GOT HAND HURT IN ELEVATOR.

Reuben Gischler met with a very painful and what came near being a serious accident, Saturday.

While working in the elevator and while the operator was in operation Reuben put his hand in one of the cups on the elevator belt to make sure of the kind of grain it was carrying up, and the edge of the cup caught the set of a ring which he wore on his little finger and refused to let go until it had torn the set from the ring. The skin and flesh around the finger and between it and the third finger were cut and torn and a part of the finger burnt where the ring had slipped on it. Had the set not given away when it did the finger would evidently have been torn from the hand. It was necessary to cut the the ring in order to remove it from the finger.

INCUBATOR TIME.

For those who are planning to raise some early friers or a good flock of early layers for next year, it is time to be setting hens or incubators.

Hens do not usually set in sufficient numbers at this time of year to insure a large early flock, and an incubator is the next resort.

Facts About Mrs. Bixby's Five Sons. On October 12, 1864, William Schouler, adjutant general of Massachusetts, sent the War department in Washington the supposed facts as to the five sons of Mrs. Lydia Bixby of Boston.

On November 21, 1864, Abraham Lincoln wrote the famous letter to Mrs. Bixby as the mother of five sons who had "died gloriously on the field of battle."

For a long time it has been known that there were mistakes of fact as to the war record of these five sons. The known facts about them are:

REV. MR. BARTON gives the history of the Bixby family, in part, as follows:

"The Bixby family is of Puritan ancestry, and comes down in six generations from Joseph (1620-1701) and Sarah of Ipswich and Boxford, through Joseph (1648-1725) and Sarah of Boxford, Thomas (1896-1776) and Alice of Hopkinton, Thomas (1730-1777) and Lols Joel (1770-1820) and Polly, to Cromwell Bixby, who was born in Hopkinton, May 3, 1803, married Lydia, daughter of Andrew and Lydia Parker, and died "of a fit" December

"This Lydia Parker Bixby is the heroine of our

"It is possible the reader does not have in mind the story of Agnes Surriage, so many things have happened since. Sir Charles Henry Frankland was rich and proud and handsome as became the here of a romance. He drove from Boston with coach and four across the ferry to Winnisimmet, through Salem and along the north shore to Marblehead. And there he saw Agnes, and he loved her with a lawless love. He later married Agnes, took her to his mother's home and she became Lady Frankland.

"We shall hardly need to be reminded that Mrs. Bixby called at the office of Gen. William Schouler, adjutant general of Massachusetts, about September 14, 1864, and told him that she had lost five sons in the war; that General Schouler told Governor Andrew, who passed the information on to the War department at Washington with the suggestion that the President himself should write her a letter; how the War department wrote back to General Schouler and asked for the names, regiments, service and dates of death of the five sons, and how President Lincoln, on November 21, 1864, wrote his immortal letter, which was sent to the adjutant general of Massachusetts, who delivered it to Mrs. Rixby on Thanksgiving day, Thursday, November 25, along with a Thanksgiving dinner and a consideral le sum of money.

"Of three of her sons there is no doubt. But for the sake of completeness we will tell the story of the five sons whom General Schouler named, endeavor to discover the truth about those that have hitherto been in doubt, and then inquire what other sons and daughters, if any, Mrs. Blxby

66 CHARLES N. BIXBY was born probably in 1841. His birth is not recorded in the vol-May 27, 1861, giving his age as twenty and his occupation as a bootmaker, and his residence as 10 Harrison avenue, Boston, the same address as that of his mother and his brother Edward. He also stated that he was married. He was mustered in for three years, July 18, 1861, at Camp Massasoit, and was listed as corporal in company D, Twentieth regiment, Massachusetts volunteers. He appears to have been promoted as sergeant, for that is the rank assigned him when he was killed at second Fredericksburg, May 3, 1863.

