NUMBER 48

Rodeo Ends Successful 2 Day Show Mon. Nite Despite Rain and Mud

Nearly $1700 in a day and prize money was awarded winning contestants in Gatesville's First Annual Rodeo, which closed a successful two day's performance last Monday night. The number of entrants and the amount of prize money in this first attempt compares creditably with the older established shows of much larger towns than Gatesville.

Figures as to the exact financial condition of the Rodeo are not available yet, due to some unfinished business, but it was estimated that in spite of the bad weather, which prevented the Friday show, the Rodeo just about "broke even" with possibly a small profit showing. In all events, a very creditable showing was made, and the way is paved for a larger and more colorful show next year.

Here are the final winning contestants:

Gatesville Post Office Ready for Occupancy In Thirty More Days

Word has been received by the Gatesville Post Office from Dolph Bateson, contractors for the new post office building, that lock boxes have been shipped and will be here soon.

No definite date has been set for occupancy of the new building, but postmaster J. Hurl McClellan stated yesterday that it looked like everything would be in readiness for the opening by the first of July.

All of the furniture and equipment have not been received yet as the building was not supposed to be ready for occupancy for at least 30 more days. The contract was finished that much ahead of schedule, hence the delay of equipment and furniture for the building.

This Week In Oglesby

This week was characterized by heavy rains. A great deal of wheat is unharvested and of course has been damaged, likewise oats in the shock is damaged, however the rains were beneficial to cotton, corn, feed crops and gardens. A severe hail west of Oglesby damaged wheat on the farms of Sam Powell, G. I. Green, and F. A. Morris Sr. and cotton on the Green Morris and Dock Humphries farms. It is reported that high winds broke the limbs from large pecan trees on the Cliff Lynch farm.

The monument will probably be erected near where the old military road crosses Station creek.

Another big Saturday trade night in Oglesby. The Business Mens League, by organization and taking the initiative advertising and talking, have got people in the habit of coming to Oglesby on Saturday nights. Every Saturday trade night the crowds are larger than on the preceding Saturday night, and we've actually come to believe that Oglesby is the center of the surrounding country.

Jim Walker, Shorty Sullivan, Sam Powell and a lot of other folks were at the Gatesville Rodeo.

If the European door is closed completely to North American manufactured goods and South American raw materials through war and inability to pay, the two Americas can stand as a self-contained unit for an indefinite period. It is with this eventuality that the statesmen of the American Republics are considering today.

Latin Americans have shown an inclination to fight almost as susceptible to insult or injury as that of the Europeans. A spirit of cooperation and willingness to arbitrate has effectively outlawed war on the American Continents, I believe. The early conflicts of the 19th century between several Latin states have been forgotten in the Pan American Conferences, held for the promotion of friendly intercourse and commerce.

WORLD COMMENT

Joe Burns

The Greater Texas Pan. American Exposition opening tomorrow in Dallas constitutes a significant link in the series of steps undertaken since 1933 to draw the American republics into closer relationships. Conscious efforts have been made by President Roosevelt and his Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, to banish the feeling of distrust and hatred engendered by early nineteenth century diplomacy of this country in its dealings with the twenty-one republics of Central and South America.

The joint exposition will have as its primary objectives the promotion of trade between the United States and its neighbors to the South, and the fostering of mutual friendships based upon an equality of relationships. Displays and representatives from virtually every Latin-American state will aid in the realization of these aims.

As evidence of the friendly and cooperative spirit which will accompany the opening of the exposition, Mexico has sent three state governors to aid Gov. Allred and Senator Connally in throwing open the gates. Commissioners of Mexico, Guatemala, Nicaragua, and Venezuela will also be on hand.

The brightest point of Rooseveltian foreign policy has been the cultivation of friendly relationships with our neighbors to the South. Early in his first administration President Roosevelt fostered the revocation of the Platt Amendment, by which this country could intervene in the affairs of Cuba. Since that time the chief executive has emphasized that all dealings with Latin-American states by his government will be on a basis of equality. The actions of Secretary Hull's Department have reiterated this statement.

These conscious efforts on the part of President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull represented a keen realization of the opportunities for American business and finance in South America and Central America, as well as a realization that American Republics can as a unit constitute one of the greatest forces for peace.

