Title Required To Purchase New Car Licenses

According to Sheriff Earl Booth, the 1942 car license plates are on sale at his office and may be purchased and attached to cars at any time. Car owners will have until April 1 to secure these new license plates.

A new ruling by state officials requires that car owners must show a certificate of title before buying their license tags, and all persons who have not yet received this certificate, according to Mr. Booth, should call at his office and make application for such a certificate, as no new license can be issued until owners present this proof of ownership.

Regal Theatre Opens Tonight

The Regal Theatre, which has been closed for the past three months, will be re-opened tonight, Friday, Mar. 20, and will continue with a regular picture show program four nights each week, with matinees on Saturday and Sunday afternoon, Ray Landrum, owner of the theatre, announced this week.

Mr. Landrum is opening the Regal again because of insistent public demand, he states, adding that most show patrons seem to feel that Friona needs a picture show more than ever now that the rationing has cut down travel to neighboring towns.

The Regal will show good quality pictures, starting with the opening bill, "San Antonio Rose," a western musical, scheduled for tonight. Also on the program for the first week are Abbott and Costello, "In the Navy," and reports are that it is one of the best Abbott and Costello comedies.

"I know that Friona people are glad to have their picture show running again," says Mr. Landrum, and urges all show goers—both old and new customers of the Regal—to come to the show in Friona.

Grade School Chorus In Farwell Program

FARM NEWS FOOD
from YOUR COUNTY AGENT FOR FREEDOM
TEXAS EXTENSION SERVICE

By Lee H. McElroy, County Agent

Secretary Wickard has stated that a definite increase in gardens is necessary to meet the food production goals for this year.

In planning these gardens two things must be kept in mind—soil fertility and water. Under normal conditions our soil here has the fertility to provide all the food necessary in growing a garden. If a garden has been in the same place for a number of years it may be necessary to add from 5 to 10 tons of manure per acre, or at that rate if less than an acre, to bring the fertility up. If the garden is properly watered, the vegetable crop will not be burned or destroyed by the manure as commonly believed. We have plenty of water. Therefore, according to L. H. McElroy, the time and effort to grow a garden is usually what prevents the production of vegetables on our farm and town homes.

Young plants need protection here, as many vegetables are cool weather crops or early spring crops, and will be cut off by sandstorms if not protected. These crops should be planted and grown in a frame garden. The frame garden affords a very desirable place to set tomatoes, peppers, cucumbers and watermelons and all plants that are transplanted. If the family desires more of the type vegetables that are grown in frame gardens they may be grown where there is a windbreak protection. A very cheap windbreak may be made from cane bundles, sudan straw or train sorghum butts that are being burned in the fields. The tall cane bundles are they may be placed between two net wires to hold them upright or may be wired together similar to a stay in a fence. Such windbreaks on the side of the prevailing wind will protect the garden from sandstorms.

GET THE GOOD FROM VEGETABLES

By Elsie Cunningham Home Demonstration Agent

You have been hearing a lot about growing your own vegetables this year. Now here are a few pointers on getting the good from the vegetables you grow (many club women are now having fresh vegetables from their frame gardens) or the vegetables you pay good money for in the store.

Preserve the food value of vegetables by using them as soon as possible after you buy them or bring them in from your garden. Keep them cool until you use them. Wash the vegetables just before you use them—and never let them soak in water. Prepare chopped vegetable salads just before you serve them. If you chop the vegetables fine, they—and you—will lose Vitamin C by letting them stand around.

Leave nature's covering on a vegetable as long as you can, in some cases even during cooking. But if it is not practical to cook a vegetable in its jacket, make peelings as thin as possible in order to retain all the valuable food nutrients.

When you boil vegetables, have the water boiling when you put the vegetables in. Use as little water as possible, and cook rapidly. Then save this cooking water or "pot liquor" as it is sometimes called. Serve it along with the vegetable, or in soups, or sauces and gravies. When you pour water off vegetables down the drain, you're pouring down the drain many of the food values for which you grew or bought the vegetable in the first place.

