ALVIN HOPSON, FORMER CORYELL COUNTIAN, WEDS KENTUCKY GIRL

A wedding of great interest to people over Coryell County was that of Miss Edna Baumgart, of Beuchel, Kentucky, and Alvin Hopson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ruby S. Hopson of Mound, Texas, which took place Thursday evening, May 2, at 8 o'clock at the First Baptist Church at Beuchel, Kentucky. The Rev. Ozzie Pruitt, pastor of the church, officiated before an altar banked with palms, fern and greenery. White tapers burned in candelabra at either side of the altar.

The bride was lovely in a gown of white marquisette over taffeta, styled with long full sleeves, and a sweetheart neckline outlined in ruffles as was the long train. Her veil, extending over the train, was caught in a coronet of orange blossoms. Her only jewelry was a single strand of pearls, and she carried a bouquet of white rosebuds and sweetpeas.

Miss Antonette Baumgart, sister of the bride, was maid-of-honor. She wore an aqua net and carried a bouquet of delicate pink roses. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Merle Hopson Davidson of Mound, Texas, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Lillian Baumgart, sister of the bride. They were attired in peach net frocks, and carried bouquets like the maid-of-honor. The three attendants wore three-strand pearl necklaces, gifts from the bride. Little Miss Dorothy Jean McCullen, flower girl, was dressed in a frock like the maid-of-honor, and carried a basket of red and white rose petals.

Oz Quick of Nashville, Tennessee served as best man, and ushers were Jack Kilgore of Dallas and Redtop Holmes of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

Mrs. Olga Hans gave the wedding music, and accompanied Mrs. Emma Spindle, who sang "I Love You Truly" and "Oh Promise Me" preceding the ceremony.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The lace-laid table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake encircled with gardenias and topped with a miniature bride and groom. The cake was served with pink and white ice cream to approximately 80 guests.

When the couple left on a honeymoon trip to Texas and other points south, the bride was wearing a rose redingote suit with white accessories and a corsage of gardenias. They will be at home on Crescent Hill in Louisville, Kentucky after June 1.

Among the out-of-town guests for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Perry Davidson of Mound, Texas.

Hatreds engendered by the rapacious warfare of the armies of Imperial Germany from 1914-18 provoked the iniquitous Treaty of Versailles, which 13 years later fathered Adolf Hitler and National Socialism in Germany. Invasion of Belgium and Luxembourg in 1914, four years of fighting on French soil, indiscriminate attacks upon neutral shipping—all these impelled Allied statesmen to follow the wishes of their peoples in punishing Germany at the close of World War I.

At the outset of this war, Allied leaders proclaimed to the world and to their peoples that they were fighting the leaders of Germany, not the Germany people nor the German nation. In the early months of the conflict, British planes bombarded German cities with propaganda leaflets enunciating the Allied war aims: destruction of Hitlerism and the return of democratic institutions to Germany.

The German people were told in these leaflets and by short wave radio broadcasts that the Allies had no desire to exact territorial or financial concessions from Germany if they could be assured of permanent security from unprovoked aggression. World War II would end with no Treaty of Versailles, they promised, if the German people would overthrow their rulers and make peace with Great Britain and France.

These tactics were inspired by several considerations on the part of the Allies. Strong pro-German elements in both Britain and France had long sponsored the "appeasement" policy toward Germany which resulted in the Munich disgrace and the subsequent obliteration of Czechoslovakia as a sovereign state. The so-called "Cliveden" set in Britain favored further concessions to Germany and opposed a strong war policy even after September.

Similarly, the Allies hoped to strengthen anti-Nazi elements in Germany and to provoke a domestic revolution that would overthrow the Hitler regime by promising lenient peace terms. Large scale warfare, it was believed, might be averted by these means. Furthermore, Allied leaders were conscious of the fact that American public opinion and responsible elements within their own population believed that the provisions of the Treaty of Versailles sponsored by their own war leaders had provoked the resurgent spirit within Germany which culminated in the attack upon Poland.

