

POTSDAM PARLEY IS ANNOUNCED

WASHINGTON, August 2, (AP).—Creation of a Big Five Council of Foreign Ministers to write the peace treaties of Europe was disclosed today in an official report of the Big Three meeting at Potsdam.

A Technical document of about 6,000 words dealt at length with the European Political problems, including slaps by President Truman, Prime Minister Attlee, and Premier Stalin at Franco's Government in Spain.

But it did not discuss the war against Japan.

All the document said about military matters was in the two final lines: "During conference there were meetings between the Chiefs of Staff of the three governments on military matters of common interests."

The communique indicated a high degree of understanding had been reached by the Chiefs of the Three Greatest powers occupying Germany—Russia, Britain and the United States. Problems covered ranged from statements on political, economic principles, to some broad understanding on the question of reparations.

The Big Three agreed "that in political matters so far as practicable there shall be uniformity of treatment of the German population throughout Germany."

In economic questions, they said "Germany shall be treated as a single economic unit" in all matters of industry, farming, trade, money, transport and communications, and reparations.

German administrative machinery is to be used to the fullest extent in carrying out these objectives, the communique declared, so that "it should be brought home to the German people that responsibility for administration of such controls and any breakdown in these controls will rest with themselves."

Further, the Big Three determined Germany economy shall be rid of cartels, trusts, "and other monopolistic arrangements."

FRATERNIZING IS OUT, DAVE SAYS, F'S & L'S

It was a "bawl" game, and the "press is naturally" on the hefty side, and we just guess the "bean poles'll have to get 'em out a mimeographed sheet, or something. We don't give publicity to our enemies even though they can write letters to the editor, and pay for some space. Incidentally, our fleshy friends have already bought, thank you.

HEADQUARTERS AVOIRDUPOIS SQUADRON (Tancartillery) Gatesville, Texas. 2 August 1945.

General Order No. 812 Green To ALL Fats, both General and Specific:

Pursuant to orders from General Damphat, as of 1 August 1945, at Gatesville, Texas, the Command finds it inadvisable for men of the Avior Dupois Squadron Tancartillery to be caught fraternizing with those "leaners" who we have just overcome in one of the greatest victories in this war by an unmentionable score of—to 4 (four little bingles.)

Please see, Commander Ah, Red McCoy, that this message is passed on to members of your Command, and to all adjacent troops.

By Order of Major General Damphat, MAJ. AWFUL DAMPHAT, Per. The Adjutant, Col. Purty Phat.

It won't be a ball game, because the Fats have'em down 1,000 percent, while they're up, 1,000 percent which makes a grand total of 2,000 percent which leaves the lamenting leans in an awful jam, foxhole, or behind the well known 8-ball.

On the domestic side, Mr. Roosevelt has left much behind that will be recorded on the plus side of history. His cheerful daring during his first six months in office reached a peak of service to the nation which was never equalled by any predecessor in the same length of time. If he had come up for reelection in the fall of 1933, he would probably have carried every county in America. But then came the N. R. A. — unconstitutional and alien to our tradition. From then on, opinions of his greatness began to differ, and will, no doubt, to the end of time. A week after the N. R. A., decision in May 1935, I told him that his casual attitude toward the Constitution and the courts would prove dangerous to his enduring fame.

But nothing will diminish our admiration for his magnificent personal struggle to overcome the handicaps of a great affliction. It will stand for all time as an example of heroic achievement. A rich man conquering disease; a poor boy winning up from poverty — this is America at its best. He left, too, the example of arduous devotion to duty and the memory of a cheerful and gallant spirit when days were dark for millions of his fellows. He met triumph and disaster with equal pace and now sleeps "that sweet sleep which medicines all pain."

It is not unfair, I think, to say that Mr. Roosevelt's political strength has rested, in part, on a false foundation. I refer to charging his popularity to posterity by going into debt every one of the 16 years he was Governor of New York and President of the United States, a record never equalled by any public official in American history. If he had begun, say, in 1935, to keep his promise, many times repeated, to balance the budget by either laying heavier taxes on the people or spending less, one may doubt if the voters would have permitted him to break the third term tradition.

