3,149 People Receive Oral Polio Vaccine Past 2 Weeks

A number far exceeding expectations turned out for the second Sunday in a row this past week to take the Sabin Oral Polio Vaccine at the Hico School Cafeteria.

Dr. B. C. Dayton, who was in charge of the program locally, said that a total of 1218 doses of the vaccine was given this past Sunday. Included in the number were those who were given the vaccine at nursing homes and at the Hico Clinic during the week.

In all a total of 3149 doses of the vaccine has been administered under the local program.

The project was sponsored by Hico Civic Club in cooperation with the Tri-County Medical Society, and was given on a free will donation basis. No one was refused the vaccine, and people from this entire

"Everything to Build Anything"

Army National Guard's Mobilization Termed 'Most Successful' in History

the period of the "Berlin Mobilization" is coming to an end—now that the active services have had time to increase their striking power and the immediate need for the reserve forces is over—many people are asking: "How effective were these National Guards-men and Reservists, anyway? How long did it take them to ecome truly combat-ready?"

The answer from one high Pentagon source: "This was the most successful mobilization in the history of the United States." Thus states Major General Donald W. McGowan, Chief of the Na-tional Guard Bureau. General McGowan is a man who ought to know. He has spent a lifetime in the Na-tional Guard and has been through three mobilizations himself. His accomplishments include leading an armored cavalry regiment through the Normandy invasion, command ing a Guard combat division and guiding the entire 470,000man Army and Air National Guard through the most cru-cial—and fruitful—years of its

"To see how well the Guard did in this mobilization,' General McGowan said recently, "you have only to look at the record of the two divisions that were called to active duty: the 32nd Infantry Division of Wisconsin and the 49th Armored Division of Texas." Here are the facts that bear out General McGowan's claim. Back in 1955, both the 32nd and the 49th were among six National Guard divisions sestatus by Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, then Army Chief of Staff. General Taylor called this his "Six-by-Six" plan because he required these six divisions to be combat-ready within six months after they were mobilized. All but forgotten by the general public, the plan is significant now by the contrast that it offers to the events of the past ten

Instead of taking six months, the 32nd and 49th were declared completely combat-ready in four months— and this included the two weeks it took them to get to camp and two weeks to leave Christmas time. If the world situation had required it, they could have made it

HIT THE BEACH!-Jeeps and tanks of the mobilized 150th Armored Cavalry Regiment of the West Virginia National Guard roar down the ramp of a landing craft at Ft. Miles on the Delaware coast. The swiftness with which the 150th became combat-ready last winter earned it a place in the Army's elite Strategic Army Corps (STRAC).

It was a grueling experience, not soon to be forgotten by the members of these units. At Fort Polk, Louisiana, the 49th Armored was challenged in the dust and mud with rugged combat exercises requiring its tanks and men to maneuver and fire exactly as they would on the battlefield. At Fort Lewis, Washington, the 32nd was challenged in the tall pines and in the moun-tains, day and night, against a tough, clever aggressor who turned a routine tactical exercise into an infantryman's nightmare.

But all this seemed worthwhile when, immediately after being declared combat-ready, both divisions were assigned to the Army's Strategic Army Corps (STRAC), the first National Guard units ever to be assigned to this elite fighting

So impressive was the Guard's performance, in fact, that General James Van Fleet reported: "The quality of these units is far above any previous mobilization that took place in World War II or Korea."

Are there any specific reasons for such a marked improvement in our citizen-sol-

"Yes," says Gen. McGowan, "and the primary one is the six months training program which provides active duty level across the board. "Then, too, we avoided our mistake of both world wars of reorganizing Guard units after they were called up. In 1959 we converted the entire Army Guard to the new Pentomic structure and when the Berlin crisis came upon us, we were able to provide the Army with the type of units it really needed. All they had to do was finish their training. "And finally, this was the first mobilization in modern history in which we were able to preserve the integrity of our units. In Korea, you will remember, many of our key officers and NCOs were pulled out of their units to beef up overseas-bound active Army units. This helped the Army
