Walter R. Adams Is Honored By Ft. Worth Club

At the November meeting of the Fort Worth Poetry Society, which will be held Thursday the 14th, Walter R. Adams, author of the recently published BACHELOR'S POPPY, which was a co-winner this year in the Kaleidograph Book Publication Contest, national in scope, will be presented in a lecture-recital at the home of the president, Mrs. Margie B. Boswell. Mr. Adams has been an honorary member of the Fort Worth Poetry Society since 1936, when he first addressed the Society, after having received its major award, offered for the best poem written by a Texan.

There are only three other honorary members. They are Dr. E. H. Eckel, Dr. John O. Beaty, S.M.U., and Dr. Clinton Lockhart, T.C.U., each of whom has appeared as guest speaker for the Society. There are about forty active members. Only the membership will be privileged to hear Mr. Adams at the November meeting.

Commenting on his new book, a recent issue of the Dallas News says: "This new volume by Mr. Adams is unique. The masculine music, if pleasingly varied, is plucked from a single string—the lonely estate of bachelorhood. Whether shrewd or poignant, the lyrics are a quality to delight the audience Mr. Adams has already won, and to enlarge it."

Reduction In Tax On Trucks Are Probable

Sweeping reductions in some classes of commercial and other vehicle insurance rates announced by the Texas Board of Insurance Commissioners was heartening news to truck operators, Lynn Shaw, manager of the Texas Motor Transportation Association, reported today.

Reductions amounting to almost thirty per cent were made in the bodily injury and property damage rates on classes III and IV of commercial vehicles, and certain types of privately owned vehicles were given bodily injury reductions amounting to about 25 per cent.

Classes III and IV, in which are included ambulances, armored cars, local transfer trucks, local contract truckers' trucks, local express and freight forwarding trucks, and fuel tank trucks, mail trucks, R.F.D. trucks, moving vans, newspaper delivery trucks, parcel delivery trucks, produce dealers' trucks, railroad company's trucks, were given reductions of almost 30 per cent by a new order which goes into effect November 15.

Passenger car bodily injury rates were reduced about 25 per cent, as were farm and ranch vehicles by reclassification.

Miss Sidney G. Gibson visited her parents in Trinity the past week end.

Authentic Red Cross Questions And Answers

Q. What is the membership drive for the Red Cross?

A. It is a national effort to enlist the cooperation and support of all American citizens in sustaining the only charitable institution ever chartered by Congress. It is called the Annual Roll Call.

Q. Where does the money that is paid in on the membership drive go?

A. 50 cents out of every dollar membership goes to the American Red Cross to carry on the work of the Red Cross in our own country. The other 50c is kept in the local treasury of the Red Cross in our own county for the purpose of being used in our own county.

Q. Does any of this money collected in the membership drive go to pay salaries anywhere?

A. No.
Q. Does any of this money collected in the membership drive go for relief in war-torn Europe?

A. No.
Q. Does anyone in Coryell county get paid for any services rendered to the Red Cross in this County?

A. No. All workers volunteer their services without pay.
Q. What countries are now being helped by the American Red Cross?

A. Finland, China, and Great Britain.
Q. Will the Red Cross send aid to France this winter?

A. No.
Q. If none of the membership money goes for war relief, where does the money come from for this purpose?

A. From contributions to the War Relief Campaign, which is entirely separate from the present Annual Roll Call.

Q. How much did Coryell County contribute to the War Relief Fund?

A. $797.67
Q. If Coryell County should experience some major disaster, like an earthquake, or violent tornado, or disastrous flood, would the local Red Cross be expected to meet all the expenses necessary to take care of the local situation?

A. No. The National Organization of the Red Cross would be the first to come to our assistance with trained workers and add financial aid necessary to take care of the

Copperas Cove Boys Injured As Car Hits Abutment

Saturday night, Vernon Bushman and Wilson Brown of Copperas Cove were slightly injured when their car hit the abutment on the bridge over the Leon at Gatesville.

They were treated by a local doctor. Two unnamed girls in the car were reported uninjured. The car was badly damaged since it was a head-on collision with the abutment.

