Coahoma to hold city-wide garage sale Saturday

By THOMAS JENKINS

Staff Writer

Area bargain hunters will want to head for Coahoma this weekend, as residents of the small community get ready for the annual Community-wide Garage Sale.

Buddy Anderson, organizer for the event, said Coahoma residents will be hocking all kinds of wares during the sale, which begins Saturday morning at 8 a.m.

"There will be all kinds of different items, from furniture to knickknacks," said Anderson. "There will even be some people selling food items, like breakfast burritos and dinners. You never really know what people are going to come up with for this."

Anderson said the annual com-

"We'll give them orange cones w i d e like you might see at a construce v e n t tion site - to set out in front of their home or business so people become a will know they are part of the tradition sale," said Anderson. "The sale will get started at about 8 a.m. Saturday, and continue to whatever time the individual sales want to go until. Some of them will wrap it up Saturday, and some of them will continue through Sunday morning. It's just up to the individual."

Anderson said approximately 20 residents and businesses have already signed up for the annual Stargazing this weekend at park

By THOMAS JENKINS

Staff Writer

Much like Galileo did more than 400 years ago, area residents will get a chance to explore the heavens Saturday during the annual Stargazing event at the Big Spring State Slated for 8:30 p.m. until 11:30 p.m. near the park office at the top of Scenic Mountain, the program will offer something for everyone in the family, according to the state park.

"It's a great time for families to spend some quality time together," said Salazar. "It doesn't matter how old you are, seeing the stars and the different heavenly bodies through a telescope is just amazing.'

Salazar said several planets should be in view during the stargazing program.

"There are going to be some really spectacular plan-

OUR VIEWS

We salute:

Each week, the Herald salutes individuals and groups from our community and area who have been recognized for special achievements or accomplishments.

We recognize these special people for working to help make our region a better place to live, work and play

This week we salute:

- To all of those who helped organize Memorial Day observations at various locations in the Crossroads area, and — more especially — to the men and women who made the ultimate sacrifice so that our country could remain free.
- The Coahoma Bulldogettes, on making a record eighth appearance at the state softball tournament in Austin.
- The Big Spring High School band members, who are leaving this weekend for New York City where they will play at Carnegie
- Loyce Phillips, who received the educator award, and KBST, which received a media award from Keep Texas Beautiful.
- The many school board trustees and council members who were sworn in recently after the May elections. Thank you for serving your communities.
- Brenda White and Rhonda Rothell, who are retiring from the Forsan school district with 30 years and 31 years, respectively, in education.

Is there an individual or organization in our community that you feel should be saluted? If so, please send us their name and why you think they should be recognized. We must have your name and telephone number and you must provide it in writing.

A SMALL PRAYER

by K. Rae Anderson

May we let go of our earthly point of view, Lord, and develop a heavenly point of view.

Congress crying wolf on powers flap or a long time, Democrats have been picking on President Bush — "King George" — for "consolidating executive authority" and usurping legislative authority, not to mention tons of other things. But he does himself no favors by ordering that documents seized from Rep. William Jefferson's office be sealed for 45 days.

Jefferson is the subject of a federal investigation into whether he accepted a bribe from two people who have already entered guilty pleas to promote a hightech business venture. Authorities say they have a videotape of Jefferson receiving a $100,000 bribe and that they found $90,000 in cash in a freezer at his Washington D.C. apartment. Last Saturday night, the FBI, with a duly executed search warrant in hand, entered and searched Jefferson's Capitol Hill office and seized a number of his documents. Members of both parties of Congress expressed outrage at what they claim is an egregious violation of the separation of powers doctrine.

The FBI, of course, is part of the executive branch. The congressmen's objection is that for an agency of the executive branch to raid the office of a member of the legislative branch, constitutes a dangerous executive encroachment on the legislature. They say this is the first search of a congressman's Capitol office in the more than two centuries since the first Congress convened.

House Speaker Dennis Hastert and House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi issued a nearly unprecedented joint statement condemning the FBI raid and demanding that the FBI return the documents.

With all due respect, these claims are preposterous, and I don't believe President Bush should have intervened, even if just to provide a cooling-off period. There are principles worth vindicating here, and compromise for the sake of short-term harmony can sometimes damage those principles.

While congressmen can loftily assert that the separation of powers principle is at play here, I disagree. To argue that the separation of powers doctrine grants immunity from official search and seizure to members of the legislative branch is a slap in the face to another lofty and indispensable concept: the rule of law.

The Constitution establishes a government of laws, not men; and no men, including government officials, are above the law. While legislators are bellyaching about the excessive authority of the executive branch, they are, in essence, arguing for excessive authority and privilege for members of their branch. We have no kings. We have no royalty among legislators. If they are suspected of violating the law, the executive branch has an obligation to investigate and to employ its full powers in doing so — including that of reasonable searches of their offices and seizures of their relevant effects.