"Oliver Cromwell Bixby was born at Hopkinton February 1, 1828. He married Catherine Wing and they had one son, Charles, born August 21, 1849. The date of her death is not known, but on September 5, 1864, it was stated that both the parents of Charles were dead and his grandmother, Lydia Bixby, was appointed his guardian. Charles was then fifteen years of age. Oliver C. Bixby enlisted at Brookline, Mass., February 25, 1864. He stated that he was a widower with one child, presumably meaning Charles. "Apparently he did not report his marriage, in 1855, to Watie A. Randlett, nor the birth of their three children, Everett E., William A. and Sylvia E., who at the time of his death were all residents of Waltham, Mass. Watle and her children were brought up among their mother's people in Wolfboro, N. H., knowing almost nothing about the Bixbys. The widow Watie died at Wolfboro, October 9, 1914.

"Oliver C. Bixby was a machinist, thirty-six years of age, when he enlisted. He was mustered in at Readville March 1, 1864, and received from the state of Massachusetts $325 bounty besides the $300 which he received from the national government and what may have been given him for helping to make up the quota of Brookline instead of enlisting at Waltham. He had an honorable service and was killed in action in the Crater fight before Petersburg July 30, 1864. He was a private in Company E, Fifty-eighth Massachusetts volunteers.

"Henry Cromwell Bixby was born in Hopkinton, March 12, 1830, and married. He enlisted as a corporal in Company K. Thirty-second regiment, Massachusetts volunteers, August 5, 1862, giving his residence as Newton, age as thirty, occupation a sailor. At the battle of Gettysburg, July 2, 1863, he was captured, and was reported miss ing and killed, but later as having been captured. In an affidavit November 9, 1865, he stated that he was confined first at Richmond and then at Belle Isle, and that he was paroled March 8, 1865. The last date is an error, intentional or unintentional, for he was paroled a year earlier and was discharged, December 17, 1864, at the end of his period of service. He died at Milford, Mass., November 8, 1871.

66 MRS BIXBY had other children. John Bixby, who died in Boston, in February. 1922, was a shoe operative, a widower at the time of his death. Lydia had another son, Andrew Parker Bixby, born about 1849, and living in Boston in 1878. Also she had three married daughters.

"George Way Bixby was born in Hopkinton, August 22, 1836, but at his enlistment gave his birthplace as New York city, and his age as twenty-four, being in fact twenty-eight. He was a cabinet maker, and enlisted at Cheisea, March 16, 1864, for three years. He said he was single. but he had married, August 22, 1863, at Somer ville, Mass., which was his own place of residence. He enlisted as a private in the Fifty-sixth Massachusetts regiment, Company B, giving his residence as New York.

"He was captured by the enemy in the Crater fight before Petersburg, July 30, 1864. The original entry concerning him is that he deserted to the enemy at Salisbury, N. C., but later records affirm that he died in prison at that place.

"John T. Welsh, a member of company D, Fifty-sixth Massachusetts volunteers, a member of George's own regiment, and a fellow prisoner, returned from his imprisonment, and reported that George Way had deserted to the enemy from

"On March 28, 1865, just as the Civil war was ending, Lieut. Col. Gardiner Tufts, state agent for Massachusetts, writing from Washington, reported to the surgeon general of Massachusetts, or rather a junior officer reported in his name, that:

"The following memorandum was sent to me by my visitor at Annapolis and is respectfully forwarded for any action which you may deem

"'Geo. W. Way, Co. B, 56th Mass., died at Salisbury, N. C. His real name was Geo. W. Bixby-his mother lives at 15 Dover St. Place, Boston. Lieut. J. B. Davis of Gloucester, Mass., owes him $200. 1st Sergeant Jacobs, Co. B, 56th regiment, owes him $50 and has all his accounts."

66 In THE light of all that we know we shall used to facts? George W. Bixby, alive and in the South, found means of sending back word through some Massachusetts comrade a message that would help his And double your razor efficiency as mother to collect $200 of his bounty money that he had deposited with his lieutenant and $50 which he had left with his sergeant. He was not dead when this letter was written.

"The War department, with proper solemnity, furnishes all applicants with the information that ing and shampooing .- Advertisement. it does not find the name either of George Way or George W. Bixby on the roll of any Confederate organization.

