Ex-Hornets Gather at City Hall to Formulate New Organization Tues.

Sports enthusiasts, Coaches, and Ex-Hornets gathered at the City Hall, Tuesday, evening of this week to formulate plans for the promotion of caring of possible new material for the 1937 edition of the Hornets.

This newly re-formed club, named as its President, George Painter, former end on the Hornet squad of 1921 and a Hornet booster since that time. Elland Lovejoy was made Secretary Treasurer of the organization. R. M. Arnold, Jr., was also made Vice-President.

Talks and suggestion were advanced by a number of those present, and Coach Worley stated that he would have eight lettermen back, four of these, however living in the country, and needed boarding places during the football season, so that they could get the benefit of the full afternoon's practice. One star player, Worley continued, rides a horse six miles to catch the bus, which he then rides 21 miles to get to school.

Coach Schwarz, stated that he would be in charge of the Junior Hi Squad this year, and that they had ample uniforms, pads, protectors, etc., and that the practice and games this younger bunch of Hornets had would fit them for later years with the Senior Squad. Both coaches emphasized the necessity of pointing out the care and training of boys which prevented accidents on the field, and built their bodies as well as their minds, by making them outwit their competition as well as out play them.

President Painter, knowing that the Ex-Hornet's Club would need financing in order to prove their merit, and to put over a constructive program for the benefit of the 1937 Hornets, appointed a committee composed of David Franks, Chairman, Ted Harris, Roland Bone, H. K. Jackson, and W. T. Hix, who are to devise a method or methods to raise money to help members of the squad who will need assistance during the coming season. Donations were received from several on the spot, and the Secretary-Treasurer started on a "cash basis," which is very unusual.

It was voted to have window and car stickers printed to give each donor to the Hornet's Club Fund of one dollar or more. Complimentary tickets are also being printed for presentation to donors to this fund.

The time for the next meeting was not announced at the Club's initial meeting, but will be announced soon by the president. Approximately fifty men were present at the meeting.

Miss Louise Mayes is visiting friends in Waco this week.

LOCAL OFFICERS AID IN CAPTURE OF FUGITIVE IN BELL CO.

Deputy Sheriff E. G. Ritchie and Constable George Hodges, aided Sheriff John Bigham and Deputy Sheriff Ralph Jeffers of Bell county in the capture of Edwin Dusek, a 40 year old Bell county farmer, who shot and killed his estranged wife about 8:30 Sunday as she sat on the porch of the farm home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Hont, near Bartlett. However, Dusek, preferred suicide to arrest about 5 a.m. Monday as officers cornered him in a thicket near Holland.

With officers only a few yards away, after bloodhounds from the reformatory at Gatesville had tracked him thru the night, Dusek fired a bullet into his brain from a .38 calibre pistol, the same officers said, he used against his wife. The pistol was in his hand, according to Sheriff Bigham.

Sunday night, Dusek stepped from behind a tree at the home of his wife's parents and without a word opened fire. Sheriff Bigham said, Three bullets took effect in the woman's body two of which would have proven fatal. Mrs. Dusek died almost instantly.

Cause of the shooting was believed to have been resentment of Dusek over the filing of a lunacy charge against him by his wife. The charge was dismissed in court.

DAVIDSON BROS. & CO. BUYERS ARE IN DALLAS MARKETS

Elgin Davidson, accompanied by Mrs. Elgin Davidson, left the middle of the week for Dallas and other Southwestern markets where they will make additional selections of merchandise for the trade in this territory.

Davidson's, like the other enterprising merchants in this locality, are ever on the "look" for new and surprising merchandise, yet at prices which are ever in line.

LEAIRD'S DEPT. STORE HAS NEW MAN IN MEN'S DEPARTMENT

E. K. Robbins, formerly of Marlin, and Gardere & Holloway, one of Marlin's largest department stores, has just accepted a position in the Men's Department of Leaird's.

Mr. Robbins has had a number of years' experience in handling the men's end of the clothing business and is well qualified to give the trade in this territory the benefit of his years of experience in the selection of merchandise which Coryell County citizens demand.

Chamber of Commerce To Have Barbecued Chicken in Raby Park

Chamber of Commerce members and their hosts, wives or "sweeties" are whetting their respective chops in anticipation of the barbecued chicken feed which will be spread for all concerned in Raby Park on the evening of September 2 coming.

Three committees have been named, assuring that the event will be of utmost success, both socially and gastronomically. The steering committee chaired by Howard Franks, who has his aides, Luke Walker and Bill Bamberg are the generalists of the occasion.

Sub committees have been named as entertainment, and include W. E. Lasseter chairman, J. B. Roach and David Franks. Serving committee is named as Dr. Otis Carter Ray chairman, Merle Carroll and C. D. Blackburn as members.

Routine work of the committees has not been announced, and since they are "hard at it" it is safe to predict there won't be anything left of the chickens, except necks. It is said, and hoped, there won't be any necks to start with.

PAINTER'S MAKE FINAL ROUND OF DALLAS MARKETS

George Painter, owner of Painter's, accompanied by Mrs. Kelly Brooks, was a Dallas visitor in the fall merchandise markets early this week, where other purchases were made for this enterprising store.

