Ernest Thompson Here Thurs.; Shown Over Town By Local Men

Ernest O. Thompson, candidate for Governor of Texas, made a hurried visit to the County seat at Gatesville, Thursday morning. He was scheduled to speak at Eastland Thursday night and was routed through Gatesville before he had time to let his supporters in this county know of his coming. A large crowd of Gatesville citizens, among whom were Dan E. Graves, Roger Miller, C. C. Sadler, Dan R. McClellan, Horace Jackson, H. C. Stinnett, introduced Mr. Thompson to all the citizens they could find in the short time allotted. It was the unanimous opinion of the people whom he had an opportunity to meet, that Colonel Thompson was a past master at meeting people, and that he did not need introductions.

Mr. Thompson expressed himself as being so pleased with the hearty welcome he received in Gatesville, coming in as he did without notice, that he extended his time an hour. A chicken dinner was spread at the Cozy Cafe for Mr. Thompson and all others having time to eat. The luncheon was presided over by Mrs. Annabelle Chamlee, and was enjoyed by all present. Someone remarked that "Colonel Thompson not only had proven himself capable as Railroad Commissioner of protecting from waste, the natural resources of Texas for the good of all the people; but he was also capable of eating a large plate of chicken, and carrying on a pleasant, practical conversation." It is safe to say that those who met Mr. Thompson more than ever concluded that he was earnest, able, and honest. Mr. Thompson stated that he would if possible, arrange to make a general address in Gatesville during July.

QUICK THINKING OF YOUTH SAVES OWN LIFE

The quick thinking of cool-headed little eleven year old Freddie Dyer Jr. probably saved the youth's life. As this small son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dyer was cutting sprouts in a grain field of his parents' farm near Spring Hill he was bitten by a rattlesnake just above the left ankle. The boy was in the field by himself but with his hat band he made an improvised tourniquit corded his leg so as to keep the blood from circulating thru the other parts of his body. He was rushed to the local Memorial Hospital, where Dr. J. T. Brown administered the rattlesnake serum. The young man improved so rapidly that he was able to return to his home late the next day.

RODEO OFFICIALS PLAN TO ENTER RAA CIRCUIT NEXT YEAR

According to a report issued by the City Secretary's office, the officials in charge of Gatesville's annual rodeo are planning to hook up with the Rodeo Association of America (RAA) in order to draw better talent in the way of Cowboys to the rodeo here.

This will enable the rodeo to have better contests, with more cowboys entered in each event, and will make the rodeo more attractive to high-class cowhands. RAA rodeo operated under specified prizes, and in a rodeo associated with the RAA circuit a cowboy may obtain points toward world championship titles in each event. If an official of the RAA sees a cowboy not performing to the best of his ability, he can fine him heavily, thereby making it imperative that each cowboy be at his best at all times during the performance.

Our Buyers Have Returned from Market

Our "National Cotton Week Celebration" far exceeded our expectation. It enabled us to clear our shelves of odds and ends before it became shelf worn, at the same time giving our customers better values. It also enabled us to go back in the markets and buy new crisp summer merchandise at the lowest prices we have bought in years.

We Have Just Returned From Market and glad to announce that you can visit our store expecting to see the best values you have seen in years. Merchandise is cheap, and it should be cheap considering the prices the producer is getting for the raw product.

We Are Trying To Do Our Share in consuming the enormous surplus of Cotton now on hand by giving you the lowest prices available for cash, eliminating the expense of doing a credit business, which you or someone else must pay for the loss.

HISTORY OF "OLD GLORY"

As the manner in which the stars were to be arranged in a Blue field was not decided by Congress, the present arrangement of 6 rows of 8 stars each was determined jointly by the Secretary of the Navy with the approval of the President of the United States.

The name "Old Glory" was given to our national flag August 10, 1831, by Captain William Driver of the brig "Chas. Doggett."

Old Glory symbolizes national independence and popular sovereignty. It is not the flag of a reigning family or royal house, but a hundred and thirty million free people welded into a nation, one and inseparable, united not only by community of interest but by vital unity of sentiment and purpose; a nation distinguished for the clear individual conception of its citizens alike of their duties and their privileges, their obligations and their rights.

