Picnics, Barbecues, Chiggers Still In Vogue; Schools Close This Week

We've had a scratching good time over the week end not to mention the aches (head and stomach) from overindulging in delicious barbecue, cake, salad, etc., etc., and soda water at Turnersville, Coryell City, Pidcoke and Harmon picnics, where everything happened: candidates spoke, there were baseball games, rodeos goat roping talking, handshaking, and walking.

Festivities for this week begin at the Lutheran School near Copperas Cove, followed by Levita's picnic Thursday Newland, Peabody, Dunn, Spring Hill, Jonesboro and Slater on Friday and Saturday and Ireland closing out June 2, as a preview to the Gatesville Rodeo and Frontier Celebration the following two days.

Personages at these various last week picnics who we saw were: George Painter, H. K. Jackson, Olin Sydow, J. A. Fletcher, Jim Martin, Chas Kemp, C. H. Wallace, Dr. K. R. Jones, Frank Farquhar, Eiland

Lovejoy, Kay Ament, Frank Mayhew, Guy Powell, Pat Olsen, Esteen Draper, Mrs. Chester Burgett and other ladies, Charles Powell, J. M. Pancake, W. T. Hix, Mat Jones, J. B. Roach, C. C. Sadler, Ed Elms and Ed Hinson.

Band is Knock-out

Then, there was the band! You don't appreciate the Gatesville High School Band until you see them in operation at the picnics. Director Diserens has one swell outfit, even if school did force him to leave part of his organization at home during the past week. At any rate, these bandmen-women have certainly been doing their part in each and every community visited and, have been well received at each performance.

Some of the "headliner picnics" this week will be at Lutheran school, Levita, Newland, Peabody, Dunn, Spring Hill and Jonesboro, and if you want a real good time, and can take it, you won't miss these. There's something going on all the time.

SPECIAL SERVICES ARE POSTPONED AT LIVE OAK CHURCH

Special services at the Live Oak Baptist Church, which were formerly announced for the fifth Sunday in May, to open the new church building have been postponed until the first Sunday in June, according to announcement by the pastor, Rev. Paul Skinner.

Due to many recent rains, work on the building has been delayed, and it will not be completed until June 1.

For that date, the services will start at 10 a. m. and last thru an evening service at 7:30 p. m. Friends and former members of the church are specially invited to be present at this new service which will dedicate the new church.

MOUND BOYS SAVE FRIEND FROM DROWNING

Present heroes in the eyes of the people in the Mound and Royalty community are Hollis and Howard Ayres brothers who probably saved the life of Willard Hancock Friday afternoon when the boys were enjoying a swim in the Lee River near Mound. The boys were attempting to swim across the river when Willard was carried under by swift waters; together the brothers carried their friend to safety.

The boys deserve much praise and are justly given the credit for the brave performance.

Pius XI was elected pope of the Roman Catholic church in 1922.

RODEO TO FURNISH "ACTION" FOR FOTO FANS

Giving the foto fans a real break the Gatesville Rodeo and Frontier Celebration will give ample opportunity for many "action" shots.

Therefore, the Candid Camera Contest will not close until shortly after the rodeo, so that the fans may "shoot" the animals and "animalers" who will put on plenty of action, and won't be camera shy. No doubt, the click of the camera shutters, will cause considerable commotion on that day. Then there will be the highlights of the parade, and other good shots during the rodeo.

This camera contest is being fostered by Koen and Foster, Fleutge's City and Gatesville Drug Stores, Mayes Studio & Radio Shop and the News.

BURGLAR OF HALE'S AND COCA-COLA IS IN JAIL HERE

Robert Lee Franks, alias Bill Franks, ex-convict and one of the three who burglarized the Coca Cola Bottling Co., and Perry Hale's Store, is in jail after being picked up in Livingston, and has made a signed confession, according to Sheriff Joe White, of his guilt in the burglary.

Accompanying Sheriff White Wednesday to Livingston were Peyton Morgan, Lucian Short and Walter Robinson who identified Franks, and also Morgan's gun which was taken from the Coca Cola Plant.

According to Sheriff White, Franks's statement says the men, including 'Dub' Hailey and Jack McCracken arrived in Gatesville May 3 about noon, after stealing an Oldsmobile automobile in Taylor on the 2nd. They rode around and got the 'lay of the land' and that night pulled the two jobs.

Franks, along with a brother-in-law are alleged to have robbed a bank in Arkansas of $2600.00. The other two men have not been located as yet, but due to the confession, it is known that they are implicated in the burglaries. Thru the Department of Public Safety Weekly Bulletin, Sheriff White got a line on these men. Since Wednesday Sheriff White has been trying to locate the other two men implicated by Franks.