The separation of powers doctrine delineates governmental functions and distributes them among three branches. But these branches do not have coequal power over all functions — such as law enforcement, which is the prerogative of the executive branch. It pits the branches against each other through a checks and balances scheme designed to prevent any branch from becoming too powerful at the expense of our liberties.

To argue that individual congressmen are not subject to search and seizure by agencies of the executive branch because that would give the executive branch undue power is preposterous. Who else is supposed to conduct such searches? The judiciary, by the way, was involved here, as well, in approving the warrant. Are law enforcement authorities supposed to give advance warning to suspected criminal congressmen to allow them to cover their tracks? This is too ridiculous for words.

When congressmen speciously invoke the separation of powers doctrine to shield their own members from law enforcement, they do damage to the doctrine by diluting and misapplying it. And through their arrogance in attempting to elevate themselves above the reach of law, they make a mockery of the lofty principles they purport to serve.

The separation of powers does not create a firewall between the branches. They interact all the time. Remember the Supreme Court ordering President Nixon to turn over the tapes? And Congress, if it so chooses, can restrict the jurisdiction of federal appellate courts. To suggest that every time one branch takes action that affects another branch violates the separation of powers principle is an insult to that principle. These congressmen need to remember that they are the representatives of the people, not our privileged masters. It is disappointing that, in this case, otherwise good men are sending a contrary message.

Washington, 20510 Political reform not rocket science

Houston jury convicted both Ken Lay and Jeff Skilling, despite the fact that Kenny Boy packed his Bible to the courtroom every day.

Since it is a long and noble Texas tradition for the accused to fight all allegations by finding Jesus, this indicates a major degree of guilt. (While on trial for murder, T. Cullen Davis, the Fort Worth millionaire. not only found Jesus but also threw a big party to celebrate at the mansion, with piles of shrimp and BBQ and a soundtrack that announced over and over throughout the grounds that night, The son of Stinky Davis has found the son of God.") Meanwhile, Houston reacted as though the Rockets had won the NBA championship.

Many a thoughtful analyst has given us to understand that Lay and Skilling are guilty of arrogance and hubris. Actually, they were convicted of fraud - massive, overwhelming and monstrous fraud. They also stole money and looted pension funds. They rigged energy markets and almost drove California (seventh-largest economy in the world) into bankruptcy.

And all along the way, this monstrous fraud was connected to government. Enron bought the politicians who bent the rules that let them steal, con and gyp. Lay and Skilling talked state after state into following the California model and deregulating electricity. Happy summer, everyone.

And then, of course, there was the thumbing-the-nose thievery, the offshore partnerships tricked out with the clever names so insiders would know how slick they were.

As the late Rep. Wright Patman Sr. observed: "Many of our wealthiest and most powerful citizens are very greedy. This fact has many times been demonstrated."

The interesting thing about Lay and Skilling is they weren't trying to evade the rules, they were rigging the rules in their favor. The fix was in — much of it law passed by former Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, whose wife, Wendy, served on the board of Enron.

Where does that sense of entitlement come from? What makes a Ken Lay think he can call the governor of Texas and ask him to soften up Gov. Tom Ridge of Pennsylvania on electricity deregulation? Not that being governor of Texas has ever been an office of much majesty, but a corporate robber wouldn't think of doing that if it were Brian Schweitzer of Montana or Bill Richardson of New Mexico.

The extent to which not just state legislatures but the Congress of the United States are now run by large corporate special interests is beyond mere recognition as fact. The takeover is complete. Newt Gingrich and Tom DeLay put in place a system in which it's not a question of letting the head of the camel into the tent - the camels run the place.

It has all happened quite quickly in less than 20 years. Laws were changed and regulations repealed until an Enron can set sail without responsibility, supervision or accountability. The business pages are fond of trumpeting the merits of "transparency" and "accountability," but you will notice whenever there is a chance to roll back any of New Deal regs, the corporations go for broke trying to get rid of them entirely.

I'm not attempting to make this a partisan deal — only 73 percent of Enron's political donations went to Republicans. But I'll be damned if Enron's No. 1 show pony politician, George W. Bush, should be allowed to walk away from this. Ken Lay gave $139,500 to Bush over the years. He chipped in $100,000 to the Bush Cheney Inaugural Fund in 2000 and $10K to the Bush-Cheney Recount Fund. Plus, Enron's PAC gave Bush $113,800 for his '94 and '98 political races and another $312,500 from its executives. Bush got 14 free rides on Enron's corporate jets during the 2000 campaign, including at least two during the recount. Until January 2004, Enron was Bush's top contributor.

And what did it get for its money? Ken Lay was on Bush's short list to be energy secretary. He not only almost certainly served on Cheney's energy task force, there is every indication that the task force's energy plan, the one we have been on for five years, is in fact the Enron plan. Lay used Bush as an errand boy, calling the governor of Texas and having him phone Tom Ridge of Pennsylvania to vouch for what swell energy deregulation bills Enron was sponsoring in states all over the country.