Mr. Painter is ever on the outlook for new and stunning merchandise which will be of interest to the trade in this county and town, assisting in bringing up the standard of mercantile establishments in this vicinity to the high plane which they now enjoy.

FOUR HUNDRED EIGHTY-ONE VOTES COST $1.50 EACH

Election costs for the Constitutional Amendments Election held August 23, Monday, approximated costing $1.50 a vote, according to County Clerk Charlie Mounce.

Spring Hill lead with the most expensive election, two votes being cast, presumably election officials who are allowed $2.50 or more each for holding the election and mileage for bring the box in and taking it out. This does not count the cost of the ballots.

Lack of interest in the entire election is shown by the fact that very few votes were polled at any box, even in towns where the box was practically "just across the street."

However, we present herewith, the votes as taken from the official records at the County Clerk's Office in the courthouse.

CARLOAD OF POPCORN NETS $2.00 PER HUNDRED FOR RAISER

S. M. Mayhew, who last spring tried to interest growers locally in the production of popcorn, has just completed a transaction on a carload of popcorn which brought $2.00 a hundred shipping a 40,000 pound car from this country.

According to Mr. Mayhew, the land on which this popcorn was grown paid from $16.00 to $20.00 per acre. Most of the popcorn was raised between Pan-cake and Turnersville.

Mr. Mayhew attempted last spring to introduce this product in the county, but did not succeed to any appreciable measure. This being a new and untried product, attempts by Mr. Mayhew to sell the idea didn't bring very good results.

Proper modernist walls obtained with cane fiber plank.

A Room in Modernist Manner

SO you have made up your mind to let your house go modern! You have passed the point of being startled by a walnut table with glass legs or a fireplace faced with blue mirror glass. You acknowledge that this idea of space saving is smartly useful in a built-in wall bench and desk combined. A segmental sofa that turns into single easy chairs when you choose to pull it apart makes for variety.

Well, the background of a truly modern room must be in keeping with the furniture that is to go in it. The selection of wall surface may be the determining factor in deciding whether a room will be restful or distracting in its general effect.

It is a principle among the modernists that horizontal lines produce that restful feeling which is so much needed at home in this restless, over-excited age. A fine effect of this type is easily obtained by the use of Celotex insulating finish plank for side walls contrasted with a lighter toned ceiling.

The natural coloring of this plank forms a neutral background for the gayest draperies and upholstery materials you may wish. Laid in horizontal style, its beveled joints form the slight accent line which gives any room that longer, wider look. Tan, ivory, light brown, and mottled brown are the unobtrusive colorings available. Sanded tapestry and ripple finishes present a variety of texture choices. Widths run from six to sixteen inches.

The ripple finish plank in a light brown or tan color gives the walls that note of warmth which every room, modern or period, must have if it is to be livable.

TWO FIRES SINCE FRIDAY
BRING UP FIRE LOSS FOR DRY SEASON

Fire starting in the egg candling room of the Carroll Feed Store was reported about 3:00 A. M. Tuesday. The feed store, located on East Leon, was damaged very little, in fact, the total loss was estimated as being only $15.

The loss was small due to the quick work of firemen. Some of them kept the water swept out so that the feed would not be harmed while others fought the fire furiously.

Another fire, of unknown origin, was reported about 2:00 A. M. Thursday. Ed Beck and Lucian Short were the occupants of the house, located on the old Waco road, but it was owned by Mrs. H. R. Cathey.

The house was almost burned down when the alarm was turned in. Nothing was saved, but the firemen put it out soon after their arrival. It was unknown whether or not the house was covered with insurance.

KIPLING'S "WEE WILLIE WINKIE" STARS TEMPLE AND MCLAGLEN

Kipling's colorful characters live glamorously, adventurously and courageously on adventure's last frontier in the twentieth Century-Fix picturization of his famed "Wee Willie Winkie," which opens Saturday at the Palace Theatre, with Shirley Temple and Victor McLaglen in the starring roles.

From the heart of mighty India, where all the world is wild and strange, where the British raj ends at Khyber Pass in the land of the Bengal Lancers, comes this glorious adventure of the Scottish Highlanders in action and of the little girl who won the right to wear their plaid.

The most spectacular production in which Shirley Temple has yet appeared, "Wee Willie Winkie" gives Victor McLaglen a powerful role as a fearless fighting fool, and provides splendid opportunities for C. Aubrey Smith, June Lang, Michael Whalen, Cesar Romero, Constance Collier and young Douglas Scott.

Life at a frontier army post in India is not too happy for Shirley and her widowed mother, June Lang, for her grandfather, C. Aubrey Smith, is a gruff old disciplinarian. The youngster decides that the only way to win the old Colonel's approval is to become a soldier herself, and her friend, Michael Whalen, a young lieutenant, turns her over for training to burly Sergeant Victor McLaglen who dubs her "Wee Willie Winkie" because of the quaint way she has of screwing up her eyes when she asks questions.

Shirley gets into plenty of trouble at the post, but wins gratitude of an imprisoned chieftain, Khoda Khan, when she returns his lost amulet. In a surprise raid on the post, the proud chieftain is freed, and the border is immediately ablaze with crimson warfare, with McLaglen's life being one of those lost.