600 WITNESS SECOND AMATEUR FITE NITE FRIDAY

Six hundred rabid boxing fans witnessed the amateur bouts to see Curly Brown and Dick Chandler, local GCC boys, retain their supremacy over boxers of this county. Brown won his bout on a technical knockout after he had dazed and battered Ray Copeland, his opponent, at the finish of the second round. Dick Chandler, knocked Herbert Norwood out, putting across the blow that spelled Norwood's end, after about a minute and 25 seconds of the first round had passed.

Willard Polston redeemed his loss to Hodges in the first Fite Nite by slugging his way to a decision victory over Toby Simms.

One of the best battles of the night occurred when game little Teague, a boy from the Juvenile Training School out fought a larger opponent A. J. Coomer to come away with a close decision.

The Painter-Powell match was called off because of Painter's recall to the navy. In the hastily arranged substitute bout, little Bobby Melton FFA-News fly-weight champ held his title by taking a bout from E. J. Robinson another 90 pounder.

"WHEN AND WHAT" FOR POLITICIANS

Due to considerable interest, we run the Political Calendar once more:

June 6—Last day upon which district office candidates in districts containing more than one county may file application to have their names listed on the Democratic primary ballot.

June 13—State Democratic executive Committee meets to make up ballot for primary election. Committee also designates place for State Democratic Convention in September.

June 18—Last day upon which county and precinct office candidates and district office candidates may file applications to have their names listed on the primary ballot.

June 20—County Democratic executive committee meets to determine by ballot the order of names listed on ballot; to estimate expense of primary ballot; to assess costs against candidates.

July 23—First primary election day. Precinct conventions meet and elect delegates to county conventions.

July 30—Democratic county executive committees meet to canvas results of first primary election. Democratic county conventions meet to select delegates to district and State conventions.

August 6—State Democratic Executive Committee meets in Austin to canvas results of first primary election in all state and district races.

Committee lists names to go on official ballot for second primary election.

Certification of Democratic candidates nominated in first made for general election ballot.

August 27—Second primary election day.

September 6—13 Meeting of State Democratic Convention to adopt a platform of principles to declare nominations for state office, to elect a state chairman and new State Democratic Executive Committee of 31 men and 31 women.

Note—Due to error in bill by 45th legislature, convention day was fixed for one week in advance of time when state democratic executive committee meets to canvas returns. Unless this date is changed, the convention will presumably be unable to announce official nominations for state office. Properly, the State Convention should meet on September 13.

September 13—State Democratic Executive Committee holds session in city selected for the meeting, canvasses returns of the second primary election, prescribes the order of business for the convention and prepares list of convention delegates.

November 8—General election day.

"A RHAPSODY IN BLUE"

EVERYTHING in this room is in such perfect harmony that it is best described musically—a rhapsody in blue—with interpolations of white, yellow and gray. Contrasting with the gray-blue walls and the darker blue carpeting is the chalk-white ceiling, which gives maximum reflection of light from the spacious window. Mirrors of sparkling plate glass over the fireplace strike such lively, zestful notes that the whole room seems to radiate an atmosphere of hospitality and good cheer. An inviting sense of comfort and livability results from the distinctive arrangement of the furniture, in three groups: the yellow lounge chairs flanking the fireplace, the glass-topped occasional table between two gray love-seats in the window, and the mohair and white pigskin davenport, with mirror-topped coffee table. Incidental pieces—such as radio, desk and end-table—repeat the touches of chalk-white found elsewhere in the room, while plate glass shelves over the mantel and in the book nook complete the modern decorative scheme.

BABY NEEDS SAFE MILK

MILK is the most important food you buy for your children. Be sure it is of the best quality, collected and sold under high sanitary standards, however, or it may be of an actual menace to their health.

This warning comes from Doctors Morris and William Flaherty, in a timely article about milk in June Pictorial Review, in which they point out the urgent need for uniform standards of quality and grading of milk in every section of this country.

"Four out of five communities in the United States with populations from 1,000 to 10,000 do not regulate the conditions under which milk is produced or distributed," these doctors reveal. "Less than 40 per cent of the milk used in such communities is pasteurized to kill disease-producing germs."

"Definite standards for milk have been established by the U. S. Public Health Service. About 700 communities now have model milk-control ordinances. Milk which meets certain high standards and is collected by approved methods is given a "Grade A" rating. If milk does not meet these standards in one or more respects, it is given a lower rating, perhaps "Grade B." There are standards not only for pasteurized milk, but also for raw milk. Grade A pasteurized must contain less than 50,000 bacteria for every cubic centimeter, and Grade B pasteurized less than 50,000. Grade B pasteurized is made from Grade C raw milk which may contain a million bacteria for every cubic centimeter."

Pointing out that there are about 1,000 cubic centimeters in a quart of milk, and considering the high bacteria content in every glass, these doctors declare that pasteurization is an absolute necessity for securing safe milk.

"Pasteurization," they go on to explain, "is an added safeguard that has been largely instrumental in reducing the number of cases of tuberculosis of the bones, glands and joints which formerly came from drinking contaminated milk. Undulant fever, also called Malta fever, may be transmitted directly from cows through raw milk, but no cases have ever resulted from drinking efficiently pasteurized milk."