It seems to me we all understand this is a systemic problem.

We need to reform the political system, or we'll lose the democracy. I don't think it's that hard. It doesn't take rocket science. We've done it before successfully at the presidential level and tried it several places at the state level. Public campaign financing isn't perfect and can doubtlessly be improved upon as we go. Let us begin.

Doctors finish first surgery for mauled boy HOUSTON (AP) — The first surgery in what could be a 10-year process to reconstruct the face of a 4-year-old Kenyan boy who was mauled by dogs appeared to have been successful, a hospital spokeswoman said. Doctors completed the 11 1/2-hour surgery on Daniel

Wachira late Thursday night without encountering any unexpected issues, said Sherri Green, a spokeswoman for Children's Memorial Hermann Hospital. "It couldn't have gone better," said Larry Jones, who with his wife, Frances, is Daniel's legal guardian. "We're both extremely thrilled and thankful." Daniel had been abandoned at birth and left on a trash heap in Nairobi, where dogs nearly mauled him to death before a passer-by spotted the child and took him to a hospital.

The Joneses, of Oklahoma City, learned about Daniel through the Christian relief organization Feed the Children, which they founded in 1979. The organization runs a Nairobi orphanage where the disfigured boy was taken when he was eight months old.

Final soldier charged in abuse case acquitted

FORT BLISS (AP) — The last of 15 soldiers accused in an Afghanistan prisoner abuse case was acquitted Thursday.

An Army jury of four officers and five enlisted soldiers took about 30 minutes to acquit Pfc. Damien M. Corsetti of charges of dereliction of duty, maltreatment, assault, wrongful use of hashish and alcohol, and performing an indecent act with another person.

Army prosecutors had alleged that Corsetti, a counter intelligence soldier with the 519th Military Intelligence Battalion at Fort Bragg, N.C., hit, kicked, sat on and threatened to sexually assault three detainees, including a former top al-Qaida operative in Southeast Asia and the brother-in-law of a Sept. 11 hijacker, at an American detention facility at Bagram Air Field in 2002 and 2003. He was also accused of exposing himself to a detainee.

Corsetti denied any wrongdoing. Following Thursday's swift verdict, he said he was grateful.

Perry Bass of wealthy Fort Worth family dies

FORT WORTH (AP) — Perry Richardson Bass, who turned a small fortune from his oil wildcatter uncle Sid Richardson into a bigger fortune with a series of smart investments and then became a prominent philanthropist, died Thursday at age 91.

The family issued a statement saying that Bass died peacefully at home after a lifetime of "remarkable accomplishment and joy.

Forbes magazine estimated Bass' net worth at $1 billion last year and ranked him No. 746 on its list of wealthiest Americans.

Like other family members, Bass did not court publicity. A spokesman for the family said recently that they had a policy of declining to discuss their investments or their history in the energy industry.

Bass was one of the last remaining links to a colorful era in Texas history, when wildcatters struck it rich in what were then some of the world's great oil fields.

Constable finds child in abandoned building

TYLER (AP) — A 7-year-old boy discovered by a Smith County constable in an abandoned building filled with trash was placed in the care of state Child Protective Services Thursday as authorities looked for the boy's parents.

Constable Frank Creath said the boy told deputies that he lived in the building. Creath said he and his deputies had gone to the office building to serve a writ of possession after the tenants failed to pay their rent.

They found the boy walking around with his dog. "When we entered the building, the smell was horrible. We noticed the commode was backed up with waste spilling out all over the place," he said in a story for Friday's Tyler Morning Telegraph. "There was standing water, rotten food and trash, and this little boy has been living here."

Paul Brinkman, who owns a business across the street, said he thought the family had lived there about six months. He said the boy sometimes came to his door just to talk.

"He was always wanting to talk to me and you could tell he was starving for attention," he said.

7 found fatally shot in Indianapolis home

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Seven family members, including three children, were shot to death in their home on the city's east side, and police said Friday they were seeking two suspects.

The children, ages 5, 8 and 11, were found in a bed late Thursday, while the adults were found throughout the home, police said.

Indianapolis Police Chief Michael Spears said authorities were seeking Desmond Turner, 28, of Indianapolis, for questioning. Another suspect who was not identified also was being sought.

Deputy Chief Tim Foley said Turner had a history of arrests on charges including assault with bodily fluids and had served more than a year for a gun violation.

Police identified the adult victims as Emma Valdez, 46; her husband, Alberto Covarrubias, 56; Flora Alderran, 22, Valdez' daughter; and Magno Aldarran, 29, Flora's husband.

The children were identified as Luis Aldarran, 5, Flora Alderran's son; and Alberto Covarrubias, 11, and David Covarrubias, 8 or 9.