It was money — our money — that made him seem a greater man than a sober administrator of public finance could possibly appear to be. That is a fault of the American people. Many Congressmen have stayed in Washington for twenty years by "voting against every tax bill and for every appropriation."

But the bills remain! And it remains to be seen if his meteoric career has invalidated the words of William Pitt, the Younger, in 1784, "No civilization can be accepted as secure in which expenditure is greater than revenue."

Since the election, I have said to many people that Mr. Truman would not be a bad president, if death called him to that high office. For one thing he has the virtue of modesty. He knows he is not a superman, and for that reason will seek and take advice. He is, it is true, a "machine" politician as Jim Farley was, but machines have centers of gravity — and that may be something of an anchor in stormy seas.

In short, I look forward to a middle-of-the-road handling of events; a blow to the ambitions of the Hillman-Walace-Browder brigade; the gradual re-occupation of the old party mansion by the Democrats who, ejected and dejected, have been living in the smokehouse; a lessening of New York, Atlantic seaboard, and foreign influence in Washington; a stronger position there for the South and West; a partial restoration of the balance of power between Congress and the President. If these things prove true, they will go far to soften the deep domestic conflicts in our midst.

Such is Mr. Truman's great responsibility and opportunity. Let us soon have peace abroad and peace at home.

As the news of the President's passing flashes around the globe in the Armageddon of world wide war it seems that nothing is so appropriate as Shakespeare's words on Duncan.

"In his grave,
"After life's fitful fever he sleeps well:

"Treason has done his worst, nor steel, nor poison,

"Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing,

"Can touch him further."

 F. M.

F. M. — frequency modulation — is one of the great new inventions in radio. Not only because it is almost wholly free from static and reproduces music or the human voice with remarkable fidelity but as a job-maker, it may become one of the household words in postwar America. In the erection of F. M. stations and the manufacture of receiving sets, this new industry can fill thousands of pay-envelopes.

As Dr. Alexanderson of General Electric says: "What the world needs is engineers who can create new industries." As Bill Jeffers of the Union Pacific, whose father was an Irish immigrant who drove spikes on his son's great railroad, said: "In tiny shops everywhere in America there are new Henry Fords — new Walter Chryslers. Find them."

We must keep the doors of opportunity open forever in a free America.

One of the penalties of a planned economy is that vested interests gradually entwine themselves around government bureaus and thus obtain influence to protect the old against the new. In a free America whale oil was made obsolete by kerosene; kerosene by gas lights; gas lights by Tom Edison. It was hard on the whaling industry to pay the price of progress, tough on the gas light manufacturers, but civilization marched on.

So must it be. The truly big men in industry — men like Kettering — keep the doors open to the new.

The thing about F. M. that particularly interests me is the contribution it can make to free speech, to the right of the people to hear all sides of all questions.

Conventional radio broadcasting, known in the trade as A. M., (amplitude modulation) has done much for the communication of ideas and will do more. But to prevent traffic jams on the ether, it is necessarily limited to about 900 channels. Moreover, the cost of building and servicing A. M. stations is very great.

F. M. can supply from 200 to 5000 additional outlets to the air. The cost of construction and operation is but a fraction of that of A. M. stations.

F. M. with its limited range serves the local community. A. M. chains cover the nation. There is plenty of room for both. F. M. is to A. M. as the home town paper is to magazines of national circulation.

Due to the limited number of channels available to A. M., many people and organizations feel that they are shut off the air. Here is a way for churches, the smaller newspapers, schools, labor unions, farm organizations, candidates for public office, and every other legitimate group in the country to talk to the people.

With 2000 to 5000 additional F.M. stations, with a greatly diversified ownership, radio itself would be freed, in large degree, from the suspicion held by many people, that it is falling under the domination of government. Nothing would be better for radio than to lift this cloud, and few things better for America. A free America depends on free speech, free assembly, a free press — and a free radio.

Senator B. K. Wheeler, chairman of the Senate Committee that deals with radio, has said: "It means that the great majority of radio programs originate in two or three cities in the United States; it means that the social, political, moral, economic, and philosophic concepts of two or three metropolitan areas crowd the radio spectrum to the exclusion of all else; . . . It means that the most skillful manipulators of ideas feed into American homes the kind of propaganda they themselves want the public to hear."