Ben Burney, adopted infant son has come to live with Mr. and Mrs. Weldon Burney.

Mrs. Mable Gardner of Gatesville visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Winters.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE
When Bill Reardon gives up his private detective agency and goes back to his old job as special investigator for the district attorney, his wife, Sally, determines to show him that the agency can be a success. Her first client, Lola Fraser, quickly entangles Sally in a murder mystery when Walter Fraser is mysteriously killed in Jerry Marlowe's apartment. Over Bill's strenuous objections, Sally launches an independent investigation to solve the murder, working at cross-purposes with her husband. Sally scores first when she points out to Bill that the Marlowe butler must be implicated in the murder. He is. She scores again when she eludes a detective assigned to watch her and gains admittance to the Fraser apartment. There, she steals a letter from under her husband's nose and runs off with it. Armed with a search warrant, Bill searches their apartment for the missing letter—all to no avail. Sally then goes to Lola Fraser, hoping that the letter will lead to more important discoveries. Lola destroys the letter but offers to give Sally another clue. Before she can tell it, however, Sally discovers a dictaphone, planted by her husband, and snips the wires.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
Chapter Five

When the dictaphone suddenly went dead, Bill and the district attorney became concerned. "I don't like that," Bill said. "Come on! Let's go upstairs."
Sally meanwhile was listening to Lola's recital of the events of the murder night. "When I went to the phone just before the shot was fired that night," Lola said, "I heard someone on the line."
Sally snapped her fingers. "The butler!" she cried. "I knew it all the time."
Lola shook her head. "It wasn't the butler," she said. "I know his voice."
"What was he talking about?" Sally asked eagerly.
"He was talking to the district attorney about gambling," Lola said.
"About gambling? It must have been Shane. He spoke to the district attorney about that time. He must have been in Marlowe's apartment!"
The apartment door was opened suddenly and Bill strode in followed by the district attorney and two policemen. "All right, you two!" he said "you're going to headquarters—both of you!"
Sally looked at him contemptuously. "Snoopers!" she said.
Down at headquarters Bill quickly got the information he wanted from Lola. She admitted that it was Shane's voice they had heard in her apartment. He was there, she said, pressing her for payment of fifty thousand dollars she had lost to him at roulette. She admitted, too, that before she met Walter Fraser she had been engaged to Shane.
While other detectives were questioning Sally, Bill and the district attorney sifted the information they had gleaned from Lola. "How about Shane?" Bill demanded impatiently.
The Third Degree Falls
The district attorney waved him down. "Shane is a gambler," he said. "He uses strong arm methods to collect—they all do."
Bill shrugged. "I'm going in and see how the boys are making out with my little Bright Eyes," he said.
"The boys" were not making much progress with Sally. Working in relays, they were using all the known methods to wear a person down but Sally remained bright and cheerful despite it all. For four long hours they had been at it but all they had to show for it was a fine case of jitters for themselves and a girl who appeared oblivious to it all.
A tired and wilted detective walked into Bill's office some hours later and fell into a chair. "Short of using a rubber hose on her," he confessed dejectedly, "I give up!"
The district attorney turned to Bill. "She's your wife," he said. "Have'n't you any influence with her?"

