HEADIN' EAST

Our intentions were good—we intended to leave at 4 a. m., but due to packing difficulties, we did not make it until 5, which at that was too early.

Mr. Humble had marked the route for us, and of course, first, we had to get out of Texas. (Ain't funny, McGree?)

First, we went, of course to Waco, and then in order, Mexia, Teague, Palestine, Jacksonville, Henderson, and Carthage, the principal towns in getting out of Texas.

Long about Palestine, before or after, we passed thru a part of the onion district, where these evil smelling groceries are raised commercially. Around Jacksonville, it's tomatoes, green tomatoes. Tomatoes as we know them are always nice red, but these are pulled green and shipped east.

While there, we stopped at a Bramlett service station—this time Sinclair, and of course, met some lady who knew someone at Gatesville. This lady went to school with John O. Potts at Baylor.

Golf statisticians say it happens one in about ten life-times but T. R. Bannister, employee of the local AAA office, did it just the same. While playing on the local course, T. R. unleashed a beautiful power-house drive that sent the little white oval skimming gracefully over the green for a total of 111 yards to land smack in the cup at the number 6 hole. Nope, it's not "propaganda" for Byron McClellan, Peyton Morgan, and Lum Edwards, who were participating in the game witnessed the shot.

JUNE IS

The American Legion is calling a big patriotic Rally at the local football stadium Friday night June 21, and they are asking all civic and service organizations to join them in this event. We quote the following paragraphs from a letter received from the Commander of the American Legion.

"We want the people of this county to meet with us and reaffirm our love and allegiance to the greatest Flag of all nations.

The American Legion can point with pride to the fact that for the past twenty years we have fought for strong defense measures that we are now at this late date beginning, as others, to see realized. We have begged our National Legislators for years to put down and outlaw all subversive and un-American groups. Today we want to celebrate the realization of those objectives. To that end we ask that all ex-service men, as well as patriotic red-blooded citizens that this country can so justly be proud to join us. As never before we are hearing the most heartrending cry for help that a nation has ever heard.

Today we hear the cry from our dead that we left over ther. Today, a flag that we and all christian civilized countries despise, floats over the grave of the "Unknown Soldier" under the "Arc 'de Trio pi. On the line we've knelt by a Buddy, as he was "going West" trying to comfort and cheer him. Giving our country our best.

Now broken we stand in memory at his bier, hearing his last pleading words, Oh, God, Don't leave us here."

Where to Buddies?
Signed: Your Commander"

as the Republicans will face it at their convention. The attention of the public is focused almost exclusively upon the fighting in France and consequently away from domestic politics.

In the process of electing their presidential candidate, the Republicans must overcome a task immeasurably more difficult and complicated than existed before the German invasion of Belgium and Holland. Prior to May 10, all indications pointed to a resurgence of Republican strength in the East and Middle West that threatened to reverse the top-heavy Democratic majorities of 1936.

But the Republican presidential aspirants have directed their criticism against the domestic policies of the Roosevelt administration, generally ignoring the rapidly-changing and exceedingly complex foreign situation. Now, with foreign policy and national defense foremost in the minds of the people, this strategy must be discarded.

President Roosevelt's position as the national leader at time of admitted national danger has strengthened the chances of a Democratic victory in November. The crisis abroad and the potential threat to American security inherent in a possible German victory remove much of the stigma against a third term in the minds of many Americans.

If the election were to be held this month, the strategy of the G.O.P. would necessarily be based upon three essential points:

1) Enunciation of a definite foreign policy to supplement or replace the Roosevelt-Hull foreign program.

2) An attempt to analyze the domestic program of the Roosevelt administration before the American public.

3) Emphasis upon the tradition against a third term and upon the alleged fallacy of the argument against changing horses in mid-stream.

Conditions in the foreign and domestic fields can change so radically and rapidly between this date and September, when the presidential campaign actually gets underway, that any campaign plans made now or at the convention in Philadelphia might be entirely obsolete and ineffective two months from now.

If the Republicans are to carry on an effective campaign, they must fashion their tactics, strategy and platform to meet any number of rapidly changing conditions and circumstances that may arise in the domestic and foreign field in the course of the campaign. The Republican platform and campaign strategy must be flexible in order to meet any exigencies that may arise in future months.