"Repeated inquiries made at the office of the adjutant general in Boston and also in the War department in Washington brought the answer that no soldier named Edward Bixby was enrolled from Massachusetts. He certainly did not die of wounds at Folly Island, as a member of the Twenty-second Massachusetts, for he was not in that regiment and it did not get to Folly Island. He outlived the war, and in 1871 was living with his mother in Boston.

"But his mother was correct when she said that he left home and was mustered in the field. But Edward, having written his name with ample space and on the line, added, as an afterthought, the cramped name 'Arthur' before the 'Edward.' His medical examination was probably made before he changed his name, and appears as 'Edward Bigsby, b. Hopkinton, Mass., aged 20, occ. shoemaker.' He was sworn in as Arthur E. Bixby at Camp Kalorama, Washington, August 6, 1861, and became first a member of Company C, Fourteenth Massachusetts Infantry, and then of Company C, First Massachusetts heavy artil lery. He deserted, May 2, 1862.

"After the war he changed his occupation and became a sailor. He returned from his career before the mast and lived, for a time with his mother. No one called him to account for returning alive after President Lincoln thought him dead, nor, what was of more importance, did any one accuse him. Edward Bixby, of being Arthur E. Bixby who had deserted the army. He was only nineteen when he deserted and he was nearly twice that when he came back.

"On January 4, 1909, there died of pleurisy, in Chicago, one Edward Bixby, whom the coroner guessed to have been about sixty years of age. Beyond the fact that he was a native of Massachusetts and a cigar maker, the coroner, Peter M. Hofmann, found nothing to record concerning him but the meager information given herewith.

"They buried him in Waldhelm on the Des Plaines, a German cemetery, distinguished as that in which the hanged anarchists were interred. He, a New England Yankee, descendant of seven generations of Puritans, was joited out over the then miserably broken pavement of West Madison street to mingle his dust with that of recent immigrants.

"No Grand Army button adorned the lapel of Edward Bixby's faded and threadbare coat. No little group of old men in blue stood around bits coffin. No volleys were fired; no bugle sounded taps. This man, who as a boy of eighteen went forth as a soldier and grew homesick and deserted a year later, finished his fugitive career, and died a man without a country."

The Hanging

Since ten o'clock men by twos and threes and fours had been making their way through back streets and lanes to an appointed spot an eighth of a mile east of the Baxter home, the tree-bordered swale that marked the extreme northern end of the slough. Whispers swelled into hoarse, guttural set-faced, scowling leaders, left the noose, cursing frightfully. swale and started its deadly march.

Quickly the house was surrounded. vanced toward the porch, above the the ground, roof of which were lights in the windows of what everyone knew to be young Oliver Baxter's bedroom.

Stories of absent-mindedness were being related in the smoking-room of a transalantic liner.

"I am very absent-minded myself," said a hitherto silent man. "I often find names and telephone numbers written in my notebook, but can't remember what persons they represent. Lately I had a general checking up. The name and address of one man baffled me, so I wrote to him asking hall, then Mrs. Grimes was flung if he had ever heard of me, and if I was supposed to do something for him. He wrote back a cordial, almost an affectionate letter, saying I had already done it. He was my wife's first husband."

United States Far

Ahead in Patents

Patents abound in years of industrial activity, and 1925 has set a record for the United States with 46,-540 of these indices of American creative ingenuity. As far back as 1790 congress passed the first national act providing for the granting of patents. But the comprehensive modern legislation dates from 1836, when all former statutes were repealed. We issue far more patents than all other countries combined. Out total is double that of Great Britain or France and nearly four times that of Germany, having passed the 1,500,000 mark. The figure for 1925 is nearly double that registered for 1900. Just as each generation decides that there is nothing new under the sun, the unheralded pathfinders come along not merely with novel ideas but with singular derivatives of the old notions, claiming the credit and paying the fee, even though the bulk of the discoveries may never progress from the sketch or the model to the stage of wholesale manufacture.

SCORES ARE REPORTED DEAD

Wall Collapses Under Weight of Tons of Snow. Is Known to Have Killed Seven at New Britain, Conn.

Boston, Mass .- The northeastern section of the United States is digging itself out from under the heaviest snowfall experienced this winter.