Officers were called to the home in a residential neighborhood near the Indiana Women's Prison about 10 p.m. when someone reported shots being fired. Officers arrived to find a young woman screaming that her mother had been shot, police Sgt. Steve Staletovich

Al-Zargawi urges Sunnis to oppose Shiites

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The leader of al-Qaida in Iraq urged Sunnis to confront Shiites and ignore calls for reconciliation in a new audiotape posted Friday on the Web, saying Shiite militias are killing and raping the Sunni Arab minority.

The tape was a four-hour sermon by Abu Musab al-Zarqawi against Shiites, denouncing their top cleric, Grand Ayatollah Ali al-Sistani as an "atheist," and saying the community had collaborated with invaders throughout Iraq's history.

"Oh Sunni people, wake up, pay attention and prepare to confront the poisons of the Shiite snakes who are afflicting you with all agonies since the invasion of Iraq until our day. Forget about those advocating the end of sectarianism and calling for national unity," al-Zarqawi said.

Dr. Sam and Sandie Bruce to share testimony Bruce Ministries appearing locally

First Church of God

Dr. Sam and Sandie Bruce will share their story of Sandie's remarkable recovery from a near-vegetative state after the removal of an orangesize brain tumor in 1999.

The concert is at 10:45 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. Sunday at the First Church of God, 2009 Main Street.

Sandie's neuro-surgeon, neuro-opthalmologist and neurologist all call her "the miracle lady," saying, "We have no statistics of any patient progressing the way she has. She has broken all records!"

Sam and Sandie's concert, "God's Help in the Dark Night of Life," is designed to encourage those going through difficult days. Dr. Sam, former college president and pastor, gives God and the prayers of their friends and family all the credit for Sandie's phenomenal recovery. IT'S GOOD FOR YOUR GAME

Super-size your driver game

By T.J. TOMASI Universal Press Syndicate

Length and club-head size are the dynamic duo that result in longer drives off the tee with an oversized driver. A longer club swings the club head on a larger arc, and this translates into greater swing speed at impact, adding yardage to your tee ball. A larger head gives you the expanded hitting surface and more-forgiving sweet spot necessary for solid contact.

You'll need to make some adjustments in your setup with an oversized driver. To accommodate the increased length of the club shaft, create an upright spine angle by standing taller at address. Also widen your stance an inch or two, and make sure that your weight is distributed from the balls of your feet back through your heels.

Just knowing that you have a "bomber" in your hand can cause you to increase your grip pressure, so pay special attention to keeping your grip on the club light and feathery.

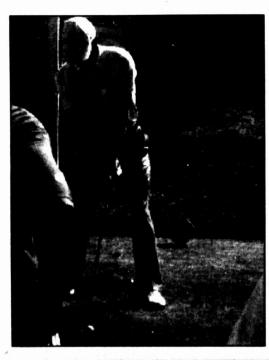

It's also a good idea to relax your arms, making sure that they hang naturally from your shoulders as you bend from your hips to the ball. And your ball should be positioned off the tip of your front shoulder to encourage making contact on the upswing.

While your driver may be oversized, your swing should not be. Because hitting the ball squarely is so important to distance (contacting the ball one-fourth inch off the center of your club face can cost you 14 percent of your total distance), it is vital to maintain your swing tempo.

The key to swinging the oversized driver is to let the added length and big head produce the extra distance without any extra effort or conscious manipulation on your part while the club is in motion.

Above: Darren Clarke has added 25 yards to his drives by going to an oversized club. Note here that he is using a more upright spine angle to encourage a shallow swing. Below: The old prescription was to tee the ball so the top of the driver bisected the middle of the ball. But with the new deep-faced drivers, the hot spot is much higher on the face, making it best to tee the ball so the top edge of the driver lines up with the bottom of the ball, as tour star Charles Howell has done here.

Golf Insider

Jack Nicklaus said he has only played about nine rounds of golf over the past year.

Playing the happy host

Nicklaus talks about his retirement, the Memorial and the Muirfield sand

By ALAN TAYS Cox News Service

Publin, Ohio

e showed up for his interview in a shirt and tie, appropriate attire now that

Jack Nicklaus, for the first time, is not playing in his own

Memorial Tournament.

That doesn't mean he's through playing here, though.

"I thought about playing this year," Nicklaus, 66, said Tuesday at his Muirfield Village Golf Club. "I may come back next year or the year after."

His game right now is not suitable for public viewing, he halfjoked.

"Have you seen me play lately?" he said. Asked if it would teel "weird" not to play in the Memorial for the first time since 1976, he said: "I won't feel weird at all. It will be a pleasure not to play."

Last Saturday he played the course from the back tees "and I cruised around here with 77, just easy as can be."

Nicklaus continues to serve as the tournament's "host," but not in the manner he'd prefer.

"To me to be a host, I'd need to play a practice round or two, be part of the guys. Play a couple of rounds — if I happen to make the cut, I'd make the cut.