Feeling that Koda Kahn and her grandfather would prefer peace Shirley takes a desperate step to end the killing, and sets out at night for the Pathan camp. When her departure is discovered, the Highlanders set out grimly for Khyber Pass, graveyard of many a soldier, determined to rescue her or die in the attempt. With lives at stake, Shirley makes one last desperate gesture to save them and restore peace, bringing the picture to a thoroughly thrilling climax.

SIGHTSEEING

Local firemen are publicity hounds! They like to have you drive your car just as close as possible to the fire, park it, and then get right up close to the house, so you can see them do their work. So they'll have to wet you with the hose, when they're trying to save some one else's home. Just go to the fire next time, and stand in the way, and be sure and bring your car and park it in the middle of the street, so neither fire truck can get by, so they can't string a line of hose, or handle their equipment. They too, like to see fires, and don't want to put the fire out any more than you do. They'd rather see the house burn, the property lost, and everyone have a gay time, and for you, well, you'll see the fire "heroes" work, with all the inconveniences you can possibly give them.

THEY DO NOT!

They, the Fire Boys, who get out of a sleepy bed the second an alarm is turned in, put on their clothing (which many times gets wet, dirtied, burned or soiled, necessitating either new clothes or a tailor bill) and dash out to help save your property, YES, YOUR property, but you, firebug that you are, get your car up in the way, where there is no possibility of shifting equipment, changing lines, moving ladders, or leaving space for household supplies to be gotten out, just because you are ravenously hungry "to see the fire." Topping this, you lazily dash for the phone, and ask the operator "where's the fire?" when you should leave the phone alone, so some fireman may ask where the fire is so he can go to it and do some good, instead of blocking the activities of those who are trying to save property, instead of just "sightsseeing."

Think, when a fire alarm goes in, instead of just acting.

LEAIRD'S BUYERS ON TRIP TO MAKE "WIND-UP" PURCHASES

New York—Steel to a total of 28,500 tons will be used in erecting the structures of the New York World's Fair of 1939, exclusive of the amphitheatre built by the State of New York and the several foreign buildings.

New York—When the job of painting the buildings of the New York World's Fair is undertaken, it will require 200,000 pounds of pigment to cover the 10,000,000 square feet of their surfaces.

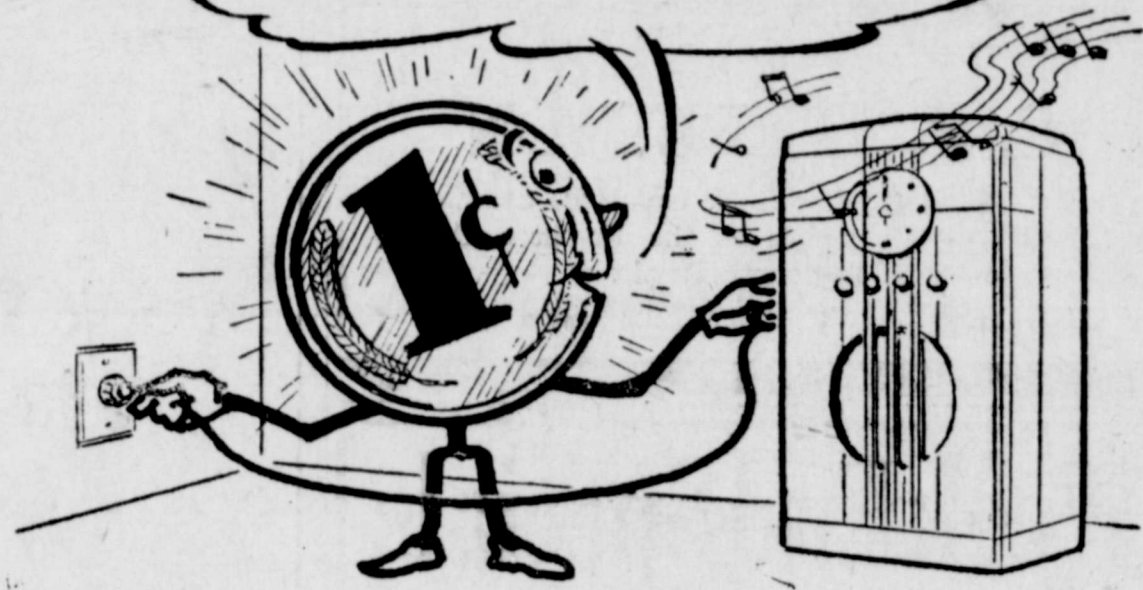

Bringing farmers twice the income of any other farm operation, dairying is rightly called Agriculture's Giant Earner. Regularly paid in cash, milk income is a year around source of ready money for thousands of farm families.

To make this steady income possible, people must be reminded constantly of the goodness of milk and milk products. Borden does this by keeping milk foremost in the minds of millions of buyers and making ever larger markets for dairy products.