There is every reason to believe that had Hitler been overthrown by a domestic upheaval as late as December, and a democratic political organization substituted, the Allies would have been extremely lenient in their peace terms. Or had Hitler stepped aside and been succeeded by a moderate such as Goering—a possibility frequently mentioned late in 1939—the Allies likewise would have been conservative in their demands upon the Reich.

But events of 1940 have completely altered this situation. The brutal Nazi attack upon Norway; indications that the Germans are determined to achieve a complete victory through the destruction of the British and French empires; and, now the invasion of Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg and the inauguration of land fighting which will inevitably incur casualties and suffering on a World War I scale—these factors have again aroused a passionate hatred among the Allies and the neutrals that have been invaded, not only against Hitler but against the German people.

Alfred Duff-Cooper, former First Lord of the Admiralty and now a member of the cabinet of Winston Churchill, echoed this new sentiment recently in a speech in which he asserted that the German people must be held accountable for the actions of their leaders. This reflects the spirit of Allied statesmen and peoples that Germany must be reduced to impotence if and when victory is achieved.

Naturally, the Allies have not published any proposed peace that now they have a general idea of how Germany permanently can be destroyed as a military power.

For this, in reality, is a "war to end war" for the British and French peoples. Even if their leaders should be differently minded, the peoples of the Allied states, of Belgium, Holland, Norway and any other neutrals that may be subject to unprovoked Nazi aggression, will insist, if victory comes, that they be insured per-

"Scaley" Holcomb Sets Pitching Record

Marion "Scaley" Holcomb's celebrated "Salary-wing" has earned him the reputation of being the outstanding schoolboy hurler ever to perform on Coryell county baseball diamonds. Up until last Tuesday Holcomb had amassed the startling total of over 90 strikeouts since the start of the high school baseball season and it has chiefly been his pitching that has anchored the Flat Yellowjackets at the top of the championship race.

This record was already something to "crow about" but Scaley added another feather to his cap by cutting down 22 batters at Ireland Tuesday to bring his total for the season up near 125. Tho this is really a remarkable record for a lad still in his teens, there are also a lot of other stars on various high school teams and we believe in giving credit where credit is due so we doff our hat to Ireland, Jonesboro, Turnersville, The State Training School and Pidcoke for making the 1940 high school league race one of the most interesting in the history of Coryell county baseball.

Jonesboro Defeats Pidcoke 2-3 Tuesday

The Jonesboro High School baseball team won their final game of the season by handing Coach Sam Anderson's Pidcoke crew a 3-2 defeat at Jonesboro Tuesday. Batteries for Jonesboro were: Williams and Thomas For Pidcoke, unreported.

This was the Eagles' last game of the season and their standing at the close was six games won and four lost.

PIDCOKE, MOUND AND TURNERSVILLE WIN IN SUN. LEAGUE GAMES: TOPSEY FORFEITS

Pidcoke, Mound and Jonesboro were the winning teams in Sunday's baseball league games and Blackfoot won on a forfeit from Topsey.

The closest clash of the day took place at Turnersville when the Turnersville club nosed out the Coryell City crew by a 2-0 score. This was Coryell City's second defeat of the season and Turnersville's first victory in a couple of starts.

The Mound youngsters proved to be too much of a dose for the Jonesboro team when they tangled at Mound last Sunday and Jonesboro went down to a 3-0 defeat. This game was said to be even closer than the score indicates and only the excellent fielding of the Mound infield enabled the Mound lads to come out on the big end of the score. Each of these teams has won one game and lost one so far this season.

The Pidcoke Cokers made it two in a row at Plainview Sunday when they romped on the Plainview wsluggers by a score of 6-12. Francis Rutherford hurled the entire game for the cokers and though he was slightly wild in the openinnings and allowed the Plainview teams to drive six runs over the plate he finally settled down and held them during the remainder of the game. Jonnie Bell was in the box for the Plainview team.