"I'm not sure I could walk 18 holes every day," he said. "I played three times a week ago, which was my seventh, eighth and ninth time since the (2005) British Open.

"Darned near killed me."
Whether Nicklaus ever plays in another Memorial is immaterial to Jim Furyk, who treasures his memory of winning here in 2002 and being presented the trophy by Nicklaus.

"I'll always remember that," Furyk said, "and whether he tees it up in the golf tournament or not, the fact that he's here and he takes pride in this place is plenty"

Nicklaus hasn't played a competitive round since last year's British Open. He was surprised to get blisters "on every toe" during his round last Saturday.

"Once you can't play, and once you feel like physically you just can't do it, and then you get away from it and all of a sudden you try to play a little bit, and you say 'Wow, this is an ordeal.'"

The North Palm Beach, Fla., resident said he's enjoying retirement, though: "I'm enjoying my work. I'm absolutely loving what I'm doing. I'm traveling twice as much as I ever traveled."

He also has kept an eye on the Muirfield Village course, which has been stretched only 144 yards — to 7,337 — since 2000.

"I could add distance a lot of places," Nicklaus said. "I have places I could add 20, 30 yards. But I don't want to add it on a hole that I think is really neat the way it is. ... Length is not an issue. It's how the course plays is my issue."

One of the few changes made was to the par-4 first hole, where the tee was moved back 21 yards to bring fairway bunkers back into play.

"There will still be guys that knock it over (the bunkers)," Nicklaus said. "I think it's 290 (yards to carry)." Another change was made because of the way the course looks. Nicklaus didn't like the checkerboard pattern the mowers were making in the fairways.

"It's pretty, but it doesn't look like a golf course," he said.

Nicklaus wanted the fairways mowed in one direction, and he didn't want it to be toward the tees, a practice used courses play longer.

"I like my golf course fast," he said, "and I felt like it's a much nicer lie to play with the grass lying down toward the hole. The fairways will play faster, so the holls can run farther.

balls can run farther.

The most talked-about change to Muirfield Village is in the bunkers, where rakes had every other tooth removed so they would create furrows in the bunkers, similar to what Oakmont had until 1963.

"Now, all the bunkers are so perfect, there's no penalty anymore," Nicklaus said. "Bunkers are really supposed to be a penal-

Nicklaus said Memorial officials were told by the PGA Tour that it had informed players "the honeymoon is over; the bunkers are going to be a penalty" and got the OK to furrow their bunkers.

THE GOLF DOCTOR

How to control your driver

Here's a great way to learn the relationship between length, squareness of contact and overall distance when using your driver. Start by moving your hands down on the grip until your trailing hand is almost touching the shaft. Hit several balls and then slide your hands up on the grip about 1 inch. Do this progressively, hitting several balls in each position, until you reach your normal hand po-

You can also use this technique on the golf course. On holes where you need accuracy, choke down; on holes where you need distance, slide your hands back up on the grip. On days when you don't have your "A" swing, choke down; on days when you're into form, go for maximum length.

ASK THE PRO

Q: My son loves golf (he's 14), but he gets so depressed when he doesn't hit the ball well. Is there anything I can do to build him up? I want him to play golf and go to college on a golf scholarship, but he won't make it if it affects him like that. — Bill, from Palm City, Fla.

A: It's essential that your junior doesn't relate failure at golf to his (or her) self-esteem or self-worth. You have to explain to the young man that how good he is as a person should not be linked to how well he strikes a golf ball.

In team sports, failure is spread more evenly, allowing some respite to the failure-sensitive psyche. But in golf, there are opportunities to fail as an individual on every shot. If a child thinks these failures make him or her worth less as a person, then the game of golf becomes agony, and it won't be long before he or she quits.

If you, as a parent, show disappoint

If you, as a parent, show disappointment or anger when he fails, it puts too much pressure on him to succeed every time he tees it up. This removes all fun from the game. Golf should be enjoyed because of the nature of the game, rather than used as an instrument to acquire something else, such as a scholarship to college.

I think you need to get your priorities straight and then have a talk with your son. Tell him that you love him no matter what he shoots or whether he goes to col-

And please remember that talk is cheap. Follow up the words with a change in your behavior so he'll think to himself, "You know, Dad really is sincere when he says that I should enjoy golf as a game and not look at it as a means to some other end."

Cain inks scholarship offer from Western Texas

Big Spring High School senior Chance Cain, front row center, signs a scholarship to attend and play golf at Western Texas College Thursday morning. Flanking Chance are his parents, Tim and Mary Cain. Also shown is BSHS Golf Coach Steve Ward.

By STEVE REAGAN

Staff Writer

For quite some time, probably since he began pestering his parents to teach him the game, Chance Cain has wanted to play golf.

Now, he's taking that dream to a higher level.