I BRING YOU 2 WHOLE HOURS OF THE WORLDS FINEST ENTERTAINMENT

Yes... a penny's worth of electricity will bring you two whole hours of radio entertainment. And one cent spent electrically will also —

- percolate six cups of delicious coffee
- or toast eight slices of bread
- or vacuum clean two room-size rugs
- or provide four hours of electric refrigeration
- or bake two golden-brown waffles
- or operate an electric fan two and one-half hours
- or do a week's mixing, whipping and juice-extracting
- or light a 60-watt globe for two and one-half hours

There's no getting around it—the money you spend for electricity gives you more honest-to-goodness value—more comfort and convenience—than any other money you spend. There is scarcely a household task that electricity will not perform for pennies or fractions of pennies. And remember this—while other things have been going up the cost of electricity has been coming down. You get more electricity for your money now than ever before in history.

YOUR CHILD AND THE SCHOOL

By Dr. ALLEN G. IRELAND
Director, Physical and Health Education
New Jersey State Department of Public Instruction

The All-Day School

For the child to go to school all day and Saturdays is not an improbability. Of course, it will be a different type of school from what we know today. In effect, it would be school, or at least, the after-school activities of children, or at least the after-school activities the children should have. Naturally, it will be a school which parents approve of, combining study, work, play, rest, and recreation in a balanced program.

For the additional time, the children will have art work, dramatics, orchestra or band rehearsals, handicraft, scouting, clubs, and remedial health activities such as rest and posture correction. The teachers' work will not necessarily be heavier but there will be more teachers. In many communities, this would merely be a union of the present school staff and the playground or recreation personnel, with the board of education broadening its field of operation.

Much can be said in favor of such a plan. Foremost among the arguments is provisions of a wholesome environment, wholesome leadership, and a constructive program to replace that doubtful period between the close of school and supper time. In short, it can be our most effective weapon against juvenile delinquency. The objectionable learnings of children are not acquired at home, at school or at church, but in that in-between period. Provide children with wholesome living at all times and we exercise a powerful force for character growth.

FARM AND RANCH

FEATURES of INTEREST

August 21, 1937

Congress has not finally adjourned as this is being written but there remains no doubt that it will adjourn by mid-night. We have within the last few hours seen just how important the Southern Leadership of the House is to our people. On three separate occasions this week it has seemed likely that the majority of the House would trample on the rights of the Southern Farmer. The first instance was the failure of the appropriation committee to include any money in the deficiency bill to start the tenancy or farm home ownership program. After having accepted a tremendous reduction in order to meet the President's wishes in regard to economy we were told by the appropriation committee that we would not have enough money to do much with anyway and that they had decided not to let us start. A number of Southerner representatives protested. I made a speech against this injustice and finally after a masterful argument with by Hon. Marvin Jones of Texas the items of $10,000,000 for retirement and of sub-marginal land and $10,000,000 for loans to tenant farmers were included.

Yesterday we had up a Senate Resolution simply pledging Congress to make general farm legislative first order of business when we reconvene (whether that be in January or earlier at a called session). This resolution was but a part of the program agreed on in order to induce the President to make cotton loans immediately available. The resolution was bitterly opposed by many of the Representatives from the industrial sections who have been trying to secure first place for the consideration of their wage and hours bill. Again it was only the splendid work of Mr. Jones that put the measure thru.

The final test came just a few minutes ago when we were trying to pass a deficiency appropriation already passed by the Senate to provide $65,000,000 for each of the next two years to pay not to exceed three cents per pound parity on the 1937 and 1938 cotton. We understand that this money was set aside for this purpose long ago but the President has hesitated to use it and had asked that Congress take this action. We understand that it will assure a cotton loan and parity payment similar to that of 1936. Its passage was absolutely vital to the South. The Republicans and most of the Northern and many Western Democrats immediately began a bitter attack. It looked as if they were going to defeat us and deny the Southern cotton farmer any relief when Mr. Rayburn, the majority leader, from Bonham, Texas, took the floor in favor of the appropriation. Mr. Jones of Amarillo, Texas, followed with a most telling plea and finally the Speaker of the House, Mr. Bankhead of Alabama closed with an appeal that resulted in a vote of 199 to 129 for the measure. It is most unusual for the Majority leader and the Speaker to take sides especially where it is not a strictly party fight. But I feel sure that without their help today the South would have been sacrificed.

The past few days have been oppressingly hot here in Washington. So hot in fact that for three straight days the Government Departments have dismissed their employees. The unpleasant weather combined with night sessions and a never ending string of controversial questions has not helped the temper of the members but I have been surprised at the lack of serious friction. Now that adjournment has come, I will be exceedingly happy to get home to Central Texas. I am going to go to Detroit and drive home a Ford car that I traded for before coming to Washington last winter. For the past eight months I have been a-foot but I am afraid that it is still a little hot for walking in Texas. I will, therefore be on the road next week and will not send out any letter, nor do I expect to stand but any regular reports until Congress convenes again. I shall however try to send out a few special items explaining particular legislative matters from time to time.

I am leaving my Washington office open and my Secretary, Mr. Clarence Elwell of Waco and Eddy, will be there to render every possible service to the people of the District.

WORLD COMMENT

Joe Burns

In the brief period of eight months which marked the first session of the Seventy-fifth Congress an historic realignment of forces has taken place within the membership of the Democratic Party. Revolution did not generally occur in American political parties in such a brief period of time, years generally being required for divergent elements within a political organization to seek new outlets for their endeavors.