The administration can change its course, its policies and its program at will to meet changing conditions at home and abroad. Unless the Republicans can do likewise, their cause is lost before the battle begins.

HEADIN' EAST—

river catfish was known, since one man asked the condition of the river, as to fishing, and said he'd been out around Ames fishing and put his hooks out and an 8 foot rise came. He left his hooks. Chamber of Commerce, copy. That is one other way to sell Coryell County to the tourist, sportsman and money spenders.

We busted into Louisiana at Bethany, a short way out of Shreveport, and immediately headed into a flat, wet country. Where it's flat enough and the soil is dry enough, there are great plantations. At the other places, the countryside is swampy, and either fishing or lumbering. At first, the lumber mills were small, but the further we went the larger the mills grew. At one place, a big outfit financed by Chicago capital was the biggest tree wrecker we've seen.

The further we went the more colored folks we saw, and now we are in Mississippi, where there is probably more per acre than at any place in the world except Harlem in New York City.

Our first night, was at Vicksburg, and the toll over the old Mississippi, was not BUT $1.70. They didn't give us the deed.

In Louisiana, we saw all the Huey Long monuments — new bridges, viaducts, high schools, elementary schools, city halls, and many other public buildings. Louisiana will long remember the Kingfish, because they'll be a long time paying for his "gifts".

The southern states, we believe at this point are for the most part just about the same. There are many beautiful places, which show the prosperity which used to be, and which with the new programs in effect have killed them off. These states are states of the past — Civil War days. They've never been the same since, and especially, since 1932.

You'll ask, what are we going for. There's a National Editorial Association Convention in New York, which we thought was just too good to see. Too, there's the city, and the fair.

Fairs, of course, are all practically the same, and after you've seen one, you've just about seen them all. They DO make good excuses for trips.

Being as the Convention is SO important, you might wonder what the program is. We're going to give you that daily, a day at a time. Here's the first day's:

Monday, June 17: Opening session at the Roosevelt Hotel, which includes registration, etc. These formalities last until noon. At noon, we adjourn to the New York World's Fair, where there is a luncheon, courtesy of the New York World's Fair. The remainder of the afternoon until 5:00 p. m. will be taken up with looking the "jernt" over, at 5:00 p. m. when there is a cocktail party, also courtesy of the fair, and me with a bad digestive system.

After wheting our appetites at the cocktail party, there will be a dinner, courtesy General Motors Corporation.

That ends the night for us, with some reservations. Suppose you'd think from this that they don't do anything but have a good time at these things, but we'll let you know later about that. There IS a splendid program, and a grand opportunity for anyone in this particular business.

How much is the trip costing us. You might like to know that. Here is the first day's expenses, barring a few drinks. Of course, we started with a full tank of gasoline, 12 gallons, we believe, and a new change of oil. Gas and oil for the day, exclusive of the starting was one 30c quart of oil and $4.01 in gasoline. Our hotel including tips, car storage (for the five) was $5.85. Divide that by four people and that isn't so bad. You know (of course you don't) we're driving a '37 model V-8 60, with the same tires we used on last year's trips.

We forgot, the lady at Jacksonville gave us four big Magnolia blossoms, and of course, the feminine side of our trip got a big kick out of them. Due to the heat, which was not so bad, they went the way of all pretty things.

As for Mat Jr., he says this is his vacation and he's going to make it one. Annie Ruth, the society editor, says the same thing. Mrs. Graves and the Mrs. keep up with the little boy.

This going to you from Jackson, the capitol city of Mississippi, and we'll probably drop you another line this afternoon.

Western Party and Kitchen Shower For Doris McGilvray

A cleverly arranged social affair last Thursday night was in the form of a Western Party and Kitchen Shower, given by Misses Gayle Gibson and Louise Hall complimenting Miss Doris McGilvray, at the home of Mabel Gardner, carrying out the western theme the guests were told on invitations of brown paper to come to back door for admittance. Upon arriving the guests were "branded" by the hostesses. Quite an array of western styles was presented by the guests in their costumes for the evening.

