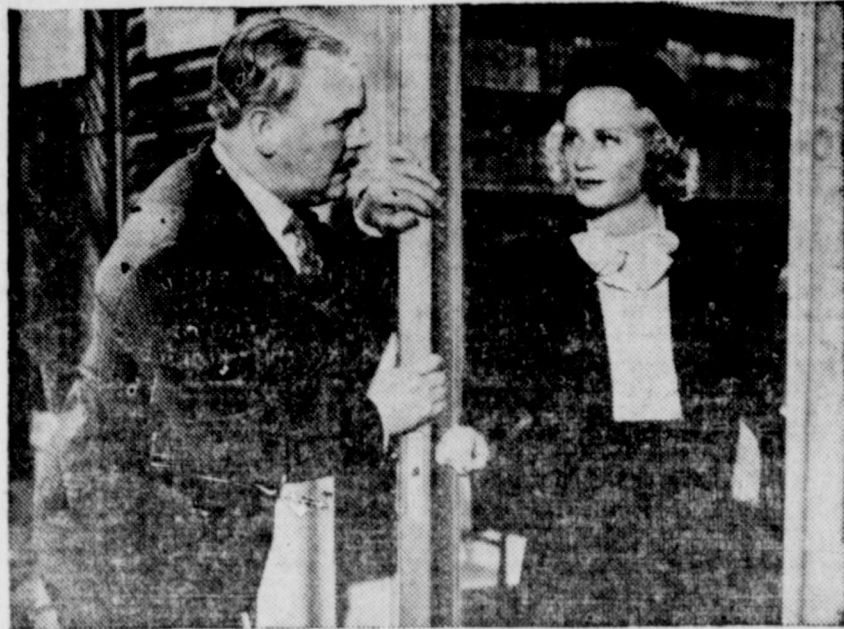

Tin is the principal mineral product of Bolivia, that country accounting for about one-fourth of the world's annual supply.

Nina: "Charming girl, Nina. And so sane and sensible. Father'll love her. It'll be quite a surprise to the old boy when he sees us at the dock tomorrow."
And Nina Tennyson thought: "What a simpleton Kenneth is! I hope he proposes soon. Henri's getting hard to handle. Nice little shock Kenneth will get when I leave him, soon as we're married and I can get my hands on some of his money."
And Henri Saffron thought: "Why should I Henri Saffron, play the fool? This pretense of being Nina's uncle is giving me the woolies. I cannot take it much longer. He must propose soon."
But fortunately, no one knew what anyone else was thinking. Attired in bathing suits and sun goggles, they lolled on the sun deck of the great ocean liner sipping cool drinks and making polite conversation. It was all very pleasant and friendly and superficial. When the steward summoned Kenneth to the transatlantic telephone he donned a bathrobe and followed the man below. New York was calling. "Hello. Oh, hello, Father," he said. "How are you?"
"I'm fine, my boy," a cheerful voice answered. "But I need a hundred thousand dollars."
"Now, Father, have you got yourself mixed up in another wildcat scheme?"

Sincerely,
V. Travis."
B. J. looked up with a puzzled frown. "Just who is this V. Travis?" he asked.
"That's me," she replied, smiling sweetly. "The V is for Virginia."
"And who is this remarkable architect?"
"Oh, that's me, too."
B. J.'s mouth opened and closed. "No jobs open!" he snapped.
"I know what you're thinking," Virginia said quickly. "That I'm a girl. Yes, Mr. Nolan, but I have a man's courage, a man's vision. Here I am, Mr. Nolan, with the key to Nolan Heights! I've found a way to make us both rich. Nolan Heights needs me. I need Nolan Heights. Why, I —"
Suddenly, to B. J.'s astonishment, the girl collapsed on the floor. He hastily summoned a doctor. The doctor's diagnosis showed Virginia was suffering from malnutrition. She admitted she hadn't eaten for forty-eight hours. Nor had she a home — a little matter of back rent unpaid. B. J. fed her the noodle soup out of the thermos bottle the process server had left behind. What a terrible plight for the poor little thing to be in! B. J.'s heart softened, then melted.
From the Smithport, Long Island, railroad station they took a taxicab. The house was deserted and a thick coating of dust covered the furniture. And to make matters

"Here I am, Mr. Nolan!" she said brightly.