Last year our sales to Latin America totaled $429,582,000 in comparison with $376,130,000 in 1935. With abandonment of dollar diplomacy have come steadily increasing sales to the Latin American states. In order to strengthen the position of American interests in the Latin states, and for the purpose of increasing sales of manufactured goods, the State Department only last week announced that the number of consuls in those states would be increased.

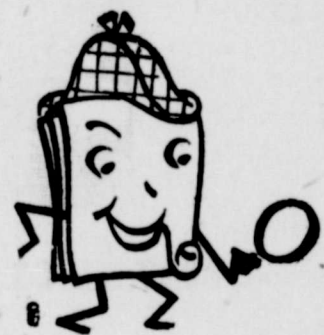

While Uncle Sam was maintaining marines in Nicaragua and periodically dispatching the navy to Cuba, Great Britain, Germany, and Japan were busily usurping the U.S.A.'s position of commercial supremacy in Latin America. Argentina buys far more goods from Britain today than it does from the U. S.

But events from 1833 have demonstrated that the Latins prefer buying from the friendly North American Republic than from the imperialist states of Europe which would constitute an uncertain market for their raw products in time of war. Dallas' Pan-American Exposition will seek to acquaint the Latin Americans with the advantages to be enjoyed from buying and selling from and to the North American market.

Europe's war-mad states have for nearly two decades been raising tariff walls and levying quotas against American goods. At least two European states—Germany and Italy—are striving toward complete economic self-sufficiency which, if accomplished, would mean that no more goods from this country would be sold to either state. The Chinese market is being flooded with cheaply manufactured goods from Japan with which American products cannot compete, both because of a lower standard of living in Nippon and because much of the Japanese goods is smuggled in and escapes the tariff levied on American importations. Africa's doors are slowly being closed to American products by their European masters, eager to find outlets for their own surplus goods.

On only one continent does the U.S.A. find friends willing to trade on a basis of equality. On only one continent are no trade barriers raised against the goods labeled "U.S.A." That continent is South America, joined by Central America.

There manufacturing is in its infancy. A population equal to that of continental United States is eager for the finished pro-

Scene at First and Only New York Fair 1853

NEW YORK (Special)—For the first time since the Crystal Palace Exposition of 1853, New York State and City are hosts to the remainder of the world in a genuinely international fair. The accompanying reproduction of a fine lithograph, published 84 years ago, shows in a wealth of detail the englassed Palace dedicated at that time to "the Exhibition of the Industry of all Nations." The site of the exposition, then known as "Reservoir Square," is to-day Bryant Park and the location of the Public Library, at Fifth Avenue and 42nd Street. In 1853 that was "way out in the country." To-day it is mid-town Manhattan, and about 20 minutes rapid-transit time from the 1216½-acre site of the New York World's Fair of 1939.

In the years since her own outstanding exposition, New York has been a prominent participant in the 13 major expositions held in the United States—State legislative appropriations alone amounting to $2,730,000 in behalf of "creditable appearance" at such fairs. The Empire State erected her own building for 11 out of 12 great expositions held without her boundaries. At the Century of Progress she created an exhibition in that fair's Hall of States.

New York's 1939 Fair, according to estimates, will represent an expenditure of $125,000,000 or more. The exposition is already well along in the construction period. Thirty-seven nations have already signified intentions of participating, and more than a score of state legislatures are considering bills providing for co-operative part in the nation's international fair of 1939.

FROM THE COUNTY AGR'L AGENT

Up to date a great many tenants have not filled trench silos due to the fact that they might have to move. It was thought that silage could not be moved, therefore, they did not want to run the risk of having to move off and leave their feed. In most cases they have been doubtful about selling the silage.

A tenant in Fayette County has solved this problem according to the county agricultural agent, J. C. Yeary. This tenant had to move last January. He had about 70 tons of silage. This tenant moved nine miles. He dug a trench silo on his new place and went back to the old place, got the silage and hauled it nine miles to the new place. He wet the silage as he packed it in the new silo and then covered with 12 inches of dirt. The silage is in good condition today. It took the tenant a week to move the silage. Now that we know that silage can be moved tenants should become more interested in trench silos.

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

By WILL ROGERS

THE big day for a lot of men is when they can get up and tell the boy scouts what a hard time they had getting started. The poor kids must be scared to death from all the hard tales they hear these well-fed guys telling them about how the successful men all started sweeping chimneys or sorting garbage.