The Blackfoot Indians, one of the strongest teams in the league were scheduled to go to Topsey to engage the Topsey nine but conditions arose that forced the Top-sey manager to forfeit the game and also withdraw from the league. After Topsey's announcement that they would not be able to continue in league competition, there is a possibility that Levita may put a team in the race. If this be true they will enter the league with a clean record and take Topsey's place in the playing schedule. Topsey was to play Jonesboro at Jonesboro Sunday, and though it is not definitely known whether or not the Levita team will be ready to play or not, if they are they will clash with the Jonesboro team at Jonesboro Sunday in their first game of the season. Plans are underway to match these two teams Sunday and the managers of these teams will be notified whether or not they will play.

Here is the schedule for Sunday: Turnersville at Pidcoke Mound at Coryell City Plainview at Blackfoot.

All managers are urged to assist in keeping the records straight by sending in reports on each game played.

Softball Teams Urged To Start Practice

Immediately following the Gatesville Rodeo and Frontier Celebration the City Softball League is expected to swing into action and all teams planning to enter should prepare for the official opening which will take place early in June. Already several teams have announced that they will enter the league and will be ready to start soon after the rodeo.

This year, as in the past, the News is ready to assist in any way possible to make the city softball league a "go" and full co-operation by the team managers that expect to enter the league is asked to help start the league as soon as possible.

Ireland Loses to Flat Tuesday

Coach Harry Mohrmann's Flat Yellowjackets clinched at least a tie for the Coryell County High School League trophy Tuesday afternoon when they beat an improved Ireland team 8-6 in ten innings. The Jackets got going late in the game and put it on ice. Holcomb of the Jackets got 22 strikeouts. The Flat boys clinched the game in the tenth on two bases on balls and three hits. Werner and Berll pitched good ball for the Irish. To win the undisputed championship Flat must beat State at Flat Thursday.

manent protection against future German depredations.

If these peoples are to lead normal lives, are to maintain their basic social, economic and political institutions, they must be guaranteed a long period of peace. They cannot and will not fight Germany every 25 years or so, as they have been compelled to do for centuries.

Precisely what steps would be taken should Germany be defeated no one can say at this time. But the much-publicized map which allegedly reposes in the French Foreign Office, and before which Summer Wells was purportedly photographed while in Paris, cuts Germany into a heterogeneous bloc of small states similar to the political setup of the German states after the Treaty of Westphalia.

An independent Austria would be re-created and possibly united with Bavaria. Poland would annex large sections of eastern Germany, including East Prussia, and Belgium and Holland would receive considerable additions of Reich territory. The northeastern boundary of France would be extended to the Rhine river.

This does not present a happy picture for Germany or the German people. But who doubts the terrible fate that awaits France and her allies if Germany triumphs in this war?

Germany is responsible for the war. If she loses, she must pay the penalty for her aggression and it will be a heavy one.

Edward Small PRESENTS MY SON, MY SON!
FROM THE BEST-SELLING NOVEL BY HOWARD SPRING
MADELEINE CARROLL
BRIAN AHERNE LOUIS HAYWARD

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:
William Essex, having risen from slum poverty to become a famous and wealthy novelist, resolves to lavish upon his son, Oliver, all the luxuries he himself lacked in his underprivileged youth. As a result of this indulgence, and despite the protests of Essex's wife Nellie, the boy grows up a spoiled, unprincipled, though handsome and charming youth. Seeking material for a novel, Essex goes to work as a miner in Yorkshire, and meets a lovely young girl artist. They fall deeply in love, but Essex, remembering his obligation to his unloved wife, leaves the girl abruptly without even learning her name.

Chapter Four

What ironical purpose there may be behind these things, or what harsh, meaningless caprices of a Fate more stupid than cunning, I do not know; but it was while returning from her devotions at Chapel one evening that winter that Nellie was struck by an automobile. The injury was serious; by the time I reached her bedside she was dead.

With an unreasoning feeling of guilt that no amount of rationalizing could altogether down, I wore mourning for her for nearly a year; not only on my coat-sleeve, but in the brooding, melancholy thoughts that dogged me.