"It's not a wildcat scheme," the voice came back indignantly. "It's a magnificent, undreamed of, magic little village! I've named it Nolan Heights after me — and you, too." The voice dropped to a confidential undertone. "But also after me are four process servers. They're waiting outside my office with summonses. Please, my boy — I'll never ask you again."
"Yes, yes, Father," Kenneth said absently, as though placating a small boy. "I mean, no! Now look, Father. I'll be home tomorrow, and I'm bringing a surprise. What? I said NO, Father. Goodbye."
And he hung up. At the other end of the wire, B. J. Nolan detectedly set down the phone. What was the use? Kenneth was as stubborn as a mule. Sounds of activity in the outer office aroused him from his reverie.

worse, the gas company had had the insolence to turn off the gas. B. J. made Virginia some tea on the electric iron. When he thought she was sufficiently recovered to stand the shock, he told her the truth. There wasn't going to be any Nolan Heights. It was just a lovely, lovely dream. He was flat broke. His son Kenneth had a cool million, but he wouldn't lend him a dime. Kenneth was arriving from Europe tomorrow afternoon — with a surprise.
"Well," said Virginia when she had heard him out, "we've got to go to work on him."
B. J. liked her determination. Within an hour they were bosom pals. Virginia told B. J. all about herself. She had studied for seven years to be an architect. Her father went broke. Then she got a job as an usher at the Casino Theatre, where they showed only gangster and G-Men pictures. Then she and Judy, her girl friend, got fired. Hunk Williams, Judy's boy friend, was the cashier, and he intervened. They all got fired. Then Judy and Hunk decided to get married, because two could starve as cheaply as one. It was a sad story, but Virginia told it with a gay, light-hearted air.

"Come on, Mr. Nolan. We know you're there!" a threatening voice called through the door.
B. J. didn't answer. As long as he was locked in his office, he was safe from those bloodhounds, and they could wait forever, for all he cared. Why, one of them even had the nerve to bring his supper! Noodle soup!

A brilliant thought struck her. Hunk and Judy would make a swell pair of servants. She tried the telephone; it worked. B. J. yelled to her to stop.
"Now wait," he insisted. "Who do you think you're fooling? My son knows I'm busted. The minute he sees me he'll catch on."
"Ah," said Virginia, "but he isn't going to see you! He's going to see me. You'll be in Chicago arranging a big deal. Only instead you'll be here hiding in the kitchen. Don't you see, B. J.? He won't lend you the money as long as he knows you don't want it. If you were a woman you'd know that."
B. J. considered. There was a lot of sense to Virginia's plan. Kenneth would believe her — she was the kind of girl anyone would believe.
"Please, B. J.," she pleaded. "This is as near to a real job as I've been in years. Besides, what can you lose?"
Suddenly B. J.'s mind was made up. "Yeah. What can we lose?" he agreed.
Impulsively, Virginia leaned over and kissed him.

Outside in the corridor, the elevator stopped at the 24th floor and a girl emerged. She was a pretty girl — a very pretty girl indeed. Something about her shining bobbed head, the twinkle in her blue eyes and her slim, trim little figure made men look a second time when they saw her. At a door marked "B. J. Nolan, Real Estate," she paused.
"Mr. Nolan, I've got something for you." No, she decided, that wasn't breezy enough. She tried again out loud. "Hello, Mr. Nolan! Am I glad to see you!" No, that wouldn't do, either. "Here I am, Mr. Nolan!" That was it!
Her rehearsal had a strange effect. The door flew open; four wild-eyed process servers emerged, looked about frantically for some one who evidently wasn't there, and rushed pell mell down the corridor, then down the stairway. The girl looked after them in bewilderment. Head on, she collided with B. J. coming out.
"Here I am, Mr. Nolan!" she said brightly, and handed him an envelope.
He took it with a sigh of resignation. But it was not a summons. "Dear Mr. Nolan: (the letter read) This will introduce a graduate of Pitt and the Beaux Arts, a young architect of broad vision and fine artistic background, I heartily recom-

NOTES FROM CCC CAMP TECHNICIAN

The suggestion was made today by E. E. McAlister, Technician of the Gatesville Soil Conservation Service camp that now is a good time to watch for evidences of soil erosion on the farm.

When the plowing is being done and the farmer is out in the field, Mr. McAlister says, is a good time to look out for signs of erosion. For instance it is easy to spot light or "thin" spots in fields or pastures where the topsoil has washed away.

Noting the color of water running off a field after a rain is also suggested as an erosion "test." If the water is murky and excessively muddy it obviously carries away soil. Gullies, of course, are also erosion "sign posts" and it is not hard to tell when a gully is actively growing larger with each rain.

"After locating erosion problems on the farm," Mr. McAlister emphasized, "the important thing to do is to start right then planning and taking steps to stop its continuance through use of vegetated cover, contour cultivation, terraces or other of the approved erosion control methods and practices."

... Stop worrying! . . . the player was chosen long ago, but it's been a great build-up—and cost nothing to put over . . . Bill Robinson is returning to Broadway for a vacation . . . the great old hooper may while his time away doing a dance or two at the Cotton Club . . . The young man who sells illustrated programs in the lobby of the Winter Garden, where Beatrice Lillie and Bert Lahr co-star in "The Show Is On," is thinking of writing a book or giving lectures on how to tell New Yorkers from out-of-towners . . . He knows, because thousands of each file past him every week and some of them can't help talking . . . It seems that the New Yorkers regard these "Dukes" (Broadway for program hawkers) as handy butts for wisecracks and sometimes as suckers for trickery, whereas the people from Scranton, Syracuse and "Middletown" consider them friendly counsels . . . The local folks, for example, ask him how much he makes "Off the racket" . . . A frequent remark is, "No sale. I can't read." . . . And sometimes there are gems of wit (?) such as "You the head-waiter here?" . . . Out-of-towners, on the other hand, ask simple, touching questions: "Will my ticket stub get me into the night club upstairs?" or "Does Bert Lahr wear a mask?" or "Is there just a show here, or do you serve food?" Beyond these queries about the show, there are many about the town: "Tell me a good hotel, brother." "Do the subways run all night?" . . . Thus the Winter Garden "Duke" gets to know his fellow men . . . And he likes it . . . "Sometimes," he says, "I'm more interested in answering the questions than I am in selling. But I suppose no New Yorker is going to believe that. There's the whole difference." The Broadway Parade.