Bunco was played at the beginning of the evening, then each guest was asked to write some advice to the bride. The kitchen shower was cleverly presented by asking the bride elect to hunt for her gifts, which she was to find by reading notes which were concealed in cactus.

A refreshment plate of Dr. Pepper, Jelly beans, Gingerbread topped with whipped cream was served on "Branded" brown paper plates. Those enjoying this occasion were: Misses Leah Dale Franks, Dorothy Culbertson, Wilhelmina Cayce, Maude Alyce Painter, Mamie Sue Halbrook, Bess Holmes, Lois Grantham, Cloe Young, Edna Murray, Margaret Dixon, Christine Moran, Minnie Lou Witt, Neva Parsons, Rowena Blackwell, Sophie and Pauline Voss, Truie Pearl and Thelma McGilvray, and Mesdames Ola Mae Parks, Jack Barneburg, T. K. O'Neal, Bailey Curry, Dawson Cooper, Crawford Scott, the hostesses and the honoree.

Mrs. Mollie Lewis of Oklahoma and Mrs. Randolph Lawrence of Pueblo, Colorado, have returned to their homes, after spending some time at the bedside of Mrs. W. E. Simms of White Hall, who has been very ill.

Mrs. John O. Potts is in Denton attending NTSTC where she is taking special work for the summer months.

Miss Willie Basham, who has been in Hamilton for some time is back in Gatesville.

Poultry Report- By Charline, Cox, Pearl 4-H Club

I am raising turkeys for my poultry goal. I plan to buy a typewriter with the money they bring.

I brought four hens and a tom in December. The hens averaged ten lbs and they weighed seventeen pounds. I paid $.11 per pound, making them cost $6.27.

The hens started laying in March. I got fifty-three eggs from the four hens. Sometimes the crows would get the eggs. When the hens went to setting, I set three of them and sold the other one and the tom, which brought $1.70.

I took off forty-five turkeys out of the fifty-three eggs. The turkey are now six and seven weeks old and I have thirty-four. The crows have caught some.

When the turkeys were small, I fed them curd and cornbread. When they were five weeks old,

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE
Mary Smith, daughter of Judge Smith who is a contender for his party's nomination for the Presidency, goes to the family house at Palm Beach to avoid threatening scandal arising out of her presence in a New York night club which, unknown to her, turned out to be a gambling place when raided. It is the off season in Florida, and desperate with boredom, Mary poses as a "lady's maid" and goes out with Elly, her maid and Katie, the cook, on a blind date to meet three cowboys from a nearby rodeo. Paired off with Stretch, a lanky handsome cowhand, at a late supper in the rodeo cook house, Mary angers him with her condescending manner and he walks away from her. She follows.

Chapter Two

"Say, what's the matter, cowboy?" she demanded, catching up with him. "Is it me?"
"No, I guess you're all right."
"I think so," she returned defiantly.
"Maybe that's what's the matter with you."
"I—I was just trying to be nice," she explained humbly.
"No call for you to work so hard."

finger-reach; the air was filled with strange, magic scents and whisperings. Mary, partly from her determination to overcome this stubborn man's resistance, partly from a genuine feeling for him that grew with every moment in his company, was determined to win him over. She recalled the lesson given her by the two girls: approach number one, getting him to talk about himself, was plainly hopeless with this laconic cowboy. As for approach number two—getting him to kiss you—it seemed to be working beautifully with Katie and Elly and their respective boy friends downstairs. Mary resolved to try it.

"Lovely night, isn't it?" she began tentatively.
"Sure is."
"Got a girl, Stretch?" "Gosh—no."
"Wouldn't you like to be to love?"

"Never thought much about it." "Oh, Stretch, you're so unromantic! Doesn't a night like this—the moon, the sea, everything—mean anything to you?" She put her face up to his provocatively, waiting to be kissed. But he continued to gaze out into the night, his thoughts obviously elsewhere. And when she demanded to know just where, he confessed that they were with "Bess."

"A little mare of mine. She's due to have a foal in a month. I really oughta write that letter home to the folks, tellin' 'em what

She put her face up to his provocatively.