Old Glory incarnates for all mankind the spirit of Liberty and the glorious ideal of human freedom; not freedom of unrestraint or the liberty of license, but a unique ideal of equal opportunity for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, safeguarded by the stern and lofty principles of duty, of righteousness and of justice, and attainable by obedience to self imposed laws.

Floating from the lofty pinnacle of American idealism, it is a beacon of enduring hope, like the famous Bartholdi Statue of Liberty enlightening the world, to the oppressed of all lands. It floats over a wondrous assemblage of people from every racial stock of the earth whose united hearts constitute an indivisible and invincible force for the defense and succor of the down-trodden.

Old Glory embodies the essence of patriotism. Its spirit is the spirit of the American nation. Its history is the history of the American people. Emblazoned upon its folds in letters of living light are the names and fame of our historic dead, the Fathers of the Republic who pledged upon its altars their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor. Twice-told tales of national honor and glory cluster thickly about it. Ever victorious, it has emerged triumphant from eight great national conflicts. It flew at Saratoga, at Yorktown, at Palo Alto, at Gettysburg, at Manila Bay, at Chateau-Thierry. It bears witness to the immense expansion of our national boundaries, the development of our national resources, and the splendid structure of our civilization. It prophesies the triumph of popular government, of civic and religious liberty and of national righteousness throughout the world.

Old Glory first rose over thirteen states along the Atlantic seaboard, with a population of some three million people. Today it flies over forty eight states extending across the continent, and over great islands of the two oceans; and one hundred and thirty millions owe it allegiance. It has been brought to this proud position by love and sacrifice. Citizens have advanced it and heroes have died for it. It is the sign made visible of the strong spirit that has brought liberty and prosperity to the people of America. It is the flag of all of us. Let us accord it honor and loyalty.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:
 Major George Daviot, whose wife Anne has left him because of his absorbed interest in Josie Bradford, goes to a weekend party at which Josie and her husband, Captain Bradford, are present. Capt. Bradford, who is Daviot's subordinate officer, shows his enmity toward Daviot because of the latter's domestic "poaching". At a late poker game, Daviot wins heavily from one of the players, Grant, who drunkenly accuses him of cheating. Daviot, to whose honest playing Josie is a witness, is about to force a recantation from Grant when Bradford seconds his accusation.

Chapter Three

Bradford's accusation of cheating put Daviot in a position that was perplexing, not to say untenable. Though he knew of course that the charge was false, and though most of the others were convinced of it, it was impossible for him to persist in denying it without giving Bradford a chance to create an ugly scandal by coupling his wife's

While George was packing his bags, his friends, Cinderford, Roper, Cowbit and Pontreft solemnly filed into the room to dissuade him from his intention to bring suit. "What the devil is the matter with you?" demanded George. "Bradford accused me of cheating. I didn't cheat. I can't fight a duel. Therefore —"

They began to argue with him. Reasons . . . glib, oily reasons from a number of viewpoints; from any viewpoint but that of a man intent on keeping his good name clear. George could not sue, they pointed out, without bringing Josie's name into the case. Besides, whether he won satisfaction in court or not, mud had a way of sticking. And further—Pontreft came out with it at last—the publicity would be unpleasant for all of them.

"At last you've admitted your motive," George bitterly, picking up his bags. "Very well, gentlemen, you may save your skins. You have my undertaking not to sue."

But the mud had already been thrown, and court action or no action, it proved black, unsavory and adhesive. Through the medium of whispers—at first stealthy and covert, then gradually more open—

"You couldn't clear yourself without telling about us!"

same with Daviot's. In fact, Bradford did not miss the opportunity for a thrust at George by mentioning, during the heated discussion that followed his accusation, the fact that George had been living beyond his income and now missed the resources of his wealthy wife, Anne, who had left him.

"Well, no use any more talking," said George, restraining his anger at the trumped-up charges. "I'll see my lawyer on Monday." He started for the stairs leading toward his room.

Josie Bradford, flashing a hateful look at her husband, followed George and overtook him in the hall.