Well, there was one rich fellow that always used to tell every meeting that he spoke to all about his hard luck at the start.

"When I landed in this here town," he says, "I had only three dollars to my name."

He got away with this tale for twenty years, and one day a fellow of his own age happened to hear it.

"Yes," says this wise geezer to the one that sat next to him, "that's the truth, all right. And you know how he spent his three bucks? For two of them he got drunk, and the third he used to wire home for a thousand dollars."

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

PICTURES EVERYBODY LIKES

The amateur who took this picture gave thought to it. The boys are his sons, but the appeal of the picture is universal.

THE statisticians tell us that there are now millions and millions of camera owners—more than 16 millions in the United States alone—but how many of them take pictures that really qualify as pictures, such as might be chosen to adorn the walls of a home other than their own, is a question.

Some judges of amateur snapshot contests aver that scarcely one person in a couple of thousand submits pictures of genuine pictorial quality or having the saving appeal of storytelling human interest. Others say that often most of the pictures are so good in these respects that they have difficulty in making decisions.

Perhaps the verdict depends as much upon who the judges are as upon what the pictures are. All of them concede that from the standpoint of photographic quality—correct exposure and proper focus—the average of amateur photographs is high. In that sense there is no doubt that thousands of amateurs take good pictures but with respect to evoking general appeal, it must be admitted that not all give evidence of attention to artistic composition, thought in the choice of subject, or care for the right moment to snap the shutter. The result is pictures that are commonplace in their appeal to others. Usually such pictures are personal to the picture taker, such as a close-up of a beloved infant with no qualities to distinguish it from snapshots of a thousand other babies.

To win snapshot prizes, camera users need to take pains to plan their pictures or at least exercise judgment in selecting a viewpoint that will give the best composition. Haphazard shooting rarely brings really good pictures. Unless experience has proved it, amateur picture takers should not assume that they possess a natural picture sense. They would do well to study examples of artistic photographs constantly published in magazines, newspapers and books, go to photographic exhibits, and learn what it takes to make a good picture.

Can it be that the majority of amateur picture takers are quite content with their pictures considering the fun they get in taking them and their value as records of good times or likenesses of relatives and friends? Certainly many do get vast enjoyment in carrying their snapshots around with them in wallets and handbags and exhibiting them to those in the circle of their acquaintance. They think their pictures are pretty good, and, as personal pictures, they certainly are.

Whether or not a camera user is interested in snapshot contests, he can get all the pleasure the painter gets in his work to create pictures that will be admired by everybody if he will venture beyond the field of personal interest and try to make pictures of general appeal. This means planning, care and thought. It's the difference, for example, between a picture entitled, "My wife and Junior, aged four," with the subjects standing stiffly side by side and one of the same subjects entitled, "A boy's best friend is his mother," showing her, with the boy over her knee, giving him a spanking. That's the kind of picture everybody likes.

John van Guilder.

Jail Break In Early Days of Gatesville Recalled

Josephine Clary's Essay One of Prize Winners In Essay Writers Test

Choosing her subject as Why I Want to See the Greater Texas and Pan American Exposition in Dallas, Josephine Clary, seventh grade student in the Gatesville Elementary school writes as follows:

"One of the greatest delights of my future summer vacation would be to have the pleasure of attending the Greater Texas and Pan American Exposition which is to open in Dallas, Texas this summer.

There has been much talk about the "Calvacade" since the Texas Centennial which was held in Dallas last summer. I feel that if I should have the opportunity to visit the Greater Texas and Pan American Exposition, I would not fail to see the "Calvacade." From what I have heard it is as perfect as a person could possibly imagine. I think that if I could see the "Calvacade," it would cause me to appreciate not only Texas history, but other histories more than I do.

To me art is one of the most interesting subjects a person could choose. In our school, we have been studying the different types of art in the different countries, and to me the art of the Americans from the beginning of our nation up until today is just as interesting and artistic as that of the countries that claim to be outstanding in the way of art. I am sure that any person interested in art would agree with me after seeing the Museum of Fine Arts at the Greater Texas and Pan American Exposition would be a wonderful sight for anyone. I sincerely believe that it will be very interesting and will increase the knowledge of everyone who attends this Greater Texas and Pan American Exposition."

Miss Clary placed eighth in this district, No. 15, and was awarded a cash prize of $2.00.