Cain, a three-time all-district golfer for the Big Spring High School Steers, signed a scholarship to attend and play golf at Western Texas College in Snyder during a brief ceremony in the BSHS Athletic Training Center Thursday morning.

Flanked by parents Tim and Mary Cain, Chance signed the paperwork to play golf for WTC coach Randy Weaver for the next two years.

His high school coach, for one, said Cain is ready to take the next step in his golfing career.

"He's got the game to play at the next level," said Steve Ward, See CAIN, Page 12 who himself is leaving BSHS to coach at Class 5A Granbury next season. "I know he will continue to work hard ... on certain shots and parts of his game to make him a better player than he already is.

"I'm really pleased for Chance," Ward continued. "He's worked very hard at this for four years, and that hard work is paying off."

Cain has played golf competitively for only five years, but in that time, he has developed an impressive resume — he was an all-district golfer the past three years and was named to the allregion squad this season.

He credits simple determination as the reason behind his success this year.

"I was just determined that I wasn't going to fail like I did last year (when he failed to qualify for the regional tournament)," he

Coahoma's dream dashed

Lady Jackets again sting Bulldogettes

AUSTIN — Much like the rain, top-ranked Elysian Fields came down hard on Coahoma in the state semifinals at Red and Charlene McCombs Field in Austin Thursday.

The Lady Jackets grabbed an early advantage, scoring five runs in the first three innings, and sent Coahoma home early from the Class 2A state tournament, taking down the Bulldogettes, 7-

"I wanted to taste the gold this time around, but I am not tired of coming down here and playing, said Coahoma head coach Robby Dickenson. "No one really goes home from the state tournament as a loser."

Both teams battled an early rain delay and heavy rains for about two innings, but the Lady Jackets' bats stung the Bulldogettes early on with five quick runs.

"The weather didn't help us," said Dickenson. "It affected Kali because the ball was slick coming out of her glove. That wasn't all that put us in a hole early though."

Coahoma came Austin for a state-record eighth time, but left still in possession of just one state title. Elysian Fields has been to the state tournament twice. The Lady Jackets took advantage of three early errors against Coahoma last year in a 4-2 win on their way to the title and could take home the crown again with a win in Saturday morning's Class 2A title game. Errors did not cost

Coahoma the game this year, but the Bulldogettes finished with four miscues in the game.

Coahoma's Sarah Dunn fields the ball before making a throw to first during the Bulldogettes' Class 2A state semifinal game with top-ranked Elysian Fields Thursday. The No. 6-ranked Bulldogettes suffered a 7-1 loss at the hands of the Lady Jackets.

"We just made too many mistakes and Elysian Fields too many bases," said Dickenson. "The hits it got weren't hard hits at DALLAS - Coming off his worst game in months, Dirk Nowitzki wanted to get off to a strong start in Game 5 of the Western Conference finals. So the first two times the Dallas Mavericks had the ball, he took it straight to the basket.

And he missed them both. Yet Nowitzki wasn't about to be denied — not after getting chewed out by his coach, and tremendous season was slipping

Nowitzki set a franchise playoff record with 50 points, scoring 15 in a row during a fourth-quarter surge that turned a tight game into a rout, sending the Mavericks past the Phoenix Suns 117-101 and putting them within a victory of reaching the NBA Finals for the first time in their Coahoma's lone run in the first inning was scored by freshman Berkley Iden. She pinch ran for catcher Janice Gonzales, who reached on a walk, and then scored on an RBI double by Roberts. Hickey struck out the side in the inning and added three strikeouts in the sixth inning.

The Bulldogettes had their chances in the game though. Coahoma went down in order in the third, but the first three batters in the fourth Roberts and seniors Sarah Dunn and Ashle all reached base New with walks. The Bulldogettes failed to score, however. Hickey freshman got Sterling swinging and then freshman Shelbi Paige popped into a double play. New was caught too far off the bag at first for the final out.

"We were right there at that point, but we couldn't get it done at the plate and score some runs,' said Dickenson.

Junior Ami Martinez and Gonzales both singled in the fifth. Coahoma failed to score again, however, as Roberts ended the threat with a pop out.

"We just didn't get the hits when we had people on base," said Dickenson. "That has been our problem all year and it continued today.'

Elysian Fields added two more runs in the sixth inning as it got three hits at the plate. Hickey reached on a field-

1. Three diamonds, Many of the hard-and-fast principles that govern responses to an opening bid do not apply after a player has passed originally. Thus, while a two-club response to one diamond would be unconditionally forcing without a previous pass, the same response would not be forcing here after your mitial pass. The reason is obvious. The opener is frequently in a position to judge that game is virtually impossible once partner has passed. Usually, it takes the equivalent of two opening bids to make a game, so if opener has minimal values, he might elect to pass what would normally be regarded as a forcing bid by an unpassed hand. The recommended jump to three diamonds shows good trump support and values just short of an opening bid. It urges but does not command partner to bid again. 2. Two clubs. There is some temptation to respond three clubs to show your near-opening-bid values, but it is better to proceed slowly in hands where a trump fit is not yet established. Two clubs shows at least 10 passed hand or not - and points is therefore a constructive response.