KNOW TEXAS

Denton, May 24.—"Nuts to everybody!" could well be Texas' slogan, since its pecan crop is not only the oldest one in the state but is also the largest in the nation. Although pecans came under the classification of small miscellaneous crops, they have possibilities for developing into an important business in the future. Already the value has grown from $830,000 in 1932 to over two million in 1935.

With cultivation centered around the counties of San Saba, Brown, Town Green, Kimble, Llano, Burnet, Lampasas and Guadalupe, these nuts are also grown in more than 50 other counties. Several orchards have been planted, but native trees still furnish most of the crop.

Farmers who have begun to look around for something other than cotton with which to earn a living have turned their attention to this industry. A good crop usually comes every two years, and at that time heavy shipments are made out of the state.

There is only one pecan-shelling, packing, salting and candy making factory in Texas, so a large surplus of Texas nuts are shipped to other states to be shelled. This is one more instance where Texas is missing out on an opportunity to keep money in the state through lack of necessary manufacturing facilities. The line from producer to consumer on raw nuts is almost direct, but the shelled, cellophane-wrapped pecans have traveled a long way from home before they return.

cent to practically nothing. Texas farmers who have protected some 12 million acres of land with the help of county agricultural agents get the same results.

In Lipscomb county, W. P. Freeman began terracing his farm seven years ago and now has terraces on 475 acres of tillable land and contour furrows on 200 acres of pasture land. Freeman has reported that the terraced land has averaged eight bushels of wheat per acre more than unterraced land in the seven year period.

In 1936, Alford Browning of Borden county had his county agricultural agent run contour lines on part of his farm. After making two crops on the contoured acreage, he was so well satisfied with the increased moisture available for his crops that he has terraced his entire farm of 395 acres.

The 1937 Agricultural conservation Program helps farmers protect their farms against loss of soil and water by making payments for construction of terraces.

Lets Talk about Clothes

TEXAS STATE COLLEGE FOR WOMEN (CIA)

Denton, May 24.—Racy fashion notes, enticing advertisements and shop windows combine to present such myriads of style details this season that one has trouble calming down to the selection of a single wardrobe. However, there are a few general trends which you can't go wrong in following.

Besides the swing to unusual color combinations, there is also a definite preference this season for smooth fabrics. Sacer wools and crepes are in, and various newly manufactured synthetic materials are proving to be of value.

Wider hemlines, circular flares, and plaited skirt ruffles are accompanied by slender waists, low necklines and slightly squared shoulders. The prominence of this silhouette shows what a strong comeback femininity has made. Details used to accent the softly feminine effect are lacy collars, flower circlelets, bright wool embroidery, and romantic costume jewelry.

Coats must be fitted and slightly flared or short and boxy to be right, with redingotes and capes winning new supporters every day. Hats have no limit—they can be off-the-face bretons, old-fashion or Spanish sailors, bonnets, toppers, or anything else, so long as they are becoming.

Favored accessories are of patent leather, suede and calf with black, navy blue, carnelian, red earth and paddock tan leading as colors.

Uncle Jim Says

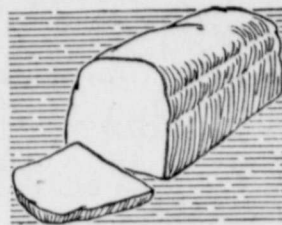

"Strip cropping, check dams, contour planting and terraces may sound 'hifalutin' to some folks, but they keep soil and water where it belongs."

Tests of the Texas Agriculture Experiment station indicate that strip cropping, contour planting, terracing, and other conservation practices cut the losses of soil and water from 50 per 100,000,000 pounds of milk baked into bread

Bakers used more than 100 million pounds of milk powder to bake their 1936 bread—four times as much as they used 10 years ago. Milk improves quality and adds food value to bread. But technical difficulties for many years limited its use in commercial baking.

Made with Milk

To make it easy to use more milk in baking, Borden research developed a milk powder which is pre-tested under actual baking conditions, so that it doesn't fail. Borden's "bakery-testing" has greatly enlarged the use of all milk in baking, by giving bakers faith in the quality of powdered milk.

New and greater uses for milk are the aim of Borden research. Through research and merchandising, farm income from milk is sustained.