GARY COOPER · MADELEINE CARROLL

CHAPTER FIVE SYNOPSIS
 The Canadian North West in 1855 faces bloody civil war when the Metis, a nation of half-breeds incited by a notorious murderer, Jacques Corbeau, rebel against the authority of the North West Mounted Police and the British Crown. Into this wild country comes Dusty Rivers, a Texas Ranger, looking for Corbeau who is wanted for murder in Texas. Corbeau takes a Gatling machine gun to the camp of Big Bear, Indian leader, in an effort to incite the latter's braves to join the rebellion. Dusty and Sergeant Jim Bret of the Mounted meet him there. Dusty dares Corbeau to kill him with the machine gun.

CHAPTER VI

SILENCE, then, lay over the camp like a thick fog, the Indians watching raptly. Dusty stood, his arms dangling, but Corbeau did not move. Big Bear looked at the breed dubiously.

"KILL!" he said harshly, but Corbeau, sweating, still did not move.

"Draw, you rattlesnake!" snarled Dusty. "You shoot people in the back; let's see how you are in a fair fight! Draw!" Nearby, Jim Bret and Tod McDuff looked on, scarcely containing their jubilation.

But Corbeau did not draw. Corbeau knew the Rangers; he knew, indeed, Dusty Rivers knew he had no chance. But he must act quickly. The Indians looked at him suspiciously.

"I would not foul the lodge of the great chief with dog's blood," he said. "Let the gun speak."

Big Bear weighed that. "It is true," he said shrewdly. "I have not seen the gun." A giant sigh went up from the braves as the tension broke. "Let it speak."

Corbeau, jubilant, fired the Gatling gun. In rapid fire it clattered, sending a hundred bullets into the walls of the lodge and a great cry of wonder went up from the Indians. Big Bear's eyes bulged.

"Before the sun has set three times," shouted Corbeau, "I will bring you the coats of the police redder because of their blood."

"Bring them then," intoned Big Bear, "and—" he glanced at Jim Bret—"it is war! The gun speaks with a mighty voice."

"Before three suns have set," said Jim Bret with contempt, "Corbeau will wear iron on his wrists."

He turned, followed by Dusty and McDuff, and left the place. Three days, then; three days respite. The breeds already were on the march; they could handle those, perhaps, but the Indians,—that was another matter. Three days! Corbeau must be captured before then and no redcoats must reach Big Bear's camp.

But back at Fort Carlton there was bad news. A trader, hearing of the advance of the Metis forces, had abandoned his store and with it ten thousand rounds of ammunition, besides his rifles.

"The Metis," said Inspector Cabot, "must not get those shells and those rifles. We're going after it. Otherwise—" he looked at Jim Bret and Dusty—"all that you have done at Big Bear's camp is undone."

"But the reinforcements—" began Jim Bret.

"We cannot wait!" snapped Cabot.

The orders were given. The Metis, so the refugees said, were on their way to Prince Albert, to the north, but they could double back quickly and ambush the Police at a place called Beardy's Basin, an open space on the trail between wooded hills. It was the only place an ambush could be successful. Jim Bret, therefore, took Ronnie Logan and Constable Moore to an outpost cabin overlooking Beardy's Basin to scout the trail. "Two hours watch, two hours rest," he told them. "At first sight of enemy, fall back toward post and give the alarm."

He left them, then, returned to the Fort. It was just after sundown. At dawn, the patrol would march out.

And it was after midnight in Batoche when the squaw came to April Logan. It was Ekawe, whose child had had the broken leg that April had set.

"You good to me," said Ekawe to April, "so I good to you. You brodda watch by Beardy's for Metis, but dey kill him, amboosh de police. You betta tell dem watch out!"

Ekawe was gone quickly. April stood, her thoughts in turmoil. It was too far to the post and she, a white woman, could not get through anyway, if the breeds were indeed out. But there must, there against his, felt him tighten with passion.