FORMER GATESVILLE MAN CAPTURES BURGLAR IN CORPUS CHRISTI

Following is a clipping taken from the "Corpus Christi Caller" which will be of interest to Coryell County and other readers:

W. A. Patterson, employee of the B & B Sign Shop on Schatzel Street, used his carpenter's plane to good advantage yesterday morning.

Patterson asleep in the shop, was awakened by a noise about 2 o'clock in the morning. He opened his eyes to see a burglar going through the drawers of the company desk. The burglar, it seems, had crawled through the door transom to gain entrance to the room.

Patterson jumped off his cot securing his carpenter's plane. He pointed the plane at the intruder. "Put up your hands and march out the door," he said.

The burglar, his hands high marched across the street to the police station. He was held in the city jail until yesterday afternoon when he was transferred to the county jail. Ike Eliff city detective, said burglary charges would be filed in connection with the case.

W. A., more familiarly known as "Pat" is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Neil Patterson of this city and has done carpenter work in this city previous to his moving to Corpus Christi.

KITCHEN RANGE CAUSES A FIRE IN P. G. WALKER HOME SAT.

Fire in the kitchen of the P. G. Walker home broke out Saturday morning about 6:40, damaging the walls and paper with flame and smoke.

Cause of the blaze was a faulty coal oil kitchen stove.

Tearing down of the old jail only brings back to mind the fact that it once held Leper and Powell, Bill Babb, and many other early day outlaws, but it also brings back the memory of incidents that illustrate the code of the pioneersman, such as an incident which happened there 60 years ago this month.

The front part of the jail was used as a residence for the sheriff and the jail was in the rear. It was usually full, and some of the men were rated as desperate characters. There was one man in particular who had been accused of a very foul murder in an adjoining county and had been brought here for safe keeping. It is around him that our story hinges.

Some of the men were in the run-around and Ben McClinton, the deputy sheriff went in to feed them. They overpowered him, took his keys, and released the prisoners from the cells.

In the lower south-east room were Mrs. Ben Friend, the wife of the sheriff, an infant daughter only a few days old, and a negro woman. As soon as she heard the disturbance in the rear and realized what had happened, Mrs. Friend hurried the negro woman off for help.

She then got out of bed, locked the front door, returned to her room and sat down by the cradle of her baby.

When the men saw their escape blocked by the iron door in front, they turned to her and demanded that it be opened. She told them that their effort to escape would be useless for the alarm had already been given. For a few moments pandemonium prevailed and then the so-called bad man stepped forth and said: "Mrs. Friend, we surrender to you." He then gave her the keys to the cells and hurried the others back into the jail. As the last one passed in, he protested, "You d— fool! Why didn't you knock that woman down and take those keys? You know she had them." He replied: "I would be in jail 'til I rotted before I would touch a woman."

And, so a jail break was prevented because of the reverence that an outlaw had for a defenseless woman.

New Administration-Library Building - University of Texas

With only a few minor details yet to be completed, the Administration-Library Building of the University of Texas, located in the center of the main campus at Austin, is ready for occupancy. The cost of the two units comprising the imposing structure, including fixtures and furniture, totaled approximately three million dollars. Not a penny of this sum came from the taxpayers.

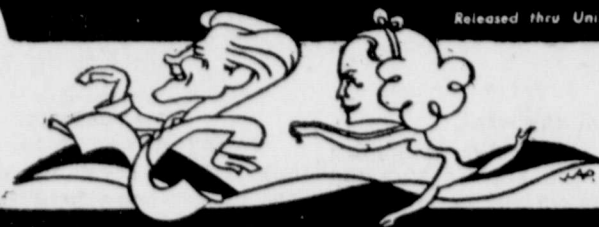

From an architectural standpoint, the tower, 308 feet high, with its 28 book-stack stories, is its outstanding feature. Its higher elevation causes it to rise several feet above the Capitol dome. In addition to book stacks, its space will be devoted to offices for a number of members of the faculty.

The new unit of the building contains the offices of the president, registrar, auditor, comptroller, librarian, and dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. Among the many attractive features are two rooms, exposed on three sides, and entirely glass-enclosed, for pleasure reading.

Students who attend the 1937 summer session will be the first to have opportunity to use the building in its completed form.