"George, that was marvelous of you, keeping me out of it!" He held her close in his arms. "What did you expect?"

"What are you going to do?" she asked after a moment. "Take action, of course. It would be the end of him, anyway."

"But there are two of them against you—you wouldn't be believed. You couldn't clear yourself without telling the truth!"

"I intend to tell the truth about us, Josie. Anne's gone; your husband knows; no need for any more lies."

She drew away from him, alarm showing in her eyes.

"My dear, you can't do that. It will mean the end of everything—your career, your friends. We must be practical!"

"Practical?" he echoed slowly, like a man unwillingly awakening from sleep to cold reality. "You mean—money?"

"Not exactly, George; but we must live. I can't go leaving Brad, my home and everything just to settle down to love in a cottage."

"Can't you?" he asked bitterly. "George, you mustn't take action—you mustn't say anything. See the weekend through and I'll ring you up Monday."

"Don't bother." He started to turn away. "Then when shall we meet?"

"We shan't. We're finished. I'm going to take action and clear my name." With even step he walked up the stairs and into his room.

Josie stood for a moment, suppressing a sob more of anger than of regret. Then she turned and hurried back to her husband.

the story of Captain Bradford's un-defended charge of card cheating against Major Daviot began to make the rounds. And it was so much the worse for George, a short time later, when, playing bridge in the officers' mess, he reneged through nervousness while Bradford was watching the game. And the whispers, of course, increased in volume and malignancy.

Meanwhile Anne, leading an aimless and unhappy life in Paris, waited with dwindling hope for a letter from George—some word that might open the door to a reconciliation with the husband she still loved. But none came. For George, now completely alone, and with the bitterness of his unmerited disgrace gnawing at his soul, drew further and further into his shell.

Desiring to get away from his regimental associations for a while, he waited in the hope that the ugly affair would be forgotten in time, he applied to the Colonel for leave and received it with some reluctance. He moved temporarily with his orderly, Tandy, to the gentlemen's club of which he was a member.

Entering the lobby at the cocktail hour, he greeted affably his many clubmates who lounged about. Even with conditions as they were, he had scarcely expected the reception he met with; the curt, chilly nods or complete silence that greeted him from one after another. Squaring his shoulders, he stalked out to the bar. Four of his old friends were standing there, partaking of the evening's refreshment.

"Good evening!" said Daviot. They looked at him a moment, then slowly turned away and left the room.

It was a blow that George could not take without staggering. Was it possible? He needed time to think it all out. A step farther into his shell. . . He went to his room, ordered Tandy to pack his things, left the club and hailed a cab.

"Where to?" asked the driver. "Anywhere!"

Tandy, unseen by George, was close behind. He hailed another cab and leaped inside.

"Follow that taxi!" he cried.

WORLD COMMENT

BRACK CURRY

ILL-ADVISED POLICY

The program to enlarge the navy, and the domestic policies of the new deal provide us another flagrant example of Rooseveltian inconsistency and incongruity of policy.

Secretary of State Hull, Secretary of War Woodring and other prominent administration spokesmen have recently warned the American people of the prospect of war in which the United States, in their opinion, will inevitably be involved. This was the chief reason given to congress for authorizing the expenditure of over one billion dollars to increase the naval strength of the country.

But the economic policy of the new deal is not in any phase designed to prepare the country for war. The national debt is still being increased through continued huge expenditures for relief, social security, public works and similar projects. If the current rate of expenditure continues the national debt will eventually be increased to the ceiling which President Roosevelt said his financial advisers estimated would be safe for the country.

When Uncle Sam declared war against Germany in 1917, the national debt was only $2,975,618,585 (billions).

Entrance of the United States in any war today would find us with a debt fast approaching forty billion dollars. War would necessitate the raising by borrowing or taxes of a minimum of fifty billion dollars in addition to the current debt. Could the financial resources of this country uphold a debt of ninety or one hundred billions.

You may say that it is unlikely that we will fight in the next war. But we have the words of Secretaries Hull and Woodring that the United States is nearer war than at any time since 1917. And as they are officials in positions of responsibility with knowledge of what is transpiring in the world at large, we must accept their words as authentic.