She gave up, realizing that she was out of her element with this simple, straightforward, unspoiled youth. "I'm sorry," she said quietly. "I just wanted you to like me. I see what you mean, though. And you're right. Please go back to your friends, and I'll go home."

Now it was his turn to be contrite, touched by her manifest sincerity. "Aw, now, you don't have to do that. Let's go back and we'll make a new start."

Back they went to their bowls of fiery chili and their thick mugs of coffee—both infinitely more relaxed, ready to like each other at the drop of a hat. Strangely enough they now found no difficulty at all in conversing; and when Stretch thawed out to the extent of turning the full warmth of his smile on her, she was completely won. For this was a smile such as she had never seen before, guileless, full of a childlike charm and candor. "How terrible!" she told herself. "I almost left the party!"

The supper over, the boys escorted their ladies home, Mary trotting along determined to keep up with the long-legged stride of Stretch. When they arrived at the big house the cowboys were dumfounded at the thought that this vast palace housed so few people.

"What a wigwam!" Stretch exclaimed, examining the upper hallway and the rooms leading off it, whither Mary had led him to show him where she "worked." "How many in the family?"

"Three," she told him. "The father, the mother and the daughter."

"Good thing there's no more children," he observed. "They'd be awful cramped in these twenty-four rooms."

Wandering through the house, she took him by the hand and led him out to a balcony. The moon, enormous in the southern night, seemed to hover almost within to do. . . . So much for method number two. Bess indeed! But Mary wasn't ready to give up yet. There was still method number three—the sympathy act reserved only for emergencies—but the emergency had clearly arrived.

Forsaking the balcony and the moon, she led him back into the house, then out into the patio, where she lolled on a bench while Stretch took out his harmonica and played a jaunty cowboy song. Here was her opportunity.

"I envy you, Stretch," she sighed. "Nothing on your mind—no troubles or responsibilities—"

"Well, you don't look to me like a girl that's had a tough time of it."

She smiled wistfully, bravely. "You don't think so, huh? That's funny—really funny."

"Oh, I'm sorry," he murmured contritely. "I know people suffer sometimes, and you never get to know it. Maybe if you told me something about yourself, why—"

With a fine show of stoicism, brave little chin in air, she refused to burden him with her troubles—until he insisted as she knew he would. Then, intoxicated by the success of her little venture into pathos, she launched into a pathetic story about her father who came home drunk night after night and left the harsh burden of supporting her four younger sisters all on her.

"Of course sometimes it's a little hard," she went on. "Sometimes I don't know how I keep going—"

"You poor kid," muttered Stretch, and without knowing just how, found her head against his breast and her face straining up toward his. He lowered his head and kissed her, at first almost reverently; then, as she responded to his kiss, more and more purposefully. . . .

Method number three had won the day.

To young men whose education has been interrupted or delayed, the educational and school system of the United States Army is well worth consideration.

The scope and variety of subjects taught in army schools is extensive. Take just one subject, Aviation, for instance, three technical schools are maintained, one at Montgomery, Alabama, another at Chanute field, Illinois, and a third at Denver, Colorado. The courses these schools offer are as follows:

Airplane mechanics course, Aircraft armorers course, Aircraft machinists course, Parachute rigger's course, aircraft welders sheet metal workers course, photographic course, radio mechanics course, Air corps supply and technical clerks course. For the man who plans to be a civil engineer the engineer school at Fort Belvoir, Virginia gives courses in surveying drafting and aerial photographic mapping, map reproduction and photography, and electrical motors and water purification. At the signal school, which works in close touch with both the engeral electric and RCA laboratories, a man may get one or a combination of these courses: wire communication. Special overseas course, meteorological observers course. Meteorological forecaster course. photograhic course. In the artillery field, coast and anti-aircraft one finds good courses at their schools in motors, motor maintenance, electricity and radio.

To the man who wants to be a medical technician the army medic corps offers excellent laboratory and X-ray technician courses. There are times when a young man has not yet made up his mind as to just what career he will select. To that type of man the army offers a chance to "look things over" and after he finds what he likes best he has a chance for excellent instruction in school of his choice. Selection for attendance at these schools is made entirely on merit. Only those men who demonstrate aptitude and industry during their service in the army may expect to be selected. If you are interested in additional information please see or write me at U. S. Army Recruiting Station, Room 215 Federal Building, Waco, Texas.