THE STORY SO FAR:

B. J. Nolan has lost a fortune backing worthless inventions. His son, Kenneth, with a million of his own, won't give his father $100,000 to build Nolan Heights, B. J.'s dream of a model village. B. J. and Virginia Travis, a lovely but penniless young architect, decide to get the money from Kenneth by fair means or foul. Virginia persuades two pals, Judy and Hunk, to pose as maid and butler and B. J., pretending to be in Chicago, hides in the kitchen.

Kenneth returns from Europe with Nina Tennyson, an attractive fortune-hunter, and Henri Saffron, her "Uncle." Unknown to Kenneth, they are plotting to get the money too. Virginia goes to see Kenneth and by a ruse gets him to sign a check for $100,000. However, the bank won't cash it without Kenneth's endorsement and worse still, the process servers catch up with B. J. He has two days to pay up.

Chapter Five

It was a dejected pair who walked into the service entrance of the Nolan home that afternoon. Even before Hunk and Judy pounced on them, B. J. and Virginia bore in unmistakable look of defeat which told its own story.

"Did ya get the money?" asked Hunk eagerly.

Virginia was too ashamed to face B. J. "We had a little trouble," she said.

"Well, there's been dirty work done on here!" volunteered Judy. Hunk elucidated: "That Nina's been working on Kenneth all morning. She and Ornerly are going to sell him with brandy tonight."

"Yeah, so he'll propose to her," supplemented Judy. "He does funny things after one glass."

Virginia was horrified. "That's sneaky!"

"Virginia!" burst out B. J. in a rage. "You've got to beat her to it. She'll use brandy, huh? Well, we'll use champagne!"

"But I don't want Kenneth to propose to me," insisted Virginia. "When a man proposes to me he'll have to be in his right mind."

"Who said anything about proposing?" shouted B. J. "Make him a partner in Nolan Heights. Do you want her to ruin him?"

"No!" said Virginia, her blue eyes flashing.

B. J. grunted triumphantly. "Then fight fire with fire!"

Hunk chuckled. "You mean fire-water with firewater!" he corrected. Virginia girded herself for battle.

It was her — or Nina. And with B. J., Hunk and Judy back of her, the enemy camp was outnumbered four to two. Virginia's wardrobe was pathetically skimpy; undaunted, B. J. and Judy took a pair of white organdie curtains from one of the bedroom windows, a bedspread from a bed, and fashioned a very presentable evening dress for her. B. J., with a mouth full of pins, suddenly remembered a vital item.

"The contract! Where's the contract?" He rummaged through his pockets frantically. "Ah! Here it is — he signs on the dotted line."

"Gimme," said Virginia, and stuffed it into the bosom of her dress.

"I'm so nervous!" muttered B. J. "You're nervous!" exclaimed Virginia and Judy in unison. They held four shaking hands out to B. J.

He held his out, shaking as badly as theirs.

Below in the living room Nina had set the stage for her own little drama. A decanter of brandy and glasses were conspicuously set out on a table in front of the divan. She stood against the mantelpiece dressed in her most devastating gown. Henri was stretched out on the divan.

"He'll be down in a minute," she snapped irritably. "Sit up."

"Do not interrupt," said Henri, blowing smoke rings. "I am thinking."

"Don't lie to me. Sit up!" Reluctantly Henri sat up.

"Don't even try to think," Nina told him. "Just follow instructions. When the dear boy begins to feel romantic, after the first glass, you get up and leave the room — discreetly."

Henri cursed in French. "When he begins to feel romantic! Always he — never me! I am not the romantic type — no! I am just a stooge-pidgeon. Holy mackarels, what a way to make a living!"

"Do you," asked Nina sweetly, but with a steely edge to her voice. "Know any other way to make a living?"

Henri sighed. "For that I will always be mad at myself."

With plots and counterplots hatching all around him, it was typical of Kenneth that he was innocently unaware of any of them. As was his habit, he dressed leisurely and carefully for dinner, humming as he did so. At the foot of the stairs he ran into Hunk, who greeted him with a low "Psst!" and beckoned mysteriously to Kenneth to follow him.

Bewildered but amused, Kenneth followed Hunk out into the garden. Moonlight streamed down upon the lovely terrace, and the scent of flowers hung heavy upon the warm night air. There was a garden love seat, chairs, a table — and on the table, a champagne bucket and glasses. Somewhere a radio played soft, romantic music. It was a perfect setting for a lovers' meeting.

"Oh, hello!" said Virginia from the divan.

"Hello," returned Kenneth, still puzzled by the tableau.