Either we believe in democracy or we do not. Democracy depends upon the unfettered exchange of ideas. Dictatorship depends on the suppression of ideas. It is the way Hitler became a menace to

THE Army Answers

Your Personal War Problems

Your questions on allotments, insurance, legal problems or other matters as they relate to Army personnel and their dependents will be answered in this column or by letter. Write Headquarters Eighth Service Command, Dallas 2, Texas.

Q. Where can I find out when my husband's regiment will arrive from Europe, so I can be at the port to meet him?

A. The Army is asking relatives and friends of returning soldiers NOT to attempt to meet them at ports of debarkation for these reasons: There is no way of communicating with returnees at ports and staging areas, which are restricted and closed to the public; housing and transportation facilities are overcrowded; the men are usually on their way to reception stations nearest their homes within 48 hours; interference with processing the returnees lengthens the time before they can be furloughed.

Q. I am to be discharged from the Army about the middle of August. Will my monthly family allowance go to my dependents, or to me, and will the full amount be paid?

A. A check for your family allowance will be mailed to your dependents in September to cover the period of your August service.

The check will be in full for one month, even though your service in August will cover only part of a month.

Q. When a serviceman marries and has his insurance changed to his wife, will she receive a statement showing that the change has been made?

A. No. The record of change will be made by the Veterans Administration, but the new beneficiary will not be informed.

Q. My husband is 39 and stationed with the Army in this country. Can he be sent overseas?

A. If your husband has reached his 39th birthday and will be eligible for discharge when he is 40, he will not be shipped overseas unless he volunteers.

North Camp Hood

One of the most written about and most wounded soldiers is now stationed at Camp Hood, Texas.

He is Lt. John T. Degman of Piedmont, Wyoming and Fresno, California. Fresno, he says, is his adopted home. He is now assigned to the Weapons Department, Tank Destroyer School.

Lt. Degman was with the 701st Tank Destroyer Battalion of the 1st Armored Division at Tunisia and Italy. It was his company which was awarded the French Croix de Guerre with palms, with a citation from General Alphonse Juin, then a commander of Free French troops, for capturing Gafsa, Sbeitla and sweeping behind the Germans at Faid Pass to seize that important terrain feature. This same company had a book entitled "The Road to Tunis" dedicated to them.

Lieutenant Degman was a brave man in a brave outfit.

His mother died when he was born in Bakersfield, California. His father died when he was in his early teens and so he went to live in Wyoming. He joined the army in 1941 after two years of pre-legal work at the University of Wyoming. He went overseas in December, 1942 as platoon leader in his outfit.

The first mystery which surrounds this 24 year old "screendoor" is how he managed to get into the service with his weak heart. The second created his nickname "screendoor" because he is so full of holes. He received his first wound in the face from a machine gun burst near El Guettar in Tunisia. The second was at San Vittore below Cassino. When he was evacuated to Naples the doctor checked his heart and had him reclassified to "permanent limited service." But he walked out of the hospital and returned to his outfit. When they started looking for him he was too far into the battle lines to return. So, the reclassification depot left him with the 701st.

He treats his other wounds with indifference by saying "Oh, they aren't important. I didn't go into the hospital when I could avoid it."

He laconically describes the fight in Italy. "It was a red hot fight all the way and in the red hot months."

At present he is trying to get into the Pacific field of operations. "My heart seems to thrive on action," he said.

More Power to the Farmer

Producer of Food for Victory

One reason for America's record wartime food production is the extensive use of labor-saving electricity on the farm.

As its part in providing more power for food production, this company has greatly expanded its facilities for serving farms and residents of rural communities throughout the war.

Since Pearl Harbor, over 3,000 new rural customers have been added to our lines. Numerous additional extensions to serve rural users within practical reach of existing lines in our territory have been surveyed and are scheduled for completion as rapidly as manpower and materials shortages will permit.

Today, one customer of every five we serve is a rural customer and the percentage is growing steadily. On the farm, as in business and industry, C. P. S. Co. power is working for Victory.