Bill started for the door. "I'll try once again," he said.
Sally greeted him with a hug and a kiss. "Hello, darling," she said. "Gosh, I love you."
Bill spoke to her slowly and quietly. "Listen, honey, this is a serious matter," he said. "A man has been murdered. The killer must be found—"
"If you'd let me out of here," Sally offered, "I'd find—"
Bill shook his head. "This is a police matter," he insisted. "You must work with us. You must tell us what you know—what Lola told you. If you do—I promise to go back to the agency and have another try at it."
Sally Tells All
"Cross your heart?" Sally asked. Bill crossed his heart. "Well," Sally said, "Lola told me that she heard Shane's voice on the phone talking to the district attorney a moment before the shot was fired."
Bill stared at her. "Shane!" he cried.
Sally nodded vehemently. "Of course!" she said. "I told that fat-head boss of yours about Shane at the beginning but he wouldn't listen."
Bill jumped up and kissed her hastily. "Bless you!" he said. He started for the door and Sally ran after him. "Hey! Wait for me," she cried. But Bill was too quick for her. He closed the door and locked it from the other side and then rushed to the D. A.
"Lola Fraser heard your conversation with Shane on the Marlowe telephone!" he cried.
"But you checked their phone and—"
"I don't know how Shane did it yet but I do know that his call to you was planned as an alibi! That means Shane is the murderer!"
The district attorney looked at Bill, flabbergasted. "Why!" he said, "That's what your wife told me!"
Bill laughed. "Even so," he said, "it sounds logical. I've got her locked up in the private office. Keep her there until I can run this lead down."
For the next two hours Bill staged a rapid and intensive search for Nick Shane. He visited all of the places that Shane ordinarily frequented but to no avail. Meanwhile, Sally fretted and raged in the locked office. A sudden inspiration caused her to phone to Marlowe's lawyer and explain her predicament.
Within an hour he appeared at the district attorney's office and, in the absence of the D. A., secured Sally's release from an underling by presenting a writ of habeas corpus.
Without waiting for the lawyer, Sally dashed from the building and drove off in a taxicab for her apartment. She opened the door and switched on the living room light. "Bill!" she called. She stopped and sniffed. There was a heavy aroma of perfume in the air. "Where are you, Bill?" she called again. She crossed to the closet and opened the door. Then she screamed at the top of her lungs.
The body of a man slowly toppled out of the closet and fell to the floor. It was Nick Shane and, on the floor of the closet, Sally saw a bloody knife.
Sally picked up the knife, stared at it for a moment and then toppled to the floor, too. She had fainted.
Bill, unsuccessful in his hunt for Shane, had forced his way into the gambler's apartment. In a pocket of one of Shane's coats he found some shavings of a dark, rubberized substance clinging to an instrument that looked like an oversized pair of eyebrow tweezers. Triumphantly he wrapped his discoveries in a handkerchief and hurried off to the Marlowe apartment.
The policeman on duty there admitted him and Bill hurried over to the French windows leading to the terrace. Outside, he looked around and found the telephone lead-in wires. As he expected, one of them had been freshly taped and, beneath it there was a section of wire scraped clean.
Bill ran to the phone and called the district attorney. "Hello, Chief," he said. "I've busted the Fraser case wide open—got Shane just where we want him! Bet you can't guess where I'm calling from!"
"No, I can't," the district attorney answered grimly, "but you'd better get home, Nick Shane was just found murdered in your apartment!"

"YOUR FLAG"; HOW TO RESPECT IT

In line with the recent article by Dr. Chas. T. McGregor, with respect to uses and observances of the American Flag, we present a series of articles taken from the booklet "Your Flag" which is distributed by the U. S. Army Recruiting Service. We have a limited number of these booklets which we will be glad to supply schools, organizations or individuals which gives authentic rules and regulations with reference to "Your Flag".

First of this series is an article by Alvin M. Owsley former National Commander of the American Legion. The Publishers.

Respect The Flag

"When you see the Stars and Stripes displayed, stand up and take off your hat."

Somebody may titter. It is in the blood of some to deride all expression of noble sentiment. You may blaspheme in the street and stagger drunkenly in public places, and the bystanders will not pay much attention to you; but if you should get down on your knees and pray to Almighty God or if you should stand bareheaded while a company of soldiers marches by with flags to the breeze, some people will think you are showing off. But don't you mind! When Old Glory comes along, salute, and let them think what they please!!

When you hear the band play "The Star Spangled Banner" while you are in a restaurant or hotel dining room, get up even if you rise alone; stand there and don't be ashamed of it, either!

For all the signs and symbols since the world began there is none other so full of meaning as the flag of this country. That piece of red, white and blue bunting means five thousand years of struggle upward. It is the fullgrown flower of fighting for liberty. It is the century plant of human hope in full bloom.

Your flag stands for humanity for equal opportunity to all the sons of men. Of course we have not arrived yet at that goal; there are many injustices yet among us, many senseless and cruel customs of the past still clinging to us, but the only hope of rights the wrongs of men lies in the feeling produced in our bosoms by the sight of that flag.

Other flags mean a glorious past, this flag a glorious future. It is not so much the flag of our fathers as it is the flag of our children, and of our children's children yet unborn. It is the flag of tomorrow. It is the sign of the "Good Time Coming". It is not the flag of your King—it is the flag of yourself and all of your neighbors.

Don't be ashamed when your throat ache and the tears come, as you see it flying from the mast of all our ships on all the seas or floating from every flag staff of the Republic. You will never have a worthier emotion. Reverence it as you would reverence the signature of the Deity. Listen son! The band is playing the national anthem—"The Star Spangled Banner"! They have let loose Old Glory yonder. Stand up—and others will stand with you.

This tribute to the flag is offered to the country in appeal to all men and women of all races, colors and tongues, that they may yet come to understand that our flag is the symbol of liberty and learn to love it.—Alvin M. Owsley.

PENNSYLVANIA PRIMARIES

The victory of the organization candidates in the Pennsylvania Democratic primary can not be interpreted as a rebuke to President Roosevelt. Governor Earle, who won his party's senatorial nomination, is both personally and politically friendly to the new deal. His running mate for the governorship, Charles Alvin Jones, Pittsburgh attorney had not hitherto been a candidate for office but he ran for governor on a pro Roosevelt ticket.

To John L. Lewis and his C. I. O. the Earle-Jones triumph was a stunning blow and to National Chairman Jim Farley the defeat of the candidate he endorsed for governor was a stinging rebuke on the part of Pennsylvania Democrats who choose to name their own nominees without interference from the national committee.