"I'm so glad you came out. It's nice out here, isn't it?"

"Yes, but — well —" stammered Kenneth. "Sort of unusual, too — finding you out here like this." He couldn't help noticing how pretty she looked in her new dress. "Very nice of course — but unusual — but nice."

"Of course it may seem a little strange," Virginia hurriedly explained. "But you see it's my birthday — and I've always had a toast or two of champagne on my birthday and —" she indicated the bottle — "here it is!"

"Suppose we get Nina and Henri out and make this a real occasion?"

"Oh, I hate birthday parties. Let's just have one toast together."

After one glass, Kenneth waited fearfully for the inevitable reaction. But strangely enough, he felt none. Virginia urged him to take some more. She was beginning to feel giddy. Kenneth suggested that they go inside.

"Oh, no — let's stay here. There's something I want to talk to you about." She giggled nervously. "Something — well, important."

"Go ahead," said Kenneth. "So long as it's not that crazy Nolan Heights."

Virginia thought perhaps they had better have another toast first. They did. They had two more. Virginia couldn't understand why everything kept going around. She and Kenneth chatted happily; they had, they discovered, many things in common — silly, inconsequential things — but nevertheless, things. She was a willing listener and Kenneth found himself unburdening his secret thoughts.

"I like to listen to wild geese flying, and I like to look at the moon . . . and watch it glide by a tree the way it's doing now. . ."

He looked shyly at Virginia. Her head rested on his shoulder. . . . And I like — if you don't mind my saying so — I like you."

Virginia snuggled closer. He couldn't explain how it happened, but he kissed her. She didn't seem to mind, so he kissed her again. Virginia had completely forgotten the important thing she was going to tell him; nothing seemed very important just now. Everything still kept going around, only more so. Quite suddenly she passed out. Kenneth was appalled. He lifted her to his shoulder and carried her, fireman fashion, upstairs.

B. J., Hunk and Judy, watching from an upstairs window, were horrified to see the complete miscarriage of their plans. Judy put Virginia to bed. Kenneth felt concerned and very guilty about the whole thing. Finally Judy beckoned to him from Virginia's room.

"Boy, oh, boy — oh, boy!" Virginia was mumbling in a happy stupor.

"Sleep well, and you'll feel fine in the morning." He looked down at her tenderly. "Virginia," he began softly. "Can you hear me? This is what I wanted to tell you in the garden. I don't just like you — I — think I love you. You don't mind, do you? I think I love you."

She was fast asleep. He kissed her gently on the forehead and tip-toed from the room.

(To be concluded.)

Twenty Questions on Social Security

For the next twenty issues, the News, gives you twenty questions and answers on Social Security.

Question: What should an employee do if he loses his Social Security account card? What should he do if he has been issued more than one account card?

Answer: If an employee loses his account card he should report such loss to the postmaster where his original application for an account card was made. He may later receive duplicate SS-5 form, Application for Account Number. He should fill out his form, showing on line 14 the place and date of his original application. After this form is returned to the postmaster, the worker shortly will receive a duplicate card.

If an employee receives two or more account cards, he should present, preferably in person, all account number cards issued to him to the local post office or to any Social Security Board Field office, either of which will designate the number to be kept.

An employee should have only one account number, so that all wages paid to him may be accurately recorded to his credit under a single old-age benefits account.

RMA

Yes, another alphabet. This time, it's for everyone's good, at least those who want to do good. It's a projected Retail Merchant's Association. It operates in nearly every surrounding county. It did operate here, but was discontinued for some reason or reasons.

Now, there is another commendable movement, we think, to start the operation of a Retail Merchant's Association again.

Here are a few services of the RMA: It protects the citizens good credit rating; it helps those who wish to re-establish good sound credit ratings; it curbs promiscuous solicitation of funds, fly-by-night selling schemes, advertising schemes, and other rackets which have absolutely no merit; it is a mark of distinction to a city and community.

The nearer there is 100 per cent membership in an organization of this nature, the more successfully it will function.

Some folks, naturally, will object to a system of this sort, but, they'll probably object to being asked for their bills at the end of each month, too. This organization is fundamentally for the protection of those who WILL pay, but doesn't favor those who won't to any appreciable extent.

It's another item to think over!

"SWING TIME"

Yes, Sir! It's Swing Time, right here in old Gatesville.