In this instance, the break between new dealers and antique dealers has been decisive and swift. In January, when the new Congress met fresh from the November elections, the Democrats boasted the largest majorities any party ever had in Congress—75 of 96 Senators, — 333 of 435 Representatives. A promising era of peace and prosperity, reform and recovery, was apparently in store for the American people. Likewise for the Democratic Party, with its foes crushed on all fronts.

At the end of eight months of battles and deliberation, with Congress in adjournment until October at the earliest, not half the President's program is law. Of seven major bills submitted by the executive, only three were enacted as desired by the White House. These neutrality legislation, the measure to plug tax loopholes, and the housing act. The Supreme Court enlargement bill, crop control legislation, government reorganization, and wages and hours legislation were tossed into the waste basket by irate senators and representatives who for the first time since 1932 refused to accept the dictation of the chief executive and the Democratic National Committee.

But why need the administration forces worry with such huge majorities in both houses of the Congress? Can not the measures which failed of enactment be passed next session or at a special session called in October or November?

The truth is that the administration has no majorities in either house of Congress. The Democratic Party has majorities but not the Roosevelt Administration. The final break between Democrats and the new dealers has come and is now a reality.

What caused this break in the space of a few short months? The Supreme Court controversy is the most handy answer to this question but is only a partial answer. It will be remembered that virtually all Democrats of whatever political convictions supported Roosevelt for re-election in 1936 with the exception of the "dyed in the wool" conservatives out of Congress. The Democrats in Congress—probably a majority—accepted the new deal during its first four years with some alacrity and misgivings. They would have liked nothing better than to nominate a conservative in 1936 but that was of course in the realm of impossibility.

This group which cannot be termed "conservative"; as well be later explained, supported President Roosevelt last year with the

The new Norris Dam Lake on the Clinch River in Eastern Tennessee has an 800-mile shore line. This is just one unit in the great TVA system for power, flood-control and navigation. Dr. Arthur E. Morgan (inset), TVA Chairman, in this week's Saturday Evening Post, urges the public not to lose sight of the manifold benefits of the government project because of the controversy over the power issue.

TVA WORTH TWICE ITS COST SAYS DR. MORGAN

Chairman Defends Project; Believes Solution of Power Issue Possible

A few controversial issues have obscured the all-round benefits of the Tennessee Valley authority, says Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, TVA chairman, who declares that the great government project "as a whole for all purposes is worth to the public perhaps twice its cost."

Dr. Morgan discusses the most controversial issue of all—power—in a frank and critical analysis of the objectives and potential usefulness of TVA in the Saturday Evening Post out tomorrow. He advances several solutions for the disposal of the electricity generated in the great power plant.

Rights of Both Sides

The proposals suggested by Dr. Morgan includes sale of power wholesale to large private companies; the transmission pool, similar to the so-called grid system used in England and Sweden; public acquisition of utilities on an orderly and reasonable basis; operation of the TVA as the sole power agency in a limited area.

"An advantage if such adjustment," says Dr. Morgan, "would be that the Authority would have a free hand in a substantial area to prove the competence of a public body in the transmission and sale of power. If accounts were public, and if costs were fairly reported, and if there were no subsidies, it would furnish a yardstick for comparison of public and private power operation."

However, Dr. Morgan writes: "It would be necessary for the private utilities to recognize the superior right of the public to own its power facilities if it should choose, and the public should recognize the right of private investors to a fair and impartial determination of the price to be paid for properties purchased."

While admitting the various legal and administrative problems involved, the TVA Chairman believes "they would not be insuperable if the two parties should honestly unite in such a purpose."

Favors More TVA's on Non-Political Basis

With reference to the bills now pending in Congress for division of the United States into a series of "Conservation Authorities," he warns: "It has been my conception of the TVA that it should be an agency of efficient public administration, bringing its public business to a high level of quality, and that it should not be used to entrench a political regime in power, no matter how laudable the purposes of that regime."

Dr. Morgan, also cautious against letting one objective of a program "run away with the show, menacing other aims of equal or greater importance." He adds: "Each project should be considered by itself and not treated as an imitation of the TVA or any other undertaking."

"Given a high quality of non-political administration, with aim of maintaining a sense of proportion as to value and importance of the several objectives, the division of the country into administrative districts or authorities for water-control seems to be highly desirable, and to represent a distinct advance in the art of government."

Dr. Morgan bases his estimates of the worth to the public of a completed TVA system on an exposition of the savings that will be made in freight costs, flood-control, and the development of power, not to mention the expansion of recreational facilities and other social benefits. No one of these things, he asserts, could be done by public and private groups working independently without "great waste duplication and conflict."

Concerning Education, that great scholar and educator, Geo. Peabody, said "Education is a debt due from the present to future generations."

GOOD FORTUNE HAS PART IN BUILDING ENTERPRISE

(Note: The following story of the achievements of a former Coryell County boy, was taken from the August issue of Southwestern Retailer. Many of our citizens will remember Mr. Dickie when he lived in this county.—Editor.)