The Pennsylvania primary marked the first major test of C. I. O. strength at the ballot box. Lewis and his United Mine Workers backed Luet. Gov. Thom as Kennedy, who is a U. M. W. vice president, for the governorship and joined potent Senator Joseph F. Guffey to support Mayor S. Davis Wilson of Philadelphia for senator.

Governor Earle and his supporters charged that Lewis was seeking to dominate Pennsylvania politically thru the election of a henchman. Fear of the CIO undoubtedly had much to do with the defeat of Kennedy.

Jim Farley broke precedent the day before the primary when he asked Pennsylvania Democrats to vote a split ticket, with Earle for senator and Kennedy for governor.

Washington quidnuncs are speculating upon what effect the primary will have upon the political power of Senator Guffey. In refusing to back the Earle-Jones slate which was sponsored by the state committee and state chairman David L. Lawrence, has forfeited the power in state government which he has wielded since Governor Earle's election in 1934.

Guffey has bossed Pennsylvania democracy since 1932, when he led the Quaker state's delegation to the national convention to support the then Governor Roosevelt of New York. In 1934 he summoned George Earle minister to Austria, to Pennsylvania to run for the governorship and announced for senator against Republican David Reed. Both Earle and Guffey swept into office.

Since 1934 Guffey and Earle have built up one of the most potent political machines in the country. Guffey has handled federal patronage while Earle assumed control of some 27,000 state jobs. Together they carried Pennsylvania to the Democratic for the first time since the Civil War.

Now Democrats are genuinely worried over the possibility of a split in the party in the general election. Animosities engendered by the bitter fight against the CIO candidate and by Guffey

SCHOOL CLOSURES AT PEARL

The Pearl School session for 1937-38 ended May 18th. The community enjoyed the entertainment, 'Cinderella in Flowerland', presented by the fifth and sixth grade, sponsored by Miss Sharp, on Friday night, 13th.

A large crowd was present at the Baccalaureate Sermon on Sunday night of the 15th. The Seniors of '38 were glad to have with them Rev. R. M. Studer, C. J. Shook, Miss Nellie Hill, and Rev. Reynolds.

Monday night, 16th, the Seniors were honored to have with them on their commencement exercises, Harry Flentge, who delivered the graduate address and Miss La Rue Studer a new thought, when she sang the solo, 'My Task'.

The community was entertained Tuesday night with a delightful program presented by the first four grades, and sponsored by Miss Irvine and Mrs. Coleman.

In spite of the prediction of rain, a large crowd was present at the picnic on Wednesday 18th. At 10:30 the Pearl Dragons met the Turnersville Buffaloes, for a game of six man football.

At 11:30 all candidates had registered to enter the Rally with about 15 candidates taking part in the rally.

The Pearl School wishes to thank each of the candidates for the excellent co-operation assisting them for the days entertainment. Also they wish to thank the Gatesville Band under the direction of Mr. Diserens.

At 3:30 a baseball game was played between the Pearl High School boys. At 8:00 a play 'Romance in the Boarding house' concluded the closing of Pearl.

PURMELA SCHOOL PROGRAM IS CHANGED

Due to conflicting dates Purmela School graduation exercises for the ninth and seventh grades have been changed to Wednesday night May 25, and the general School program consisting of the operetta 'The Wedding of the flowers' and a one act play will be on Thursday night May 26th.

desertion of the organization ticket may throw CIO support to the GOP ticket, influential Democrats fear.

Boasted John D. M. Hamilton, Republican national chairman:

"Pennsylvania will lead the nation next fall in returning the government of this country, State as well as Federal, back to a sane, sound administration of the people's affairs. For the new deal and all its radical and crack-brained allies, the Pennsylvania results constitute the handwriting on the wall".

Republicans are jubilant over the fact that in both their races they polled larger total vote than the Democrats. In the gubernatorial race returns from all but 75 out of 8,000 precincts gave the Democrats a total of 1,272,028 and the Republicans 1,363,725. The Democratic senatorial candidates polled a total of 1,093,125 and the Republicans 1,219,500. The GOP lost Penn. to Roosevelt in 1936 by 663,488 votes.

With numerically superior GOP registration and total vote Republicans believe their two nominees, incumbent James J. Davis for senate and Judge Arthur H. James for governor will sweep to victory in November.

SCS HAS IMPROVED THE RABBE FARM

Twelve acres of sub-marginal land on the Henry Rabbe farm near Coryell City have, in less than eighteen months, been converted into twelve acres of the most profitable acres on the farm.

When this farm was placed under the cooperative program with the Soil Conservation Service in 1936 only 6.5 acres of permanent pasture were available. Since this acreage was barely sufficient to furnish grazing for the farm teams and cow or two, some plan for increasing the pasture acreage was necessary to provide for the increased livestock production. Mr. Rabbe seeded in order to more nearly balance his farming program. The impracticability however, of retiring a portion of the cultivated land to pasture was apparent considering the fact that cultivated land of this type found on the Rabbe farm has value of from $60 to $80 per acre.