Time to swing a few hoes, rakes, etc., and catch this fresh crop of weeds that is just coming out, now that we've had a little rain, reaped a harvest of grain, and saw a first class Rodeo.

The vacant lots, the center of the boulevards, the alleys, and well, just lots of places, even the court house lawn is "weeding," and its going to be time soon to start swingin'.

Just a way of suggesting.

A. C. C. CLOSES BEST YEAR IN THE HISTORY OF THE SCHOOL

"The best year in the history of the college was marked by highest total student attendance, important improvements in facilities, and the finest student-teacher cooperation for many years," said president James F. Cox at the close of the '37 spring session of Abilene Christian College.

Registration records show the largest total student-attendance in the history of the school, a new dining hall has been built in the basement of Chambers Hall, and a new steel stadium is taking form on the new athletic field.

A movement to have another record enrollment for the 32nd session, beginning September 15, is under way by combined efforts of several campus organizations.

San Francis's 1939 World's fair will have a powerful short wave broadcasting station,

Due to the work on the court house lawn, the rain guage and other government equipment has been moved and hasn't been replaced in its former position. Consequently, no rain readings have been taken.

Our guess is about 5 inches of rain, total.

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

By WILL ROGERS

THREE small boys entered the village hardware store. The rather gruff proprietor said to the tallest, "What do you want, Boy?"

"A dime's worth of BB shot, please." The old man climbed a ladder, brought down the shelf box that contained the air-rifle shot, made up the packet and returned the box to the shelf above. Then he asked the second boy, "What do you want, son?"

"A dime's worth of BB's, please," was the meek answer. "Why didn't you say so before?" said the old man, irritably, as he went for the ladder again. He made up the packet as before, and then turned to the third.

"And do you want a dime's worth of BB's, too?" he demanded.

"No," replied that one, hesitatingly.

The old man climbed laboriously to the shelf again and deposited the box of shot. Then he returned to the counter.

"Well, my boy, what do you want?" he demanded.

"A nickel's worth of BB shot."

I returned to Washington this past week and found that the weather was hot and the temper of the members even hotter. There has been a long bitter fight in regard to the relief bill. It finally passed at a billion and a half dollars, the amount asked for by the President and the amount for which I voted, believing as I have heretofore said that this was all the money we could spend and at the same time that it was as little as we could afford to spend. This is a reduction of approximately one third as compared with last years expenditures yet the president estimates that it will provide work for the unemployed. The provisions for ear marking half a billion for P.W.A.; highways and flood control were defeated. I felt that these provisions should be placed in the bill but the President has assured us that he will see that at least this amount is spent for these purposes and even more for permanent work.

On Thursday, the House passed the bill extending the life of the "Connally Hot Oil Bill." This bill gives federal aid to the enforcement of our proration laws in East Texas and many oil men feel that without it the oil market would collapse. I think that it is proper to help the oil industry just as we would help any other industry but this is but another evidence that it is actually the government that has created most of the value of our oil products. Oil sold for ten cents per barrel before the government forced proration in East Texas and oil men have claimed it would do so again if we were to cease to enforce proration. Inasmuch as oil is now worth $1.27 per barrel it seems as if the government had added about $1.17 to each ten cent barrel of the oil company's property, and it strikes me that the people who are getting this profit by reason of government action should be willing to pay something more in the way of taxes.

An effort is being made on the part of all of the Texas Congressmen and most all of those of the South to secure for our cotton farmers the additional benefits to which they are entitled on the 1936 Farm Program and I can not but feel very hopeful of our success. The Agricultural Adjustment Administration officials in figuring the rates for benefit payments for the Southern region covering the 1936 farm program, estimated the amount provided, was sufficient to pay the growers on the basis of 5c per pound and in their published regulations stated that if the participation was greater than they estimated, a less amount per pound would be paid; while if it was less than was estimated, a larger amount would be paid; but in no case would this vary more than ten per cent, either over or below the 5c per pound estimate. The acreage participation in the Southern Region was such as to leave a balance of around twenty six million dollars unexpended out of the money provided by the budget. Therefore, it appears that the farmers of the southern region should be allotted the additional ten per cent.

Of course, I feel that the Department of Agriculture should have made this payment of its own volition as the money has been provided and it seems to me clear that the farmers who cooperated with the program last year should have it, but since the Department has done nothing, I favor immediate action by Congress.