England, Italy, France, Germany and other countries which regard war as inevitable and perhaps imminent are feverishly storing food supplies to feed their peoples in time of conflict. Although the U. S. is more self-sufficient in foods than any other European power, embroilment of his country in war would necessitate the immediate abandonment of all our control planning based upon the scarcity in food and fiber crops.

It is an accepted fact that a war can be lost behind the lines by discouragement, defeatism and dissension in the fields, in the homes and the factories as well as on the field of battle. Since the advent of the Roosevelt administration six years ago, the American people have been incited to internal strife by the leaders of the country, including the President, as never before in this nation's history.

Labor has been encouraged to rise against industry and the destructive, hate breeding sit-down strike has been silently tolerated by the administration. By the refusal of the chief executive to mediate in the interest of fairness and justice in labor-capital relations, labor has been encouraged to further lawlessness at a huge monetary loss to labor industry, the general public and the government in loss of taxes.

The business leader of the country have been assailed as demagogues who bleed their workers and live in idle luxury upon the fruits of their ill-gotten gains.

The defence program of the country would be seriously handicapped by the program of open warfare pursued by the administration in its relations with business. Manufacturing has been disorganized, capital stultified, and unemployment increased by the spirit of fear created among businessmen, both big and small.

Lack of long range planning and of practical economic advice; has long been apparent in many new deal legislative proposals and executive acts. But none has involved more danger for the security and independence of the United States than has the economic policy of the Roosevelt administration. Of what avail will a strong navy be if the country is so weakened that it cannot support the navy?

CANNING PINEAPPLE

A few suggestions on buying or selecting pineapple for canning are worth considering. Ripe fruit has the best flavor and contains more fruit sugar. Ripe fruit is orange in color and the spines may be pulled out readily. In soft overripe fruit there is more waste, therefore the cost is increased. Underripe fruit should be wrapped in thick paper and kept a few days to thoroughly ripen. 65 to 70 degrees F. is a good temperature to hold it at.

To prepare for canning

Cut off the stem end and twist out the top. Place the pineapple on its side on a table and slice crosswise. Peel each slice. Cut out the core and shape the slices with a sharp round cutter or cut in desired shapes. Juice or sirup for canning the fruit is best made from cooking the trimmings, as the best part is next to the skin. Add cores and enough water to cover. Simmer until the fruit is clear, then strain the juice. Make a medium sirup with one measure of sugar to one measure of fruit juice.

To Precook

Cook slices of the fruit in medium sirup 8 to 10 minutes or exhaust 5 minutes in the can after the hot sirup has been added at 150 degrees F. before sealing. Pineapple, like apples, contains much air which must be removed before sealing to prevent loss of flavor, discoloration, and spoilage.

To Process

Seal and process in the water bath for 15 minutes for No. 2 cans; 25 minutes for No. 3 cans and pint jars; 30 minutes for quart glass jars. Use plain tin cans. Cool quickly to prevent overheating as this affects the flavor and color. Clean and label containers before storing in a cool dry place.

Pineapple is credited with being an aid to digestion and a better source of vitamins than most fruits. Raw pineapple also contains digestive enzymes which are somewhat irritating to the mouth and immature fruit is even more irritating. We should be careful that the fruit is fully mature, as the unripe Juices are caustic and liable to irritate the stomach.

INDUSTRY SUFFERS

The effect of the New Deal spending program of the last six years, involving increased taxes and a tremendous increase in the national debt upon one of the country's major industries is seen in these figures:

Taxes levied on the steel industry during 1937 took 42 per cent of the net earnings of the industry which remained after all other expenses of operation had been met. In 1929 taxes took less than 19 per cent of the net income.

This sharp increase in the industry's tax burden was revealed in reports to the American Iron and Steel Institute by nearly 100 steel companies producing more than 90 per cent of the total output last year.

Total tax payments by the industry last year to Federal State and local tax collecting agencies exceeded $169,086,000, an increase of 65 per cent over the 1929 tax bill of $103,000,000. Net profits of the industry, after all charges, including taxes but before dividends, however, were 49 per cent lower in 1937 than in 1929, amounting to $231,794,000, last year as against an estimated $455,000,000 in 1929.