The story follows:
Good fortune played an important part in the beginning of a career that has made history in the development of manufacturing in the Southwest. E. E. Dickie of Williamson-Dickie Manufacturing Company, Fort Worth, admits that it was by accident that he was started on a series of events that eventually developed into the present successful business, but it may be observed that it was a constant striving toward one goal that eventually brought to pass the success that has been achieved by his company.
The story of his career, recounted modestly in an interview with Mr. Dickie, tells of the circumstances that led up to the establishment of the Williamson-Dickie Manufacturing Co. and the mutuality of interest manifest by the partners who manage the business.

"I was born in Walker County, fifteen miles west of Huntsville, the son of James A. Dickie and Annie Arbrit Dickie," Mr. Dickie said. "I had one sister and one brother. My father was one of the oldest graduates of Baylor University, and was a personal friend of the family of Rufus C. Burleson, founder of Baylor University."

"James A. Dickie was a farmer, but not a land owner. He lived on rented farms. The family moved from Walker County to Bell County, and located on a farm near Akin, then moved from there to Coryell County and bought one-hundred acres of land. The family made a living on this homestead located four miles east of Gatesville."

"I received my education at a country school known as the Bigham school house, situated three miles east of Gatesville. At the age of thirteen and fourteen I rode four miles to Gatesville to school."

"When I was fifteen years old I was compelled to go to work and make a living to help the family. I worked on the farm until I was sixteen years old. Then, on account of failure in crops I went to Waco to get a position, to help the family, and secured a position with M. D. Watson as a dishwasher in a fifteen-cent restaurant. After working there for quite awhile, fortunately for me, as it turned out, I bought a ticket from Waco to Gatesville, and was waiting for a train, which was the Cotton Belt. While waiting at the depot I got into some trouble with some newsboys that were picking on me, and they almost beat me to death. While the train was loading and unloading baggage C. N. Williamson, who was then traveling for C. H. Barde & Co., a hat concern out of Philadelphia, got off the train and saw my predicament and came to my rescue. My nose was bleeding and Mr. Williamson, not knowing who I was, but seeing I was in distress, took his white handkerchief and wiped my face and bathed it with cool water, and asked me what I was doing there. About that time the conductor hollered "all aboard!" and I got on the train, and Mr. Williamson asked me my name. I told him, and he told me his mother's name. Our mothers were sisters, but we had never met before to know each other. He talked with me quite a lot from Waco to McGregor, which is eighteen miles, where he was getting the train going south on the Santa Fe, so I gave him my life history and told him that my ambition was, to be a salesman. He told me to go home and rest easy, and he would get me a job. The following week I received a letter from Mr. Williamson telling me to report to Goliad, Texas, and call on J. H. Elwell & Co., which I did. I started to work for Elwell as a porter in his store, keeping the brass lamps shined and the floor swept and dusted off. My duties were to milk four cows and drive them to pasture in the morning, keep the store in order, and at spare times help out as salesman. My salary was $15.00 a month I saved my money and sent it home regularly, and when I left Elwell & Co. I was the top salesman. I worked for them three years.

"C. N. Williamson then got me a job in Waco, through the president of the Citizens National Bank of Waco, J. S. McLeaud. This position was with the H. B. Mistrot & Co. at Waco, at a salary of $8.00 per week. I lived at the Richelieu Hotel for $3.50 per week for room and board, with a lady by the name of Mrs. McCann. One day Mrs. McCann got hard up financially and proposed to me that if I would let her have $15 she would give me my room and board free. I lived with Mrs. McCann for three years and finally she paid me my $15 back. I think that was pretty good interest on $15."

"While working for Mistrot at $8.00 per week I joined the K. of P. Lodge and took the janitor's job, and was janitor there for several years. I made it a rule to save some money every week and put it in the bank, after helping my folks with the rest of my salary. When I left Mistrot I was also the top salesman in the men's wear, but the salary did not increase any."

"Now my old stand-by, C. N. Williamson, shows up again. There was a concern in Galveston by the name of Blum Lowenstein. My friend Williamson secured me a position with these people at a salary of $25 per week and expenses. That was some big job for me! I traveled all over west Texas in a big hack drawn by four horses. Blum Lowenstein finally moved from Galveston to St. Louis, Mo. They had financial difficulties and retired from business."

"Here comes my old stand-by again, Mr. Williamson, and made a connection with Keith Brothers of Chicago in the hat business, and they took me in as a partner. The former partner was Ernest White of Bonham, Texas. Mr. Williamson and I traveled the south for Keith Brothers for a number of years, and we both soon discovered that the jobber would soon be a thing of the past, and that the manufacturers were driving the jobber farther back to smaller towns each season, so Mr. Williamson made a connection with the Mallory Hat people, the greatest firm on earth in its line. We traveled for them for twenty-five years."

