LAST THREE STATE BOYS ARE CAUGHT AT HAMILTON MONDAY: SLATE IS CLEAN

It was the "last round-up" yesterday, when officers of the State Juvenile Training School, Sheriff Houston White, of Hamilton County, Liquor Board Control officers Smith Dozier and C. H. DeWolfe took the last three near or in Hamilton.

They were returned to the local institution about noon yesterday, completing the round up of the 47 that followed one Glenn Ransom, who called: "Let's Go", while they were on the "Big Boys" yard, just before the evening meal Friday afternoon.

Eight were caught almost immediately as soon as guards, officials, local police officials, and citizens could round them up. All this eight had been in the Leon river, which at that time was nearly full banks.

The other missing boys, were taken in small groups from that time until 10 o'clock yesterday morning, when the last 3 were safely in custody of the State.

A saddle pony, owned by Barney Morgan, and clothing belonging to Charlie Roebuck, both of near Jonesboro, were said to have been taken, but were recovered.

It was feared by officials of the school, that some of the boys might have been drowned in the river, due to the fact that it was almost full banks.

New Officials Take Over At Training School, Monday

Yesterday was a big day at the State Juvenile Training School, and R. N. Winship Jr., of Austin, newly named Superintendent began his term as Superintendent, assisted by J. R. Ham, also of Austin, and formerly of Teague, as Assistant Superintendent.

Statements were made yesterday that there would not be "mass firings" and a number of prospects were being looked over for positions made vacant by those who have resigned.

Coach Clyde White stated yesterday he'd issue suits and football would start at the school yesterday.

Superintendent Winship is married and has two young sons who will join him here shortly. Mr. Ham is married and has a 7 year-old daughter, and his family will be here in a few days.

An Introduction To Comanche Ethics

There's an old belief that if you stand up for what you think are your rights you can make your way in the world under any conditions. In the Texas Collection of the University of Texas Library is evidence to back it up—to prove, for instance that it was possible to get on even with the Comanches, possibly the fiercest of the North American Indians, if you only knew the trick.

The evidence is in J. W. Wilbarger's voluminous "Indian Depredations in Texas," which contains some of the most dramatic tales in all Southwestern literature. It's the story of Mrs. Rachel Plummer, who lived among the quarrelsome Comanches for eighteen months and eventually earned a place of respect among them, though at the cost of long misery and suffering.

Mrs. Plummer was among the settlers who came to Texas from Illinois in 1833 and established on the banks on the Navasota River a fortress which they called Parker's Fort after their leader, Elder John Parker. And she was present on May 19, 1836, when the fort witnessed an Indian raid which was to become famous in frontier history.

Early that May morning, some five hundred Indians, mostly Comanches and Kiowas, suddenly invaded the settlement. They swept into the fort, murdered five of its inhabitants, and carried another five off into captivity. Mrs. Plummer, together with her son, John, and her better remembered kinswoman, Cynthia Ann Parker, who was then but a girl of 9 years, was among those taken alive.

When the various tribes later parted company, Mrs. Plummer, separated from the other captives, fell to the lot of a Comanche warrior and his squaw, who, during the coming months, taught her all the fabled terrors and rigors of Indian captivity. She was carried into the snow-covered Rocky Mountains of New Mexico and there, with little clothing and frequently no footwear, was required to dress buffalo hides by day and tend horses by night, often while suffering seriously from frostbite. She was despised, abused, and apparently destined to a future of servile futility.

After a year of such service, which she found she could do nothing to escape, she was passed on as personal servant and companion to a brutal old woman, under whom her life was even more miserable than it had been before.

But by this time, however, Mrs. Plummer later told, she was so deep in despair that she quickly resolved no longer to be tormented by the old squaw, who held her in the greatest contempt. So one day, when the old woman began to beat her with a club, she snatched it from her and knocked her down in a rage.

As the incident had passed in full view of a number of Comanche warriors who, typically, were lolling about in the shade and telling tales, the unexpected turn of events brought them all rushing excitedly upon her. Quite naturally, Wilbarger, wrote, "she fully expected to be killed." Instead, however, she met the warm approval of the warriors who, thinking it all a huge joke, patted her gleefully on the back.

And thus, from personal experience, Mrs. Plummer learned the old "stand up for your rights" lesson, and she learned it well. In a short time she was an established favorite in the camp—"The Fighting Squaw," they called her—and remained so until she was ransomed at last, eighteen months after her capture, and returned to her people.

How to become A SKILLED DRIVER

SKILLED DRIVERS NEVER STUNT

Some drivers think skill behind the wheel consists in doing tricks with a car—driving fast, beating lights, gliding through "stop" signs or generally making the rest of the world miserable.

When a skilled driver watches one of these unskilled operators, he feels rather sorry. He sees a wonderful piece of machinery, glorious roads leading to lovely countryside, a driver with good intellect, good arms, good legs, good eyes. And he sees the whole picture marred because the driver never acquired real driving skill.

Some drivers think they're smart when they do tricks with a car. Actually, if a driver doesn't think right, he can't drive right.