The total amount of taxes paid by the steel industry during 1937 was equivalent to an outlay of $330 for each of the 513,000 wage earning employees on the pay rolls during the year.

The share of the steel industry's tax dollar going to the states and municipalities in which it property is located has materially decreased recently because of Federal taxes. State and local taxes represented 42 per cent of the total in 1929, but were only 52 per cent in 1937.

Between 1919 and 1937 the amount of taxes paid by the steel industry per ton of finished steel produced increased 70 per cent, from $2.91 per ton in 1929 to $4.96 per ton last year.

A 65 per cent tax increase upon the earnings of one of the nation's greatest tax paying industries in the brief period of eight years is appalling. Most of this increase has been made since 1933, when the inauguration of the federal spending program took place.

As the government plunges further into debt, government taxes will take ever increasing toils from corporate earnings and, as only one example, the 42 per cent of net earnings which steel contributes to the government will be increased. If federal spending continues indefinitely, the present generation may see the day when taxes will take all the earnings of industry and the government will resort to confiscation of wealth to meet expenses.

America can not buy its way out of a depression!

In 1931 the world (60 countries) spent a total of slightly more than four billion dollars for national defense, according to Current History magazine. In 1936, (latest available figures) these same countries spent $10,730,000,000 (billions); an increase of more than 150 per cent within five years.

Of the $10,730,000,000 spent by the whole world for national defenses in 1936, Europe (29 countries) provided $8,880,000,000, or approximately five-sixths. Of the $8,880,000,000 expended for national defense in Europe and Russia, accounted for $6,434,000,000, or 72 per cent, leaving only 28 per cent for the other 26 countries, England and France included.

"The Sage of Emporia", William Allen White, editor of The Emporia Gazette and Republican leader, wrote the following in his paper recently under the heading "Not Fear of One Man": "The obstacle to the thing we call recovery is not fear of one man."

"If Roosevelt, Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin all were to die within a month, the obstacle would remain. For hundreds of millions of men, round pegs in square industrial holes not functioning fully to capacity, although our presidents and dictators all were dead, would still feel that the distributive system of Christendom is not perfect. These hundreds of millions will continue to agitate for a larger share than they now receive in the gross product of the machine age.

"Universal education and the common use of machinery, have fused a new dynamite of discontent in the world. In Europe, the common man has turned futilely to the dictator. Soon the dictator will pass. In America, the forgotten man turned to Roosevelt. Roosevelt also is temporary. His followers are here to stay. Unless the wisdom of man can find some fair way to secure exceptional rewards to exceptional men who have organizing talents and at the same time establish a universally high standard of living which will satisfy the common man who has only a common talent, we shall have no peace in business or industry.

"It is a world problem facing the modern man. No leader nor small group of men is the menace. The menace is inherent in the problems of the distribution of income. Neither side is right."

In her Washington Herald Patterson ran an open letter headlined "What You Could Say, President Roosevelt," treating the same subject which Mr. White was discussing, that is, what is responsible for the uncertainty in business. In it she took the President's dare to tell him exactly what to say "that would banish fear." Her remedies:

"You said once, with eternal truth, that the only thing to fear is fear itself. Fear is depressing industry. With due respect, you should concede the obvious: This fear is fear to you."

"You should inform the American people that, proud—as you should be proud—of the great moral and social advances which have been made under your leadership, you are willing now to consolidate these and attempt no more until you Cabinet, your Congressional leaders and you agree that the Nation can foot the bill."

"If you will do this, Mr. President, explicitly, generously, candidly; make no effort to keep Congress in session longer than is absolutely necessary, and reduce your blacklist to real, intentional enemies of the common welfare, you will be astonished to witness the curative effect of this single thing."

"You have been a great leader and a great man. You can be again."

With whom do you agree, Mr. White or Mrs. Patterson?