Never use the vitamin-destroyer, soda, when you cook any vegetables. And try not to stir vegetables while they cook. Never put them through a sieve while they are still hot. The stirring or sieving gets more air in

Farmer John SEES THINGS

For this week's column, I get my text from R. C. Hoiles' "Common Ground" column in the Mar. 10 Clovis News-Journal. It is as follows: "Most every American would rather increase the price our government has been willing to pay for rubber and reduce the price they are willing to pay for gold."

"News reports contend that Brazil was getting 30c a pound for rubber sent to Germany; but we in the United States will only pay 20c. We should raise the price on rubber to bring all the crude rubber that can be found anywhere in the world and that our ships can carry to the United States."

"But we are having a condition, that is only natural, when our government comes to believe that the people are so dumb that they dare not be trusted to establish a price on the things that they want and that the bureaucratic government has to protect people from their own dumbness as to what they should have, and how they should spend the fruits of their labor."

"Our government says we should spend the fruits of our labor in buying gold and burying it under the ground because they set the price so high that we pay more for it than any other people in the world will pay for it. On the other hand they say we must not pay as much for crude rubber as people in other nations are willing to pay for it."

"The trouble with these kinds of mistakes by our government is that it lowers our standards of living and weakens our industrial structure which produces the comforts of life we so badly need and the equipment we need to win the war with the least amount of loss of life and expense."

"We are just beginning to realize the terrible results that come from a government that wants to make decisions for the people, decisions that the people are better qualified to make for themselves. The knowledge of all the people is always a great deal more than the knowledge of a few politicians to make decisions in order to be temporarily popular and thus receive votes and keep themselves in office."

"How will our gold enable us to raise our standards of living—or win the war quickly, when we cannot trade it to other nations for things to wear or to eat or to defend ourselves with? The trouble with bureaucrats is that when they make decisions they dare not change them for fear the people will lose confidence in them and not retain them in office and in power."

I am not calling attention to this just to be aching about the rubber shortage, or any other bottle-neck or emergency we are in.

Let's Cook Something

A good recipe, like a secret, is too good to keep or else it isn't worth keeping. These two recipes provided by Mrs. P. H. Gilliland are really too good to keep in just one kitchen, and you'll find them very much worth keeping and using.

While traveling abroad, a friend of Mrs. Gilliland's uncovered them and sent them to her. The first comes from Spain.

GREEK WHAT NOTS

- 2 cups flour
- 1 cup cornstarch
- 1-4 lb. butter

Sift flour and cornstarch together 3 times. Melt butter and mix thoroughly. Add enough hot water to make a soft dough. Flatten out to 1-8 inch thickness on dough board. Spread with finely crushed walnuts and fold over once. Cut in small portions, curl edges and drop in hot fat and fry like doughnuts until golden brown. When ready to serve sprinkle powdered sugar over them and serve at once.

CALLA LILIES FOR EASTER

- 3 eggs
- 1 level cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons cold water
- 1 cup flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Beat eggs slightly and add sugar, flour and baking powder which have been sifted together three times. Add water and beat three minutes. Drop by tablespoonfuls on a greased and floured cookie sheet and bake in 350 degree oven until a very light brown. While still hot, roll into cornucopia shapes and allow to become cold. Fill with sweetened and flavored whipped cream (stiff). Add powdered sugar to one egg yolk (enough to make it stiff) and blend thoroughly. Form tiny stamens from the sugar and egg mixture and arrange on the altogether lovely lilies. These are pretty, dainty and good.

COGITATIONS and APHORISMS of Jodok

I have frequently mentioned the fact that I know very little except what I read in the papers or hear on the street corners, and since people are too filled with war affairs to talk about anything else much except to tell how they think the war should be fought, and I have heard so much of that that it has become almost noxious to me; therefore about my only source of information is the newspapers, it occurs to me that much of their copy outside of war news is running to poetry.

The Amarillo Daily News seems to be my favorite source of information, and I get much of this idea of poetry from its editorial column on Mondays. I am very fond of poetry, therefore I seldom miss reading that column; but I cannot take a part with them, for it seems that all I can do along that line is to cogitate and aphorize.