"Ah God!" she breathed. "I love you too much. Love so it hurt! But you—" she pouted—"you don't love me, I t'ink. Me, I'm halfbreed an' halfbreeds not good enough. Besides, they fight you."

"I'd love you, my little klootch, if you were Eskimo!" He held her close, his blood singing. "I'll always love you."

"Then marry me!" she whispered. "You say so once. Do it now! Tonight!"

"But the post! I'm on duty. I—"

"One hour," she said softly. "We ride to Batoche, see priest. You come back, then. Ah Ronnie, my Ronnie, say you will!"

Ronnie Logan was not very wise and he was very young. They had badgered him about Louvette. His jaw set stubbornly. He scribbled a note with a pencil, pinned it to must be some way. She thought, suddenly, of Louvette. Through the dark streets of the town, she hurried to the half-breed girl's cabin, told her story, and the girl smiled.

"You don't like me, pretty white woman. You t'ink maybe I not good enough for you' brodda? Why I help you?"

"Help me!" cried April. "I don't want help! It's Ronnie! The man you love! He'll be killed, do you hear! Killed!"

But Louvette only shrugged. "Maybe yes, maybe no."

"You don't love him!" cried April. She was frantic. "You wouldn't risk a hair of your selfish head to help him!"

Louvette turned, stung. "You t'ink not!" she screamed. "I show you, pale face, what love is!"

She was gone, then, leaving April weeping with relief.

But April did not know. Louvette sped through the woods, her heart singing with love and hatred. Her Ronnie she would save, but the others... She reached the outpost cabin, waited until Jerry Moore went out on watch, then leaned over the empty window.

"You need somebody to cook, maybe?"

Ronnie Logan started in amazement, but before he could answer, she was through the window, her arms about him, kissing him fiercely. She pressed her body the wall with his knife. It read: "Will be back in an hour, Jerry. I've gone to a wedding."

With Louvette behind him, he rode at a gallop to Batoche and Louvette laughed happily. In Batoche, she took him to a house.

"Priest here," she said, but when they were inside strong hands seized him, bound him to a chair, despite his struggles, and when the lamp was lighted, he saw three Indians, who left at Louvette's signal. She looked at him in triumph, then, as she said: "You not be kill, now, like oddas."

The others! "Louvette! Untle me! Untle me!"

"De breeds goin' amboosh police at Beardy's." He screamed, but she knelt beside him. "I keep you safe, my love." She nuzzled against his wrists that strained at the buckskin thongs until the blood ran. She wiped away the blood. "I don't care 'bout oddas."

"Untle me! Untle me!" Ronnie's screams filled the place, but she only nuzzled his hands. "Jerry!" he groaned. "Jim!"

As for Jerry, he lay, at that moment, at the door of the shack by Beardy's, three arrows shot through him, and his scalp was gone.

As for Jim Bret, he was preparing the patrol to march,—straight into ambush.

Franks-Ricketts Nuptial Rites Solemnized In Baptist Church

Couple To Reside Here Following Short Trip

The wedding of Miss Leah Dale Franks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Franks, and Joe Rickett, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Ricketts, was solemnized in the First Baptist Church in this city Sunday morning at 9 o'clock. The Rev. C. M. Spalding performed the single ring ceremony before an altar of palms, ferns, and tall baskets of yellow chrysanthemums.

Given in marriage by her brother, David Franks of Wichita Falls, the bride was beautiful in a soldier blue costume suit trimmed with red fox fur. Her accessories were blue, and her colonial bouquet was of sweet-heart roses and iberis.

Miss Winifred Byron was the bride's only attendant. She wore a lovely rust frock with brown accessories and a shoulder corsage of Joana Hill roses and Peruvian lilies.

Milton Kiger served as best-man and ushers were Billy McMordie and Charles Baker.

Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Ola Mae Parks, organist, played "On Wings of Song" and "Because", and Mrs. A. W. Ellis sang "I Love You Truly" and "At Dawning". During the ceremony Mrs. Parks played softly "Love's Old Sweet Song". She also played the traditional wedding marches. Mrs. Ellis wore a golden brown dress with matching accessories and a corsage of purple asters. Mrs. Parks was attired in a brown frock with brown accessories and a shoulder corsage of ranunculi.