Could not both be right? Is it not possible that a fundamentally unsound world economic structure could be aggravated by unwise economic policies, such as huge expenditures for armament

SHEEP AND GOAT ASSO. LAYS PLANS FOR SALE

At a meeting in the District Court room Monday afternoon June 6, the Coryell county sheep and goat raisers association laid plans for the annual Ram and Billy sale to be held in Gatesville on August 1st and 2nd.

The first day will be given over to a ram and billy show and a public auction of such animals as are presented for sale. The second day will be devoted to private sale by any and every body with animals to sell or trade. There will be no entry fee or pen charges on either day although there will be a commission charge on all animals auctioned the first day.

The following committees were appointed to make the necessary arrangements for the show auction and sale: H. J. White, general chairman; W. E. Lassetter and Guy Powell, Publicity; L. P. Clark, Fred Robinson and Alf Lockhart, Show committee; Fred Robinson, W. E. Hayes and Kit Bridges, Pens committee; A. T. Humes, L. C. Shepherd and Guy Powell, Sifting committee; Dan Graves and J. B. Roach, Finance; Fred Robinson, L. P. Clark, auction.

The Association went on record as favoring the extending of a hearty invitation to all sheep and goat men in and outside Coryell county to bring animals to show and sale.

BIG EX-STUDENT PICNIC TO BE HELD AT EWING

Wheat Farmers Notice

Wheat insurance for the 1939 crop will be available thru a special department of the AAA Coryell county. Farmers are urged to set aside at this time .5 of a bushel of wheat for each acre that they plan to plant next year. This wheat will be used to pay premium on insurance. 1939 wheat crops may be insured against loss in yield of wheat due to drought, flood, hail, wind, frost, winterkill, lightning fire, tornado storm, insect infestation, animal pests plant disease, excessive or deficient moisture, incursion of animals, and any other unavoidable cause.

Frank Blair has been chosen as Wheat Representative for Coryell county. Every effort will be made to get information regarding wheat insurance to the producer in the near future.

Each producer who desires a wheat allotment should file his claim as early as possible at the County Agent's office.

purposes in Europe and continued outpourings of federal billions for relief in the United States?

Everyone wants to know when Congress will adjourn. There is still some talk of adjournment on June Eleventh—one week from tomorrow, but I am afraid that it will be after the middle of the month before we can finish up.

This week the House has passed a new pure food and drug bill as well as a number of measures that, while important could not be considered major legislation. In fact the House has completed all major bills and is now waiting on the Senate to act on Relief and a Conference Committee on Wages and Hours. As soon as these measures are disposed of, adjournment will follow shortly. It is my intention to come home just as soon as I can after we adjourn but there are always a number of last minute visits that a member must make to various departments before leaving for home. This will take two or three days at best. Then we must pack up. None of these things can be done until we actually adjourn. Then as we shall drive home and as Mrs. Poage is still suffering from a broken leg it will probably take us four or five days on the road, and will mean that it will be a week or more from the date of adjournment till we actually get home. We are, however most anxious to get back to Central Texas.

During the week we have had a delegation of forty or fifty prominent Texans headed by our own Mr. A. M. Goldstein, visit Washington in the interest of the location of a cotton use laboratory in Texas. The trip has been arranged by Hon. Burris Jackson of Hillsboro and the group included Hon. L. T. Murray and Cliff Day both of Waco as well as other outstanding citizens from other parts of the state. While the Texas representatives in Congress have been working on this laboratory for a long time we felt it was a good cause to have the citizens of Texas come to Washington and personally present their claims to the Secretary of Agriculture, Mr. Wallace and the Secretary of State, Mr. Hull. I think they made a splendid presentation of a good case, and that Texas should get the laboratory.

The cotton use laboratory is but one of the objectives for which we are working in the interest of the cotton situation. Others are the improvement of quality and staple; better ginning; insect control and, of course, always a better price. I am very hopeful that we may get thru some legislation that will give the cotton farmer a larger parity payments for cotton. I have always supported just as large an appropriation for our cotton farmers as comes before us and I expect to continue to do so. I am sure other Southern representatives will do likewise. The trouble is there are not enough of us from cotton states and very few of the representatives from the industrial states have yet learned the fundamental lesson that we must bring the farmers income up to a parity with other groups before any of these groups can be really prosperous.