But when, at the end of the year, we all moved to London, my past life with Nellie seemed to recede almost abruptly. I heeded Dermot's urgent plea to consider this new move an advance into a new life, a fresh page of my existence; and to Sheila's imperious, symbolic gesture of snipping the mourning bands from the sleeves of all my coats.

I began to take a renewed interest in my work. Many years ago Dermot's daughter Maeve, then a fiery little girl more devoted to play-acting than to mastering her ABC's, had teased me to write a play for her to perform when she grew up. Now Maeve was a lovely young woman of eighteen, with a pale, elfin face and eyes a kinde with the inner fire she had inherited from her parents. She had spent the previous summer touring the provinces in a stock company, getting experience in the fundamentals of acting. Now she renewed her demands that I write her a play.

Eager for something to work on, and spurred by the child's enthusiasm, I sat down and dramatized my novel, "Every Street." For some time the London producer, Wertheim, had been begging me to do just this; when I finally turned the play script over to him I extracted his promise that Maeve should play the lead, provided only that she showed herself capable.

The opening of "Every Street," was one of the brilliant affairs of the London season. Not least among its joys for me was the fact that Oliver had been graduated from Balliol and had at last come home to live with me. Still his jaunty, charming, undisciplined self, he had gone through the University mainly on his nerve and on his uncanny ability to bluff himself out of scrapes, backed by Rory O'Riordan's help in patching up the broken pieces of many a situation after him. Now Oliver was home, to my intense delight, and affably, casually accepted all the luxuries, the expensively furnished rooms, the clothes, the lavish pocket money I was ready to provide him with.

While we finished dressing for the opening of my play, Oliver Phapsodized to me over the charms of the young woman who was to accompany him. He had met her, it seemed, at the home of Pogson, his classmate whose father owned the coal mine. Her name was Livia Vaynol.

"Ah, short for Olivia, I suppose," I smiled. "Oliver — Olivia. Quite harmonious. What's she like?"
"Wait till you see her!"
"Hm. Pretty hard hit, eh, Oliver?"
"Rather!"

...
The play was a manifest hit, the audience more enthusiastic even than most first-night audiences. Maeve's performance, in especial, earned her numerous curtain calls and ringing cheers.
After the theatre there was a great party at our London house. The company was brilliant, the occasion one of great joy. For the first time since my Yorkshire experience, I was almost happy. I was chatting with Maeve and Dermot when the figure of a young girl entering the room at the opposite end, caught my eye. I grew rigid, and stared as she slowly crossed the room. I could not be mistaken — it was she!

Leaving the astonished Maeve in the middle of a sentence, I strode toward her. She seemed aware of my approach, and stepped out to the comparative privacy of the balcony.

I spoke to her, my voice trembling with excitement.

"It isn't true! There can't be this much happiness for one man! What brought you here? No — don't tell me. Let me think it was a miracle, sent from heaven. Oh, my dear —"

"You didn't forget," she whispered, her eyes shining.

"Forget! Do the stars forget to shine? Do the flowers forget to bloom? If you knew the things I've done — pursuing helpless females up dark streets, peering under umbrellas — and saying, 'Pardon me, Madam — I thought you were —' but you see, I don't even know your name! For all these months I've only been able to think of you as my sweet — my love — my darling! What is your name?"

"Livia."
"Livia." The dreadful realization began to overcome me. "Livia!"

Before she had a chance to speak Oliver barged over to us, with a "There you are, darling!" My sickening fear was confirmed. With a great air of proprietorship and of easy intimacy, he told her they must leave at once for a late supper at the Pogson's.

Livia hesitated, trembling, wishing to say something, perhaps not knowing quite what I stood miserably, ill with shock, cut to the marrow by Oliver's jeering tone. Then Dermot found us, and before I could speak, dragged me indoors to acknowledge a toast.

"A toast, ladies and gentlemen, to the happiest man in London!" All raised their glasses and echoed him.

"To the happiest man in London!"

The guests had long since gone, but I knew the futility of going to bed, of trying to sleep. Alternately staring into the fire and pacing the floor, I scarcely heard the knock on the living room door.