Immediately following the ceremony the couple left for a short honeymoon trip, after which they will be at home in the E. Routh apartment on College street.

Mrs. Ricketts, a graduate of Gatesville High School, has been Society Editor of the Gatesville Messenger for the past two years. Mr. Ricketts attended Independence Junior College at Independence, Kansas and Sam Houston State Teachers College in Huntsville. At present he is employed by the Coca-Cola Company in this city.

Among the out-of-town guests who attended the wedding were, Miss Maggie Ricketts, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Ricketts and family, all of Killeen; Miss Janice Duerer of Houston, Miss Ernestine Durham of Henrietta, Miss Arline Bates of Austin, Miss Nell Routh of Denton, Mrs. Rufus McKinney and daughter of Goldthwaite, David Franks of Wichita Falls, Mr. and Mrs. D. Hamilton Bulldogs "Out-mud" Hornets In Annual Pigskin Classic

By Wilson Brazzil
News Sports Editor

Demoralized by the loss of Crow the Hornets crafty quarterback who went out of the game with a broken wrist in the second quarter of the game, the Gatesville Hornets went down in defeat by a count of 13-6 in their annual pigskin classic with the Hamilton Bulldogs, under the lights at Hamilton Friday night.

The Hornets opened up with a smashing drive that netted a touchdown in the first few minutes of play and it look like the Bulldogs were going to have some other night to howl. However they rallied early in the second quarter and carried the battle on until the final whistle to win the game.

The Bulldogs scored in the second quarter when Thompson, Hamilton quarterback pulled a smart hidden ball play and went around left end standing up for a touchdown. The extra point was converted through the center of the line.

Inspired by the one point lead the Bulldogs gained momentum as the seconds ticked away and shortly before the final whistle Thompson again marched to pay-dirt and salted the game away.

Babbitt, Thompson and Davis stood out on the offense for the Bulldogs, though they were given excellent backing by their mates. Easterling, fullback and Sellers, a guard also turned in extra good performances.

Gatesville's defense stood like a brick wall in most cases with Oldham, Gribble, Sydow and White playing their best game of the season. Fry as usual sparked the backfield and showed his heels to the Bulldogs on more than one occasion.

Always an interesting feature in the Gatesville-Hamilton games is a huge battered cow bell that has been handed down through the years into the hands of the team that is victorious in this traditional duel. Gatesville has had possession of the ball since their defeat of the Bulldogs here last Armistice and now Hamilton will have it until they are upset by a Hornet aggregation.

Charles Chapin, who was city editor of the New York Evening World at the beginning of the century, never drank, and was intolerant of others who imbibed . . . Johnny Quinn, a young reporter who worked under Chapin, indulged in an occasional glass of beer, and Chapin sternly lectured him about it . . . Quinn became ill one day and died shortly afterward, leaving a wife and children. The boys on the World, knowing the family wasn't too well off, started a collection, with each man giving what he could afford. When they came to Chapin for a contribution, he brusquely dismissed them . . . "Don't expect anything from me," he growled. "I won't encourage young reporters who drink beer to figure they can depend on the staff to help their families after they're dead" . . . When all the contributions were in, a group of the boys took the money to Quinn's widow. She was touched by their generosity, and tears trickled down her cheeks . . . "The World has the finest men on earth," she exclaimed. "Do you know, boys—we couldn't have buried Johnny if it hadn't been for Mr. Chapin's check."

A new assistant editor at the Reuter's News agency, in London, was once handed a brief cable from New York. After a perfunctory glance at it, the lad filed it with a lot of other material that wasn't of urgent importance. "Those Yanks!" he muttered. "They seem to think we're interested in their President's hunting expeditions!" . . . "What do you mean?" his superior asked . . . The new assistant picked up the cable and waved it in front of him, explaining, "New York seems to think it's worth five cents a word to tell us that McKinley's shot a buffalo!" . . . The editor did a doubletake and, with a bellow, snatched the cable from his assistant's hand. It read: "McKinley shot Buffalo" . . . The first news of the President's assassination.