The storm, after wreaking its fury for eighteen hours upon the Atlantic seaboard from Georgia to Maine, lifted as suddenly as it had descended. and went whirling its way along the ship lanes toward Newfoundland. In its wake it left a snow blanket varying in depth from a few inches to two feet.

Nearly a score of deaths, some property damage, and partial disruption of transportation were recorded throughout the storm area.

Shipping Hurt Again Shipping, harried by more than week of severe storms, suffered new disasters. Thousands of passengers SHIP HELPLESS IN WILD GALE on coastwise liners were snowbound in Long Island Sound, where the steamers anchored.

Senate's Tax Bill Reduces Revenues $352,661,000-World Court Debate.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD. SENATOR SMOOT, chairman of the senate finance committee, formally reported to the senate the new tax bill Wednesday and it probably will be called up for debate and action within a few days. The prospects for fairly early passage of the measure are good and tax payers are advised to delay filing their schedules until the Treasury department gives them notice.

Official treasury estimates furnished the finance committee show that the finance committee bill reduces revenues by $25,500,000 more than the house bill, the total loss under the house measure being $327,161,000, as against $352,661,000 under the finance committee bill.

The estimates show that in the calendar year 1926 the retroactive estate tax provision will mean a loss of $20. 000,000, the capital stock repeal will mean a loss of $68,500,000. The cut in cigar taxes will mean a loss of $4,000,000 more than under the house bill, stamp tax repeals will cost $2,-500,000 more in revenue than the house bill, and admission tax provisions will reduce revenues by $5,000, 000 more than the house bill.

IMPROVEMENT ON LINCOLN HIGHWAY

Twelve years ago when the Lincoln highway was laid out across the continent, motor vehicle traffic was not a problem. Heavy through passenger traffic was then foreseen by but a few and interurban freight transportation was a dream.

But the founders of the Lincoln highway, with a vision of the present marvelous development of highway transportation, endeavored to set an example in the routing of the Lincoln highway by leading it around or near, instead of through large centers along the line.

This policy, far from meeting with the approval of the authorities or the business men of the communities near the projected route, raised a storm of disapproval.

Every community between New York and San Francisco near the line selected for the first transcontinental highway fought with avidity to have its main streets—through the heart of its downtown district.

In later years, as realinement on the route became possible and the original location was slightly revised here and there in the process of shortening. many communities originally incorporated on the route were by-passed and in each instance the association's censured when it held to its original policy of missing every community

Finish Highway System

A new $50,000,000 bond issue with which to complete the trunk line system of roads of Michigan has been pro-

The plan in the form of a resolution the Michigan Tourist and Resort association at Muskegon following the election of officers of that organization.

Some officials feel that the job ought to be done in three years and that under any other plan such a system would take at least fifteen years to get into operation. Tourists and resort authorities of the state are putting all their energies behind the idea.

Make Highways Safe

In making the highways safe for both pedestrians and motorists the Detroit Automobile club has gone to first principles and is working from the ground up. One of the novel features is the courtesy campaign and whenever a member notices an act of courtesy on the road by a fellow-motorist, the latter's number is taken and a report of the incident sent to Director Van Schoick. Then goes a letter to the considerate driver, expressing commendation.

STAR RANCH NEWS

(Too late for last week)

This community is becoming set tled quite rapidly, a fact that can not be denied if the school has any showing. The school here is becoming so crowded that the patrons are thinking seriously of building a new $20,000 building, which will be constructed of brick, having six rooms and an auditorium in the basement, to be used for school purposes and church meetings. It also seems that it would be a good idea to install a motion picture machine, which would be a real treat for the new settlers who have been accustomed to pleasures of this sort. It seems that this could never be a failing proposition as the distance to the movie houses are so great that those who enjoy seeing a good picture cannot always find it convenient to go so far. This is one great objection which we hear in this community and the only remedy seems to be to anticipate this movie house in the school auditorium. We sincerely hope that the directors of our school who read this article, will sit up and take advantage of this suggestion. This will give the fathers and mothers and young people of this community something pleasant to look forward to.