"I WANT A DIVORCE"

Based on a story by
ADELA ROGERS ST. JOHNS

Serialized from the Paramount Picture starring
DICK POWELL and JOAN BLONDELL

CHAPTER SIX SYNOPSIS
Allan MacNally, young attorney, marries beautiful Jerry Brooks, who doesn't want her husband to handle divorce cases. When their friend, Jeff Gilman, however, is sued for divorce by a revengeful wife, Jerry lets Allan take the case.

CHAPTER VII
WITH all her disapproval, Jerry still couldn't stay away from the courtroom when Jeff's case came to trial. It was Allan's first case on his own that really brought her there. As she sat down in the back row of benches, her eyes found Allan, busy at the counsel's table. If he is nervous, she thought, you'd never know it. He looked as calm as could be as he watched and listened to the witness testify.

Jerry eyed the witness. She was in her forties, surely. But you would never have known it from the way she was dressed. She was obviously wearing her best—and every bit of it. A hat with flowers, a rather indescribable fur neck piece also flower bedecked, ear-to trip her up. Even the judge acted as though he hadn't heard correctly.

"No questions, Mr. MacNally?" he asked, puzzled. "Please don't take offense at the interference, but I know you are new to this sort of thing, and if you'd care to take a little more time . . . ?"

"Thank you, your Honor," Allan replied, "but I have no questions. I should now like Mr. Gilman to take the stand."

I hope he knows what he's doing, Jerry thought grimly to herself, as Jeff stepped up, and took the oath, looking completely wretched. Allan's questions brought out very little, beyond how he met his wife, their rather hasty marriage, and the fact that her entire family—father, mother, two brothers and a sister, moved in with them right after the wedding. He was on his way with more details when Mac interrupted.

"That will be all, Mr. Gilman," he told Jeff.

"And all this time you've been paying her alimony," Mac asked.

"Twenty-five bucks a month out of my salary, regular, and I've got receipts to prove it," Appleby volunteered.

"Your Honor," Mac addressed the judge. "On the grounds that the Mexican divorce from Mr. Appleby had not been properly substantiated, and because I have reason to believe it never existed, I move that my client, Mr. Jeff Gilman, has never at any time been legally married to the Plaintiff." He paused and then asked that the case be dismissed.

The Judge wasted little time in granting Mac's request, and ordered further that Mrs. Gilman be held for questioning on the grounds of perjury.

On the way out of the courtroom, Jerry realized that the crowd had shoved her smack against the broad, well tailored cask of Erskine Brandon. He was talking to his secretary and she couldn't help hearing what he said.

"Boy," Brandon exclaimed enthusiastically. "He certainly pulled that one right out of the fire. Be sure to remind me to phone him tomorrow. He and I would make a fine team."

So Brandon was still after him! Jerry looked facts very squarely in the face. Their bills were ready to inundate them. They both were so worried that it was getting on their nerves and spoiling their dispositions. They could never spend any money for fun, and it was beginning to tell on them. She wondered whether she had been fair about the whole thing. There were some cases, she rationalized, like this one of Jeff's, that could never have straightened out unless a good lawyer took them over. It would have been a case of rank injustice if Mrs. Gilman had been allowed to get away with what she tried.

After all, she reasoned, what right had she to interfere with Mac's career? Perhaps her whole feeling about divorce had been prejudiced by Wanda's case. Well, Wanda was one girl who should never have gone near a court room, she had to admit. By the time she got home, Jerry was ready to own up to herself that she might have been unfair about extracting the promise from Mac that he would steer clear of divorce cases. She decided to let him have a try at it—say six months—if he still wanted to. Then they could start climbing out of debt, and it would give her a chance to see whether her opinions had been right or wrong.

She ran to Mac's arms as she heard him come in the door, and shouted, "Double congratulations, darling. You were marvelous."

"How do you know, you weren't there, were you?" he asked.

"Do you think I'd let you make your court debut without me within earshot?" she wanted to know.

"Well, thanks, baby, it wasn't such a crime, now was it?" he bantered.

"No, I'm glad you showed that crowd up. Poor old Jeff," she said. "He would have been in a terrible jam if it hadn't been for you."

"What did you mean by double congratulations?" Allan remembered.

"Oh that," she said quietly. "Well someone's going to offer you a swell job tomorrow, I hear, and no matter what I've said in the past you have my permission to take it."

"Well what is the job? What's all the mystery," he demanded.

"You'll see—tomorrow," she replied.

"Mr. Appleby," he started, "did you ever know a Miss Pepp Chickonia?"

rings, bracelets, and a taffeta dress that had more ruffles on it than it had a right to. She was apparently enjoying her session, and making the most of an audience to listen to her alleged woes. Jerry felt like smacking her, when she turned teary eyes on the judge.

"And because I am young and innocent like a little child," she whined, "I listen to him and I marry him. And that, your Honor, is why I ask two hundred dollars a month alimony and two thousand dollars for legal fees," she wound up glibly.

Her lawyer bounced up. "And now, Mrs. Gilman," he prompted her, "will you tell the court why you left your husband and went home to your mother?"