Again the knock, louder. I went to the door. There she was, looking pale and tense. I looked at her silently.

"Aren't you going to ask me in?" she demanded at last.

"Yes. Yes, of course."

"You're not very hospitable," she exclaimed, going to the fire.

"You shouldn't have come."

"I had to. Because I know what you're thinking about Oliver and me — and you're so wrong! Oliver has absolutely no claim on me. After all, every woman meets men who are attracted to her — who call her 'darling!'"

"But Oliver is my son."

"Don't dramatize that!" she said angrily. "True, Oliver liked to take me about, flirt a little. But I never encouraged him. I even told him about you — that I'd met a man I could never forget. And tonight I told him that you were that man."

She looked at me hopefully with a shaky little smile. For a long time I said nothing. Then, despairingly:

"Why don't you go? Why can't you leave me in peace?"

"Would you be in peace if I left you?"

"No." I acknowledged bitterly. "But even if Oliver means nothing to you, you mean something to him. I'm not going to take you away from him."

"Take me away!" she cried angrily. "What am I — a chair, a table, a desk? Why, you've spent your whole life giving things to Oliver. But I won't be given!"

She urged me to go to Oliver, to tell him that she and I loved each other. He was only a boy — he would forget. Still I refused, still I asked her to go away.

"I'll go away," said Livia. "I'll go out of your life, if you'll do just one thing. Look in my eyes and say these simple words: 'Livia Vaynol, I don't love you.' Just say that once, and I'll go."

She stood quite close to me. I forced myself to look into her eyes.

"Livia Vaynol, I — I — don't —"

As once before, she was suddenly in my arms, and I was wildly kissing her. "I love you — and I shall love you forever — and ever — and ever!"

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT BEER AND BREWING

THIS IS WHAT BEER IS MADE OF... Sunshine, water, malted grain—and hops for flavor. Converted into beer by a simple natural process. Mother Nature brews beer—that is why it is so wholesome.

PROVIDED BY U. S. FARMERS—25 BILLION POUNDS OF FARM PRODUCTS NEEDED BY BEER AND ALE. Since re-legalization, the brewing industry has bought this enormous quantity of produce from American farmers.

BEER AND ALE CONTRIBUTE $1,000,000 A DAY IN TAXES TO LOCAL, STATE, AND FEDERAL GOVERNMENTS. Or $400,000,000 a year! What would happen if there were no beer or ale to carry this enormous tax burden?

"THANKS FOR THE JOB!"... say 1,000,000 people put to work by beer and ale since their return. More than 100 other industries benefit from the making and sale of beer and ale.

BEER CAME OVER ON THE MAYFLOWER—Pilgrim records tell how the landing of the Mayflower was hastened because the Pilgrims ran short of supplies, "especially beer."

MILD, WHOLESOME BEVERAGES FOR HOME ENTERTAINMENT. Always easy to serve, beer and ale are favored by many hosts and hostesses for home entertainment. Tasty, mild and wholesome—they are ideal beverages for moderation parties.

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

By WILL ROGERS

THIS is about a guy that went to a big dinner in New York. It seems he lived away out in Yonkers or somewhere, and he was worried about waking up the family when he got home. He was getting to feeling kind of bad along about midnight, at the dinner, and he told another fellow how he felt about waking up the poor family. So this bird says, "You don't have to wake anybody up. I'll tell you how to do. Just like I do. When you get indoors, just take off your clothes downstairs, and fold all your duds into a neat pile and carry them up with you, and then you won't make no noise undressing nor stumping upstairs with shoes and overcoat on."

So the next time these two gay parties got together, the one that gave the advise says, "How did you get along that night?"

"Not so good," says the other one. "I done just like you told me, and I took off my clothes, every darn one of them, at the bottom of the stairs, and then I carried them upstairs with me."

"Well, that ought to be all right." "But it was all wrong. You see, when I got to the top of the steps, I found out I was in the lobby of the Roosevelt Hotel, and had just come from the Grand Central Station."