The average depth of oil wells completed in Texas in 1939 was 3,700 ft. compared with 3,000 feet for the entire United States. Texas produced approximately 480,000,000 barrels of petroleum in 1939, or nearly two-fifths of all the oil produced in the United States. One-third the total land area of Texas is now under lease to Texas oilmen for oil and gas purposes.

Ara Mae Black Makes Written Tomato Report

The 9th of February 1940 I planted my frame garden in tomato plant. I planted maraglobes, gulf state market, break o' day and tree tomatoes. All four varieties came up and grew well. I set out about seven hundred plants in our garden; besides several hundred which the frost killed.

I sold about one thousand plants at Earl Bonds Grocery Store and sold neighbors about 5 hundred plants. Which makes a total of about fifteen hundred plants.

The seed which I planted cost twenty cents and I sold two dollars and eighty cents worth of plants. Therefore, I made a profit of $2.60.

I found that my frame garden is useful for something besides growing green vegetables. Next year I am going to plant it in tomatoes again. I found that the plants which were grown in it are much larger, healthier and easier to grow than tomato plants usually are.

Tressia Smith, The Grove, Has Poultry Report

When my baby chicks were small we started feeding them dry startena and they did not eat this very well. Then we learned that if you would soak some bread in water then mix your startena in with the bread and water that they would eat it better.

I built a small house for them to roost in out of an apple box. I sawed out one end of the box and made a door and at night we fastened the tin in front of it. Each day we leave the door off so it will air out and get sunshine.

I put the chickens in a wire coop when I started to feed them so the large chickens would not eat their food and get it dirty. If little chickens eat dirty food they might get a serious disease.

EIGHT TEAMS IN CITY SOFTBALL RACE: STARTS THURSDAY NIGHT

Representatives from six softball teams attended the softball meeting at the News office Friday afternoon and the success of the 1940 City Softball League, as far as teams are concerned, is virtually assured. A schedule is being worked out, the field is being made ready for the opening series and the initial game of the season is scheduled to start at 8:00 o'clock Thursday night.

The names of the teams participating in the league are: Arnold Electric Company, Red and White Food Store, Coca-Cola Bottling Company, Dixie Gassers, NYA, Firemen and an unnamed team sponsored jointly by local agents of Southwestern Life Insurance Company and American National Life Insurance Company and the CCC.

The opening game finds the Coca-Cola Bottlers pitted against Beerwinkle's Red and White team and from all indications this contest has all the earmarks of a real "dog-fight" which is sure to bring out the fans from all forks of the "crick". In the second go-round, The Insurances team tangles with the Dixie Gassers with "Generalissimo" Lasses Anderson at the helm. This game is likely to prove equally as interesting as both teams are playing their first game in league competition and will be striving to be the first to crash into the win column. No lineups have been turned in but this information will be gathered as the team makes their first appearance and will be carried in the sport columns of The News.

A guess at the strongest team, or teams, this early in the season would be a "shot in the dark", but in the opinion of many sport fans Arnold's, CCC and the Coca-Cola Bottlers are in the favored upper bracket. Several new teams are making their initial appearance in the City loop, however, and their strength is unpredictable at this stage of the game.

In the News window is a trophy which the News offers annually to the championship team in the city race which serves to create more interest in a truly great sport, and at the same time, reward the championship team. The Coca-Cola Bottlers were the first to capture this award and Arnold's Electricians were the 1939 champions.

With all managers, players, sponsors and fans working together for the benefit of the league, the approaching season promises to be the most successful since the inaugural of softball as a city-wide sport several years ago.

Blackfoot Defeats Coryell City 8-6

The Blackfoot Indians turned back the Coryell City Nine at Blackfoot Sunday by a score of 8-6 in the only league game of the day. Ivy hurled the Indians to victory and Gauer was in the box for the losers.

This was all the information available at this time as all other scheduled games were rained out. Watch for further announcements concerning the playing dates of these rained out games.