I am no poet, and all the people know it, and some one would black me eye, if I'd even try to write a jingle or verse; and if I should keep on writing, he would surely go a fighting, and if he should try to hit me, he would, sure as thunder "get" me, while he would howl and curse, like "he's mad as 'hell'n' blazes," and his ravin' nearly crazes, all the people who were listenin', while his gleamin' eyes were glistenin' Aw, Shucks! this is not what I started out to say, and I am getting off on the wrong foot as usual.

But here is a limerick, that I borrowed from "Homade & Bawten," which may pass the scrutiny of the most scrutinizing critic:

An old man, whose hair was not flaxen,
His grandson, his cushion put tacks on;
And he reared and he roared,
And he swore and he swore,

Now, there is another line to that limerick, which I have already prepared, and the person who brings or sends in a line nearest like the one I have, I will see that he or she gets a year's subscription to the Friona Star for fifty cents, (50) and that is the same rate that it was sold on "Dollar Day," last summer. Come on with your line. Competent judges will pass on the entries and all entries must be in by noon, Saturday, Mar. 28.

But I am not claiming credit for that limerick, for, as you see, it is credited to "Homade & Bawten." "Homade, you know, means, "made at home," and "boughten" means secured from some other fellows idea and changed or enlarged upon it.

Anyway, I do not want to get too "pea coked," for when a man gets all wrapped up in himself he is usually pretty thinly clad.

I had the real pleasure of driving over to Farwell last week in company with Mayor Reeve, who was going over and very kindly invited me to accompany him, after I had stated to him that I wished to go. Well, it is quite a long drive over to Farwell, from this part of the country, and lots of men in their "eighties" would have complained of weariness from so long a drive; but it did not hurt me in the least—in fact, I truly enjoyed the trip, for aside from the nice drive, Mayor Reeve is a most interesting companion to ride with.

He talked to me most of the time and told me a lot of things he thought I ought to know and did it all in a friendly and charitable spirit, and I enjoyed that, too. Mayor Reeve and I have made many, many trips together most of them much longer than the trip to Farwell, and I believe I can truthfully state that I have never been with any man who has broader and more progressive and liberal views on life than has Mr. Reeve. And perhaps the most important part of it is that he is absolutely honest in all of them. And I like that.

Then there was another enjoyable feature of my visit and that was the meeting with many of my good friends there at the court house. I had just a little business to attend to, which left me more time for visiting with these good friends, and they all seemed to be so pleased to meet me that they actually made me believe it. That was something else I liked.

I was anxious to know if Uncle Sam is going to make any financial offering toward my personal support, and if so how much, and when I might expect to receive it as I wanted to be making some arrangements for spending it. Thus, I went first to the AAA office, where I met that splendid young man, John Tate, the chief secretary in that office; and I do not know that I have ever done business with a more courteous young man. He was cheerful and patient with all my questioning, and took pains to give me all the data concerning my case, that the records afforded, and he joked and banded with me as freely as though I were in my blooming youth rather than my dotage. And I liked that, too.

Then I went into the sheriff's office to see my good friends, Sheriff Earl Booth and his wide-awake deputy, J. C. Wilkison, (known to his intimate friends as "Wilks" for short.) But the sheriff was not in the office, he having started for Friona just a short time before; but fortunately we arrived back at home before he left Friona, and I was favored with a little visit with him here.

"Wilks" and I have lived together here at Friona for many years, and we have gone "shoulder-to-shoulder" through a good many interesting contests here before we succeeded in getting our public schools and the city organized as we thought they should be. And we are still friends, and I like that, too.

Then there was time for a few minutes visit with my other good friends, D. K., in the county clerk's office, Roy B., in the treasurer's office and Judge "Lee" (County Judge, Lee Thompson) in the event any of my readers do not know, I call them "my good friends," and if they are not, they will have to do something that they never have done, to make me think differently of them. Well, as I have said, they all treated me like they were glad to see me, and I liked that, too.