Incidentally our delegation has appointed a committee of which I am member to work on the matter of improving cotton quality. This is a matter of more importance than most people realize. Indeed it is startling to find that last year more than half of all Texas cotton was of such short staple that it was not wanted on the world market. If we are to continue to sell cotton to the rest of the world we are going to have to grow the kind of cotton that they want.

I have also been very busy trying to get the Department of Agriculture to announce the terms of their wheat loan. I realize that it will be some little time before they can begin making a wheat loan but they should announce what they are going to do now or it will be too late to be of any service to our farmers. This tendency to delay is one of the things we have to fight all of the time. These people don't seem to realize that crops are several months earlier in the South than they are in the North.

QUESTION & ANSWER BOX

Question: I have bought some Duco, with which I intend to paint some objects around the house. What I want to know is how many coats of paint should I put on furniture and how many on metal. Can you tell me?—C.W.S.

Answer: The number of coats required depends on the condition of the previous finish. On furniture or other wooden objects not previously finished in any way, you should first apply a coat of Duco White Undercoat and follow this with one or more coats of Duco. One coat will generally be satisfactory, but two coats means you will have a longer-wearing job.

If your furniture has paint on it already, you can dispense with the Undercoater. As to number of finish coats, the same rules apply as when undercoats is used.

Metal objects which have not been painted previously must also have an undercoat, but in this case the products to use is duco auto and metal surfacer, which is especially made for use on metal. Follow this with two coats of duco in the color you have selected. Two coats are at way advisable on metal. If the metal work has previously been painted and is in good condition, just apply the duco color coats according to the printed directions.

Americans eat an average of 139 pounds of meat per capita both fresh and cured. Two thirds of it is produced west of the Mississippi river and two-thirds of it eaten east of the river. City people eat more fresh meat per capita than country people, and pay at retail something like three times the price per pound for which the producer sells it on foot. In other words, the farmer who raises meat can eat it for about one-third the price to his city neighbor, yet eats less of it.

Fresh meat, milk and eggs are bone and muscle building foods which are ready for human consumption where they are produced without going to a factory for processing. By all the rules of reason producers might be expected to use them in the diet to the utmost extent of appetite and the demands of health. It is a queer mental quirk therefore, which stints their use by those who produce them and they are looked upon mainly as something to sell, which to buy less palatable and more expensive foods.

The other day, in a public meeting, a Texan man said there were 4,000 children in his county for whom milk, butter and cheese have to be imported. He might have added that the same children probably have fresh meat very seldom. The town children can have only what their parents are able to buy, at retail prices, but no farm child needs be denied these wholesome foods. On the average farm enough feed can be grown on a few acres to supply the family's meat and milk menu to repletion. On many farm enough grass goes to waste for want of animals to eat it at the right time to raise a flock of sheep or three beef animals.

The old-time 'beef club' by which several families kept themselves in fresh meat the year round was an institution of the pioneer days, and is still used in some communities. Modern refrigeration permits a single family to kill a lamb or a calf at any time and use it as needed. The steam pressure canner has made it possible for any farm family to preserve meat at any time, after using as much as possible in fresh form.

The present crop plans call for the planting of more feed crops and these feed crops must be fed to livestock. There is no restrictions whatever on the production and use of all the dairy meat and poultry products the family can use and many a cotton family has its first real opportunity to produce and use its full needs in these wholesome and delicious foods. There is no restriction on the sale of meat, poultry or eggs. These will be used to enhance the cash income.

PLAY BALL!
BASEBALL CHATTER By Post

As every true Texas baseball fan knows, this season the Texas League is celebrating its 50th anniversary. The Lone Star Loop has emerged from many besetting difficulties, changes in club membership, and interruption in operation to become recognized as one of the strongest Class A-1 circuits in the minor and as one of the most fertile fields for the development of future major stars.

No club has played through the league's 50 years of operation without missing at least one season on play, as there was no league during the years 1900 and 1901. In 1889 the league was called the South Texas League and the loop was named the North Texas league in 1902. For the next four years there was two leagues in our state, one called the North Texas and one the South Texas, but the two leagues consolidated to form the present Texas league. Only two clubs have not failed to be in the pennant fight every season since 1907 and those two clubs are Ft. Worth and Dallas, second-division occupants in the present league standing.