When the original terrace system on the Rabbe farm was installed several years ago, a natural drain passing thru the center of the field was utilized as an outlet for terrace water. Due to the fact that no protection was provided for the outlet a gully soon developed along the graw, which grew larger each season making it impossible to cultivate a narrow strip thru the field. In planning a complete control program on Mr. Rabbe's farm, technicians of the Soil Conservation Service recommended that this gully be shaped and widened and protected with Bermuda grass and rock masonry dams. Since a fairly wide strip along this gully had always been difficult to cultivate because of seeps it was also recommended that a 120 ft. strip be fenced and retired to pasture along with 5.5 acres of thin "caliche" soil surrounding the farmstead. Bermuda sod chunks were planted on this area about six feet apart in the spring of 1937. At the present time the ground is almost completely covered and the new pasture is furnishing considerably more and better grazing than the old pasture. In this way twelve acres of land which had provided practically no revenue before were converted into pasture land which with the original pasture plot, will enable Mr. Rabbe to increase his livestock units more than 200 per cent.

So, thru a complete, coordinated program of soil conservation embodying proper land use, Mr. Rabbe is now able to eliminate every idle acre and obtain maximum production from every unit of his farm.

LOCAL NURSE'S FATHER IN HAMILTON HOSPITAL

Miss Luise Andres, one of Milton Powell Memorial Hospital's capable nurses, was called to the bedside of her father who is in a critical condition in a Hamilton Hospital.

A serious operation was performed Monday morning on the patient by Dr. Chandler of Hamilton, and was assisted by Dr. Dean Jones, of Gatesville.

Miss Andres will remain with her father for several days until his condition is improved.

PUTTING EXTRA ACRES ON LEGS

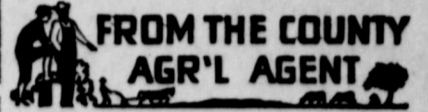

Under the farm law of 1938 every farm is divided like Gaul, into three parts. They are, briefly the soil depleting, neutral, and soil conserving acreage, and proportion allotted to each division varies from county to county and farm to farm. The principal cash crops classified as 'soil depleting' are governed by specific terms of the law and the regulation, may be grazed or fed to the normal number of livestock on the farm without penalty, and when turned under for soil improvement, also earn benefit payments. This takes care of the family milk cows and work already on the farm.

The neutral or general crop acreage is subject to no restrictions of use whatever. It can be planted in crop desired except those on which the farm has a definite allotment, such as cotton, wheat, rice or peanuts. It is this acreage that offers the greatest potentialities for increased stabilized farm income if properly used. Some of this—a very limited amount on the whole will go into truck or other intensive crops for sale. Good judgement of course will dictate the use of liberal production of food crops to be used at home.

Most of this acreage however will have to go into feed crops of one kind or another. In the cotton belt this can easily result in such a large feed crop that the cash market will be swamped, and the producer will scarcely get harvesting costs, much less pay for his labor and the use of the land in production. We have seen milo sell at $2 to $5 a ton for heads, oats for 20c a bushel or less, corn at 35c which does not represent day wages for harvesting and hauling to town. Since all feed crops must in the end go into livestock or poultry, it stands to reason that the consuming animals and fowls should be brought to the feed instead of shipping them elsewhere. A truck or railroad does not increase the meat or milk making capacity of a ton of hay or a bushel of grain. The farmer who grows the feed can therefore produce animal products on the farm at a lower cost, and whatever the price of eggs, meat, milk or wool, sells his feed to a better advantage in concentrated form than as a raw material.

Farms already set up with the livestock and poultry to consume their feed crops and the facilities for handling them, will follow their usual practices with no interference from the law. Those not so circumstanced may be temporarily embarrassed in the necessary readjustments to utilize this acreage to the best advantage. Fencing and water supplies must be provided when livestock are introduced and the livestock must be procured. The feed is grown and properly stored financing can usually be found either through private banks of the Production Credit Associations, for the purchase of livestock.

The final effect of the readjustment of cropping practices under the new law will be better balanced farming system, the spreading of risks, more days of profitable employment in the farming year, the conservative and improvement of the soil, higher acre yields of the cash crops as a result of rotations and manuring, and a better standard of rural life in the South. Wise farmers are making the most of Question: Last summer I bought a new electric refrigerator. It was so white that my husband decided to paint the pantry and kitchen with white enamel too. We bought an expensive enamel which was certainly nice and white when it was first applied, but now the enamel on the walls and woodwork is a dirty yellow. The refrigerator, however is just as white and attractive as the day it was delivered. Is it possible to buy the same kind of enamel which is used on these modern refrigerators, and where can I find it—Mrs. D. T.