"Finally, I decided that I owed a debt of gratitude to my cousin, Mr. Williamson. He had a son C. D. Williamson, who was at that time in school, so I proposed to Mr. Williamson that we had always been successful in all our undertakings, so why not build a monument for ourselves by establishing Williamson-Dickie Manufacturing Co., with the hope that his son and his son's children would continue this business for many years to come. "I am awfully proud of this business. My partners, C. N. Williamson and C. D. Williamson are both wonderful men.

honest, truthful and with high ideals in life. Mostly through C. D. Williamson we have built up an organization that functions and cooperates to the highest efficiency. The majority of the employees in this institution are carefully selected and are high school graduates, (Continued on last page)

SYNOPSIS
Gaby, the spoiled but devoted little Viennese wife of Peter, concertmaster of London's Philharmonic Orchestra, falls in love with Peter's old conservatory friend, Miguel del Vayo, who has become a famous solo violinist. Miguel, lonely in spite of his great renown, becomes madly attached to her and insists that she divorce Peter and marry him. But Gaby cannot bear to hurt her husband who needs her so badly. Miguel is called to America on a concert tour, and Gaby promises to be waiting for him on his return. Seeing Miguel off at the station, Peter takes cold, becomes seriously ill, and requires an operation.

Chapter Five

Peter, convalescing from his operation, was far from a model patient. He resented his inactivity; he resented the pain he had been through; he resented his nurse, his doctor, his treatments, everything but his beloved Gaby.

But the doctor was used to all that. "I assure you he is out of pain see your lips move." Patiently she compiled. "September 4, 1936," said Gaby. "I heard that!" cried Peter. "It was the last concert — when Miguel came here. Try another." "Eighty-four," said Gaby. "Seven," said Peter. "That's right," said Gaby. Anything to ease his mental anguish—to give him peace of mind that would enable him to get well and really regain his hearing as the doctor had promised.

Peter clamored for more tests, but Gaby, afraid of tiring him, sternly insisted that he take his sleeping draught—the "poison" he had complained of — and soon he was sleeping quietly while she sat beside him, never moving, never taking her eyes from him.

In New York's Carnegie Hall the great continental virtuoso, Miguel del Vayo, had played the last note of the last engagement of his weary tour. He strode offstage with cheers and shouts echoing in his ears and refused to leave his dressing room for more bows. "No message yet?" he asked his valet impatiently. "No letters? No cables?" "I'm afraid not, sir."

"Have you looked up the next boat?"

Yes, sir. It sails tomorrow night."

"But on no account more than twenty drops," he said.

now," he told Gaby, "no matter how crossly he may act. Of course he is anxious about his hearing, and exhausted from lack of sleep."

Peter muttered, growled, and kicked the bedcovers about.

"Peeps, Peeps," pleaded Gaby. "Please —"

"Never mind," said the phlegmatic physician. "I'm used to that. I'm quite satisfied with you, young man," he addressed Peter. "Even if you are not with me. Only don't go on pretending you aren't better, because we know very well you are."

For answer Peter growled some more, then buried his face in the pillow.

"Go on giving him his sleeping draught," the doctor told Gaby. You can gradually lessen the dose — eighteen drops, sixteen, fourteen, and so on. But on no account give him more than twenty drops!"

Turning to go, he looked at her haggard face, drawn with weeks of ceaselessly nursing Peter, ceaselessly wondering about what she would do . . . what she should do . . .

"You will really have to take care of yourself, young woman," said the doctor. "I don't altogether like the look of you."

She murmured some reassurance to him, and he was gone.

Peter grumbled more than ever after the doctor had left. "Fat lot of good that old blighter did; merely patted himself on the back. I won't drink any more of that filthy stuff. It's poison. Why my own wife should want to poison me I don't know."

"I won't poison you, Peeps," said Gaby in a low voice.

Peter then discovered that his hearing was impaired. It was the bandages over his ears, Gaby pointed out. No — he insisted that he could hear nothing; his career as a musician was ruined; they would be paupers. He demanded a test of his hearing.

"Please, please test me. Say anything — dates, anything. But don't raise your voice, and don't let me

"Make reservations at once!" cried Miguel.

Peter, despite his antagonism to doctors and medicines, was progressing splendidly. He was not quite out of danger, though still weak. And still he called constantly for Gaby to be over at his side, and still she nursed him tirelessly, relieved now at times by Christine.

It was his bedtime, and they had just helped him from his wheelchair into his bed when the telephone rang in the next room. Gaby ran to answer it. It was Miguel, newly returned to London.

"No, Michael, I didn't get your cable," she whispered. "No, I haven't been to the Post Office in a long time. Peter is ill."

"Gaby! Gaby! Who is it?" called Peter from his bed.

"It's the doctor," she answered. Then into the telephone: "No, Michael, I can't come to you . . . Peter is ill . . . No, no, it is impossible . . . I don't know when . . . Peter is ill. Peter is ill . . . I don't know when . . ."

"Gaby! Gaby!" Peter kept calling. The telephone at the other end clicked with angry finality, and was silent.

"I'm coming, Peeps, I'm coming!" She ran shakily, pale as a blank page, to his bedside.

"Gaby, what were you talking about all that time? Your place is here with me."

"Yes, Peeps. My place is here with you."

Peter soon drowsed off to sleep, and Gaby, sitting in an armchair near him, wrapped a bathrobe about her (strange how she shivered on so warm a day!) and tried to compose herself to sleep too. But soon she heard a low voice over her shoulder.

"Gaby! Gaby! Come to me, I am waiting. Gaby!"

It was Michael's voice calling her.

the need of small schools for some substitute for 11-man football, which was too expensive. Stephen Epler, a Nebraska graduate student in athletics, developed the game of six-man football to meet his need. In six-man football anybody can score, the possibility of injury from mass playing is minimized, and the game is open enough for spectators to follow every exciting development.