3. Two notrump. Ordinarily, two notrump would promise a balanced hand of 13 to 15 points and be forcing to game, but after an initial pass, the range is 11 or 12. Opener is thus free to pass whenever his hand indicates that that would be the right

4. Two hearts. Most hands change in value as the bidding progresses. Not many players would regard this hand as worth an opening bid, bu once partner opens with a diamond, the hand increases greatly in value and assumes the stature of an open-

The best way of describing such values is by a jump-shift, indicating a strong suit and implying a fit for opener's suit. Partner is thus warned that if he passes two hearts - which he may do in an extremely rare case

The Mavericks went from leading 89-88 to having a 104-93 cushion with 4:59 left. Although Dallas blew a late nine-point lead in the opener, this one held up easily, especially with Nowitzki continuing to throw in baskets.

He reached 50 with a 3pointer he was so sure was going to fall that he was nearly at halfcourt celebrating when it did. He left to a big ovation with 1:12 left.

"The last game, I never rely found my rhythm," Nowitzki said. "Today, I just wanted to be aggressive, no matter what happens."

19). Since you're fast approaching something you want, it's time to imagine past it. While your body needs air. water and food, your soul needs a vision. Something compelling to look forward to is your soul's life "blood."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). The person who is smiling at you is not doing so because he or she is merely friendly. The stars highlight what is so interesting about you. People you meet want to know more.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). End relationships that are going nowhere. Make room for something better, and new options appear immediately. It's notable: A Taurus is solid and will be very loyal to CANCER (June 22-July 22). Plot your own course. You're so independent

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Your creativity reaches new heights, even though you're the only one who knows it. Celebrate a job well done. (This might be a party for one, and all the better for you.)

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Your brisk and deliberate action earns the respect of someone whois hard to win over. (That person might be you.) Also, if you dare to let young ones do their own thing, they make you proud.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). When in doubt, hire a professional, preferably with the proper credentials. The planets suggest that there're trustworthy souls all around you, and you'll effortlessly attract the right one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Though you hate to admit it, you're human, and you need love. So relax your critical mind let your Scorpio stinger rest. The quickest way to get the love you need is to allow yourself to give without judgment. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). By holding on too tightly to a deal, you could lose it. Notice all your options, not only the one in your hand. This will bolster your confidence, boost finances and pump up your attraction quotient. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). The omens suggest you turn up your powers of discernment.

truth will catch up.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You feel you're waiting. You're not, because the anticipation of the event IS the event. The metaphorical line you're standing on is not a "line" at all, but a circle. The one who is first might be last, and the last one might be first.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You'll meet people you've met before, see things you've seen before and say words you've said before. Yet, it's all different now. What does it mean? You have to dig deep to find the connection, but it's there.

WEEKEND FORECAST: Lady Venus is right at home in Taurus. The "pretty" is spread so thick, it would be hard to miss. Look around. There's beauty everywhere! ARIES: Can anyone to measure up to your expectations of love this weekend? TAURUS: You're so attractive that instead of choosing from an array of offers, you could stay home to avoid hurting anyone's feelings. GEMINI: The cyclical nature of your love life is highlighted — the end of one era is the beginning of another. CANCER: You sniff out ulterior motives and can spot a fake from a mile away. So, when it's the real deal, you know. LEO: Your intensity is matched by the brave and free — exactly your type. VIRGO: When you stop worrying about what's going on in your love life, and forward thinking, Lies may have temporary it starts to become the DICATE, INC.

influence, but truth has heaven it was meant to super power. No matter be. LIBRA: The kindest how speedy a lie is, the thing to do for your exlove/stalker is to ignore him or her until the problem goes away. SCORPIO: Savor the fun, and it just keeps coming. SAGIT-TARIUS: The best dates include trendy locations and novelty. CAPRI-CORN. You're ready to meet the folks, or, if you've already met them, be accepted in a deeper way. AQUARIUS: Fellow air signs (Gemini and Libra) embrace you. PISCES: What you're looking for is poetry in motion, and you just may find it. COUPLE OF THE WEEKEND: Aries and Taurus are like a stick of dynamite and a match. The result of the union is usually explosive. The explosion can be used in a productive way (as in blowing apart the rock in order to build a bridge or propelling a rocket to go to the moon), or it can be plain destructive. The key for them is careful communication and also to find a shared passion to direct their boundless energy toward.

Annie's Mailbox -: Advice for those in need

Dear Annie: I'm in the middle of a contentious divorce and child custody battle. My wife, "Kelly," and I have a 7-year-old son, "Bobby."