Answer: I can appreciate your disappointment after sending good money on expensive white enamel, and on the labor for applying it. Yes it is possible to purchase the same type of modern white enamel which is used on your refrigerator. If your refrigerator is one of the leading standard brands the chances are that it is finished with Dulux. Several years ago manufacturers of refrigerators found that their boxes yellowed the same way your enamel did; and around the handle, where greasy hands touch the finish, the old white finishes wore soft. When tests were made with the new Dulux enamel refrigerator manufacturers noticed that the finish stayed as snowy white as when first applied and that grease had no effect on the finish. The Dulux enamel took all manner of hard knocks without scratching or chipping. This one type of Dulux for refrigerators is baked on. For use on walls and woodwork in your home the same type of finish is available to you in Dulux super White Enamel.

If you would have a white enamel paint job in your kitchen, pantry or bathroom which will stay white as your refrigerator finish did I would advise you to have your painter apply a coat of Dulux Super White over the old paint. One coat will usually cover, as Dulux Super White has remarkable hiding ability. It dries to such a hard, smooth surface that dust and dirt simply can't stick to it, and it is easy to keep clean as a china dish.

MENU'S

For ME 'N YOU

Have you an old fashion cook book? If you have don't fail to turn its yellowed pages for suggestions for your modern meal planning. Perhaps the measurements may be a bit odd to you at first, but if they are carefully followed you will be rewarded with foods that have a zestful flavor and fullbodied goodness that is sometimes lacking in our recipes.

RED VEGETABLE SALAD

One pint of cold boiled potatoes, one pint of cold boiled beets, one pint of uncooked red cabbage sixtablespoons of oil, eight of red vinegar (that in which the beets have been pickled), two teaspoonful of salt (unless the vegetables have been cooked in salted water), half a teaspoon of pepper. Cut the potatoes in thin slices and the beets fine and slice the cabbage as thin as possible. Mix all the ingredients. Let stand in a cold place one hour; then serve.

CHICKEN POT-PIE

Skin and cut up the fowls in to joints, and put the neck, legs and backbones in a stew pan with a little water an onion, bunch of avory herbs and a blade of mace; let these stew for an hour, and when done strain of the liquor—this is for the gravy. Put a layer of fowl at the bottom of a pie dish, then a layer of ham, then one of hard boiled eggs, cut in rings; between the layers put a seasoning of pounded mace, nutmeg, pepper, and salt. Pour in about half pint of water border the edge of the dish with pie crust, put on the cover of pie crust.

Ornament the top and glaze it by brushing over it the yolk of an egg. Bake for about an hour and a half and when done pour in at the top the gravy made from the bones.

TO COLOR SOUPS

A fine amber color is obtained by adding finely grated carrot to the clear stock when it is quite free from scum. Red is obtained by using skinned tomatoes from which the seeds and skin have been strained out. Spinach leaves pounded in a mortar and the juice expressed and added to soups will give a green color.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE
Determined to show her husband, Bill Reardon, that his private detective agency can be successful, Sally Reardon takes it over when he goes back to his old job as special investigator for the district attorney. Her first client is Lola Fraser who is suspicious of her husband's associations with Anne Calhoun, his former fiancée. At a night club Sally sees Mr. Fraser pass an envelope to Anne which she later turns over to Nick Shane, a gambler. She also overhears Jerry Marlowe threaten to kill anyone who interferes with his romance with Anne. The next morning's papers tell of the murder of Fraser in Marlowe's apartment. Sally tells a newspaper about Marlowe's threat and is retained by Marlowe's attorney to investigate the murder. Her husband, meanwhile, is working on the case for the district attorney. Sally urges him to question the butler but Bill scoffs at this suggestion. Later, when the murder gun is found in the Marlowe ice box he is forced to detain the butler. Sally asks Shane what was in the envelope that Anne gave to him but he professes ignorance. Bill assigns a plainclothes man to shadow his wife but she eludes him and gains entrance to Lola Fraser's apartment to search for evidence. There, a gruff voice orders her to "stick 'em up!" Terrified, she does only to discover that her assailant is her own husband, Bill Reardon.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
Chapter Four