The new game is a hit. New schools are taking it up every day. In coming issues The American Boy tells the world about this practical new game. In addition, it presents The American Boy Official Handbook, which can be obtained from the magazine at 20 cents a copy, or 15 cents when bought in bulk.

AMERICAN BOY INTRODUCES NEW FOOTBALL GAME
 presented the story of a new game—six-man football—fast as professional football wide open as basketball, thrilling as hockey! The game came to life through understanding that the country would be given a "breathing spell" from experiments. Lieutenants of the chief executive whispered in the ears of potential recalcitrants that the nation would be permitted to ride the crest of the rapidly approaching wave of prosperity if Roosevelt were rejected that no reform legislation would be proposed.

Scarcely had Congress convened this year when the most radical program of legislation ever proposed by an American president was submitted to the elected representatives of the people. The President wanted to bring the Supreme Court under his domination, reorganize the Federal Government and in doing so bring under his control the Civil Service as well as abolishing many of the independent Federal commissions, enact a wages and hours bill which would bring the economic life of the country under his power, and further increase the obligations of the farmers to the Administration by fostering the ever normal granary bill.

At this three elements of the Democratic Party rebelled and have been in rebellion against the Administration during the eight hectic months which marked the first session of Congress. The first element can rightly be termed conservative, including such Democrats stalwarts as Carter Glass and Harry Byrd of Virginia; Royal Copeland of New York; Peter Gerry of Rhode Island, and Millard Tydings of Maryland. The second group includes those of conservative stature who have rather consistently backed the Administration. In this category is our own Senator Connally, as well as Senators Clark of Missouri, McCarran of Nevada, Burke of Nebraska, and George of Georgia. Lastly, many of the out and out Senate liberals, including Senators Wheeler of Montana, O'Mahoney of Wyoming, and Van Nuys of Indiana turned against the Administration sponsored program of radical legislation which if enacted, would have subjected the populace of this country to as rigorous and dictatorial Federal administration as those in Italy, Germany and Russia.

Thus it is the anti-new deal bloc cannot be termed conservative, including as it does in its membership liberals, moderates and conservatives. So it is true that no one piece of legislation but the entire Administration program of this session which ired this group and provoked what most observers believe to be an irremediable split in the Democratic Party.

What is the Administration attitude toward these rebels and who is now in control of the Democratic Party? During the Court fight the Administration attitude toward the recalcitrants was pretty generally revealed.

Jim Farley and the President's emissaries on Capitol Hill aired dire threats of political reprisals and denial of patronage and Administration backing in future elections to those who opposed the bill. The governor of Indiana visited the White House and on his departure announced that his organization would seek to defeat Indiana's Senator Frederick Van Nuys, theretofore a staunch Roosevelt supporter but in opposition to the Supreme Court reorganization legislation. Court opponents in the Senate immediately volunteered their services to Senator Van Nuys in the campaign next year and to any other court opponent who might be attacked by the National committee or the Administration.

Herbert Hoover suggests that the rebellious Democrats join the Republicans in a coalition campaign against the new dealers in the congressional elections of 1938 and in the presidential election of 1940. But no one expects the anti-new deal senators and representatives to relinquish control of the party without a fight. Part of their strategy is the strengthening of their bloc in the election next year and the nomination of a conservative in 1940. Subtle build-ups are in store for Senator Clark, Senator Byrd, by the administration opponents in preparation for the 1940 battle to wrest control of the party from the radicals who now have the President's ear.

Nineteen thirty-eight should afford a prospectus of what to expect in 1940 and also of which way the wind is blowing among the people. Regardless of what Jim Farley and his cohorts may say, the Administration is going to wage war on all those in the senate and house who are against the "mandate" and who are up for election—all the house and 32 senators must go before the people in 1938.

If the bloc which defeated executive and court reorganization and the wages and hours bill succeeds in maintaining its representation and perhaps adding to its congressional strength, the President will be confronted with the same situation which faced Coolidge in 1925 and Hoover in 1930—a hostile Congress which stymies all White House proposals and caters to no one.

On the other hand, if the people endorse the Administration program of radical alteration of the political and economic life of the Nation, the people can expect a flood of radical measures which after enactment will make the Constitution look like a crazy quilt.

The Cold Germ will

"bite you"

if you don't watch out

The cold germ is responsible for more than two hundred million illnesses each year. Any sudden change in temperature as you go from a warm room to a cold one makes you susceptible to "catching cold."

Too much praise cannot be given the formula of medical science that "it is better to keep well than to get well." Every effort should be made to prevent illness particularly during the treacherous months of winter.

Soon the common cold germ will wage its relentless attack to pave the way for such serious illnesses as bronchitis, sinus infections, tuberculosis and other health-wrecking diseases. Watch for that first "sniffle" . . . it's a warning that should not be overlooked.

For your health's sake, fight colds this winter with comfortable temperatures and adequate ventilation in every room of your home.

Common colds are dangerous. Don't gamble with them. If you should catch cold during the coming winter months, consult your family doctor before it has an opportunity to undermine your health.