"He filled my heart, that had nothing but love for him, with a great sadness," she replied.

"For instance, what sort of a great sadness?" he asked.

"He slapped me with a big fish," she announced.

Even the judge seemed startled. "A fish—you mean a real fish?" he asked.

"Yes," she nodded. "A halibut." "I turn the witness over to the defense," the lawyer pronounced, triumphantly.

"No questions," Mac said quietly. Jerry was astounded. What on earth was in his mind, she wondered. This witness was any lawyer's meat. She had plainly been given a pat story to tell, and it should have been a cinch to tear it to pieces. Even Jerry had spotted holes in it a mile wide. Yet Mac let her go without even attempting

"But that isn't all," Jeff protested. "That IS all," Allan repeated curtly. "I turn the witness over to the Prosecution."

"No questions," Mrs. Gilman's lawyer announced with a cocksure air.

The judge was gathering up his papers and going over them, Mrs. Gilman was beaming in anticipation, and poor Jeff, Jerry noticed, wore the look of a sick dog. Only Mac seemed unworried. He must be out of his head, was all she could figure. Then there was a bustle in the back of the last row of benches. A husky Marine in uniform had just entered and was striding down the aisle toward the front. He spoke quietly to Jeff and then headed for the witness stand, and took the oath as Mac asked permission to question one more witness, Mr. Appleby.

"Mr. Appleby," he started, "did you ever know a Miss Peppy Chickonia?"

"I certainly did," Appleby replied with feeling.

"Is she here in court?" Mac asked.

"You bet she is. She's right over there," he said, pointing at Jeff's wife.

"You married her, I believe, on or about the eighth of July, 1934," he went on. "And she divorced you in Mexico a year later?"

"That's what she wrote and told me," the witness replied.

"You're sure the divorce was granted in Mexico?" Mac demanded.

"All I know is what she wrote and told me at the time. I have the letter here," he said, fishing for it.

Dear Wardie:

Well sir, don't say I ain't a gal who won't take advantage of a bargain. I'm a goin' to get my bottle caps and yank the boy friend into that there open house jamboree a Wednesday night. I think it ought to be worth that much to watch the Missions play onct more.

I seen where President Ford Frick fined Frankie Frisch 50 bucks for a carryin' a umbreller out to the coachin' box, when the umps wouldn't stop a double-header because of rain and Brooklyn. I think that's a peenalizin' enguinity and a covering up good talent. Still, I guess you can't poke fun at a empire that way. They are fine upstandin' citizens who don't give a dam fer nobody. I think what the world needs most now is more and better league presidents who ain't been in office so long. Confidenshully, they stinks.

I see where Detroit is a goin' around tryin' to peddle the Beaumont franchises to somebody who will make 'em a cash offer and build 'em a ball park to do business in. Nice work if you can do it. Old Man rumor always said they's a sucker borned every minute—and I sometimes think they's two a minute. I wisht somebody'd build me a place to do business in and then raise a fund to insure me against loss. They is a Santy Claus, I guess, but he don't hang around this rancho much.

Well, I never got something fer nothin' that was worth a dern anyway, and I don't believe in it nohow.

I'll be a seein' you Pal, and "Keep 'em Flyin'."

Votes for Monkeys?

A voting machine is easy to operate. Even a monkey can pull a handle. But we wouldn't think of letting a monkey vote. He's simply too stupid, too ignorant, to help govern the country.

Now suppose any citizen lived like a hermit for a few years, cut off from every source of truthful, accurate news.

Suppose all he knew of what was going on in the world consisted of lies and propoganda fed to him only by some self-seeking candidate for office.

He'd still be more INTELLIGENT than a monkey. But would he be much better than a monkey when it came to voting, to being a useful citizen?—Would he be much better EQUIPPED than a monkey, from the point of view of information and judgment, to help govern the country?

Where do you get the information that enables you to vote wisely, to be a useful citizen?—Where do you get the FACTS that enable you to live your daily life as you want to—the facts from which you make up your mind about what products to buy, where to buy them, how much to pay for them?

Make no mistake about it. If any self-seeking office seeker ever took your NEWSPAPER away from you; or forced your newspaper to print lies and propoganda, you'd be mighty HELPLESS when it came to voting, doing your share of governing the country, being a useful citizen. And if anything happened so your newspapers couldn't run advertisements, you'd be mighty IGNORANT about what products to buy, how much to pay for them and the best place to buy them.

But as long as you HAVE your newspaper, as long as it is FREE to give ALL the news, BOTH sides of every story, NO ONE can force you to "hell"—no phony "dictator" can make a monkey out of you!

If your family is one of those fortunate ones that make picnicking a habit you probably have all the needed equipment on hand. If you're a novice, don't worry. Just take a grill from the stove, prop it on stones and make a perfect place to broil steaks over the glowing embers of a picnic fire. Bring along sandwiches, salad ingredients in a bowl, plenty of coffee, and you are all set for fun. If you don't care to cook out of doors a hot dish prepared at home will take the place of steaks or chops broiled on the spot.