Kelly cheated on me around the time Bobby was conceived, and he may not be biologically mine. My ex would love to take Bobby away from me, but she still wants a lot of child support and alimony that she may not get if there is proof she cheated. I want full custody, but have settled for less because I know there is a good chance I could lose Bobby altogether if he is not my biological child. So we don't bring up paternity.

The problem is, when Bobby is with Kelly, he has no supervision, often going days without bathing or changing clothes, and he's lucky to get a cheese sandwich for dinner. He is up at all hours and has been seen outside at 3 a.m. by the neighbors while his mother is asleep, intoxicated or off somewhere. Several people have threatened to report the neglect to Child Protective Services, and they can't understand why I am so hesitant. I desperately want my son to be safe, but I am afraid he may lose me altogether, and I am the only stable thing in his life.

Bobby has a maternal grandmother who is wonderful to him. If the state takes Bobby from his mother and it turns out he is not my biological child, Grandma could get custody. But that means he would have to change schools, and also, I would never get to see him. Several people have told Kelly's mom of the neglect, but she can't see it. In her eyes, Kelly can do no wrong and I am lower than dirt.

What should I do? --Bobby's Dad

Dear Dad: You are allowing Bobby to be at risk because you fear losing him, but the state cares about the best interests of the child. You may be awarded custody even if you are not the biological parent. And, by the way, it's entirely possible that you are. Talk to your lawver. Document instances of neglect. Show that your son's safety is more important than anything else. Do it now.

Dear Annie: Last month, I received an e-mail from my sister-in-law saying that she, her husband and 10-year-old son wanted to visit during her son's spring break. She also wanted to surprise her brother (my husband). She said they would stay in a hotel and visit in the evenings.

I responded that it would be great to see them, but my son's spring break was not at the same time and could she maybe come in the summer so we could spend more quality time together and have the kids bond.

My sister-in-law became irate. She said, "If you expect people to go by your schedule, they'll never visit. We can come next month, not when it is convenient for you." Did I handle this wrong? If so, I'll apologize. — Upset in Illinois

"Not Dear Annie: Knowing in Illinois" was perplexed as to how to answer questions about her child's ethnicity. Since I believe such surveys are demeaning and insulting, here's how I answer:

1) Race: human 2) Age: old enough to know better 3) Income: enough to 4) Children: yes

Statistics may be necessary, but I enjoy having fun at their expense. — time to crunch data. Dear Annie: I have been married for 15 years and have two children in elementary school. While doing my spring cleaning last year, I found drugs in my husband's home office. This caught me totally off guard. My husband is a deacon in our church and a successful businessman. I confronted him, and he told me this was something he has been doing since high school.

I told him I would not tolerate drugs in my home. My children are too important to me. He assured me he would quit. I tried to rebuild my trust in him, only to discover drugs once again, this time in our storage shed, where he works out. What should I do? If the police become aware of this, could the children be taken from us? My husband has been keeping this secret from me for 16 years. What else is he hiding? Why won't he quit? Does he need the "high" more than his family? I am scared to death. Please help. - Burned Twice in Florida

Dear Burned Twice: The degree of legal punishment depends on what drugs your husband is using, how much the police find and whether or not he's selling to others. It's unlikely the children would be removed from your custody, although there is a possibility they would be in foster care temporarily. Your husband, however, could end up in jail. If these points don't convince him to quit, it means he is addicted and needs professional help. Try Nar-Anon (naranon.org), a support group for friends and family of drug addicts, at Boulevard, Suite 200 B, Torrance, CA 90505.

Dear Annie: I don't use facial tissues in my house. When I have a Dear Mrs.: Cute. They runny nose, I have handmust love you when it's kerchiefs that I toss in the wash after each use. I also keep a couple in my purse or backpack. Instead of paper towels, I use absorbent cloths, which I clean and disinfect regularly. I also switched to a biodegradable household cleanser and laundry detergent. I do this for the environment.

Several people have mentioned to me that it's not sanitary to use handkerchiefs and that disposable cleaning cloths are much cleaner. While it may be more convenient, I just can't see how disposable cloth is more san-

My house is spotless and my health is perfect because I use a lot of elbow grease and common sense. The thought of all those disposable cleaning cloths and paper products sitting in a landfill scares me, and I care too much about my water system to dump chemicals down the drain because I need to clean my sink in a hurry.

My grandparents lived without these "advancements," yet their house was always clean. How do I get across to my friends that it is completely safe and sanitary to use reusable household items and biodegradable cleaners? — Old Rag With New Purpose in Montreal

Dear Montreal: As long as you properly wash your handkerchiefs and cleaning cloths, they are sanitary enough. And biodegradable cleaners may not do exactly the same job as the more harsh chemical cleaners, but they still get things plenty clean. Over-sterilization of our environment may build up too many immunities to our communities. You don't have to justify your choices to your friends. Stick to your guns.