Then I must not forget the fact that I also met two others of my good Farwell friends, J. D. Thomas and B. N. Graham, both of whom I was pleased to meet again and renew acquaintance, for I do not see them often. But, after my visit with these fine fellows, I did not have time to go up to the office of Judge Smith, who is another of my intimate friends. The Judge is now County Attorney, and used to live at Friona, during which time we were together for a short while almost daily. Judge Smith and I hold very similar views regarding many of life's most perplexing problems, and when we get to talking together we never seem able to reach a stopping point, and I was fearful lest the Mayor might become impatient with my delay.

But instead of becoming impatient with me, it occurs that he really prolonged his stay in order that I might get well rested for our drive back to Friona. Then, as we came home he showed some more of his goodness of heart by driving across to the south side of the railroad about two miles west of town and driving me along by where the Santa Fe Railroad Company is building the new bridge, or rather building the old bridge longer, across Frio Draw. And I like that, too.

Nearly everybody and nearly all the papers are putting in most of their time or space in talking about the war. But I learned several weeks ago that it makes little difference what I say or what I may think whether pro or con, concerning this war and its administration. It is just like "ooze" on the back of a turtle; it just oozes off and leaves no apparent impression. I used to say before the war began that it seemed to me that we were destined to be at war with Japan sooner or later, and if we should, it was not recorded that we would win.

I have also learned a good many years ago not to say that anything is IMPOSSIBLE, and I still cling to that notion, and since the war has begun I have stated that it can happen that we may not win, and from the way things are looking now "It can happen here."

During the past decade or more, it has been said of several things—"It Can't Happen Here" but they have just gone on and happened. And josing this war may be one of them. And from what I read in the papers and hear on the streets I now have lots of company in that opinion.

It is a little like a scientist said about the bumblebee, that on account of its heft of body and the limited spread of its wings it is impossible for it to fly. But the bumblebee does not know that, so he just goes ahead and flies. Many of us think, that because of the immense army that we are building up the fabulous wealth of our nation in natural resources we cannot possibly be whipped. But the Japs and the Nazis may not know that and just go ahead and whip us anyhow.

Please do not get me wrong for I really believe that we will win this war, but it is not going to be any child's game of "I Spy," if we do win it, and a lot of people in America are going to have to let personal gain or personal glory go and get behind the wheel of defense and push, Push, PUSH.

I am of the opinion that a large percentage of the membership of many of the Union Labor organizations are of alien birth, and are still aliens, though residing here and benefitting from the American way of living, and I have talked with some of them to the extent that I firmly believe they would rather say from down deep in their hearts: "G...D...M America," and mean it, than to say: "God Bless America," and mean it. And I DON'T like that. "Believe it or not."

As I am writing this, I have just heard of the appointment of General Douglas MacArthur to the supreme command of the armies in the war in the Pacific, and I feel like throwing my old hat high in the air and joining my acclaim with that of the rest of the civilized world in the hope that now we may get some worthwhile action in that quarter of the globe.

God of our fathers, known of old—
Lord of our far-flung battle line—
Beneath whose awful hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine—
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

Rationing May Be Extended

Courthouse and school store-rooms throughout the Southwest began filling up with packages of forms and War Ration Books during the last week as concrete evidence that the War has arrived in the Consumers household—if that evidence wasn't felt previously.

Ration boards and school teachers studied plans for registration so they would be ready when "R-Day" for the start of rationing comes within the next few weeks.

During the week, the Consumer realized that when issued, War Ration Book No. One may be for other things than sugar, for which the Ration books were originally planned. After conferences with officials in the Dallas Region Office of Price Administration, State ration administrators held conferences of their own, to explain how the ration books might be used for rationing any commodity or material where rationing is ordered.

The State administrators also spent much time in trying to persuade sugar hoarders to re-sell their excess supplies back to their retail grocer at the daily shelf price. Reason: Anyone holding more than a "normal supply"—perhaps two pounds per person—will have stamps torn from the ration book; and if the board is so large that it requires tearing out eight or more stamps, then no ration book will be issued at all to such hoarder.