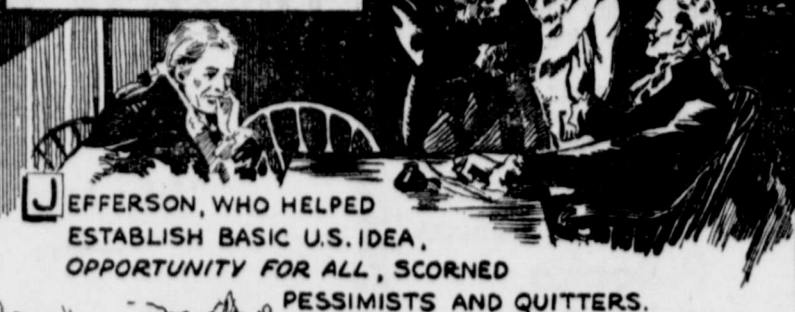

Several years ago Alexander Woolcott checked into a New York hospital for observation, and one of the newspapers received an erroneous tip that he was dying. A reporter phoned the hospital and checked the report with Woolcott's nurse, who denied it . . . Woolcott, hearing the conversation, insisted on talking to the reporter and, grabbing the phone, introduced himself. The reporter repeated the rumor . . . "Tut-tut," tut-tutted Woolcott, "I'm just here for observation" . . . "Then you're not dying?" asked the lad . . . "Of course not!" said Woolcott . . . "Well," queried the reporter, "what ARE your plans?"

New York Heartbeat

The Big Parade: Hoot Gibson, the great big cowboy, dodging taxis and looking scared stiff, at 46th and Madison . . . Hatless Hope Hampton holding hands with hubby, hurrying home . . . Tommy Corcoran, all work and no play-boy . . . Guy Lombardo and Ben Bernie—melody-land's Sweet & Low . . . Karen Van Ryn, the gorjiss Dutch ballerina—glammer competition for Vera Zorina . . . Afternoon stroller on E. 56th Street—Peggy Fears in silver fox coat, red boodwah slippers and blue slacks . . . George Raft, the Merchant of Menace, watching the floor show at Leon and Eddie's.

Sallies in Our Alley: Dorothy Parker was being bothered no end by mag editor Harold Ross, the town bore. He kept interrupting her party of friends in an East Side joynt with: "The revolution is coming! The revolution is coming!" When he said it for the steenth time, Parker popped him with: "And when it does it'll be EVERYBODY against Harold Ross!" . . . Dorothy Thompson has denied the rumors that Sinclair Lewis was in Reno for a divorce . . . "It's not true!" she ejaculated to a columnist, "un-divorce me!" . . . "I will not," he told her, "everybody in town knows that you switched your affections to a fellow named Roosevelt!"

Manhattan Murals: Sign in a 3rd Avenue beanery: "This is Noise Abatement Week — Don't Gargle Your Soup!" . . . The Pullman porter on the Merchants Limited (very fast train from Boston to N. Dick Robertson, the co-writer of "We Three," is now walking with his shadow and talking with his echo since the divorce . . . Herbert Bayard Swope says he merely twisted his knee.

Impersonating Mae West of the "come up 'n see me sometime" fame, Gene Pruner, carrying the banner for the Ritz and Regal Theatres, was ahead of a varied field of entries in the Tiny Tot Revue at the Regal Theatre last night. Second prize went to Raye Virginia McCreary, Jerry Bob Gartman, "The crooning cowboy", with his banjo, received third honors, Charles Luke Walker nailed fast the last ribbon, and an encore was featured in fifth prize, giving Carl Stering McClendon "full measure" and a prize.

Franklin Gregory, one of our Armistice Day visitors, was badly cut Saturday noon when he was riding in a car with L. D. Griffin, which was hit by a truck at the corner of Leon and Lutterloh. The car was badly damaged but the truck was only slightly damaged. Gregory received numerous cuts on hi shands, wrist and fore arm, while Griffin was uninjured.