Sally collapsed on a chair. "Gee!" she said, "I'm glad it was you. I was really scared."
"I'm glad you have that much sense," Bill said. "What are you doing in this get-up?" He gestured to her widow's weeds.
Sally smiled sadly. "I'm a lone widow who forgot her key," she said.
"You're a plain idiot who forgot her brains," Bill snorted.
Sally and Bill turned to the job of ransacking the apartment. Sally was busy appraising the quality of Lola Fraser's hose and sampling her perfume when Bill came running to her. "Quiet," he whispered. "Someone is at the door."
Quickly Bill extinguished the lights and peeked into the living room. Sally tried vainly to peek over his shoulder and when she found it was too high, she squatted on the floor and looked through his legs. The door of the apartment opened and closed quickly and the lights were turned on. Bill and Sally saw that their visitor was Anne Calhoun. She went to the desk and quickly shuffled through a mass of papers there. She selected a letter and was putting the other papers back when Bill opened the bedroom door.
"Good evening," he said pleasantly.
Anne turned on him and fumbled in her bag for a small automatic. Bill crossed the room and took it from her before she could use it. Sally came over too. She snatched the letter Anne was holding in her hand and, before she could be stopped, fled from the apartment.
"That's my letter!" Anne protested. "Give it to me. It's mine!"
She sank weeping in the chair. "Never mind the letter," Bill told her. "I'll get it later. What I want to know is what is this all about?"
"Why should I tell you?" Anne asked defiantly. "You wouldn't believe me."
"Maybe not," Bill admitted, "but I'll tell you what I believe now. You wrote Walter Fraser a blackmailing letter and when he wouldn't be blackmailed you killed him!"
"That's not true!" Anne flared. "I was desperate. I gave Nick Shane a bad check to cover two thousand dollars I owed him for gambling debts. I was going to ask Jerry for the money but I couldn't."
"If that's all there is to it," Bill said, "why take your life in your hands to steal in here like this?"
"Because I thought Lola might find the letter and give it to the papers. I didn't want Jerry to know. Can't you understand?"
Bill shook his head skeptically. "I'm sorry, Miss Calhoun, but I'll have to arrest you."
"You can't!" Anne cried wildly. "After he had brought Anne Calhoun to headquarters, Bill picked up a couple of detectives and went to his own apartment. Sally was reading a magazine when they came in. "Hello, Bill," she greeted him. "Home so early?"

The Search Warrant
Bill's jaw was set grimly. "For the last time," he said, "are you going to give me that letter?"
Sally stared at him wide-eyed. "What letter?" she asked blankly.
Bill took an official paper from his pocket and handed it to her. "This is a search warrant," he said. He turned to his companions. "All right, boys," he said. "Get to work. Rip the place apart."
For the next hour Sally sat by demurely, watching the men turn her apartment into a shambles. It availed them nothing for the letter could not be found. After the search was ended Sally showed them to the door, grinning impishly. "Come again, gentlemen," she urged.

As soon as they had gone Sally hurried to the phone and called Lola Fraser. "I'd like to make an appointment to see you," she told Lola.
"If it's about that other matter, I'd rather you forget it," Lola told her nervously. She put her hand over the mouthpiece and turned to Nick Shane who was visiting her. "It's that dumb Reardon woman," she explained.
"I've found a letter that I feel sure will interest you," Sally insisted.
"You'd better see her," Shane told Lola. "Find out what it's all about." Lola nodded and turned back to the phone. "All right then," Lola told Sally. "I'll see you in an hour. How is that?"

Shane stayed on with Lola for the greater part of the intervening hour and watched her grow increasingly nervous. "Why don't you go?" she demanded finally.
Shane smiled at her. "We still haven't decided when I get the fifty thousand dollars," he said.
"When the estate is settled," Lola snapped. "You know I'll pay you," Shane nodded insolently. "Yes," he said. "I'm sure I'll get my money."

"What do you mean?" Lola asked. "If the police found out that your husband was writing checks for Anne and that you knew about it, they might suspect you of the murder."

"And if they found out that I left you to marry Walter," Lola retorted, "they might even suspect you."
In the basement of the Fraser apartment Bill and the district attorney were listening intently to this conversation over a dictaphone set-up. "Who is that man?" the D. A. asked.

The mysterious male voice spoke again. "Be careful what you say to this Reardon dame," it said. "If you just say a plain 'hello' to her she thinks she has a clue. The wrong clue, but a clue."

Bill, listening, grinned. "I don't know who he is," he told the D. A., "but he certainly knows my wife!"
Upstairs, the apartment doorbell rang and Shane quickly slipped out through a rear door. Lola admitted Sally to the living room. "I have a letter from Anne Calhoun to your husband," Sally said. "She begs for money but between the lines it's very threatening. It's practically blackmailing."

"My sole purpose now," Lola said, "is to protect Walter's memory. I'd rather his murderer was never caught than to see anything cheap printed about Walter."
Lola took the letter and calmly tore it into small pieces.
"Oh, Mrs. Fraser! Sally cried. "You had no right to destroy that. Don't you want your husband avenged?" Sally sighed. "Well, it just means I've got to find another clue, that's all."

"Maybe I can give you a very good clue," Lola offered.
"Oh!" Sally said. "I knew you'd have one." She stopped and looked around the room. "Wait a minute," she said. She got up and went to the window. Pulling aside the drapes she pointed to the wire leading to the dictaphone. Placing her finger to her lips she pantomimed to Lola for a pair of scissors. Lola handed them to her from her sewing basket and Sally snipped the wires. "There," she said, "now we can let our back hair down."

Frightened, Lola stared at the cut wires. "Who planted that dictaphone?" she asked.
Sally waved her hand. "Probably that silly husband of mine," she explained. "As if anybody wouldn't have sense enough to look for a dictaphone!"