John J. McCloskey is credited with being the "Father of the Texas League." This old-timer organized a strong independent team at Joplin, Mo. and in 1887 went on a barnstorming tour through Texas. This created a great amount of interest in the game, and was the chief cause for the forming of the Texas League.

Four cities were represented in a meeting at Austin December 15, 1887 when McCloskey organized the Texas League. Dallas, Houston, Austin and New Orleans were the four present, and just a while later New Orleans withdrew with Ft. Worth replacing them. However, later in the season New Orleans came back into the league with San Antonio to form a six-team circuit.

During those days fans were able to obtain a seat right behind the catcher for two-bits, with the salary limit for each team being $1000. The players were known as roughnecks and hell-raisers and were not accepted in polite society.

In this and the next few issues your correspondent will give you information concerning the game as it was played way back in the 80's.

For one thing, there is the funny-looking uniforms of the clubs in 1867. This old-fashioned regalia looks more like the uniforms of the old volunteer firemen rather than a modern baseball outfit. These suits were built to show off the bulging biceps of the players of a day which regarded beer as the best training diet. In the chest of each blouse was built a hard-boiled affair resembling those old red chest protectors they used to show in the drug store window. Padded pants, wide belts, conductor caps, and detachable shirt fronts were other fetures of these ancient suits.

Next week we will have prepared for you some information about the rules that governed in game way back when—

PIDCOKE AND MOUND FACE OFF IN SUNDAY LEAGUE

Two of the first division clubs of the Coryell county Sunday Baseball league will face off in games Sunday. Mound the team that looks as if it is the outfit to beat for the title will meet Pidcoke, one of the foremost contenders for the title, at Mound in the feature battle of the day. Mound defeated the strong Jonesboro team last Sunday 11-5, while the Sunday before that Jonesboro edged out a 5-4 decision over Pidcoke. However, the Jonesboro-Pidcoke battle was anybody's ball game, and those two teams rate just about even. Pidcoke had the Eagles beat until the ninth inning, when Drake, Jonesboro shortstop tripled in the last half of the inning with two on and two out to sent two tallies across the plate and give Jonesboro the old ball game. If Pidcoke can produce a hurler capable of holding Mound's heavy slugger in check, they may surprise the curbstone critics by coming thru with a win over the present league leaders. If Pidcoke should defeat Mound that would leave Pidcoke, Jonesboro and Mound all tied for the top.

Jonesboro plays at Moshier in a game that the Eagles should win with ease, while CCC plays the hustling Coryell City nine.

MAYOR C. E. GANDY IN STATEMENT APPROVES SCS

"The value of a complete program of soil conservation both in saving soil and holding moisture has been proved to me most conclusively during the past year," said Mayor C. E. Gandy this week in commanding the local staff of the Soil Conservation Service who planned and supervised the installation of the program of his 400 acre farm near Purnela.

"Until this year," Mr. Gandy continued, "for several days after every heavy rain, I would be unable to drive down the road to the house. This was due to the fact that at a point where the road follows the boundary of the field, silt and water which had washed from the field above would completely cover the road. But this year, in spite of an abnormally wet spring, only once was I unable to get over the road and at no time did any silt come from the field above. This indicates to me that all the moisture and soil are being held in the field by the strip crops and contoured rows.

"Before the program was installed, a large gully had formed in the field and was growing larger each season. After stripping the field and double seeding the gully with cane in the summer and oats in the winter, I find that the is fast disappearing.

"As for the cash benefits I am receiving from the program I can show you oats planted on this 'cattie' soil producing 50 bushels to the acre. This, is due in part, to the very favorable season, but I attribute the greatest part of the success of this year's crop to the fact that the soil had not been washed away from the plants and practically all the moisture has been stored where it fell. I believe that, as a whole, I have the best crop this year I have had since I owned the place and the neighboring farmers are unanimous in agreeing that it is due largely to the conservation which we have established".
